Under the auspices of the Citizens' Committee for Troops in Training, a committee of young people has been established to help entertain the troops on Sunday afternoon in the Museum. Members of six church denominations and the Salvation Army comprise the committee, known as the Church Friendship League, with Miss Irma Pattison as head.

Miss Reynar, Secretary of the Museum, and Professor J. R. Dymond are co-operating with the League. "Each Sunday," said Miss Reynar, "hundreds of coats are checked. There is also a guest book, with names of sailors, soldiers and airmen from all over the globe. Last Sunday, one of the men said he was especially interested in mummies, and it turned out that he had seen service in Egypt in the last war."

Talks are given on various subjects by members of the staff. Dr. Currelly's talk on "Firearms" was very popular with the men in uniform, said Miss Reynar. There are at least two talks a Sunday, each lasting about half an hour.

The staff lounge is requisitioned by the men and women, where a Church group serves a fruit drink and cake. Smoking is allowed in here, and the different talks are explained to them.

Student Organizations Planning Contributions To Benefit Russian Fund

College and Faculty Societies to Donate Profits from Respective Dances, and Proceeds from Sale of Favours

MEDS COLLECTION TODAY

Plans are quickly forming among the student organizations on the campus for making contributions to the Canadian Aid to Russia Fund.

Medical students are making a collection today, in each year. However, since students enlisted in the army will not receive their pay until the end of the month, it is felt that another collection may be taken up at some later date.

The Engineering Society will give the profits from dances put on by the engineers and special donations from the clubs in the Engineering Society. Jim Cawley declared that the students would not be asked to give a direct contribution. "They have been asked for contributions often enough," he said.

Proceeds from special favours that will probably be sold by co-eds from U.C. and Victoria College, at their Athletic Night, will be given to the Fund. The Victoria College Union will give the proceeds from the sale last term of silver bracelets.

The fund will receive the profits from the Trinity Conversat, which will be held this Friday evening. U.C. Literary Society will give profits from their Arts Ball to be held Feb. 4.

All the student executives are looking for ideas that will help the fund. Some of the organizations have not met to decide on what action they will take.

St. Hilda's College Literary Society will meet at noon today to discuss means of raising money for the fund.

Plucked Students To Leave Ottawa

Ottawa, Jan. 18— (CUP) — Ottawa University officials said today that 20 students at the university who failed in their Christmas examinations in the arts courses must leave school to join the armed forces.

This announcement falls in line with the current policy of weeding out students who do not make their academic grades.

Burton Explains M. & P. Credits

Referring to a story in last Monday's Varsity, Prof. E. F. Burton, head of the Department of Physics in the University, yesterday told The Varsity, "The total matter of credit for men in the No. 1 Army Course is still under consideration." The Monday story had said that two years' credit in engineering or science would be given men completing the 12-month course. President H. J. Cody's only statement on the matter has been that "Generous consideration" would be given after the war to the men completing this course who wished to enrol at the University of Toronto.

The Council of the Faculty of Arts has announced that credit will be given after the war for the first year's work in Mathematics and Physics to all men obtaining at least 60 per cent in their final examinations in the Army Course.

A Committee of the Engineering Faculty is currently considering the matter of credits in that faculty.

Accounting to be Subject For Vocational Guidance

"Accounting" will be the topic of the vocational guidance group to be held in Room 14 at Victoria College at 12:45 p.m. tomorrow. Speaker at this group will be J.R.M. Wilson of the firm of Clarkson, Gordon, Dilworth and Nash.

This series is sponsored by the Victoria College Alumni Association and will consist of two groups weekly, each under the direction of a graduate active in the profession under consideration.

Next Tuesday the topic will be "Life Insurance" under the direction of J. T. Bryden of the North American Life Insurance Company. The following Thursday "Journalism" will be discussed by R. B. Cowan, circulation manager of the Toronto Daily Star.

MR. BOOKWORM MAY RELAX IN HART HOUSE LIBRARY

As soon as examinations are over, when the urge to slouch into a soft sofa or relax with a novel has returned, you will find Hart House Library waiting for you.

Harbouring more than 5,000 books ranging in topics from Aristotle to Zuitsuit, the Library is the haunt of approximately 700 students in weekly pursuit of books, says Herb Christie, II U.C., who is this year's Library curator.

"Students know the Library is not policed," explains Christie, "so they can take it easy here."

As a matter of fact, students have been taking it easy in the Library since Dec. 15, 1919, when the estate of Hart Almerrin Massey first presented the University with this cozy, shelf-lined room on the second floor of Hart House.

"Ever since those days books have been purchased by a committee of undergraduates elected annually," says Christie. "However, should students have preference for a particular book, they are entitled to drop a ballot of their choice into our suggestion box."

Christie says that men have very definite literary tastes, and they feel strongly about their choice. They are ready at the drop of a hat to condone or revile a book and will let you know about it, he said.

He points out that the books of Agatha Christie, Somerset Maugham, Raphael Sabatini and P. G. Wodehouse head the list of fiction favourites, while Brown's "Suez to Singapore" is

BROAD DIPLOMATIC CAREER DUE TO "LUCKY ACCIDENT"

Miss Craig McGeachy, who is the first woman ever to become a member of the British diplomatic service, calls her career a lucky accident. Now back at her post of looking after the public relations of Britain's Ministry of Economic Warfare at the British Embassy in Washington, Miss McGeachy was in Toronto last week-end speaking to various women's clubs.

Graduating from University College in English and History with no thought of a diplomatic career, Miss McGeachy went to Europe to investigate conditions for international student relief and helped in establishing student hostels. She herself founded a hostel in Switzerland and lived in it for three months—which last-mentioned experience she describes as "the most unquiet three months f ever spent, and also one of the most interesting."

This work led to her joining the League of Nations staff at Geneva. At the same time, through the International Federation of University Women, she was helping university women to escape from Nazi-occupied countries into Switzerland and unoccupied countries.

Finally Miss McGeachy was appointed to the British diplomatic staff in Paris. When France fell, she made a night escape in a special plane over the Portuguese border to England. She was in London through the blitz. Coming home one night to find her little house bombed, she afterwards lived and slept in her office.

Miss McGeachy's work concerns the study of the exports and imports of other countries with a view to undermining Britains' enemies economically. It requires frequent trips between Washington and London and across

For The Fight To Follow

Recently, in an address to a special convocation of medical and dental graduates of Dalhousie University, Surgeon Lt.-Cmdr. C. H. Best, head of the bureau of Naval Medical Research and co-worker with the late Sir Frederick Banting in the discovery of insulin, expressed strongly the hope that funds—now adequately provided for war research—will be maintained in the years to come for the assistance of post-war scientific research.

He said in part: "There are adequate funds now available for medical research. These come through the services made available through the National Research Council. I doubt if research is handicapped anywhere in Canada today through lack of funds . . ." He spoke, however, of inadequate work in pre-war research, and said: "I feel strongly that something should be done to prevent this relapse in the post-war period. . . . The Beveridge Report is now generally available, and one feels that the provisions suggested there—nothing less—are likely to be acceptable in Canada."

Dr. Best paid tribute to the courage and ability of medical research workers, with special mention for Toronto men—Banting, Klotz, Wilson, Soddington, Breabner, Henry—whose deaths were directly linked with the work they were carrying on; and he spoke hopefully of the calibre of the men who will follow them: "The field is alive with danger, but attracts the best type of workers."

Significance of Dr. Best's appeal for the furtherance of scientific research in the post-war years cannot be overstressed. He is one of Canada's foremost practical scientists of today, whose name is constantly cropping up in connection with some new development or other in the field of war-medicine. Nor are all his activities reported fully, for there must be much under experiment in his laboratories which is not for publication until the war is over. But these present accomplishments are linked closely with war; and while he and his co-workers are primarily engaged in saving lives, many of their foremost contemporaries are at work developing new methods of destruction and slaughter.

War is a stimulant — it has often been said — to science; but it is not until after the war is over, when the new discoveries can be applied not to fighting but to making life more amply livable for the people of the world, that the harvest is reaped. And it is essential that if we are to gain the full benefit from the impetus which the war is currently giving to science, we must continue to support our research workers as fully as we now do. After the present war ends, there remain innumerable other wars to be fought—against sickness and poverty and ignorance—and it is men like Dr. Best who can fight these wars, if they are properly armed. If we can afford heavy taxation to defeat the Axis, we need not hesitate to spend freely, also, to defeat disease.

Minnesota Millenium

From The Minnesota Daily comes word of an outline of "a student organization to promote international thinking in post-war planning." Tentatively named the Student Movement for Internationalism, the organization has issued the following statement of aim:

The college and university students of America and of all nations, being the recognized leaders of the world of tomorrow, must now do their best to help shape that world in accordance with just and lasting principles.

They are determined that this war, in which they are risking or will risk their lives, shall result in a more just and permanent peace than have previous wars.

They realize, as do most of the common people of the world, that such a peace is only possible when based on inter-nation co-operation as exemplified at the present by programs of co-operation as regards postal laws, aviation, patents and communications.

Therefore, these students are establishing the Student Movement for Internationalism.

Purposes of this organization are:

1. To fully awaken student thought and action in this sphere.

2. To vigorously disseminate information on this subject to parents, to the people of America and the world, and to their responsible public officials and representatives.

This will be accomplished by:

a. Student and student-adult forums on post-war planning for internationalism.

b. Bureaus of student-speakers to address outside groups.

c. Full utilization of the college press and of the general press and periodicals.

d. Aggressive, intelligent use of the radio and all other means of communication.

Examination of the declaration reveals commendable desire to stimulate thought among others and a desire to shoulder a great share of the heavy brain-work themselves. If the rough outline of the program shows a lack of specific aims, it is still too early to carp at that. Because we believe that if the students concerned follow the lines of thought they have outlined, they will soon reach a definite understanding of the problems which face them and the possible solutions to those problems.

Whether or not pure internationalism will solve the post-war problems remains a moot point, but it is a thought worth investigating. We will be extremely interested to hear more of the blue-prints for a peace "based on inter-nation co-operation."

Correspondence

Editor,
The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

Today's issue of the Undergraduate Newspaper gives a great deal of mention and prominence to an organization founded by the Medical Society, and henceforth to be known as the "University of Toronto Arts and Letters Club." As an irregular attendant at these Tuesday evening meetings, I wish to offer criticism and suggestions regarding this venture. You may find that my remarks are directed more towards the Medical Society, but I request the publicity of your columns to present them.

The Medical Society is obviously trying to pass the responsibility for these weekly meetings onto the shoulders of the student body at large. This is a commendable procedure, for it would be most gratifying to see an organization which could weld together the undergraduates at this time. This club is taking the place of the defunct Hart House debates; the only difference is that the discussion which follows the guest speaker's introductory remarks does not take the form of a debate. It is, thus, quite likely that this war-baby of the Medical Society will perish as soon as the Hart House debates are resumed.

If this club is to be truly "University," the Medical executive of the club must remove a deterrent upon its success—namely, the 8 p.m. closing rule. This procedure may have been satisfactory for hard-pressed medical students, but will not please the University as a whole. As it is, there is not nearly enough time for a reasonable discussion. Last week, only five of the fifty or so persons attending had the chance to express their views. This was largely due to the 45 minute address of Dr. Silcox, despite the stated 20 minute limit on the introductory remarks. If the guest speaker has so much time at his disposal, surely the students should have a similar opportunity for discussion, for indeed the purpose of the club is to enable us "to learn to think and speak on our feet."

Another disadvantage of this transition from Medical to University club—and here I address my remarks to the Medical Society—is that, whereas a University Club has now been founded, and whereas all other colleges and faculties have debating parliaments or similar meetings of their own, we of the Medical faculty are now left without any personal forum. Within one year of its foundation, our club has been given away by our own society (but, incidentally, we are still left responsible for its financial maintenance). An alternative suggestion which can and should be more attractive to Medical students is the foundation of a club of their own, where problems, not purely scientific, but nevertheless related to medicine, can be discussed. Such topics could include problems relating to post-war medicine and medical training, health insurance, state medicine, changes in the curriculum and improvement of the course.

Each week representatives of the Medical Society plead for greater medical support of this U. of T. A. and L. Club—and offer such attractions as the attendance of our clinicians and professors. This may not be very enticing to the student body as a whole, and I believe the knowledge and experience and opinions of these gentlemen could be more suitably utilized discussing associated medical problems, such as I have outlined, with their own students.

Hotbeds of Evil

Newspaper Harbours Criminals

By Ed Comment

(This is the third in a series of articles by a Varsity staff writer on existing conditions in the University of Toronto and its environs.)

I had often heard that the office of The Varsity, so-called Undergraduate Newspaper of the University of Toronto, harboured questionable characters of the campus underworld. But I found this out for myself when I visited the office recently.

As I entered the foetid atmosphere of the editorial rooms in Hart House the first thing I saw was an unconscious form lying across one of the large tables. The other occupants of the room were paying no attention to it, so I assumed that they were hardened to such grim sights.

They were a motley lot, fierce-looking, unkempt. One of their numbed was continuously referred to by his associates as "Savage."

Another, I was later informed, was none other than the notorious Neil (Mickey) MacDonald, who is currently charged with committing assault on the person of one Menuhin, aged doorman of Massey Hall.

When I questioned him about this, he snarled at me, "Who's Yehudi?" and flung vitriol in my face.

They continuously smoked so-called cigarettes, of the type containing nicotine, and stole one another's copy-pencils.

The walls were hung with lurid pictures of a woman who claimed her name was Tondelayo, torn from the pages of a disreputable self-styled newspaper which claimed its name was The Mop and Pail.

The various men in the room used such foul language as "----" and "####."

Authorities say that unless conditions improve in the office shortly, The Varsity will be requested to cease publication March 12. Its poetic license may also be revoked.

"They keep tearing up newspapers in there," a member of the janitorial staff of Hart House—a man usually well-behaved—confided to me. "It's a horrible place."

Rex Tremendae Majestatis

Massey Holt

Last night's concert at Massey Hall saw the annual appearance of the Mendelssohn Choir. Parry's Blest Pair of Sirens, which opened the program is a setting of Milton's At a Solemn Musick. Parry follows with considerable skill the movement of Milton's verse; and when one remembers the proportions of Milton's paragraph in this poem, the difficulty of setting it may be imagined. But despite the technical excellence of the mastery of choral writing displayed, Parry's work does not add up to much musically. It is written in the decadent post-Brahmsian tradition, and suffers from imaginative paralysis. However, the choir sang powerfully as if determined to make up for any weakness in the work itself. Before intermission Oscar Natzke, the bass soloist, sang with some skill two arias by Handel and Rossini.

Whatever reservations there might be about that Parry work, there could be none about the Verdi Requiem, which is of remarkable quality from beginning to end. It is one of those rare works of which it may be truly said that there is never a dull moment. It is sustained on a high level throughout, something which cannot be said of B minor Mass of Bach, the very first chorus of which bogs down with too many repetitions. But Verdi's Requiem is without such

S.P.S. A Leads In Indoor Relay

Three more teams ran the three-man relay yesterday to slight change the standings of the event. Meds B team of Fielding, Fyfe and Wilford came through with a 2.0.8 to gain second place in the final standings. School D team got a 2.2.9 to tie U.C. for fifth. The third team in yesterday's schedule, Meds C, composed of Rutherford, Ford and Newman, clocked in a 2.6.

Thus one of the biggest indoor relays for some time was run off under Hec Phillips' capable mentorship. A total of twenty teams took part but the surprising thing was the times turned in. The top six teams were only about two seconds apart for the 900 yard event. So it appears that coming Monday and Tuesday evenings may show some high class competition. Final standings for the three-man, one, two, three lap relay are:

Meds B—Fielding, Fyfe, Wilford—2.0.8.

Meds A—Wilford, Lewis, Delaney—2.1.8.

Wycliffe A — Gillett, Parke-Taylor, Barnett—2.2.1.

Tied: U.C. A — Baxter, Conant, Shackleton—2.2.9; S.P.S. D—Wilcox, Carson, Hibbard—2.2.9.

Speaking Of Swimming

The Varsity Swim Team, wartime edition of the Big Blues of prewar days, took to the pool Monday night and, by all appearances, look as if they might possibly repeat last year's batting average of 1,000.

Winst McCatty, coach of the Big Blue team since 1936 and last season's natator mentor, will not be with the boys this year and his for years, is now a big man in another kind of pool. A Manning Pool. for years, is now a big man at an other kind of pool. A Manning Pool. C'est la guerre, and Winst will this year appear in an air force suit against his alma mater.

Johnny Northwood, versatile one-man team who has sparked School teams to three years of victory and who last year assured the tide of battle for the Varsity team, will take over the managing and coaching duties. Apart from his activities along this line, Johnny intends to holster the backstroke department of the team and can be counted on to be lead man in this slot.

Sink Or Swim

The 1943 team will be, except for a few additions, the same crew that did so well last year.

Fred Sansom, sensational free style artist, will again hold down the key spot in the 50, 100 and quarter mile free style. Fred is one of the best swimmers to appear on Varsity togs for many years and should be a certainty for a straight in any event he enters.

Fred's partner in the 100 and quarter mile events last year was Stu Robinson of Meds. Stu will again team up with Fred and between the two of them the majority of the Blue's free style points will be recorded. The third man on the free style list, who is also an old hand at the swimming game, is W. W. Moffat. W. W. may be counted on for fast time in the 100 and 50 free style. He succeeded in winning the Timmins and Sudbury Annual Lions Club Challenge Trophy in these events this summer and although suffering from over-work at School, may regain the old form which won him top honours in the mining belt swim loop last season.

Dick Muller and Tom Graham, two stalwarts from Senior School teams, will be responsible for the auxiliary spots in the free style department. Both are excellent 50 yard men and as such will undoubtedly be a great asset to the squad. A character by name of Jim Martin, who is reputed to be an expert at the long distance events, will be included on the roster.

The breast stroke events will be split up between Frank Balmer, Norm Lea and Bruce Gilbert. Balmer and Lea were both outstanding on last year's team and are known as dependable men. Gilbert, a first year Schoolman, starred at Humberside in 1942 and althought he has never tried the 200 yards should excell at this task. Bruce cleaned up in the interfaculty meets and was instrumental in Junior School's success.

Johnny Northwood will do the honours in the backstroke. An excellent natator of years standing, he has never had to press in collegiate competition, always winning by a safe margin. Jack Mendelssohn of Meds will be alongside Northwood and, since he was a member of the Blues 'way back, should be dependable. Bill MacDonald from School will team up with the other two in the back and, although no personal history is available, it is understood that he does a good job.

Roger Beames and Lorne Somerville will handle the diving chores, and although this department sorely misses Maurice Clarkson, these two should be able to hold up their ends to good advantage. Of course it isn't good diving form to hold up their ends too far.

See Our Schedule

The meets? Here is the line-up:

Feb. 6th—No. 1 I.T.S., Eglinton.
Feb. 13th—Trenton R.C.A.F.
Feb. 20th—Manning Depot.

Another meet on the 27th is tentative and may be announced later.

The events?

The usual intercollegiate events should take place but due to the fact that the Air Force hasn't time to train, the long distance events may be cut down.

300 yard Medley	100 yard free
Diving	Quarter mile
50 yard free	100 yard back
200 yard breast

The competion? Judging from last year's meets it should be very stiff and when Varsity's excellent brand of swimmers is considered tempered with good training and home facilities, the opposing teams can look out for a wet time.

Sure Of Success

Northwood says, "If the boys co-operate we can have the best team yet, if they don't, we will get trimmed." This column would venture to say, co-operation or no, the Blues are as good as in, for four straight victorious Athletic Nights.

Meds Splashers Score In Last Half Splurge

Sr. Meds, holders of the Eckhardt Cup, took another firm grip on the retention of that trophy yesterday as they came through in the last half with a four goal splurge that sank Sr. Schools' hopes, 5-1.

First half was very tight with a one all score. Then it opened up as Baldwin slapped in three counters and Stu Robinson netted twice. Dempster made the only School return.

Sr. S.P.S. — Northwood, Rimmer, Hill, Dempster (1), Iglesiar, Payne, Brennan, Nylin.

Sr. Meds—MacKay, Best, Baldwin (3), Murphy, Wilford, Weinbaum, Robinson (2), McCarthy.

P.H.E. Net Close In Snatch Victory

In one of the closest hoop games of the season, P. & H. E. yesterday made it a photo-finish in defeating Sr. S.P.S. 30-28. The game was nip and tuck all the way but the "Health" boys snatched a four-point lead in the first half and grimly hung on. School came close several times with some inspired shooting around the basket but their passing and ball handling was not up to the standard of the muscle moulders. Sturgess and Clayton came through with a fair share of their team's points in addition to setting up other pretty plays for crucial scores .

Whitey Clayton and Punchy Parchello were top scorers with six each but were closely followed by Pringle, Sturgess and Volpe.

On the short end of a 14-10 count at halt-time, the Engineers fought hard in the last half and garnered 18 points to P. & H. E.'s 16, but they just fell short by a basket.

Sr. S.P.S.—Workman (1), Parchello (12), Anderson, Van Wyck, Brookes (1), Pringle (10), Kellam (4).

P. & H. E.—Clayton (12), Smith, Sturgess (7), Watson (2), Stellman (1), Burt-Gerrans (2), Volpe (6), Nesbitt.

Civil and Chemical Win S.P.S. Baseball Games

In the two baseball games played yesterday, which were contested by four second year School teams, Civil beat Mining 8-5 and Chemical whitewashed Electrical by the grand total of 24-5.

The latter game from the start was almost a washout as the Chems slammed home 15 runs in the first two innings unreturned. They then let up — only crossing the plate nine times in the last two innings. And finally a bit of lethargy was thrown overboard in the last inning by the Electrics when they managed to garner four runs.

By virtue of an eight-run splurge in the second, the Civils won an easy verdict from Mining, 8-5. Both had 10 hits but the Miners left six men stranded. Winning hurler Mitchell issued one free pass and mowed down six via the strikeout route. Taylor, Moore and Boyle of Civil hit the apple for 1,000. Upper, Hanson and Pappos connected for two apiece for the Miners.

II Electrical—Richardson (1), Walker (1), Shand, Johnson, Wallace, Davey (1), Jones (1), Calderone (1), Wagg.—Total 5.

II Chemical—Young (4), Anderson (3) Spoffard (4), Ball (4), Moore (2), Thompson (2), Hughson, Stevens (3), Allan (2)—Total 24.

II Mining—Upper, Harrison, Keary, Bennett, Pappos, Seal—Total 5.

II Civil — Sansom, Cross, Taylor, Aster, Turner, Moore, Boyle—Total 8.

Six Mangling Squads Fight in Basket Stampede

Six interfaculty basketball squads tangled in games in Hart House gym yesterday afternoon to limber up the baskets. Scoring was prolific and often one-sided—total points scored in the three games was 179. Jr. Meds piled up 50 points to U.C. Junior's 39 in one tilt. Jr. S.P.S. outbasketed Jr. Vic 36-22, and I Electrical downed I Chemical B team, 22-10.

Strathear of Jr. Meds was the top-scorer for the day, accounting for 19 of the points scored against Jr. U.C. Feyerer notched 11, and Spooner 10 in the scoring assault. Purcell for Jr. U.C. vied with Strathear for top honours with 18 points to his credit. Every player on each team scored once at least.

Steinberg led off for I Electrical with 10 points out of his team's total of 22. Conely zipped in three baskets for the winners. Hull and MacKnight grabbed off four apiece to spark the losers' attack and to tighten up the second half of the game.

Jr. School played a combination game which improved as the tilt progressed. At half-time the winners were only two points in the lead. Patterson sunk five baskets, as did Neil, for Jr. Vic. Booth, Schock and Brant accounted for six points each in their team's sweep for victory.

By Maureen Murphy

OH, the unsartinty of it all! . . . when our steely fields of ice are but lost horizons, snow-entrenched, and routine sportswomen gad off to where we never could manage to look sophisticated enough, leaving their sport-spouting typewriters to the heckling of inexperienced fingers.

But our heart is nevertheless still young and gay, as we tie up our pigtails, dust off our glad-rags, and take a deep breath . . . 'cause here comes the first of Hart House Athletic Nights for the term. We of the muscle-girt, rambunctious, pulchritudinous tribe, commonly known as co-ed athletes, shall this once preserve our feminine dignity, however. Men are not so scarce that we should yet awhile nuzzle almond torsos in the wrestling ring, nor sway hips on the fencing ground, nor even entwine our virtuous charms and graces into the mesh of the volleyball net.

But . . . and, oh, we do mean but . . . we shall be there for sure, in the old sweater 'n skirt, to holler, cheer, crane, crook, and generally ogle as the more brawny of our dashing heroes shall strut in all the glory of their rugged masculinity . . . but yes!

We of the older generation unearth nostalgic memories from the musty leaves of our '42 handbooks, where Saturday pages positively drip with all the excitement and fun of past Athletic Nights. To the uninitiated we cry: "Don't miss it!"

Take your pick . . . the chasing thrills of the basketball mangle, the frantic plunge of the swimmer, the straining lurch of the wrestler, the smashing blows of the boxer . . . or maybe just the pitter-pat of the ping-pong ball tripping across its green pastures. There will yet come a day . . . and we don't mean maybe . . . when we mermaids shall trail our lithesome limbs the length of the pool in a gala display. Until then, we shall watch and listen . . . things promise to be "fer garjus!"

So . . . come Saturday night, out with the old horse and buggy, and into that back seat (in more ways than three!) . . . it's off to Athletic Night we go.

Mission Society Plans Foreign Vocation Survey

The University Missions Fellowship will hold a meeting this evening intended "to give Christian students an opportunity to discover possible vocations in other countries than Canada." The meeting is at 7:30 p.m. at 97 St. George St. and all students are welcome.

This will be a follow-up of the successful evening with Dr. John R. Mott, last term. Among the experts present prepared to answer questions will be the following: Mrs. V. C. Spencer, who spent much time teaching Drama in Japan; Rev. Ted Johnson, graduate of McGill in Mathematics and of Princeton in Theology, who has been working with the Presbyterian Church in China; Dr. Ben Gullison, a graduate of Acadia in Arts and of Edinburgh in Medicine, who has been working in India; Mr. William Scott, the former principal of a boys' school in Korea.

the current popular work of non-fiction.

Although he believes students last term were co-operative and understanding, Christie says three Library rules have been neglected. They are:

1. Books (especially note books) are not to be taken in or out of the Library.

2. Students are not to smoke in the Library.

3. Books will be placed on table after they are read—not replaced on shelves.

Every library committee possesses an item or two of rare literabilia, and the Hart House Library Committee is no exception. Placed at the entrance to the north-end alcove is the Committee's private press display, which includes antique illustrations, oldtime title pages and a collection of type faces.

The Committee also holds dear to its heart the original manuscript of John Buchan's last book, "Sick Heart River," and the prized first edition of Rudyard Kipling's "Kim."

Commenting on students in 1943, Christie declares: "The current habitué of Hart House Library is an escapist tried and true. He'll be found in a dark library corner, giggling with Benchley, chuckling with "My Sister Eileen," or casting an interested eye over Gypsy Rose Lee's "The G-String Murder Case."

Members of the underworld to the south of us are very likely investing a large percentage of their ill-gotten gains in Victory Bonds, and if the movies know anything about it, are willing to lay down their shiftless lives for their country at the drop of a hat. The home-born American gangsters have joined forces with the F.B.I. against the Germanic type gangster who has either come over on a submarine, or has never quite managed to forget the fatherland.

MIDTOWN DOUBLE BILL

Broadly speaking, that is the situation you will find in Sabotage Squadron. Sinister, but ardently patriotic gambler gets himself thrown out of recruiting offices because of a bad heart, becomes implicated with medallion-bearing German agents because he deviously comes into possession of said medallion which said German agents need for identification before they can get back to Germany via submarine. He finally dies heroically, yet needlessly for his country.

An insipid little dish called Kay Norris sporadically figures in the proceedings by reason of her connection with both the gambler and a member of the force, who gets her in the end by a fatality that sensitive onlookers should be able to sense at the outset of the picture. Film is not a bad mixer on the whole. Lots of tight spots and tricky seizures of the upper hand.

The witty subleties of the now epic "Eileen" are expertly handled by Roz Russell with charm and offhand sophistication. Movie has a slight edge over the play because of shots of the Big City against idiomatic Gershwin-music, and in the wider range which the medium permits generally.

Canada.

England is a most stimulating place to be in at this time, she said. "It is so full of new ideas. It is just as if a crust had been lifted from peoples' minds by the war." she remarked.

Asked about the part women were taking in the war, Miss McGeachy said that they had shown there was no ceiling to their abilities. The number of jobs done by the women's army has increased from 15 to 50, and they have proved themselves proficient at such skills as electro-welding, previously considered as only open to men. She described a visit she had made in England to an anti-aircraft unit of which half of the members were women who did all the instrument work. In this group, the daughter of a lord, two university graduates, two former waitresses and two former housemaids were working happily together, she said.

A new attitude toward women in war work was noticed by Miss McGeachy. "Their presence is not resented by the men because they are not doing their work self-consciously as women but to do it well. And they have kept their femininity—even in uniform, they still look like women. There will be no 'boyish' fashions after this war like those that followed the last one," she smiled. After the war, women who have been in the army and factories will want marriage and homes of their own, she said.

ART, MUSIC & DRAMA

lapses, and both choir and soloists captured the spirit of the work with considerable vigour. The soloists were very adequate, and when much was required of them generally responded. Jean Pengelly, early in the performance, showed a few irritating mannerisms, particularly in crescendos in her high range. But in the final section of the work she had an extremely difficult part, a part on which the whole work depended, she did an excellent job, and helped the conclusion of the work to be the superb thing that it was. Eileen Law, contralto, used her fine-sounding voice with taste and consistency. The tenor, William Morton, and the bass, Oscar Natzke, sang their smaller parts quite adequately.

To hear a work like the Requiem is to realize the inadequacy of a Brahms or a Wagner when measured up to the highest standard. One is amazed by the taste and sincerity which this composer displays. For Verdi does not relapse into a pious pseudo-ecclesiastical style, he uses the magnificent idiom which he has evolved from what was left of Italian opera after Rossini, Bellini and Donizetti. The Lacrymosa, for example, which the choice made so impressive, is merely magnificent treatment of a tune which is still an Italian Operatic aria in the popular tradition. To pick sections in a work of this quality is really pointless, but one cannot help calling attention to the powerful Dies Irae which choir and orchestra delivered with great strength, and which recurs at various points in the work with striking effect. And the Agnus Dei has a melodic line of great beauty and subtety, which the choir sang with an effective restraint, although the soprano soloist did not seem able to keep in perfect unison with the contralto at times.

And finally, Sir Earnest made Verdi's orchestration seem the clever and imaginative thing it is.

This is the kind of a work which ought to be performed every year.

Soviet Dynamic

Hart House Art Gallery

A concrete presentation of Russia at work and at war makes up the present exhibition in Hart House Art Gallery. The show is a selection of posters and photographs obtained through the Canadian Aid to Russia Fund.

In spite of a possible sentimental interpretation of some rather tragic scenes, the unescapable observation is that there is a dynamic element in the work and interests of the Russian people. Shock Brigadier is a typical photo of an industrial worker, suggesting the confidence in work that has a purpose—beating Hitler!

There is a note of Degas (the French ballet-girl painter) in Semianovar: Premiere Ballerina, ..Great Theatre, Moscow, a pre-preformance pose of delicacy, informality and appeal. Science and education are brought out in Medical Students: Tiflis where students are sitting in rough tiers absorbing the lecture—there are many girls and the age-range of those in attendance is out of the ordinary in comparison with the University of Toronto.

The country itself has been treated for its scenic value. Steppe Ukraine gives a wide vista of flat land, even devoid of the rolling nature of our western prairies. The old and new—eamel transportation with electric light poles along the road form a contrast On the Edge of Asia.

Stalin's Great Aunt is a study in spiritual strength and emaciation which defies description.

In addition there are several large posters—brutally humorous and vivid in colour. That the Russian people are really serious in the dramatized pledge in one poster with hot metal pouring from a casting ladle being forced down the enemy's throats, may be felt from the translated accompanying words:

"To the people and the army we give our word
To pour metal into the fascist throat."

WOMEN, as we say, APPAL us, and they will you, too, after you hear the following, reported to us by a spy we have always considered reliable.

It was at an informal dance at one of the more cultured centres of learning on this campus where the reasonably refined clientele was suddenly startled as one woman drew off in the middle of the dance floor and slugged her partner in the nose, causing blood to flow. Her bewildered victim staggered to the edge of the floor trying to stop the flow. "Apparently," said our source as we probed for a scandalous prelude to the affair, "it was all in the spirit of good clean fun."

"But," we asked, "didn't she feel pretty bad about it?"

"Oh, no," he shrugged, "she was just reasonably sympathetic."

It's no secret now, we got lotsa snow. So it was not strange that even such a non-athletic type of person as us should dust off the old skis, massage some wax in (and some of the warp out), lash them to our feet and mush off toward the nearest hill. So, we poise at the top, think once of the February meeting of the Council of the Faculty of Arts, and shove off. All goes smoothly until half way down. Then, what looks like a fluffy drift turns out to be a bit of a jump. We swoosh off it, land sluggishly, swoop wildly with the arms, splash about with our poles, and generally make a darn fool of ourself.

Right near the bottom of this execrable sloop, just as we are regaining our somewhat awkward poise and feeling glad there aren't any real skiers out to see us, what happens? We hit a ditch which throws us high in the air. We land (we always do) and keep our balance (which we don't always) and swirl to a stop in a cloud of snow (still standing) right in front of three gaping tots with a toboggan. Even in front of them we feel very silly—then they speak!

"Bay, can you ever ski!"

"Boy, CAN YOU EVER SKI!"

"YEAH, BOY, CAN YOU EVER SKI!"

. . . yeah.

There once were two morons on The Varsity staff (who said, "And now there are a lot of them?") One of them tried to shove something into his coat pocket and ripped it.

"Yup," says the first one, lacklusterly, "by the day."

Promise Post-War Aid For Returning Students

Names Of 66 Students Forwarded To Draft Board By McGill University Senate

Students Lose Deferment, But Are Not Required to Leave the University; Come from Unspecified Faculties; More to Be Heard From; Additional Names Expected in May; All 66 Are Men

LENIENCY SHOWN HARVESTERS

Montreal, Jan. 20 — (CUP) — The Senate of McGill University today announced that the names of 66 male students have been sent to the local War Services Board. Students affected are subject to military call without deferment but will not be required to leave the university.

The action does not affect the chances of these students returning to the University after the war.

The men affected are from various unspecified faculties, while other faculties have not yet reported. More names will be added after the final May examinations.

Leniency was shown students under 19 years of age and those who took part in the harvesting expedition last October.

Dr. Cyril James, McGill principal, will address members of the Arts, Science and Commerce faculties Friday. It is understood he will ask science students and all others under age or in good standing to finish their year.

A total of 84 men—comprising one-quarter of the male enrolment of the Arts and Science faculties and one-eighth of the entire male student body—have already enlisted during the present academic year.

U. of Colorado Seeks Money For Humanities

In his regular report to the State Legislature, Robert L. Stearns, President of the University of Colorado, assured that body that the study of the humanities in the university must and will remain an integral part of the University program. In his appeal for an increased government appropriation to the university, President Stearns stated, "It is the firm determination of the University to maintain the all-round structure of university education and not to become a technical institution only."

The president pointed out the demands on the facilities and faculty of the University since the start of the war. He gave as reasons for increased expenditure the added enrolment and the increased military activities about the campus. (University of Colorado has an enrolment of 6,589 as compared with Toronto's 6,784.)

The necessary expansion and general acceleration of the school program brought about an appreciable rise in expenses, he said. With an uncontrolled rising cost of living in the United States, President Stearns felts that professors' salaries were "woefully inadequate."

"Only if operating funds are forthcoming, can the University fulfil its duties to the people of this state and to the war needs of the nation," he said.

Commenting on the place of the university both in war and in peace, President Stearns said, "The liberal and humane traditions must be supported not as a luxury but as a vital necessity to a people at war, and as a part

AID TO RUSSIA FUND HAS STUDENT APPROVAL

Students are generally enthusiastic about contributing to the Aid to Russia Fund, The Varsity learned in a campus survey yesterday. The question that most students raised is not whether they should do this, but how they should do it.

Tom Nixon, IV Vic, said, "The Students' Adiministrative Council has delegated the various student organizations to help in whichever way they see fit. It's a dandy idea, and I hope the response will be generous."

Gray Cowan, IV U.C., pointed out that the exhibition of Russian war posters in Hart House is already aiding the cause, and said that a collective effort should be made by the University iuscad of leaving the question up to different groups.

A similar opinion was expressed by Elizabeth Adams, IV Vic. The smaller organizations, she explained, are powerless to appeal to a large number of people. "We wouldn't be at University at all," she added, "if it weren't for Russia."

Perce Gardner, IV Fine Art, replied, "Excellent idea to participate in such a scheme. It will give prestige to the University and help Russia at the same time." Elizabeth Hilman, III Trinity, who is the organizer of the movement at St. Hilda's, thought it would facilitate matters if the S.A.C. were to organize a Tag Day as they did for the I.S.S.

Summing up popular sentiment around the campus, Klaus Goldschlag, III U.C., exclaimed, "There is no doubt that we should contribute—but the sentiment with which we do it counts. It isn't charity—it's a debt of gratitude that we owe to the Russians."

President Cody Approves Aid To Russia Fund

At the crisis of our fate the Russians struck back at their ruthless Nazi invaders, who had devastated the land over which they had passed. The Russian counter-stroke compelled the enemy to dig in; he could go no further. Last summer the Germans renewed their drive towards the oil fields. At Stalingrad a heroic defence baffled and held the assailants. Then came the splendid rally and attack upon the attackers. Now German troops are likely to be trapped. The Eastern Front has played a decisive part in the victory that must come in all its fullness. Russia has aided the good cause decisively, but at great cost of men, of suffering and of materials. We owe her much. Let us make liberal offerings to the Aid to Russia Fund to procure for her stricken people food, medicines and clothing.

Recommend Slav Studies As In U.S.A.

Canadian Scholar Heads Russian Department Now Established in University of London England

EXPENSES WOULD BE LIGHT

Recommendation for the establishment of a Department of Slavonic Studies at the University was made by President H. J. Cody in his Annual Report, released yesterday.

"Russia has already made a notable literary and artistic contribution to the world," said President Cody. "Its contacts with its democratic allies are likely to have influence upon its attitudes towards its own citizens and those of the outside world."

The President pointed out that several leading American universities, notably Cornell and Harvard, had established departments of Slavonic Studies and that a similar school in the University of London is presided over by a Canadian, Mr. W. J. Rose.

"I do not believe that the initial fiancial expenditure would be heavy and I hope that in due time the governments of Russia, Poland and Czechoslovakia would be disposed to help in its maintenance," he continued.

Harvard President Opposes Proposal

Cambridge, Mass, Jan. 20—A recent proposal to release a small number of brilliant young men from the Army and send them to colleges for general training was opposed by Dr. James B. Conant, President of Harvard University, in his annual report to the Harvard Board of Overseers last week. According to this proposal the young men would not be given war training but would engage in studies "for leadership in the days of peace."

Dr. Conant said, "Logically there is much to be said for this proposition. To my mind, however, all such schemes founder when they strike the facts of the emotional situation created by a war." That is, when the following question are asked:

(1) Would you want to be one of these young men reserved for special study throughout the war?

(2) Would you want your son to be one of these men?

(3) Would such men in fact be leaders among their contemporaries who had faced the hardships and run the risks of war?

British Council Offers Grants To Girl Students

Are for Women Specialists to Study in War-time Britain; Open to Any 23 - year - old Dominion Graduate

MEN BARRED

The British Council is offering four scholarships to selected women undergraduates in Dominion universities to give them the opportunity to study war-time conditions in Great Britain. These Dominion Scholarships, previously open to both men and women students, are available only to women students for the duration of the war.

The scholarships are worth approximately £300, and in addition the British Council are prepared to meet transportation costs to and from the United Kingdom.

They are open to any woman student who is a graduate of a recognized Dominion academic institution, a British subject normally resident in a Dominion, who has passed her 23rd birthday on March 1, 1943, and can produce evidence that she is qualified for the scholarship. Details as to making application will be released when available.

The aims of these awards, as explained by a letter recently received from the British Council are as follows:

"The object of these scholarships is to encourage specially qualified women and to give them the opportunity to observe the organization in war time of the scientific, academic, intellectual or other spheres, in which they are particularly interested. It is felt for example, that intending candidates might be specialists in Social Health, Economics, Surgery, Social Sciences, etc., but of course the award is open to women graduates of all faculties. The selected candidates should be women, therefore, of experience and responsibility who should come to Great Britain with the definite object of studying war time conditions in respect of their own subjects which should be particularly connected with our war effort."

Saturday Lectures Given on Museum Topics

The staff of the Royal Ontario Museum is sponsoring a series of 17 lectures on various topics connected with the museum to be delivered each Saturday afternoon at three o'clock.

The second lecture of the series next Saturday, Jan. 23, will be on "Fossil Mammals" and will be delivered by Dr. M. A. Fritz.

The lectures last approximately an hour, according to Miss Helen Reynar, Secretary of the Muscum, and tea is served afterwards.

Government To Assist Demobilized Students To Complete Education

Students Returning After Eight Months' Service to Be Aided, President's Report Reveals; At Least 4,000 Undergraduates and Recent Graduates Now in the Services; Large Influx Expected After Demobilization

1,100 HAVE RECEIVED COMMISSIONS

Students returning to the University after more than eight months' military service will receive generous payments from the federal government for a period of academic training equal to the service, in order that they may finish their interrupted courses, President H. J. Cody announced in his 11th Annual Report, released yesterday.

"We may therefore look forward to a large influx of soldier-students when once demobilization begins," the President continued. "Our resources of teachers and accommodations will be taxed to the utmost."

Up to June 30, 1942, approximately 4,000 undergraduates and recent graduates were on active service or on special government duty. About 1,100 graduated from the Canadian Officers' Training Corps to receive commissions in active service forces or in training camps.

Of the teaching and administrative staff, 183 had received leave of absence for war work.

Seventy-three men from the University had been killed an active service, most of them members of the R.C.A.F.

A decrease in enrolment of more than 500 for the academic session of 1941-1942 was announced. There was a marked decrease in the number of men registered in Arts, largely offset by an increase of men students in Medicine, Dentistry and Engineering, for whom the Government has called in increased numbers to fill posts in the armed forces and in industry.

The number of women in Arts courses has also shown an increase.

Students Urged To Return Passes If Unusable

Even close rationing of Hart House Sunday Evening Concert passes does not afford enough tickets to satisfy the hordes of cager concert-goers. Students who receive passes and then find themselves unable to go to the concert are urged to hand in their tickets at the Hall Porter's desk sometime before the day of the concert in order that they may be re-issued to someone else.

After each concert the faculty lists are checked against the used tickets. The numbers of any absent tickets are recorded and supplied the faculty representative. Thus when the possessor of a double ticket neglects his dtuy and neither usese his ticket nor returns it to the Hall Porter's desk, his name is returned to the faculty representative who first warns the delinquent and then on a second offense withdraws the privilege.

Telephone Girls Heard, Not Seen, But We Are Assured They're There

By Ruth Cohen

It probably never occurred to you, but we are quite certain that when the voice in the U.C. penny phone says, "Drop your coin, please," you never quite manage to associate the voice with a live human. We for one, have always conceived of telephone operators as a friendless, out-of-this-world lot, composed exclusively of voice,

An attempt to interview the species, which is know to inhabit a little hide-away in Simcoe Hall, was balked yesterday by Mrs. Hoddnot, supervisor of the girls, who cooly referred us to Mr. Maxwell, the assistant superintendent. In our fanciful frame of mind, it seemed very much as if the ethereal brood was being jealously guarded against the brutish invastion of ordinary mortals. We were even rather relieved at having been prevented from uncovering the being behind the voice at the very source of her occupation. It would, we concluded on further contemplation, amount to a violation of the unknowable, like discovering the secret of mitosis, or communing with the spirits of the defunct.

Thus it was that we went in search of Mr. Maxwell, the assistant superintendent, with little or no regret at having failed in the first purpose of our mission.

(To be quite candid, we were so immersed in fantasy by this time that we were fully expected to be ushered into the presence of an ectoplasmic ghoul who controlled the bonded destinies of a collection of disembodied voices. Mr. Maxwell, happily, is a solid-looking, pleasant gentleman, who was glad to give us what help he could.)

"The girls," he offered, "are never idle. Upwards of 200 calls come in every hour, and all of them are taken care of by Miss Jean Brown and Miss Evelyn Cameron, supervised by Mrs. Hoddnot. They use a 'flexible' system," he explained. "There are three boards, one for each operator, and each of them can reach over and take a call on the neighbouring board when necessary." Mr. Maxwell drew an apt diagram to clarify the situation.

"They work on staggered hours," he continued, when pressed for more information. "Tricks, they call them," he chuckled. "First trick second trick, like that." Mr. Maxwell also informed us that the board is a manually operated private exchange—a "PBX," distinct from the "PABX," an automatic board exchange. We imagine we could have excavated a good deal more along the same line, a fact we will keep in mind when the results are posted. However, since Mr. Maxwell was not possessed of any personal information concerning his staff—either that, or he would not be a party to the shattering of public illusions—we boldly thanked him and left.

Our interview has wetted our appetite on the subject of switchboards, but we still find ourselves with the same nagging doubt as to the bodily existence of telephone operators.

Aid For Our Allies

The response of college and faculty organizations to the plea for contributions to the Canadian Aid to Russia Fund has been immediate and heartening, with plans announced to raise funds at the dances and other functions which will be held in the near future.

Students as well as the general public know the glorious story of Russia's struggle. They have followed the epic of Stalingrad, and have rejoiced when the defenders of Leningrad and Moscow repulsed the Nazi hordes. But they also know the tremendous cost of the struggle in pain and suffering, and the need of Russia's men and women for vital medical and clothing supplies.

The President's message urging aid for our gallant ally through the medium of the Canadian Aid to Russia Fund is carried on the front page of this issue. Let us answer his request, and that of fighting Russia, with a large donation.

Education For Death

The much discussed problem of what to do with the German nation, once peace is achieved, pales almost into insignificance beside the much more terrible problem of how to deal with the present and growing generations of German children, or Nazi children, for the two terms are practically synonymous. These children are herded into Nazi youth organizations before school age. The schools which most of them attend are carefully situated in the southern and more sheltered parts of the country. They are given all the bright trappings of Nazism, with no realization of what it means. They of all Germans have come off best in the war; where scarce foods are denied the rest of the civilian population, they still enjoy them; they are spared completely the horrible side of war. Their studies are adapted to make them the best of Nazi citizens.

One commentator summed up a young Nazi graduating from one of these schools as having the physique of an all-American and the mental and moral qualities of an orang-outang. As either future members of a victorious German "master-race" or Herrenvolk, or as citizens of a defeated Germany, they will provide a most unpleasant problem to the world.

By way of presenting the basis of this problem two films based on Gregor Ziemer's examination of Nazi youth training, Education for Death, have been completed and will probably be shown here. The full-length Hilter's Children gives in detail the training of both boys and girls, culminating in the terrible spectacle of thousands of children ringed around a pilar of flame, in pagan mid-summer midnight ceremony of dedicating their lives to the god Hitler. The kind of adults these children will become staggers the imagination.

The incomparable Walt Disney has produced the second of this grim pair of movies in Education for Death, which is considered so important in Russia that Stalin has asked for a copy to be sent to him personally. This film tells the story of the change of Germany's average child, little Hans, from an ordinary youngster into a goose-stepping, heiling puppet, until at last he becomes a wooden cross grave marker in a gigantic military cemetery. The essence of Nazi culture is contained in the episode where Hans is punished for sympathizing with a fairy-tale rabbit devoured by a wolf. As a result Hans announces, "I hate the rabbit—the rabbit is a weakling—he is no Nazi rabbit."

Horrifying as it may be to see these films, it is practically imperative to do so when they come to Toronto, in order to help understand the evil system which we are crushing.

Lucky Accident

Although the first woman member of the British diplomatic service may call her career "a lucky accident," the friends and admirers at this University of Miss Craig McGeachy, public relations officer in Washington of the British Ministry of Economic Warfare, may think otherwise. They will know that Miss McGeachy's great talents and hard work probably had a good deal to do with her appointment, and they will remember her with pride as an outstanding woman graduate of the University of Toronto.

Her wide interest in university students and their problems may be said to have started Miss McGeachy toward the responsible post she holds now. It was to investigate conditions for international student relief and to establish student hostels, that she went to Europe. As a result of this work she joined the League of Nations staff in Geneva and, when war came, did a commendable job of helping university women to escape from Nazi-occupied countries to Switzerland and other unoccupied countries. This work was accomplished through the International Federation of University Women.

In her present responsible work of studying the exports and imports of various countries for the purpose of undermining Britain's enemies economically, we may be sure that Miss McGeachy, sister of our medical adviser for women, will have the same "luck" which has carried her to success in all her other ventures.

Correspondence

Editor,
The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

I wish to draw attention to a matter which concerns the S.P.S. courses and the No. 1 Army Course being given at the University of Toronto. I feel that the Army Course as reported from Ottawa in The Varsity of Jan. 18 will be giving those taking the course too great credit for the training received.

First, consider those taking the established course at S.P.S. These men have been told that they have made a wise choice in enrolling in Engineering for in this way they will be of greater benefit to the war effort which is the immediate problem, than if they enlisted as untrained men. In this course, they must spend four years at their studies, pay each year's tuition in full, provide their own accommodation and keep, as well as take C.O.T.C. training for which this year they receive no credit. On graduation practically 100 per cent of these men will be going on active service as they should. Lest some should say they will be given a commission, let met point out no commission is guaranteed nor should it be. The No. 1 Army Course, as I understand it, enables High School graduates to enlist in the Canadian Army and take subjects in Engineering and Science for a period of 12 months, after which the leading students are to be given four months' additional training in certain specialized subjects. All this will be free and accommodation, food and clothing provided, as well as receiving the standard Army pay of $1.30 per day. What position in the Army these men are to fill, I do not know, but no doubt there is certain specialized work which requires such knowledge and therefore the course is justified. It is also added that should these men return to University after the war those who complete the 12 month course will be granted credits for two years work in engineering or science and

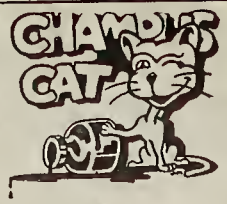
A Slight Disagreement

Arsenic and Old Lace



Despite what the review of Tuesday's Varsity said to demolish the reputation of Arsenic and Old Lace, we reiterate what we said last fall when it first appeared in Toronto. We think it is the best play that Toronto will have this season, and it is the first play we have known to come up to its press releases. When someone called it the world's funniest play, he was not far wrong.

Of course, criticism is always personal, and this cliche is even more than usually true in the case of Arsenic and Old Lace. You definitely have to like a certain brand of humour in order to enjoy the play thoroughly. That it plays about with one good theme throughout the evening, no critic will deny, but that theme is no more than a motif which keeps recurring like those of Wagner.

Not that Arsenic and Old Lace is Wagner, by any means, although it bears some slight resemblance to a highly inebriated Wagner. What Arsenic and Old Lace is is simply an evening of incongruity. The spectacle of two dear old ladies (you know the spinster aunt type) who actually are murderers is incongruous. Only on the one plane of murder (which is of course serious enough) are they anything but sweet. If you allow the play its first convention, and can be amused by incongruity, the entertainment is marvellous. I never laughed so hard in my life.

It is dangerous to write about humour because it is something you either appreciate or you don't. Usually I don't, and therefore my sense of humour may be perverted. With that warning, I still recommend Arsenic and Old Lace.

Speaking Of Sport

By Jim Paton

LUCKY US

Today, just when we were stuck for an S.O.S. and had visions of a column resembling an overstuffed sofa, Mac McMutcheon, the answer to a sports writer's prayer, walks up with a request. And what a request! He wants a little publicity for certain sections of a pamphlet titled "Intramural Activities" (available to team managers at Athletic Office). And . . . Oh, happy day! We can copy it verbatim! . . . It seems the said team managers have been neglecting certain items in this imposing manuel and causing no end of trouble for the Athletic Office. The intramural organization is an expensive one and it is essential that complete and accurate records be kept, soooo

MANAGERS, 'TIS YOUR DUTY

To know the following, abide by it and notify the office when tranfers are contemplated.

8. EXTRA TEAMS:

Any College or Faculty may enter extra teams in any series, if such entry is approved by the Intramural Sports Committee. Such entry will be accepted on the understanding that the extra team or teams shall be picked after the best men have been chosen for the regular teams.

Note: A regular team shall be defined as a Junior or Senior team or the "A" team in a Faculty where multiple teams are entered as "A," "B," "C" teams, etc.

9. TRANSFERS:

To allow a player to move to a stronger team as his ability increases, regulations have been drawn to permit certain transfer of players. Managers should be thoroughly conversant with these regulation.

(a) Any team may transfer to, or receive from, other teams (in the same college or faculty) a maximum of four players in the same sport in the same year. Any subsequent return to a player's original team will not be considered as a transfer.

(b) Having once tranferred to a team, no player will be permitted further transfers except that he may return to his original team provided he qualifies under Section 8.

(c) A player shall not be eligible for an extra team if he has played more than one game with a regular team but may be moved to a regular team at any time up to and including the final game in the schedule, provided that the team with which he has signed or is tranferring to, has not exceede the limit of four transfers.

10. ELIGIBILITY FOR PLAYOFFS:

To be eligible to compete in playoffs, a player must participate in at least one game in the regular schedule for the team for which he will play in the playoffs. This shall not apply to sub-goal tenders, but sub-goal tenders must be registered prior to playoff date.

Note: Group ties are not considered as regular scheduled games.

Boiled down the transfer rule means that a player may always move up as his ability increases but should he hit the skids be must return to his original outfit. Also it should be added that when Junior and Senior teams exist as regular teams, eligibility is governed by the academic years of the participant. And there are absolutely no tranfers from a Junior to a Senior team, or vice versa.

Vic Edges S.P.S. In Hockey Tilt As Goalers Star

Dunn, Despite an Eye Injury, Shines in the Twine; Teammate Street Plays Heads-up Hockey and Scores Twice

DICKIE PREVENTS SHUT-OUT

The hit and run tactics of Victoria's "kid" hockey team proved a little too much for the Sr. S.P.S. crew as they absorbed a 2-1 defeat in their first appearance of the current hockey season. The brand of hockey displayed was by no means brilliant but it was anything but a dull game, in fact it was a wide open affair with both teams having numerous scoring opportunities. Pile-ups in front of the nets were frequent and both goalers were kept on the hop. Dunn in the Vic net turned in a sensational performance despite the handicap of an injured eye.

Jimmy Street, the red-haired wizard of the Vic first line, opened the scoring late in the second period on a long waist-high shot from just inside the blue line that goalie Workman fanned on completely, although it was quite likely that his view was blocked. Within two minutes Street rang the bell again for his fourth goal in two games, this time on a poss-out by McClean.

In the dying seconds of the game Jim Dickie and Murray Douglas earried the puck up the ice and after being turned aside three times by Dunn, finally drove it past him to rob him of a shut-out. Dickie got the goal and Douglas was credited with the assist.

On paper the engineers appear to have a better than average hockey team with such names as Grosskurth, Dickie and Douglas, but they couldn't seem to shake off the persistent backchecking of the youthful Vic forwards. However, it was the first time out for the slide-rulers and they have it in them to make things plenty hot for future opponents.

Sr. S.P.S.—G. Workman, Grosskurth, Dickie, Maughan, R. Workman, Hamlin, Douglas, Moeser, Sutton, Ewing, MacDonald.

Vic I — Dunn, Paton, O'Malley, Flewelling, Street, McClean, Fullerton, Niero, Fisher, Harris.

Sportswoman

By Betsy Gowan

This afternoon at 1:30 at the Varsity Arena, the starting gong will sound forth and our hockey season will be underway in grand style. O.T. will meet St. Hilda's for the opening game which promises to be a good one from all angles. Both teams have had a few practices to start with and from all reports are very evenly matched. Predictions as to the outcome of the game would be very rash indeed at this point, but everyone is cordially invited to come along and pick their own winner.

Whilst teams have been practicing over on the two wee rinks at the Stadium, Vic has been passing pucks and shooting shots on their rink. Today we'd like to say a little about their team which is shaping up to what we believe will be a very strong forte indeed in the near future. (We'll have kind words to say about the other teams when we've seen a little more of their tactics.)

In former years Vic has blazed forth with two teams; but this year they have decided to pool their strength. The result is that they have two very good forward lines ready for action under the guidance and direction of coach Eric Slewellen. Shirley Pearse, Billie Bain and Mary Allen constitute the first line, while Isabelle Gemmill, Jean Brandon and "Leone" make up the second forward line of attack—second not in regard to merit — but merely for our convenience in speaking about them. Their goalie, Helen Stewart, is determined and well fortified against all comers in this, our national sport. Helen Patrick, Betty Borden and captain Marg Drillon are Vic's stalwart defence girls who are good stick handlers and can skate with the best of them.

Defeat U. C. by Scoring Five Goals in Last Period; Nesbitt and Graham Shine for Royal Collegers

LEAD GROUP A

St. Mike's skated off yesterday afternoon with an impressive 5-2 victory over U. C. I to take over the first rung in the Group A hockey standings. The Double Blue spotted U.C. two goals in the first period and came back strong in the last stanza to slap home five as a fitting climax to a rip-roaring game.

In by far the fastest game this year both teams were in the pink of condition and they skated miles. U.C. have a couple of real speed merchants in Dalt Nesbitt and Jimmy Graham and they took a lot of watching by St. Mike's first line of Des Roches Hector and Doyle. Furry, who potted U.C.'s second goal on a pass from Nesbitt, is no slouch either.

The Royal College took advantage of a St. Mike's penalty and Horkins slipped one past the St. Mike's goalie to put his team out in front. A few minutes later Furry made it 2-0 and St. Mike's were badly disorganized by the U.C. slam-bang style of play. Towards the end of the period the cross-campus men finally untracked themselves and then swarmed all around the U.C. net. Tempers flared and Des Roches and Kuryluk were waver to the cooler for roughing just as the period ended.

While the belligerents were still languishing in the penalty box Don Hector slipped through for the first St. Mike's goal, unassisted. A minute later McKenzie carried the puck through the U.C. defence, lost in, then recovered to pass to Boland who banged it into the net for the tying goal. The Double Blue machine shifted into high gear and rang up two more quick goals. Bill Doyle bagged the first of these in a pass from Audy Des Roches and the latter got the second via Don Hector.

Down two goals, U.C. began taking chances and Nesbitt and Graham broke loose on some dangerous rushes only to be foiled by the rugged defence of Egan, Haydon and Kurlie. While U.C. were pressing hard, Morrison picked up a loose puck at centre ice and with only the goalie to beat sailed right in for the final score of the game.

U.C. I — Skinner, Kuryluk, Wade, Horkins, Nicholls, Graham, Nesbitt, Furry.

St. Mike's — Hector, Des Roches, Doyle Morrison, Haydon, McKenzie, Boland, Egan, Jacob, Kurlie, Gregson.

Three Foilmen To Meet Champs

The Senior Foil preliminaries are scheduled to get under way this coming Friday in the fencing room of Hart House. Approximately 25 bouts will be run off and three contestants will emerge to challenge last year's Varsity team, composed of Bill Horsey, Jim Tapsell and Ralph Thiers.

The selection of this year's Blue fencing team will be based on the results of this challenge match. Competition should be keen as the fencing team will meet Buffalo State College as one of the features of Athletic Night on Jan. 30. The challenge match will be held on Monday next at five p.m.

Four Games of Squash With Royalty Is Proud Boast of Doctor Greey

By Frank Rasky

Though hoarding is forbidden by the government, soft-spoken Dr. Phillip Greey of the Banting Institute has been hoarding a rare memory for 19 years . . . and doesn't feel a bit guilty.

He still beams as he recalls that warm day, Oct. 16, 1924, when he played four stiff games of squash with the Duke of Windsor, former Prince of Wales. The game was played in one of the Hart House squash courts.

"Yes, fast games they were. The Prince was warmly clad in sweaters and a scarf. He conversed charmingly while playing. He was unable to stay for tea as he left immediately after the game. I won all of them."

While all students can not be privileged with such worthy opponents, the squash courts down in the cellar of Hart House are wide open for potential squash players, said Mac McCutcheon, Director of Intramural Athletics.

"The only draw-back is the present shortage of the india-rubber squash ball," he says. "The shortage is so terrific that it's reported the Athletic Committee keeps them locked in a safe."

McCutcheon says rumours have been circulating to the effect that the annual intramural squash competitions may be eliminated this year. This, however, is rumour, he said.

There were 66 students competing for the Conventry Cup in the individual squash competition last year, with the honours won by a graduate, J. Leibel. The runner-up, incidentally, was Leo Fitzpatrick from St. Mike's, now with the United States Navy.

And in case you'rs interested, the Douglas Jennings Cup for the intramural competition was last year taken by a squad from St. Mike's. The lads were: A. Tosoni, IV, L. Fitzpatrick, IV, C. Morrison, II, D. Bennett, IV, J. Knowlton, III, and J. McTague, I.

"The history of squash almost plays tag with fiction," a University graduate squash enthusiast stated during a pause in his game. "For a game that's still so young, it has climbed ahead by leaps and bounds."

A boom in the game began in the early 1900's, when squash courts were first standardized in England, our informant said. Regulations stated that there were to be three or four walls in a court made of concrete or wood.

"Since then, as a big-time pong-pong game, it has flourished in Europe, New Zealand and the far East," he said. "And I wouldn't be surprised if the troops in South Africa now take recreation with a few rubbers of squash."

Advocates the Establishment of a General Course; the Humanities Plus Social and Physical Sciences

INCREASE SCHOLARSHIPS

Impossibility of any scheme to "ration" arts courses was stressed by President H. J. Cody in an interview yesterday. Dr. Cody advocated the establishment of a good general course combining the humanities with social and physical sciences.

The President defended the existence of the pass course. "This course is a necessity," he said, "for it helps to develop in the individual good citizenship and the ability to live with himself."

In his Annual Report, released yesterday, Dr. Cody called for an increase in the number of scholarships, fellowships, awards and prizes "to equalize educational opportunities" and asked for the support of graduates "even to a greater extent than at present" to meet the possibility of increased financial burdens of the University after the war.

Rev. Nash to Speak At S.C.M. Lecture

The Sunday Evening Services held last term in Trinity College Chapel by the S.C.M. are being continued this term. The second in this new series will be held on Jan. 31. Rev. Arnold Nash, General Secretary of the Toronto S.C.M., will continue to preach the sermons.

In the last series Mr. Nash was concerned with relating the Christian way of life and thought to the modern liberal democratic University, based on the following analysis.

"When the medieval theological synthesis broke down, each sphere of human activity developed along autonomous lines and become secularized. The tragedy of this was that within each sphere a basic principle was enunciated which sought to give meaning to each segment, and no attempt was made to develop a unified conception of humaan life. This intellectual polytheism is fostered by the universities, which make no attempt to create a unified and coherent philosophy.

"Christian thinkers in their specialized fields of natural and social sciences, history, engineering, architecture and medicine are now faced with the task of creating a Christian world view in terms of which the conclusions of their own branches of the university curriculum could be given their ultimate meaning."

In the second series, Mr. Nash is working out this analysis in terms of specific subjects. At the last service, Christianity was related to History and Philosophy, either of which is studied by all liberal arts students. The three remaining sermons will deal with the relations of Christianity to Medicine, the Applied Sciences, and finally to the Social Sciences and Psychology.

A member of the faculty is conducting each of the services. The next two are to be taken by Chancellor Brown of Victoria and Principal Davidson of Emmanuel. After the service, a member of the faculty will speak at a Fireside discussion on the general subject.

These services are arranged on the same nights as the Hart House Sunday Evening Concerts, and will finish at 8:30 so that those who wish to be able to attend the concerts may do so.

Model Is Made Of War Project

Since last October, students passing the large windows of the Hydraulics Laboratory in the Mechanical Building have been mildly curious about a model now under construction. Professor R. W. Angus, who is conducting the tests, revealed that this miniature river represents a secret war project being carried out by one of the largest power-plants in Canada, and is therefore not on view to the students.

The plant is being operated on the discharge from a lake, which, in turn is fed by the spring floods of several small rivers, and which acts as a reservoir, or "storage pond," during the rest of the year. The present power output is insufficient, and investigation has shown that this cannot be increased by raising the lake level during the dry season; but necessitates improving the outlet channel, thus lowering the level during the dry season.

The purpose of the experiment is to find the least amount of dredging necessary to lower the lake level during the dry season, by about two feet or so. Such a small change in minimum level would increase enormously the amount of water available for power production.

The model is on a scale of one to 800 horizontally and one to 80 vertically, and embraces a stretch of river about three miles long. The vertical is exaggerated to eliminate so-called "laminar" flow, and obtain the "turbulent" flow existing in the real river.

Plumbers, tinsmiths, carpenters, and plasters have all been working on the model, and although all are skilled in their own trades, most of them have never done this type of work before. The model will be finished by the end of this term, but until them, Professor Angus does not want student intruders. Demonstrations may be given later on, but this is not definite.

the Government will pay their tuition fees for their third year. Those who complete the projected 16 month course will get credits for three years and be given the tuition fee for their fourth and final year. In other words, it will be possible for several thousand men (5,000 to be enlisted and enrolled by midsummer) to obtain a degree in 23 or 31 months free of charge or at the most with one year's tuition fee of say $300.00. It does not seem sound that the same degree can be obtained by two methods differing so widely in study time. Either the regular course can be effectively shortened, possibly by reducing the summer practical experience periods, or those taking the Army Course will be ill-trained for a degree. If it is decided that the regular course cannot be shortened, then those who have taken the Army Course should be compelled to extend their studies. If, on the other hand, it is decided that the Army Course meets Engineering Degree standards, then the regular course should have been shortened long ago.

I urge those in authority to consider the situation very cautiously before granting degrees to possibly ill-trained men, and to remember that the regular Engineering students are also serving their country. The element of expense has been added to stress an additional and all too often an insurmountable difficulty faced by the regular students.

Many Lands Are Represented In New Club

The International Club, composed of campus representatives of almost every nation on the globe, had its first regular meeting at St. Hilda's College last night.

The Club was begun at a party last Christmas when the idea of an international group was presented by a young Austrian, who told of a similar enterprise which had flourished in his own university in Vienna.

An executive was chosen to arrange for three meetings, the first of which was held last night.

While the club has not as yet been crystallized, the reaction to the experiment was termed "encouraging" and it is hoped the club will be regularly established by next fall.

Primary object of the group is to discuss affairs of international significance. Last night's discussion concerned Sir Stafford Cripps' Indian proposals and took the form of a panel, composed of Sujit Singh, II Emmanuel, Dr. Popal-Ayengar, instructor of Biology, Raam Pershad, I Law, Dean Brett, of the School of Graduate Studies, and Goldwyn French, III History, Vic.

Informal cross-discussions terminated with the following summary: "The National Congress demand for a national government with proper representation, for the purpose of unifying the Indian people in a stand against imminent Japanese invastion, was denied by the British government on the basis that no constitutional changes should be permitted in time of war."

Examples were given which showed that revolutionary constitutional changes were not so impracticable as suggested. as witness Churchill's offer to France, just before she fell, that England and France form a unity of nations. Mr. Singh, leader of the panel, concluded that the British either do not trust the Indian people with the power for which they have been fighting, or simply do not want to transfer authority.

Red Cross Corps Starts New Term

Last evening at O.C.E. the Canadian Red Cross Corps began the new term with a lecture on Army Administration given by Lieut. J. C. Evans, Adjutant of the 2nd Battalion of the C.O.T.C. Lieut. Evans, who is one of the two officers in the University to hold a full-time active service job with the C.O.T.C., outlined the principle facts about army administration, including orders, messages, reports, and military correspondence.

Part II Orders are vital from all angles, said Lieut. Evans. They are the "daily journal" of the all-important pay-master. To give the discussion an air of informality, Lieut. Evans added a few experiences of his own.

At some furture date it is expected that Major Lane, also of the C.O.T.C., will give the Corps a lecture on Military Law.

Aeschylean Drama Discussed by Owen

A joint meeting of the Trinity and Victoria Classics Club was held Tuesday night at the Women's Union. Professor E. T. Owen spoke on "Aeschylean Drama."

Using George Owen's book on that subject, he condemned his critical approach to "The Persians" as merely an expression of the writer's annoyance with the play for failing to supply him with material for his thesis.

The worth of a poem, Professor Owen stated, is not in what it contains, but in what it is.

"The Persians" as a play was an act of worship and prayer and a symbolical riutal directed toward the influencing of current events.

The meeting closed with refreshments.

MAINLY ON SUNBEAMS—

The University is often a dull place indeed, but it is brightened and made more bearable by such people as the Sunbeams. This is an organization of two which has sprung up spontaneously around Victoria College. Its main activities consist of adopting women's residences, finding them sailors for mascots, knitting bathing suits for the sailors, helping the girls pay their fees, getting tangled up in their knitting, visiting the sick and arguing librarians out of imposing fines for late books (mainly their late books).

Their name comes from their theme song, a little Sunday school hymn which begins, "A sunbean, a sunbeam." Membership is confined to those people (a) whose mothers were frightened by gremlins, or (b) whose origin was in a play by William Saroyan.

They go about writing KI. 5733 in the snow (and have been suspected of keeping that line busy at all times after 7 p.m.).

The sailor is a doll named Bogo and he was a Christmas present from the Sunbeams to their residence (they say he is their very own) and now they are knitting him a bright brown bathing suit. Bogo is only about 18 inches tall, the brathing suit is now nearly a yard long. This, however, according to them, is only the inside. The outside will make everything all right.

Yesterday they went to help one of their little residence charges pay her fees, but all that happened was that one of them got tangled up in the wool and finally found himself tied to one of the cast iron pillars at Vic. When last seen the other one was trying unsuccessfully to untangle him and had reached the point of suggesting, "You get all the strands together, and when I lift up, you slide them out underneath."

Tomorrow you may expect a hither of considerable virtuosity by Bill Nicholls. Bill is one of the hardest slugging of The Varsity reporters and one of the campus's grand old men. He goes around in circles, the very best of circles, and some that aren't even good. In fact the only circles he hasn't been able to get into are the ones under his eyes. However, he asserts magnanimously that he stands behind these to the last gasp. Tomorrow—a hither by a real man-about-campus.

Value of Mission Work Topic at Round Table

The University Missions Fellowship held their first meeting of the spring term last night with a round table discussion of the significance of the missions.

Ted Johnson, from Manchuria, raised the old point of whether Christians have any right to try to convert people who have an older civilization and beliefs than theirs. After six years in China he seemed to think so.

Mrs. Spencer spoke of her work in Japan, explaining the difficulties of Christianizing the Japanese, who seem to be totally indifferent to any religion. She emphasized the need for women in this field, as the social position of women is very low. Nurses are considered as little better than menial servants. Through the efforts of missionary nurses, the standard has risen considerably.

The requirements of a successful missionary, she said, are a sense of duty, a sense of humour, and a large dose of common sense.

William Scott, lately returned from Korea, stated that the Christian West must come to the aid of the younger churches which are combatting illiteracy in the missionary fields.

"They are numerically weak," he stated, "and unless aided, will be absorbed by the surrounding non-Christian peoples, or will become self-centered minorities, aloof from the community as a whole, and of little value."

Ben Gullison, in speaking of his experiences in India, remarked that medical training was a great asset in his work as people, more often than not, judge others by their deeds, not words.

of the training of the soldier or sailor or of the technical specialist. When the war ends, the university must be ready at once to meet the increased demand for these liberal studies which, for the present, are in partial eclipse."

The president, in his report, went on to emphasize the benefits of university training that are observed only over a long period of time. More often, though, he felt, they are only noticed through their absence, and pointed to Germany as a nation becoming intellectually undernourished. This undernourishment, he said, would be more definitely noticeable to future generations.

Comment of the Colorado State press seemed heartily in accord with President Stearns' views. One paper commented, "It is heartening to know that the administration of the University is guided by a policy so enlightened and so democratic."

Shortage Of Foresters In Lumber, Pulp Industries, Presidents Report Reveals

Lack of Technically Trained Men Due to Large Enlistments Among Foresters and Expansion of Industry

UNDERGRADS IN FORCES

A shortage of technically trained foresters in the lumber and pulp industries and in some of the governmental services which has become acute because of wartime expansion of the industries and enlistments of technically trained men, was announced by Dean G. G. Cosens of the Faculty of Forestry in the President's Annual Report, issued this week.

Over 22 per cent of all Forestry graduates and a large number of undergraduates are in the armed forces, Dean Cosens revealed. "Thus it has become impossible to meet the reasonable requirements of the governments and of industry."

The Dean pointed out that rehabilitation projects after the war will also be handicapped by a shortage of trained personnel.

Public Ownership C.C.F. Club Topic

Alderman William Dennison addressed the C.C.F. Club of the University on the C.C.F. in Civic Politics at an open meeting in the Women's Union last night.

"The C.C.F. policy regarding the city is a city for the people or the greatest good to the greatest number." This, he believed, could be accomplished by the extension of public ownership, especially in the necessary social services.

As an example, he said that a city-owned fuel delivery would not only save money, but would stabilize labour and aid distribution of this vital commodity.

The housing conditions and the milk delivery problems were other topics of discussion.

As examples of publicly owned companies, Mr. Dennison cited the Toronto Hydro System which now has a beautiful reserve and the T.T.C. which is a great financial success. In regard to the latter, he mentioned that in spite of the unfulfilled order for cars, it is the most efficient street railway in the Dominion.

R.C.I. to Hear Talk on Plants By Dr. Rousseau

An illustrated lecture on "Plants and Civilization" will be given by Professor Jacques Rousseau of the Department of Botany, University of Montreal, as the Royal Canadian Institute series lecture Saturday night at 8:15 in Convocation Hall.

A native of the Province of Quebec, Dr. Rousseau attended the University of Montreal, graduated in the year 1926, and eight years later won his degree of Ph.D. He has held the position of Assistant Professor of Botany at this University since 1925 and is actively associated with the Association Canadienne-Francaise Pour L'Avancement des Sciences as Secretary and the Société Canadienne d'Histoire Naturelles as Treasurer. He also is the assistant Director of the Montreal Botanical Garden. Botanical expeditions have taken him to Mexico and New Mexico as well as in the eastern part of his own province.

Dr. Rousseau will show how all life depends directly or indirectly upon green plants as the producers of food.

He will also consider the plant as a factor in the differentiation of civilizations and the part it plays in regard to home-building, methods of travelling, etc. He will review the influence of soils and climate on human life, and discuss the differing action of the three major crops, wheat, rice and corn.

The lecture will be illustrated with lantern slides.

Credits to be Granted For U.S. Army Work

Eight midwestern colleges in the United States ruled recently that men and women in the armed services may receive college credits for some of the work they are doing in the course of their military training.

Colleges taking part in the program are: University of Iowa, Iowa State College, University of Illinois, University of Indiana, Michigan State College, University of Minnesota, Ohio State University and the University of Chicago.

Study of Currier and Ives Print Reveals Many Strange Curiosities

By Rex Wilson

There's more to it than meets the eye. Actually on first glance it appears to be the least colourful of the nine prints recently hung in the Chess Room of Hart House. It doesn't have the brilliance of the two hunting and fishing scenes, nor the chill appeal of the winter scenes, nor the romance of the Mississippi river scene, nor the action of the frontier picture; in fact, it just looks like a landscape with a mill, a river, a road and a man on horseback in it.

But take a closer look and a rock in the river becomes a big brown bear, a soft-eyed donkey looks out of the woods, a cow moons from under his chin, and a small snake on one of the racks turns out to be the tail of a monstrous crouching cat of the leopard type. In addition there are ten human faces peering out at all angles.

The prints are reproductions of those published in New York by the firm of Currier and Ives during the 80 years which terminated in the first decade of this century. The originals, produced by black and white lithography and coloured by hand, served to interpret American life of the period to contemporaries and to this age. Currier and Ives prints served as picture magazines and interior decorations to 19th century American homes, barber shops and saloons.

One large print of "Winter in the Catskills" by Doris Lee has also been hung in the Chess Room.

Little Spent On Building In Past Year

$33,000 Spent on Additions to Campus; $90,758 on Repairs; Plan Several Projects for Post-war Building

BEQUEST FOR BUILDINGS

Althought construction of university buildings has been cut to a minimum during the war, a sum of $33,000 has been spent on additions to the campus in the past year, President H. J. Cody announced in his Annual Report, released this week. An additional $90,758 was spent in repairs and renewals.

Major project was construction of a new wing to C.O.T.C. Headquarters on St. George street. Changes and extension were made at the Connaught Laboratories Farm.

The President mentioned several projects for a post-war building program, including a new unit for Chemical Engineering and extension of the present accommodation for Mechanical Engineering, both provided for in the Wallburg bequest; a new Men's Residence for University College, accommodation for additional women's recreational facilties; a new and enlarged School of Nursing Building and additional Library accommodation. Enlargements to the central heating facilities would be required for these new buildings, the President said.

War Suspends Course In Third Year Pharmacy

The plans for the establishment of a third year optional course in the College of Pharmacy have been abandoned for the duration, R. O. Hurst, Dean of the Faculty, announced yesterday.

Three reasons were advanced for delaying the project. These were: (a) an inability to complete the laboratories through lack of building materials; (b) a depleted staff, and (c) a desire to release trained men to the services without detaining them an extra year for specialized laboratory work.

The course was planned to qualify graduates for advanced biological research work for which present students must attend advanced courses in the United States.

"Trinity Strikes Back" To Feature Conversat

"Trinity Strikes Back," a "super-satire" on campus life presented by the Trinity men, will feature the Annual Trinity Conversazione tonight in Strachan Hall. The Trinity men intend to take their revenge on the other college groups in this presentation.

Flowers and favours will be sold at the dance, and the proceeds will be donated to the Aid to Russia Fund.

White tie and tails will be the order of the evening. Some discussion was held by the committee on this point in view of the present controversy, but as one member of the committee expressed it, "We could not imagine the Conversat informal."

Dancing will be from 9 until 2 a.m. to the music of the Modernaires. Included in the program are two black-out dances which have received so much enthusiasm at previous Conversats.

During the supper, the whole building will be open in order that the men in residence may entertain their friends in their suites.

The committee in charge includes W. L. N. Somerville (Speaker); M. B. E. Clarkson, T. E. Hull, R. B. Howard, I. E. L. H. Rusted, G. S. P. Ferguson, T. J. Hogg, and A. F. Sheppard.

The patrons and patronesses are President and Mrs. Cody, Provost and Mrs. Cosgrave, Dr. and Mrs. Kirkwood, Mr. Gerald Larkin, Rev. W. Lyndon Smith, and Mr. C. A. Ashley.

Students' Night of Engineering Institute of Canada Held at Hart House Features Papers by S.P.S. Undergraduates

ANNUAL EVENT

At the annual students' night of the Engineering Institute of Canada held last night at Hart House as a joint meeting with the Engineering Society, six papers on technical subjects were presented by students of the Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering.

In the senior group, first and second prizes of $10 and $5 were awarded to John Dyke, IV mechanical, speaking on solid fuel internal combustion engines, and Ron Scott, IV Engineering Physics, speaking on electronic devices. R. B. Telford, IV Civil, won third prize with a paper on deep wells. Each prize includes a student membership in the Engineering Institute of Canada.

In the junior group W. E. A. Rispin, I Chemical, took first prize with a paper on synthetic rubber. J. A. Legris, II Mechanical and K. Stehling, II Chemical, were awarded second and third prizes with discussions on the engineer in the post-war world and the underground dessification of coal respectively.

The Engineering Institute prize was awarded to J. A. Ham, IV Electrical. This award is presented annually for high standing and activity in the Engineering Society, consisting of a certificate and $25 in cash.

Motion pictures were shown, dealing with power saving in war-time and bombing over France.

McGill Women to Serve On Information Bureau

Montreal, Jan. 20— (CUP)—McGill women students have been asked to help man the new War Service Information Bureau, which has been opened in this city. This work has been approved as fulfilling the War Service requirement for students in their graduating year.

The Bureau is under the Co-ordinating Council of the National War Services Department and is being staffed by the Women's Voluntary Services of Montreal. It is to be a place where men and women of the armed forces may obtain information regarding available living accommodation or home hospitality, or city directions.

Chartered Accountancy Topic of J. R. Wilson

An outline of the work of an accountant was given the Victoria College Vocational Guidance group yesterday by J. R. M. Wilson.

Mr. Wilson stressed the insight into many businesses which it affords and its continual interest through contact with various firms and the opportunity to travel given.

He outlined briefly the work of a student in a C.A.'s office and pointed out that advancement is rapid. Also that even though 50 per cent of those who take the exams do not stay in the work—chartered accountancy is a good "bread-ticket" when seeking other positions.

At present on Mr. Wilson's staff there are 40 girls and he said that he felt there would always be a place for them in future in the C.A.'s office.

He brought up the interesting fact that today in Canada there are about 2,000 C.A.'s while there is need for about 4,000—and this demand will continue and even increase after the war.

R.C.A.F. Seeks Dietitians Among University Grads, Dr. J. B. Brodie Announces

About 25 Needed to Look After Food at Air Force Stations; Will Be Assistant Section Officers

MUST HAVE EXPERIENCE

Dr. J. B. Brodie, head of the department of Household Economics, told The Varsity yesterday that the R.C.A.F. (W.D.) requires about 25 graduates to enter the R.C.A.F. as dietitians. The dietitians will hold the rank of Assistant Section Officers.

"At least a year's work is necessary before the graduate is old enough, and has had enough experience, to look after the food needs of an Air Force Station," Dr. Brodie said. "However, those who have worked in summer hotels and in other similar jobs may be able to enter the Air Force sooner."

The girls chosen will be required to take charge of menus. They will have to be able to requisition food, but not buy it, and will be in charge of the preparation and serving of food at the Station. In addition, they will have to have a knowledge of managing help and formulating work schedules.

Applicants will be considered only if recommended by the College from which they graduated, and by the establishments where they have worked. Dr. Brodie said that students would be recommended only if they were good in food preparation, had high standards, though not necessarily high standings at examinations, and were good officer material.

Dr. Brodie said that the Air Force is considering only those who are graduates from approved courses. The Canadian Dietitic Association approves Colleges, and such graduates are taken into approved hospitals. The University of Toronto is the only University in Canada offering an Honour course in Home Economics.

Theatre Tickets Prizes in Draw Of Russian Tags

In conjunction with an University-wide drive to aid Russia, Victoria College is planning an unusual feature as part of the Vic-U.C. Athletic Night in Hart House, Jan. 23. It will take the form of a tag sale, but will differ from ordinary tag sales by paying dividends.

Tags will be numbered, and a draw will be held for valuable prizes. These will consist of tickets for well-known Toronto theatres, including the Royal Alexandra and a famous Queen street cultural centre.

'We expect a crowd of at least 1,200," said Tom Nixon, President of the Victoria College Union, "and we feel sure that a large part of these students will be attracted both by the good cause and the prizes."

Canadian Trio Musicale Highlight of New Series

The highlight of the Wymilwood Musicale series will be presented on Sunday night, Jan. 24, when the Canadian Trio—composed of Sir Ernest MacMillan, Kathleen Parlow and Zara Nelsova—offers its first programme of the new year to Varsity music lovers.

Celebrities in their own right, the members of the Canadian Trio will give their program in three parts. Zara Nelsova, formerly 'cellist with the London Symphony Orchestra, will commence the program with a group of three solos, including the well-known "Ritual Fire Dance" of da Falla. In the second portion of the program, Kathleen Parlow, who recently completed her sixteenth appearance with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will present a sonata for violin and piano, assisted by Sir Ernest. Miss Parlow is reputed to be without rival among women violinists.

The closing third of the program will feature The Canadian Trio in "Trio in B Flat" by Schubert, with Sir Ernest MacMillan at the piano. Sir Ernest is undoubtedly Canada's most famous musician. The only musician resident in the British Dominions ever to be knighted, he is celebrated as the permanent conductor of the Toronto Symphony Orchestra, and noted for his many appearances as guest conductor with American orchestras.

Howard Brown, chairman of the Wymilwood Musicale Committee, expressed great pleasure in being able to obtain such distinguished talent. "We expect a record-breaking crowd," said Chairman Brown, "and for that season advise guests to arrive early."

While the Wymilwood Series is presented under the auspices of Victoria College, students from all faculties are welcome.

London—R.A.F. fighters and bombers, including R.C.A.F. Spitfires, swept Northern France and the Lowlands yesterday, without loss, in raids on Caen, Cherbourgh, Flushing and an airdrome near Le Havre.

No Formals at Western But No Tears Shed

By Elisabeth Galbraith
Editor, Western Gazette

London, Ont., Jan. 20 — (CUP) — Western's attitude toward formal dances seems to have changed with their abolition. Until this year they had been a recognized and necessary part of college life, but today they have gone by the board with little or no protest.

There is no way of telling if this lethargy is directly due to the slashing of formal dances, or simply war's sobering effect. However, the change has been effected and temporarily at least it seems to be for the best.

On Annual Reports

Our faith in the value of education in the humanities as a preparation for the difficult days we will face in the world after the war received a heavy jolt the other day when we read excerpts from the Annual Report of President James B. Conant, of Harvard University. President Conant voiced vigorous opposition to a recent proposal that the United States Army should release a number of young men from each age group to go to college for general training, not for war, but "for leadership in the days of peace."

He wrote: "To my mind, all such schemes founder when they strike the facts of the emotional situation created by the war. The proposition in question goes to pieces when one asks the following questions:

"Would you want to be one of these young men reserved for such special study throughout the war?

"Would you want your son to be one of those men?

"Would such men in fact be leaders among their contemporaries who had faced the hardships and run the risks of war?"

If we were in a mood to argue with such an authority as Dr. Conant, we might reply to the first question that it matters very little whether or not the young men so chosen like the work assigned them. If it is definitely understood that they are carrying on duties assigned to them by the Government, just as much as are the heroes who fly fighting planes or the groundlings who pump gasoline into those planes, they would suffer no reasonable stigma.

In the same hypothetical vein, we might suggest in reply to the second question that parents, whatever emotion they cared to show their neighbours, might in a great number of cases be immensely relieved—perhaps even proud—that their sons had been chosen for work of this nature.

But breezily tossing off a rebuttal to the President's third well-aimed shaft of interrogation presents sterner difficulties.

Perhaps if such a rebuttal were projected, it would be as well not to seek to duel personally with Dr. Conant, but to confront him with statements counter to his own made by men whose names rank at least as high in the field of higher education.

To find such statements, one need go no further than the Annual Report of President H. J. Cody of the University of Toronto. Dr. Cody wrote in it:

"The great task of the universities remains the same throughout the ages; it is to educate intelligent and well-disposed citizens for life in the democratic state, and 'to forward the welfare of that State and of the world through its contribution to truth.' Our long-range work is to diffuse light and learning among mankind. If we can set forth fine ideas of personal and national life and can defend, purify, and strengthen them, we are really strengthening and purifying democracy itself. The Universities must play a full part in the defence of democracy by helping to purify it and in the maintenance of civilization by preserving civilization from becoming decivilized."

Upon examination of this remark, it seems to us that such processes of defence, purification and strengthening of democracy cannot be undertaken by the technical courses, adequate as they are for their specialized aims, and vital as they are for the welfare of the community. Such processes surely fall to the lot of the courses in the humanities, where men and women are taught to think. Democracy—in its pure state—is an idea; and surely, if that idea is ever to materialize, it must do so in this world under the guidance of leaders who have been trained in the theory and practice of ideas.

Admittedly—here we turn back to Dr. Conant's third question—the men who are trained in the humanities while other men are risking their lives and perhaps suffering the disabilities which accompany warfare will not be immediately accepted as leaders in every field. But in the natural course of events, in a civilized world, the well-educated man will outrun the man who has not had the privilege accorded his equal. Enough of the men so trained will in all likelihood reach positions of sufficient prominence and responsibility that the nation will be glad it provided them with adequate training for those positions. And those who do not become "leaders" will form a valuable leaven in the great mass of society which will be seething with change and progress in the years to come.

We confess that our argument against the remarks of the President of Harvard is in large measure based upon prejudice, and also, to some extent, upon an argumentum ad hominem. But we believe that our prejudice in favour of the humanities as an essential part of the post-war world is at least as valid as President Conant's remarks which would seem to rest largely upon a somewhat—we use the word with temerity—unscholarly fear of "what people will think."

How YOU Can Help

Even with the present Aid to Russia campaign gathering on the campus, as one after another of the various student-government groups sets aside one function or another, proceeds of which will go to buy medical supplies and comforts for our embattled allies, some student leaders may still be at a slight loss as to how they can best influence their constituents to co-operate in the drive. And the constituents themselves perhaps are in need of a little advice as to how they can best help.

And so The Varsity—never without a word of advice for those who need it and even those who don't—offers as suggestions the following eight ideas for fund-raising submitted by Bess Lander Bell, Social Work member of the S.A.C., whom the Council has delegated to handle matters relating to campus contributions:

1. Dances that are scheduled can set aside a part of their profit.
2. Tags can be sold within the various faculties.
3. The Record Club might feature an all-Russian program and charge admission.
4. Russian films are obtainable to be shown at various club meetings.
5. Taggers are needed for the city-wide Aid-to-Russia tag day Jan. 30; volunteers should telephone to MIdway 1875.
6. Faculty parties can set aside part of their admission fee.
7. A hockey game is set for Jan. 27 in Varsity Arena, proceeds of which will go to the Fund.
8. Scrolls registering contributions by faculties may be obtained from Mrs. Bell. Not all of these ideas, naturally, will be equally applicable to every situation—but there are enough of them to get tardy organizations started towards co-operation.

It is scarcely necessary to attempt to impress upon the readers the worth of this fund which is designed to bring material aid to the Russians as well as to manifest the sympathy of Canadians with the hardships they are undergoing in their tremendous—and victorious—struggle to oust the invading hordes of Hitler. When we consider that the Red Army is fighting under conditions which would make this present extreme wintriness of Toronto weather look like a visit to Kew in lilac-time, only those of us with the most adequate of vocabularies can find suitable tribute to pay to their dauntless courage and incredible stamina; since words fail us, deeds would appear to be more than ever in order.

Little to Resign Before Christmas Government Hints

Can It Be the Breeze that Fills the Trees with Rare and Magic Perfume, Staff Writer Queries in Alarm

UNCONFIRMED BY OTTAWA

By Ugly Duckling
Staff Writer, The Mop and Pail

Ottawa, Jan. 21—Observers here were cautiously predicting tonight that there might shortly be some change in the present National Selective Service regime.

In some circles the following questions were being asked:

1. Will Elliott M. Little continue as Director of National Selective Service?
2. What is the content of his 64-page memorandum to Humphrey Mitchell?
3. Was Lionel Conacher really involved in the Black Sox scandal of 1919?
4. Who's got the dice?

No answers to these questions were immediately available from government sources but it is felt that in most cases the upshot will be either yes or no.

While some quoted Lincoln's Gettysburg address and the same persons said in an undertone that they were not sure at all that the C.I.O. actually had been at fault, others cited sub-section 3 of the Munitions and Supply Act to prove that Mr. Little actually had the dice all the time.

Coffee may soon be rationed also, it was suggested, and there is more than a hint that tires are said to be scarce. These situations are the direct outcome of the manpower shortage, which can only be alleviated by more men. Government policy in regard to both Mr. Ristelheuber and Mr. Schicklegruber must soon be clarified if we are to win the pennant this year.

But the question remains—who took long straws?—and until this can be settled we can never have a true national war effort.

ART & MUSIC

High Art

Portia White

Fittingly the first woman on the Canadian Celebrities Series at Eaton Auditorium, Portia White, negro contralto from the Maritimes, last night sang a long but completely absorbing program. Comparison with her American contemporary, Marian Anderson, is inevitable. While she does not share that artist's regal austerity, nor, I think, her phenomenal range, Miss White has a warmth of tonality, a depth of feeling that makes her quite unique in concert annals.

From the noble Handel aria Heroes, When with Glory Burning which opened the evening to the religious fervour and lilt of the spirituels which closed it, she faltered no whit in a melodic procession of high art. Arne's Lass with the Delicate Air was a rhapsodic fragment, delicately countered by the pathos of the Appalachian folk melody which followed it. The Lieder of Wolf, Wagner and Strauss were small miracles of diction and restrained interpretation. And the highlight of the English group was Thomas Dunhill's medieval carol To the Queen of Heaven, in which Miss White evoked the sonorous magic of a boy chorister. The Twelve Days of Christmas, an encore, was repetitive imagery aptly projected by Bernard Naylor's vari-coloured accompaniment.

But the zenith of her rich vocalism was reached in such heart-warming episodes as Somebody's knocking at My Door and Li'l David, Go Play on Your Harp; tribute to which was the five seconds' pause at the end of each, before the audience could think of applauding. All this, and her radiant personality serve to place Miss Portia White where she belongs, in the roster of the great.

Varsity Blues Trounce "Y" 51-24 In Second Cage Tilt

Brilliant Leadership of Hal Axon Fails to Save 'Y' Team from Blues' Combine Headed by Goldstein and Gibson

SCOTT, TETTMAR STAR

Showing much better team play and general all-round form than in their previous meeting, the Varsity Blues walked over a strong West End 'Y' squad to the tune of 51-24.

Coached and generally lead by ex-Blues Hal Axon, the Yers put up a much stronger fight than they were able to make a week ago when the Blues trod over them 44-11. They had a goodly portion of the play but were not as efficient around the hoops as the well-drilled Stevensmen. Wynne, Whitla and Maple were the scorers for the visitors but the spark came from veteran Hal Axon who time and again started plays that were outlucked on the basket rim.

As for the Blues, well, every man on the team got a chance to show his wares for the coach's approval. And some promising performances were forthcoming. Hank Goldstein, Don Gibson, Stu Scott and Ken Tettmar were the chief payoff men but every lad in the Blue and White uniform made a good showing.

The first half saw the Varsity sextet walk away from their opposition. Stu Scott pooled nine points and Don Gibson got five to help the score at half time up to 26-8. But then the Axonmen steadied down and made a fight of it. Coach Stevens sent out every player for a trial but the Blues were held to 25 points while the visitors slapped in 16 counters.

On the whole the game was decisively Varsity's and showed that the Blues will present a plenty good team for the approval of the student body tomorrow night.

Speaking Of Sport

By Roger Conant

OR HAVE YOU HEARD?

Reams of material have been written on tomorrow night's big affair in the Athletic Wing of Hart House. The dictionary has been gone through three times expounding the great bargain to be achieved tomorrow night. How, for the small fee of 25 cents, one might witness basketball, water polo and volleyball games. And then of course at ten, when the spectating events are completed, the admission price includes two hours of dancing. Then there is a choice there—one may dance to "Turkey in the Straw" upstairs or "The Two O'clock Jump" down on the big floor. Then U.S. and Vic have dreamed up numerous methods of merriment besides the aforementioned. But of course that has all been gone into and we need elaborate no further.

JUST WAIT AND SEE . . .

But we would like to emphasize the big basketball game which is the main and feature attraction of the evening—so far as we are concerned anyway. For from all accounts it should turn out to be a real game. We are rather in the dark about the Manning Depot aggregation that will challenge our heroes but we have heard that they have polished off several visiting stations' sextets. Anyhow, the Blue and White team has a pretty smooth outfit—if last night's play is any criterion. For the Blues were all right in there clicking. A slight delinquency around the basket for a few may be rectified tonight with some shooting practice, but on the whole, if the boys display the ginger and spirit that was evident last night it will take a Wayne to stop them.

Oh, but we forgot to introduce you to our heroes. Centre man and built for tall story work we have long Don Gibson, who flaunts a number eleven on his shirt. He was one of the top scorers last year and unless his bunion catches up with him he will be the top scorer on this quintet. On his left we introduce Hank Goldstein—number seven, if you please. He originated at Humberside and played a bit of ball with the Jr. S.P.S. squad a year back. Then on Gibby's right genial Gene Durocher hoves into view. This product of Assumption brings a lot of basketball brains to the game which go to keep number five from not missing the scoresheet for long. In the rear are a couple of stalwart gentlemen who are Blue veterans. And both can pop 'em in from 'way out. Number 14, Stu Scott, was in fine scoring fettle yesterday and plopped 11 counters. Ken Tettmar, with a 10 on his chest, likewise did well by himself when he came through with nine points. The mentioned men will comprise the starting line Saturday and will be the chief threat for the Airmen. However, a fine crew is waiting if reinforcements are needed. Shirt number three has Murray Thomson, a veteran, tucked away in it. Likewise number 21 which Verne Booth graces. A chap name of Wallace habits number nine. He also was on the team last year. Then in 15 we find a freshman who answers to the name of Tommy Waldon. He comes with a bushel of experience from North Toronto. And from the same place at the same time comes Joe Meschino. Both lines are of high calibre and most players are interchangeable, so little distinction can be claimed between them.

Well, anyway we are trying to get across the point that we've got a pretty fair Varsity cage squad this year—perhaps not as strong as the great Roberts-LaVarnway combinaiton of a year ago—but one of the best in these parts at present. So we strongly urge you to drop around to Hart House anytime after seven tomorrow evening to have a lot of fun and to see some high-class basketball.

By Betsy Gowan

Yesterday afternoon, up at Varsity Stadium, St. Hilda's carried away all the hockey laurels—to start the season off with a bang. Their win of 5-2 over O.T. entailed no end of thrills, spills, and chills. There were times when we just couldn't tell which player was which and who was nearest the puck or the goal—but everyone enjoyed the game no end, and hockey is one game that we definitely can and should enjoy. To see preliminary games played on such a big sheet of ice was a rare treat indeed. Not only was it rare, but it added an additional suspense—for anything can happen to a puck that has to travel so far before it even sees the opposite net.

The first period was a bit slow, perhaps because of the length of the ice surface. But, none the less, Kay Hastie, who played a good all around game on the Saints' forward line, scored in the first two minutes of play.

When, after a short rest, referee Tom Jacob again blew his whistle to start the second period, more action followed. O. T.'s goalie, Shirley Wetmore, received and diverted a shower of shots. Betty Hungerford, however, shot one past her in beautiful style. Martie Fletcher played the steadiest game of all the forwards, putting a neat shot in in this period and generally leading her opponents a merry chase. Captain Sydney Dymond and Kittey Storey stood guard near goalie Elizabeth Stark even turning in circles when necessary to corner that elusive puck. Connie Fellows displayed a type of stick handling, especially on one occasion when she skated almost the length of the ice that was very smooth to see and certainly got results.

Ruth Thompson and Jean Gilroy made a dashing attempt at a come-back for O.T. in the last period, which in comparison to the others was fast and furious. Jean's goal was very tricky indeed as it found just the right corner to repose it. All in all, this was a game which showed a lot of promise for things to come.

Speaking of things to come—today at 4:15, in the same place, two great teams—U.C. and St. Mike's will test their hockey ability.

Doctors Bow 6-0 To Junior School

The powerful Jr. School team was the prize ticket in the opening game of yesterday's hockey menu by virtue of an impressive 6-0 decision over the Red-shirted Sr. Medicos. Gord Ball led the young Engineers with his second consecutive three goal showing, and combined with line-mates Bill Houston and Harry Boynton, formed a trio which baffled the Med defence consistently. The Medical counter-attacks were turned aside at the blue line by an equally valuable trio, Art Ridler, Johnny Ratcliffe and Herb Stricker. In the first period nary a Medical shot was handled by goalie Spence.

In the opening two minutes, Johnny Ratcliffe took a pass from Bill Houston and beat George Lewis for the first School counter. At the four-minute mark, Gord Ball added another, unassisted, to make the count 2-0. Ball ended the period's scoring by converting Harry Boynton's relay into the third goal at 18 minutes. Jim Boa started for the Engineers where they had left off by notching the fourth goal after three mintes from Johnny Ratcliffe. Here the Medicals pressed hard and seemed fated to success until Herb Stricker and then Gord Ball broke up rushes and both potted goals around the 13-minute mark to end the scoring at 6-0. A breakaway by Bill Houston near the end of the game was neatly turned aside by George Lewis to prevent any further additions to the total.

Sr. Meds—Lewis, Crossweller, Cole, Willinsky, Spence, Carson, Laidlaw, Kunkel, Troser, Murray, MacMillan.

Jr. School—H. Spence, Ridler, Ratcliffe, Stricker, Ball, Boynton, Boa, Houston, McDonough, Foulds, Carroll.

School IV continued the slip-stick supremacy by scuttling Vic II by a 10-1 score. The prolific attack was led by Jimmy Bradford, who tallied three goals and assisted in a fourth. Other major point-getters included Doug Honeyman, with three goals, a hat-trick for a defenceman), and George Randall Shaw, with two goals and an assist, and Matt Hannan, who sank one himself and set up two others. The School team packed too much speed and teamwork for the willing Scarlet and Gold squad, who, with the exception of Bob Russell's lone tally, had little success past centre ice.

School IV—Bennett, Perks, Honeyman (3), Ian Morch, Hannon (1), Shaw (2), Bradford (3), Ken Young (1), Alec Goch.

(The Chess Room is so called because that's where the Commerce and Finance men play bridge.)

These prints are not the real hand-coloured productions of the old Currier and Ives establishment but reproductions. To anyone except a collector of such items they are definitely more satisfactory since they have been reproduced from the best preserved specimens of the many which were printed and coloured by the company. The real prints are often disappointing, having been of uneven quality in the first place, and often having been exposed to the rigours of the elements and the hazards of neglect while they were temporarily out of fashion.

Thus anyone who wants to see an example of what the Currier and Ives prints are like at their best may do so by viewing the Hart House reproductions.

The subjects included represent most of the purely pictorial types produced by Currier and Ives. The nine prints include at least one from each of the horse, country scene, life on the Mississippi, hunting, frontier life, railroading, and puzzle picture groups.

The single horse picture which represents one of the most prolific types (Currier and Ives, both great horse-lovers, produced more and better horse prints than all the contemporary lithographers combined.) It is a detailed picture of the interior of an old-fashioned livery stable.

The country scenes are represented by a barnyard scene presumably by Fanny Palmer, one of the firm's best known artists, and a winter scene of sports in the country centering around a frozen stream and a dandy coasting hill nearby. This print and a colourprint of Winter in the Catskills by Doris Lee, which has also been hung in the room, form an interesting comparison. They are virtually the same scene in two different centuries.

Two hunting scenes by Tait are possibly the most interesting artistically. One is a camp in the Adirondacks and depicts a comfortable middle-class hunting party bivouacked with guides and a large quantity of provisions, including a sizable box of straw containing a stock of port. The other is Fishing Through the Ice, Chateaugay Lake. Both are notable for their portrait-like portrayal of the figures and the meticulous depiction of small objects in the familiar still-life tradition of the last century. Thus there is in the Chateaugay print the central object of the intent, respectable sportsman and a family group of dead fish in the lower right hand region such as might have been hung over your grandmother's sideboard by itself.

The picture possessing the most action is one of three plainsmen combatting a prairie fire. One of them attemps to hold the frightened horses as the other tow start a backfire. In the left background the wall of fire approaches, while beyond the plainsmen are seen stampeding buffalo.

The most diverting print of the group is a puzzle picture which contains in an apparently simple landscape the cryptic images of ten people, two bears, a donkey, a dog, a cow, and a leopard. There may be more, for there seemed to be an unattached eye peeking out of one of the trees, but lack of time prevented further investigation.

The collection and hanging of these pictures by Hart House is much to be commended. We understand that they have more and we hope that they will make their appearance soon. The value of Currier and Ives prints as art is largely a matter of opinion, but they have a undeniable value as documents of the life of a period generally clouded to the view of the present day.

If more do appear it is to be hoped that they are better framed. Currier and Ives prints should be mounted with light, or neutral mats and the mats should be cut away to show the title of the print which always accompanies it as an integral part. This title was lettered on the stone by hand and printed at the same time as the print itself.

The black mats used in the Chess Room prints confine them and cut off the titles. The first of these mistakes oppresses the spirit of the whole Currier and Ives tradition, and the second is a source of confusion to amateur reviewers who never took the trouble to learn the titles of all the 7,000 odd prints by heart.

S.O.S. (sauce) is taking on a new connotation with a conscientious, expert and confidential group of campus 'eds.' Students of Service is the brass bussiness plate of this small, efficient group, which intends to solve most of the major and minor difficulties of Varsity students. They claim to be experienced ghost writers, they will meet irate aunts at the station, answer windowed letters which say* . . . in fact, anything that is dangerous and adventurous . . . INCLUDING DATES AT WHITNEY HALL.

*Make all checks payable to the bursar.

S.O.S. also guarantees a list of do's and don'ts for Schoolmen. Such incidents as the following show the usefulness of this scheme.

One Engineer was working in a local jewellery store over the holidays and in view of the new tax on jewellery had to add on the tax before selling the articles. Imagine the amazement of one customer when he HAULED OUT HIS SLIDE RULE.

Another Schoolhouser has been sporting an expensive pair of ski boots. He wears them everywhere—lectures, labs, dates, even when he's drinking MILK (part of the essential diet of Engineers). It is rumoured he will wear them at School Nite. WHO SAID SCHOOL WASN'T GOING TO PUT ON A SHOW THIS YEAR?

But there are other University groups that are doing things. The Department of Paleontology of the University of Toronto announced that their staff (Paleo . . . logists, for the uninitiated, are archaic jerks who fuss about with old bones) are continuing their policy of setting up vertebrates.

Evidently they have ignored the government's appeal for OLD BONES. Or maybe they are like the street-cleaner who found business PICKING UP.

SPEAKING OF STUDENTS OF SERVICE—one pretty, useless young co-ed couldn't find a shoulder to weep on when she discovered she had lost her car keys, around or near the Economics building the other day. And it was pappa's car, and pappa wanted it that night. Being a co-ed of resourcefulness, she made it known at the general meeting place in the Economics building (a big trayful of inverted butts) that she would drive home whoever found her keys.

When the air cleared of scurrying feet, one male dangled the keys before her and demanded his pound of flesh—a drive home to the WEST END. But she lived in the EAST END, and the gas and the tires! The ride still looked big, so he hopped in to the EAST END. Frantic parents are making inquiries to THE BUREAU OF MISSING MEN.

DOWN QUEEN'S WAY . . . The keeper of animals for the medical faculty was teaching in the next Sunday School class to me last fall, and being as I was unaccustomed to Kingston, he took me for a Sunday tour of the University—the only key available was the one to the laboratory where they kept the animals—bunnies, guinea pigs, dogs, 'neverything.

People in the University district had been complaining about the dogs making so much noise at night. (I WAS ALSO ASSURED THAT THE WOLVES WERE LOCKED IN AFTER 5 P.M.) So the meds' students operated to remove the vocal chords of the dogs. Newspapers of the local variety proclaimed this action as a HOWLING SUCCESS, until humanistically-minded people wrote in on the cruelty to dumb animals. All of which goes to show YOU SIMPLY CAN'T PLEASE EVERYONE.

AND IT REALLY ISN'T just Queen's students who know how to do things. Seen more than occasionally with one girl down at WESTERN, this lad got into difficulties when he took someone else to one of the season's largest monster balls. (MONSTER BALL ADS READ—bring along your monster). Of course the grapevine caught this up quickly and the first girl was much grieved.

Came another night and this lad was escorting the agrieved to her ancestorly abode after a boring evening lecture. As they neared her dwelling they slackened pace, but the girl, sensing her previous injury, said, "I really don't think I should let you hold my hand."

Chivalry, chagrin and common sense dictated his answer: "WHAT MADE YOU THINK I WAS GOING TO?"

MY COUSIN, LUCILLE PENGUIN, who is special polar correspondent for the Vassar Miscellany News has whipped up this bit of poetry which I pass on to you with the

COMPLIMENTS OF THE SEASON

Go,
Snow.
You're beautiful, I know
In moon glow.
But slush
Is too mush
It's well for the bold
To tramp
In the damp
Of the moldy cold.
But as for I
I do not try
To be rugged.
Don't try to force
Me to winter sports,
You'll be slugged.
Go,
Snow!

Now, READ THIS OVER AGAIN, and this time, OUT LOUD.

Various Student Societies Swell Aid-To-Russia Fund

School At-Home Donates $100; Vic Bracelet Sale Nets a Sizable Sum; Hart House Athletic Night Contributes

U.C. ARTS BALL TO HELP

The entire proceeds of the School At-Home, totalling more than $100, are being turned over to the Canadian Aid to Russia Fund, the Engineering Society executive announced Saturday. Donations from various clubs in the Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering will also go to the fund.

Victoria College is contributing a sum collected from the sale of silver bracelets at last year's Vic At-Home and last fall at the V.C.U. office. The proceeds of the sale of tags at Saturday's Athletic Night, sponsored jointly by Vic and University College, are also earmarked for the fund.

Year presidents in the Faculty of Medicine have taken up collections for the fund. Total contribution from the faculty has not yet been announced.

A box will be placed in the U.C. rotunda for contributions of clothing for the Russian people. Proceeds from the Arts Ball will also be added to the University's contribution to the drive.

Profit from the Trinity Conversat, held Friday, will be another campus donation to the fund.

Other faculty organizations had not yet formulated their plans for the campaign or were not available for information last night.

Service Is Held For MacFarlane

The funeral service for the late Matthew R. MacFarlane, Registrar of the Ontario College of Pharmacy, was held Friday evening prior to the removal of the remains to Allemonte, Ontario.

The late Mr. MacFarlane graduated from the College in 1899 and six years later resumed his connection with it as a member of the examining board. He spent 19 years in this capacity, proceeding to the council in 1924, where he remained until 1934 when he was appointed College Registrar. His death Thursday was preceded by a long illness.

RUSSIA TAG DAY

Taggers are urgently needed for the city-wide tag day for the Canadian Aid to Russia Fund on Jan. 30. Any students wishing to volunteer may do so by phoning Mi. 1875.

Many Professors On Active Service

Approximately 70 of the 131 members of the teaching staff of the Faculty of Medicine have been granted leave of absence for the duration of the war, a perusal of the University Directory revcals.

Arts follows behind Meds in second place, with 32 members of the staff an active service. The other faculties line up as follows: nine from Dents, eight from S.P.S., four from Education, four from Hygiene, and four from Rescarch.

Of the 32 from Arts, 20 were from the University staff, five from U.C., three from Victoria, two from Trinity, and two from St. Michael's. In Arts, the members of the staff represent 17 different subjects, with the number from political economy leading.

Western Draft Gets Fifty-Five

London, Ont., Jan. 23 — (CUP) — Fifty-five students of the University of Western Ontario and affiliated colleges who failed in their mid-term examinations have been reported to their local war services board and are now liable for military service, university officials announced today.

The action of the Western faculty raised to more than 600 the number of Canadian university students either asked to leave their classes or reported to their war services board under government regulations adopted last October.

Arts, Letters Club To Hear Dr. Currelly

Speaker for tomorrow evening's meeting of the University Arts and Letters Club will be Dr. C. T. Currelly, Director of the Royal Ontario Museum of Archaeology. "Our Debt to China" will be the topic on which he will speak. The meeting will open at 6:30 in Wymilwood and following the brief main speech it will be thrown open for general discussion on the subject.

The Royal Ontario Museum is noted for its Chinese collections. Contact with China in more recent times has familiarized the Rt. Rev. W. C. White, Head of the Department of Chinese studies and former Bishop of Honan, with not only the cultural past, but the political present of the country.

Undergraduate Seeking Typical U.C. Couple

A photogenic couple is wanted by the photograph editor of the University College Undergraduate and a campus-wide search in quest of such a couple is being conducted this week.

"What we're looking for is just a couple of typical U.C. students, not too hard on the eyes, and with enough poise to look at home before the lens," explained Editor Ben Holdsworth. "Photographer Kenner and I will be keeping our eyes peeled this week, and there's no telling where the final choice may fall. U.C. students should make a point of looking at their best for the next few days, as they will definitely be under observation."

It seemed likely today that the bulk of the looking-over would be done in U.C. famed rotunda. "Who knows," concluded Holdsworth, "we may be sending some one out on the road to fame as a Powers model."

FIRST ATHLETIC NIGHT FEATURES SQUARE DANCE

By "Doc" Savage

Some 1,397 people (approximately 698 couples and one wolf) crowded their way into the athletic wing of Hart House Saturday evening to participate in the first of this year's series of Athletic Nights.

Students of the various faculties, army officers, air-force men and just plain people mingled in the crowded muscle midway, pouring back and forth to the myriad attractions, having fun and contributing $103.66 to the Aid to Russia Fund in the bargain.

The attendance was, in the opinion of officials, "good for the opening night," striking a medium between last year's height of over 1,700 and low of 800. (It was a cold and exceedingly stormy winter's eve that time). Facilities of the wing were strained, but proved adequate what with the tuck shop garçons vending various indigestibles at an incredible rate, games and exhibits being set up to care for the overflow from the sporting events. The only real inconvenience of the evening was the corridor which was a bottleneck the entire evening that at times verged on Black Hole of Calcutta proportions.

But the 1,397 did not seem to mind this, for what in Toronto isn't packed on a Saturday night? They milled about happily watching the water polo games and diving exhibition in the pool, the volleyball in the upper gym, and the feature attraction, the basketball in the lower gym. They applauded loudly as Charlie Zwyguard and his muscular cohorts did amazing things on the gym apparatus during the half-time break.

Those who didn't get seats for those events, or perhaps didn't particularly care for them, found things to do in the fencing, boxing and exercising rooms where there were ping-pong tables and games around which giggling groups gathered. Also, there was a geographical exhibition with Toronto and environs spread out in plaster form

WRCNS in Holmwood But Not Officially

The navy's here, although not yet officially.

The blue and white shingle of the Women's Royal Canadian Naval Service has been hung out at Holmwood, former home of the late Sir Joseph Flavel which has been turned over to the WRCNS by the University for the duration.

Lights blaze from the west wing of the building nightly and a few navy-blue ladies go in and out, but while the lady petty officer who answered the door when a Varsity reported rang the bell couldn't deny that the W.R.C.N.S. were there, she said that the centre is not yet operating officially.

The date at which it will be officially opened has not yet been announced.

Wilkinson and Comfort Get COTC Promotions

Five officers of the University of Toronto Contingent, Canadian Officers' Training Corps, have received promotions, headquarters of Military District 2 announced Saturday.

Lieut. I. Blackstone and 2-Lieut. B. C. Diltz were promoted to the rank of acting captain.

Lieut. C. F. Comfort, Lieut. B. Wilkinson and Lieut. C. P. Thompson have been given the rank of temporary captain.

Lieut. W. B. Duncan of the McMaster University Contingent was also promoted to a temporary captaincy.

Capt. Wilkinson, professor of medieval history, is the officer commanding "K" Company, the Army Service Corps Arm of the C.O.T.C. Capt. Comfort, assistant professor of fine art, is second-in-command of an Infantry Rifle company.

Tactics of Street Car-Catching Reveal Varsity Students' Versatility

By Maureen Murphy

Technique . . . that flexible institution ranging from spaghetti spoon-swirling and snow-ploughing, to Dorothy Dix predicaments and assuaging professorial wrath, extends into yet another, heretofore unrevealed, province . . . that of street-car eatching, The Varsity learned in a week-end phone-circuit survey.

A cross-section of student opinion on the problem of how to get your street-car and keep it, has provided unlimited and valuable material on which to base statistics regarding this venerable habit of all off-the-campus students. The Varsity would further vouch for this being, to date, an unexplored field for the budding thesis-minded statisticians on our campus.

From a simple assignment resolved out of the progressional factors—first: there has been snow; second: students use street-cars; third: so what? has developed a revolutionary doctrine. The Varsity finds itself inundated with comments, ravings, arguments, and apprehensions on the subject. "Little does the staid motor-man imagine that as he deals out his little pink and blue tranfers, he is an important contributory element in the formation of a psychological and mathematical formula gravitating around the idiosyncracies of street-car behaviourism," confided one artless student. "Fundamentally," he continued, "it is simple." . . . uh, yes! But, "Either you get your street-car, or you don't," calculated one S.P.S. man, "which generally means you don't."

Some are more fortunate, however. Not that they are any more successful, but at least they are optimistic about it. "I figure it is much better to walk, even though it takes longer," says Elvera Bricker, III Fine Art. "This last week has been quite hectic . . . and it's the snow at the bottom of it all. One professor gave me a sound talking-to for being late for his lecture," she boiled, "even though it was the fault of the held-up car . . . but then," she softened, "they have to let off steam somehow!"

"Inconvenient," remarks Hugh Burwell, III Math and Physics, "but then I'm usually late for lectures anyway, so it didn't make much difference.' While Audrey Trimble, II St. Michael's, exults: "Yes . . . one morning I was 40 minutes late for a lecture, but I overlooked the matter. You see . . . I hadn't my homework done!"

Victor Bell, I S.P.S., is nonchalant. "I don't mind whether I walk or ride." But Ken Brown, III Meds, feeling in a mathematical frame of mind, explains the string-system: "The rails are always clear in spite off heavy snow. Delay comes because cars stalled or left at home means more people wanting to ride the sreet-car. Car stops at green light. Crowd pushes. Light changes. Car waits. Car behind catches up. Light changes again. More people crowd. Car misses light again."

Tactology . . . the philosophy of street-car tactics, or how to get on a street-car in no lesson at all . . . embraces several principles, survey revcals. The "Hanger-On" grabs his neighbour's coat-sleeve, and then they both miss the car. The "Go-Getter" barges forward before the car arrives, but misfires so that the door is faaaar away when the time comes. The "Patient Pansy" lets one car go by in hopes of the next being empty . . . he is still standing on the corner of St. Clair and Young.

U.B.C. Classes Suspended Because Of Traffic Tie-Up

Greatest Traffic Snarl West Coast Has Seen in Many Years Keep Students from Classes

FUEL SHORTAGE ALSO

Vancouver, Jan. 25—(CUP)—Classes and army parades at the University of British Columbia are being suspended for five days, President L. S. Klinch announced last week.

Owing to the greatest traffic snarl the west coast bas seen in years, it is impossible to get enough students to classes. As a serious fuel shortgage is facing the Vancouver area, it was deemed unwise to keep the mammoth U.B.C. heating plant in operation for the benefit of a few students.

It is believed that the University will be back on a normal schedule tomorrow. However, some of the buildings may remain closed for some time in order to conserve fuel.

III

Representatives of the various colleges and faculties are requested to call at the Warden's office between 11:30 and 1:30 p.m, today (Monday, Jan. 25) for their allotments of tickets for the concert.

Those who are successful in obtaining double ticket are urged to return it to the hall porter's desk immediately, if they find they are unable to use it. There is always a waiting list for tickets.

U.K. Students To Be Called

Montreal, Jan. 25 — (CUP) — Boys evacuated from the United Kingdom to Canada are now subject to military call-up in accordance with recent changes in the arrangements for calling up boys and girls in the United Kingdom.

However, as certain deferments are granted students in the United Kingdom taking specially recognized university courses, it has been proposed that similar concessions be made to students in Canada. They may now remain at University until they are 18 and a half, if in so doing, they will be enabled to complete their academic year and their remittance up to £10 monthly will be continued until the completion of their courses.

It is not proposed to insist that boys who have the opportunity of a university course in Canada should have entered the Canadian Armed Forces, or returned home before reaching the age of 18 years.

Students from the United Kingdom are requested to acquaint themselves with the previous regulations issued Nov. 28, and the new modifications.

J. T. Bryden to Talk On Life Insurance

Topic of tomorrow's vocational guidance group in the current Victoria College Alumni Association series will be "Life Insurance." The group will be directed by J. T. Bryden of the North American Life Insurance Company. The group will meet in room 14, Victoria College at 12:45 p.m.

Mr. Bryden will deal with four departments of insurance work—actuarial, agency, investment and administration.

Thursday's group on "Journalism" will be under the direction of R. B. Cowan, circulation manager of the Toronto Daily Star.

U.C. Parliament For Censorship

The motion that there should be censorship of the Press during wartime was upheld by a vote of 17-15 in the 698th session of the University College Parliament held last Friday.

Women were admitted to this session of the Parliament for the first time after having been excluded for several years.

Governor-General Don Rowat opened the session with the reading of the Speech from the Throne.

In proposing the bill, Prime Minister Herb. Christie pointed out that censorship of the Press is not advocated for peace time. However, censorship during war time is necessary and should be administered by some impartial body. At a time when issues are at stake which affect the welfare of the whole nation, dangerous dissension between racial and religious groups may be caused by revealing certain facts unwisely in the newspapers. Censorship of the Press would remove from the papers anything which might cause disunity at the present time.

Dennis Wrong, leader of the Opposition, said that misrepresentation of facts by censorship has had adverse results in other countries. He pointed to the demoralization of France through the with-holding of the truth about how the war was going. A well-informed public is essential to the democracy we are fighting to maintain.

Betsy Mosbaugh, Minister for the Investigation of Morals, explained that the bill under discussion was not favouring censorship as in France and Germany, but that any facts which might be likely to give comfort to the enemy should be withheld. The government is

British Council's Offer

In again offering their scholarships to brilliant women students in the Dominions, The British Council are supplying one of the best possible chances for women, or for that matter anyone, to see Great Britain in wartime. That is the purpose of these scholarships: to allow some brilliant specialists in various subjects, including economics, surgery, education and several others, to spend a year in Britain studying their chosen subject and the effect of the war upon it. Each scholarship covers fees and all expenses while the student is in Britain and, in addition, the Council undertakes to pay the student's fare both ways.

These scholarships are available only to university graduates, which make them of particular interest to women in the senior year, and to those in graduate studies. Anyone applying for one of them must have passed her 23rd birthday by March 1, 1943; she must have a definite plan for further study in her chosen field and should, if possible, have done special work in it already, according to the instructions about the scholarships which came to President Cody last week.

We have all heard of the miraculous change which has taken place in England during and after the Battle of Britain. Comment on this change is so general and so interesting that undoubtedly anyone at all interested in present-day Britain would gladly welcome any chance to see it for himself, especially under such favourable circumstances as the British Council scholarships offer. The winners of them will have at their disposal every facility to see the aspect of wartime Britain which most interests them, a year to do it in and all expenses paid.

Fields of study and research which have received most impetus from the effects of the war are the ones which are specifically mentioned in the bulletin about the scholarship. We feel sure that the Beveridge Report and the effects upon the people of its publication will have an important place in the studies of a scholarships. The migrations of whole schools from city to country and the much changed courses of study in British schools will be important for the student of educational trends. Medicine, surgery and the allied study of psychology will have a great and ever enlarging new field of research resulting from the discoveries which are being constantly made in the fight against wartime disease, war injuries and war neuroses.

The great opportunity offered by these scholarships has already excited a good deal of speculation among the women students and graduate students. Although the scholarships are few and the requirements exacting, we have every hope that at least one of them will be won by a Toronto senior or graduate.

(Information about the scholarships and applications forms are available at the S.A.C. Office.)

A "Friendly Alien"

Since the University became the centre of a lively controversy last term over the admission of a group of "friendly alien" students who had been born in Germany and Nazi-held countries, and who had been released from internment camps by the Government in order to continue their education, the case of another of these "aliens" who did not come to the University is interesting. The following exerpts from a recent editorial in The Toronto Daily Star give enlightening comment on this case:

"On Monday evening, January 25, a young violinist is to make his debut in Eaton Auditorium. He is Gerhard Kander, brilliant pupil of Kathleen Parlow, the Canadian artists and teacher." (Next Sunday the University will hear him at a Hart House Sunday Evening Concert.)

"Special interest is attached to Mr. Kander's appearance. This is due not only to his personality and the promise that lies in his artistic abilities but to what he represents. Mr. Kander is a refugee from Nazi Germany. He came to Canada not by invitation or choice, but by chance. He was part of a group of refugees most of whom are now known as "friendly aliens," who were sent here by the British government in 1940, the year when France fell. Young Kander was interned for some months until investigation proved that he had been wrongfully interned. It is only a matter of chance that he became the ward of a Canadian family and that his talents may enrich the culture and add to the enjoyment of people in this country.

"But this after all is how civilization has mostly developed—through the chance fusion of peoples. This continent in particular owes much to the European immigrants who from time to time have settled here. A few years ago the U.S. office of education issued a booklet entitled "Americans Are Immigrants All" in which it is shown how deeply indebted North American civilization is to immigrants from various countries or to the children of these immigrants.

"To welcome the refugees from the Nazis should give Canadians particular sastifaction. For they have escape from countries in which art and scholarship together with human decencies are daily being murdered. They seek here not merely physical safety and material comfort but an opportunity to grow with this country in spiritual stature. Europe's loss is Canada's gain."

Turnabout

Continuing its study of the views of college presidents in time of world change, The Varsity came upon a sad little group of them whose efforts to take recent American government regulations with a smile are contained in one of Ginn and Company's excellent series of pamphlets, "What the Colleges are Doing."

What this particular group of colleges are apparently doing is accepting the inevitable with the best possible grace. President Elliott of Purdue informs us categorically that this is a total war. President Dodds of Princeton chides some of his colleagues for "overzealous claims . . . for protection against the impact of the war." President Harris of Tulane wonders if "the surging tides of war will allow the continued existence of a university." Others are less pessimistic, but in all of the articles it is clear that the authors are conscious that their institutions are backed against a wall. Some view the situation asquiescently, some gloomily, and a few are still fighting, but in every case the same note of desperation is present.

It is from a layman—and a very prominent layman—that a different tone is heard. Wendell Willkie, a practical politician, a hard-headed business man who is not noted for his propensity to stand any nonsense from cloudy intellectuals, told a university audience last week that the destruction of the liberal arts tradition at this crisis of our history would be "a crime comparable, in my opinion with the burning of the books by the Nazis." He suggested that people in such courses "should not be made to feel inferior or apologetic in the face of a PT boat commander or the driver of a tank."

Most of this is familiar to students, but as the moral barrage from the university's dectractors, professional flag-wavers, defeatists and other sources grows in intensity, not only arts students but even science and engineering students have sometimes been made to feel both inferior and apologetic. Their mental struggle cannot easily be answered, but perhaps they will feel surer of themselves with the knowledge that they have a champion of Mr. Willkie's calibre.

Wymilwood Musicale

If they had had chandeliers in Wymilwood, people would have been hanging from them. Certainly Vic never had such a crowd for one of their recitals before, but then they never had brought three such musicians as make up the Canadian Trio. Everyone came, but it took such a recital to stand the discomfort. Actually, however, the overcrowding was scarcely noticed, so fine was the music.

Kathleen Parlow opened the program with a Grieg Sonata. She was in exceptionally fine form, and when in that state she is unsurpassable. In the slow movement she achieved a whispering delicacy of tone which was exceptionally pure. She is perfect. The one criticism that might be offered concerns not her but Grieg, whose first and last movements were a trifle too heavy.

Zara Nelsova appeared next, and started off with an arrangement of Adagio from a Bach organ Taccata. She, as we all know, has few peers among Toronto 'cellists. I doubt, personally, if she has any. The result of combining Miss Nelsova and Bach was extremely satisfying. She made her interpretation of the music stick to the ideal of the composer. Her playing of the de Fala Fire Dance was especially brilliant, and it was obvious that Sir Ernest was enjoying himself too. Since we were all sprawled out across the floors, the low notes of the 'cello, felt rather than heard, achieved a peculiar directness.

The climax occurred when all three musicians became the Canadian Trio and gave a brilliant performance of the Library Utterly Corrupt

By Ed Comment

(This is the fourth of a series of articles by a Varsity staff writer on existing conditions in the University of Toronto and its environs.)

When I visited the University of Toronto Library at about 10:10 a.m. in the morning, one day last week, I was amazed at the openness with which certain corruption was being carried on.

Long lines of students of both sexes were making payments to the librarians. Apparently this is a daily and well-regulated procedure as signs on the desks announce that no payments will be accepted until after 10 o'clock. I was given to understand that a number of male students make regular daily contributions to the maintenance of the women behind the counter.

There are separate "reading" rooms for man and women, although they frequently mingle in the "reference" rooms or loiter about the front door smoking "cigarettes" and carrying on "conversation."

I was told that there are other "reading rooms" scattered about the campus where men and women sit on opposite sides of the room in full sight of each other and even some where no segregation regulations are in force.

In the back of the library are the stacks, which senior students, with the tacit consent of the librarians, are frequently observed entering alone and leaving unaccompanied.

"They go in there to search for books," a librarian explained. I jotted this down on my pad and resolved to go and search for books myself sometime.

An even more ominous note is given these practices when it is realized that all persons using the stacks do so with the written consent of their professors. Professors have even been observed using the stacks themselves.

Reading rooms are frequently congested and noisy. The noise of people turning pages and scribbling notes is appalling. I observed with disgust the number of foreign-language books being read.

Effect of actual wartime conditions on the Library can be judged from signs posted about its halls which order all students to take shelter in the men's "reading room" and turn out all lights in case a blackout is called.

Varsity Blues Take Airmen 61-32

Warren Stevens' Basketeers Star On Athletic Night

Thousand-Odd Crowd See Big Game in Hart House Gym; Gibson of Varsity and Marrack of Manning Pool Are Individual Stars; Blues Show Promise of Last Year Fully Justified

CONSISTENT FORM IS VICTORY KEY

Warren Steven's Varsity eage team started the season with an impressive 61-32 victory over Manning Depot before an enthusiastic crowd of 1400 spectators in Hart House Saturday night. Last year's "Blues" lost but one game, that by a few points to Wayne, and this season's edition seems to be continuing in the same vein.

Varsity had too much smoothness and co-ordination for the green-clad boys from Manning Depot. Also the Blues' shooting was fairly consistent while that of the Air Force was somewhat below par.

Long Don Gibson was the game's leading scorer, garnering 16 of Varsity's points with his brilliant shooting. Marrack of the Air Force also put on quite a scoring exhibition, netting 12 points, over a third of his team's total.

Play started out fairly even with neither team being able to get control of the situtation. Lowry popped in two baskets for the Pigeons and Goldstein and Gibson replied for Varsity. At the 10-minute mark the Depot team had seized a slight lead, 12-11.

The Varsity attack really got rolling then, however. Goldstein looped one in from the side to put the Blues in the lead. Gibson got two, Stu Scott sank a free shot, and Gord Wallace then broke loose, scoring three quick baskets to put the Blues ahead 24-12. Scott and Thompson then combined on one of the loveliest plays of the game. Scott raced after a loose ball, grabbed it just as it was going out of bounds and tossed it behind his back to Thomson who netted the two points. Bradford finally got one back for the Depot, bringing their total to 14. Varsity then added seven more points to make the half-time score 33-14.

Varsity started the second half with their first-string quintet of Tettmar, Scott, Wallace and Goldstein opposing Glennie, Bradford, Lueas, Lowry and Marrack for the Air Force. Goldstein, Gibson and Wallace tossed in eight points, then Lueas replied for the Air Force on a long shot. The Depot team then rallied under the leadership of "Brick" Bradford and held even with the Blues for the rest of the quarter, each team getting eight points to make the score 51-24.

Durocher, Thomson, Waldon, Maschino and Patterson then took over for the Blues. Durocher sank four free shots and a technieal to give Varsity a 30-point lead. Lowry and Lueas came right back with two quick baskets—then Vern Booth entered the game for Varsity and sank a free throw on a foul called against Lueas. With a minute to go Tommy Waldon tossed in a basket to complete the scoring at 61-32.

Ken Tettmar played a lovely game for Varsity at left guard and was a tower of strength throughout. Durocher had a field day on foul shots sinking seven out of seven attempted. For the Air Force Bradford was outstauding.

Varsity—Goldstein (8), Wallace (9), Durocher (9), Thomson (6), Gibson (16), Booth (1), Waldon (2), Scott (4), Meschino (2), Tettmar (4), Patterson.

Manning Depot—Marrack (12), Glennie (1), Bradford (7), Lucas (4), Lowry (8), Holden, Cherry.

Speaking Of Sport

By Bud Smith

NUMBER 1 . . .

Saturday night nearly 1400 enthusiastic characters moved inside the bulging walls of Hart House to watch Warren Stevens' Blue Boys start on their long trail to success. And the Blue Boys looked quite good as they turned back the green-clad Manning Depot team by a good margin. However, if the Pigeons' shooting had been up to par the result would have been closer. (We're saying nice things about the Air Force until after the Senate meets.) There was almost as much athletic endeavour required on the dance floor afterwards as there was on the basketball floor. In case our readers missed the affair, we must inform them that there were other attractions on display also. U.C. and Vic were in charge of the affair and did a good job. There were two basketball games between teams of these colleges. Vic and Junior School attempted to drown each other in the pool under the guise of water polo. (The Engineers were warned to go easy, however, as it is difficult to obtain replacements for Arts students due to wartime conditions.)

There was a volleyball game also, we hear (darn the T.T.C.!). We caught a glimpse of some characters wandering around in the fencing room gazing at maps and such; and then there was the ping pong room which seemed to be as popular as ever. All in all it was well up to the standard of last year's successful affairs.

THE "BLUES" . . .

Following his own inscrutable methods, Warren Stevens appears to have come up with another successful cage squad. The most notable feature of the game was the excellent shooting of the Varsity team who seldom missed a reasonable chance. In this connection we might note Durocher who sank seven free shots in seven attempts—but good. Long Don Gibson has carried on from last year to take LaVarnway's place as our most potent scoring threat. Don chalked up 16 points on Saturday, many of them being quite spectacular shots: "Humberside Hank" Goldstein patrolled the left side quite effectively and contributed to the scoring cause with four lovely baskets, tossing them in off the backboard from deep in the corner. We were quite impressed with the play of Gord Wallace. Gord never seems to strain whatever but is quick to seize the slightest opportunity presented. Ken Tettmar has at last come into his own after understudying Axon and Roberts last year. Ken was just about the most effective player the Blues had on the floor; while not spectacular, his solid defensive work saved Varsity many scores. Stu Scott, converted from a forward, held down the other guard position quite well. Murray Thomson, veteran of last year's squad was the most impressive of the alternatives, outside of the aforementioned Durocher.

Varsity will get a more severe test next Saturday when the University of Rochester will troop in for an evening of fun and games. The Rochester team was quite classy last year and we presume they are continuing somewhat in the same vein this season. And after Rochester comes the season's big attraction—Wayne. The Blues came close to getting their first victory over the "LONG GREEN" last year, losing by but a few points after a brilliant basketball display. This year they will still be gunning for that initial victory. Sad to say, from where we were sitting it didn't look too good for a victory over Wayne. We think Varsity will still be after that initial victory next year unless Warren Stevens brews up some super vitamin pills or some such concoction. Wayne have three of last year's regulars back and we imagine their replacements will be up to standard. On the other hand, the Blues are not as strong as last year. It will take quite a while to secure another stone wall defense like Axon and Roberts who put on a truly magnificent display against Wayne. The offensive brilliance of Jack LaVarnway, now trudging over African sands, will be sorely missed also. However, we'll be hoping for the best.

It was a complete victory for U.C. on Friday afternoon up at ye old Varsity Arena. The score, 7-0, shows us the quality of their playing—and we, in the opposite goal, saw it at close range. Pucks flew all around us as a result of many rushes and passing plays. The first period was slow and scoreless, which is explained by the earliness of the season.

By the second period, the gals in red and white and dear old St. Mike's really played some good hockey. Margaret Ham shone on the U.C. forward line, ably assisted by Betty Verity. Marg's rushes are pretty well unique in the hockey season this year, and they stood her in very good stead. She had a little added expercience which shows up on the tricky plays around the net.

Florence Cooper of the Saints' forward line managed to get up around the U.C. net on a number of occasions, but her efforts were not rewarded by goals. Hope McSloy, who is new at the game, showed a lot of vim and vigour. On one occasion she glided into the boards and bravely picked herself up and played the game. All the girls received a few bumps and slid to success on several memorable occasions.

All in all it was a game which the spectators enjoyed—so they tell us—and which was good enough hockey for so early in the season. As it progresses, we have no doubt that U.C. will definitely be in the running and that St. Mike's will keep up the fight. Don't forget to consult your schedule for future games.

Turning to swimming, we should like to remind all those who are interested that this afternoon at 4:30 up at Lillian Massey pool speed swimming will be timely and Freddie Baxter will lend a helping hand to all those who come along.

Vic's Team Play Beats Junior U.C.

During the early stages of Saturday's Athletic Night (before the mob arrived) a wide open hoop test ended in a 40-35 victory for Junior Vic over Junior U.C. Vic looked to be the superior team from the start although U.C. kept pace with their scoring and was even leading, 19-18, at the end of the first half.

Vic had smooth running plays which clicked while U.C. looked clumsy and gathered points by brute strength. Vic turned on the heat in the final half and garnered a total of 22 points, while U.C. retaliated with only 16. A great point of difference between the two teams was in the comparative co-operation. During the game only one Vic man went scoreless while five U.C.-ers registered zeros on the sheet. Perhaps if U.C. would work more men into their plays they might have something worthwbile.

At the same time all due credit must go to U.C.'s Purcell who led the scoring in the game with 16 points. Teammate Silver followed with 14. Spry and Neal each made 12 for Vic while Hamilton scored seven. I note in passing, that Neale turned out to be Vic's white-haired boy in the second half. He sparked the Vic attack late in the frame when U.C. had forged ahead and himself scored 12 points, all in the last half.

Groovers scored four points for Vic, Crang three and Guthrie two. Morrison and Farfunkel each accounted for two U.C. points.

Jr. Vic — Spry, Hamilton, Neale, Groover, McHendry, Crang.

Jr. U.C.—Morrison, Silver, Kantor, Salzman, Tartaglia, Morton, Stett, Garfunkel, Purcell.

Dents Beat Trinity In Volleyball Tussle

Dents rang up a volleyball victory over Trinity last Saturday evening, two sets to one. Starting off on the proper foot, they took the first in short order with a 15-8 score. Trinity reversed the sheet in the second set and set back their opponents, 15-9. Dents tightened considerably in their defence in the third and ran up a 15-6 score to take the set and game.

Dents—Smyth, Clee, Turner, Sussman, Spivak, Schneider, Shapiro.

Trinity — Wagland, Jones, Bagnall, Smythe, Tseng, Bell-Irving.

Vic Polo Squad Tie With S.P.S.

Athletic Night fans jammed the galleries of Hart House pool Saturday night to watch two evenly matched water polo squads, Sr. Vic and Jr. S.P.S., dish up a three-all tie in a regular league fixture. The first splash contest between St. Mike's and U.C. was an exhibition tilt ending with a 4-3 decision for the double blue.

S.P.S. capitalized on all their breaks in the first half, running up three goals to one for Vic. Harry Kohl put the first score away for the Engineers on a close-in passing play, the result of a long convoy action from his own end. Vic came right back when Tom Nixon heaved himself out of the water about the centre of the pool and nicked the upper right corner on a magnificent heave.

The Blue and Gold took on the initiative and pressed hard on the Vic goal. It looked as if all the attackers were covered, but a pass went too far and Brace reached for it. Pete Bryce in the artsmen's goal stretched wildly but too late. To carry off the scoring honours for School, Kohl sped his second goal into the score sheet.

Taking an extra gulp of oxygen, the Vic team went into high gear in the second half. Crang floated in on the School goal and made it 3-2. With only a short time to go, Tom Nixon got the ball, aimed deliberately and fired in the tying counter.

Final tally: Sr. Vic 3, Sr. S.P.S. 3.

Vic—R. Beharriell, B. Tiltson, J. Crang (1), T. Nixon (2), P. Bryce, B. Taylor, D. Dunlop.

Jr. S.P.S.—J. Brant, Don Cornell, Brace (1), B. Moffat, F. Saxsom, Syd. Paikin, H. Kohl (2), H. Spence, J. Martin.

before your very eyes. There was to have been a psychological exhibition also, but for some reason or other it became a casualty and there were only a few somewhat baffling charts hanging on the wall to mystify the customers.

Dancing was from 10 till 12 and came in two shapes, round and square. Patrons of the hardier stuff gathered in the upper gym where a small band held forth and a tobacco-auctioneering-type caller guided the initiates through the steps. The jive hounds assembled in the lower gym and a goodly number of wolves lined the wall.

As a feature of the evening, June McMullan, II Vic, and Pat Dobbins, I S.P.S. put on a jitterbug exhibition, followed by a solo to the dulcet strains of "Drumboogie" by Miss McMullan.

Another feature of the evening was the drawing for theatre tickets as a part of the Aid to Russia campaign. The tickes, incidentally, ranged from Massey Hall and the Royal Alexandra even unto the Queen Street Opera House.

Everyone seemed to be happy, but just to emphasize the point, they chose the two happiest couples—J. McCardle, IV St. Mike's and Jean Cleak, II Household Science; and "Beefy" MacMillan, V Meds and Gwen Taylor, a physiotherapy grad. They were given toys to play with to make them even happier.

School Still Leads Indoor Track Meet

With the winter-long track race running into its third week of competition we find that S.P.S. has settled into the lead with Medicine a close second. The School team of Booth, McDonough and McDonald has emerged victorious in the two relay events already held while Meds have placed teams second in both. Meds also tied U.C. for third spot in the season-opener while both Meds and School had teams in the running in the relay last week.

Today's and tomorrow's results will probably put one team or another well in front. Three events are scheduled for tonight, the 50 yard dash, half mile novice, and half mile senior. As far as the sprint event is concerned, S.P.S. will probably have the edge with speed merchants such as Verne Booth and Charlie McDonald on hand. Trinity's Cam Burgess, out for the first time last Monday, is somewhat of a question mark in the field of prediction since neglect of training has a way of showing itself when the times are registered. However, Cam walked away from all opposition in last fall's outdoor meets and may yet come up with the winning time.

The same applies to Jim Bitove of U.C. A heavy cold has kept Jim off the track this term and his performance today will not be up to the proper Bitove standard.

Meds will no doubt have a little more to say in the half mile. Mouse Fielding, winner of the novice outdoor half, should certainly gather winning points if he could take time out to practice. The dependable Meds veteran, too, will be out to seek School blood, and judging by previous performances, will be right up near the top when the winners' names are announced.

Of course, we can't overlook Wycliffe's champion when half milers are mentioned. Tom Barnett last year won the indoor half in 2.09.5, which is fast enough on any man's indoor oval. Close behind whenever Barnett is mentioned come Parke-Taylor and Jeffries, two more Theolog distance men.

The School distance specialists are somewhat in the minority since their stalwarts, Lorimer, Foulis and Feldhans do not take kindly to indoor track.

Were you at Athletic Night on Saturday? We were, and we had a splendid time in spite of the fact that we found that the geography department had designated our district as merely "Second Class Residential." What they would call it if they really lived there we wonder.

There were lots of people there besides us, and lots of chanees to get lost (either alone or by couples). One of the first type strays was seen waiting wanly near the Great Hall. "I'm just a precious little bundle," she proclaimed loudly, "waiting to be claimed."

After 10 o'clock there was square dancing in the upper gym. Strange as it may seem, this socio-athletical-type mayhem attracts even more people than the floor can hold. One couple in one circle was backed right up against a pile of gym mats and did some really snappy swinging up and down off this pile. But this strictly from adagio stuff got to be too much for them so they got some help and started pitching the mats off the floor onto a nearby platform until stopped by an earnest attendant who argued with unaceountable logic, "You can't do that. I spent all day piling those there in case of fire." Me either, it's like eating olives.

This cornhusking stays with you, and it's hard to stop. One co-ed, when the party was breaking up, came skipping out the door of the Athletic Wing humming a bucolic jive tune, caught her arm in the hooked Hart House door handle, and performed a quick and unexpected allamen left. "Get me," she screamed in cultured hysterics, "I can't leave the stuff alone"

Crowning point of the evening was when the Aid to Russia draw was held in the big gym. Tickets to various forms of entertainment were offered, including passes to the local emporia of the theatrical arts, both the legitimate and the less so. Some lucky person received a ticket to the Vic At-Home.

"Aaow," remarked a disdainful female voice oozing Oxford-type sophistication, "That's nothing. You ought to go to the Cawnvuhsat."

It has been rather cold lately, you know, and that has brought out all sorts of protective headcoverings from cavernous hoods to carmuffs for those tough enough to need protection for only those tender extremities.

With some people, though, we suspect carmuffs are a fetish. Take, for instance, the coy character we saw ranging the snowy steppes of Queen's Park last week. This lad was the wearer of an ample wool toque which he had hiked up above ear-level in a pixieish fashion in order to make room for a pair of gorgeous earmuffs . . CHACUN A SON COW.

But the ladies, gentlemen, the ladies! Have you observed how pretty they manage to look in a kerchief? But don't let all this fringed-shawl witchery fool you. Most of those things are considerably heavier than the summertime hair-confiners, in fact, wool is frequently the material — comfort with beauty they keep demanding.

Now, out at the University of Washington such comfortable headgear was not to be had. Due to the wool shortage not a woolen kerchief could be found. Thenfi all at once two co-eds became the envy of the campus as they appeared sporting pink and blue affairs on their heads. Kerchiefs? Nah! THEY WERE BABY BLANKETS.

WOMEN, we would be led to observe —but then a remark of a colleague restrains us.

It was the other evening when we were endeavoring to be sociable with an underling that he quipped, "As you always say, women abhor you." Well, that was embarrassing. We couldn't exactly deny that, but we did try to point out that the correct catchphrase was, "Women appal us"—AND SO DO UNDERLINGS.

Campus Organizations Swing Into Campaign Plans For Aid To Russia Fund

Talk, Film, "Warsages," Are Among Means Proposed for Raising Money to Swell Fund

RUSSIAN PAINTINGS SHOWN

This week, clubs and societies all across the campus are swinging into the University Aid to Russia Campaign.

Tonight, the Sociology Club will hold their meeting in Cartwright Hall at St. Hilda's, where they will hear Aliee Carscallen speak on the subject of "Youth Organization in Russia." The proceeds of this meeting go to the Aid to Russia Fund.

Wednesday night at 8:30, the Student Labour Club will present a showing of the Canadian film "Inside Fighting Russia." Here, too, the money received will help to swell the coffers of the fund.

Next Friday at the St. Michael's At-Home, "warsages" will be sold at the door. These abbreviated wartime corsages will not only save students' money but will be a token of St. Mike's support of the campaign.

Using placards and notices, the School of Social Work representatives are promoting parties, dances, skating parties and other functions in support of the campus Aid to Russia Fund during the week ending Jan. 30.

The Hart House Art Gallery is showing their approval of the campaign by hanging a special collection of Russian paintings.

Although the Ukrainian Students Club haven't planned anything definite yet, they have expressed their wholehearted support of the campaign on the campus.

BOOKS AND PAMPHLETS RECEIVED FROM ABROAD

In his Annual Report released last week, President Cody stated that 9,902 books and 2,056 pamphlets had been added to the University Library in the past year.

According to W. S. Wallace, Librarian of the University, the books came for the most part from Great Britain, the United States and South America. A few have been coming in from Spain and, until very recently, from Switzerland.

In addition, Mr. Wallace received some books from Russia and with this shipment there came from Moscow a request for books from Canada.

Bates To Give Informal Recital

All members of Hart House are invited to hear John Bates, baritone, III S.P.S., who is giving an informal recital in the east common room today at 1 p.m. Howard Brown, IV Victoria, will assist at the piano.

Those who were present at last year's closing Sunday Evening Concert will remember Bates' solo work with the Hart House Glee Club.

Bates started his singing career about 12 years age under Herman Pouwels at the Italian Conservatory. Later he studied with Alfred Whitehead at the Toronto Conservatory. For the past 10 years he has been a church soloist and is at present singing at Yonge Street United Church.

S.P.S. Professor Emeritus Passes Away on Sunday

Professor Thomas Reeve Rosebrugh, professor emeritus in the faculty of electric engineering, died Sunday at his home after an illnes of two months.

Professor Rosebrugh was a member of the University staff for 47 years and was widely known for his vast knowledge of mathematics in relation to the science of electric engineering.

Professor Rosebrugh graduated from the University of Toronto and soon after joined the S.P.S. staff in 1889. He progressed rapidly from demonstrator in electrical engineering to professor and retired in 1936.

He wrote a number of scientific papers for the International Mathematical Congress held in Toronto. In collaboration with the late professor W. Lash Miller, he did valuable work in connection with the mathematics of electrochemistry.

Marketing To Be Topic Of New Series

J. W. Young, American Advertising Expert, Will Discuss "What the Public Expects of the Business Man"

FIRST LECTURE TONIGHT

Inaugurating a new Extension series of 10 weekly lectures on marketing and business trends looking into the post-war era, James W. Young, prominent in the field of advertising in the United States, will speak tonight at 8 o'clock in the Big Hall of the Economics Building on "What the Public Expects of the Business Man."

Mr. Young, former Professor of Business History at the University of Chicago, is a member of the Business Advisory Committee of the United States Department of Commerce and of the Executive Committee of the Advertising Council. He is also the author of "A Technique for Producing Ideas," one of the outstanding books on advertising. He will discuss in a general way what contributions the public will expect from business men in the post-war period.

Although this is the fifth series of Extension lectures on Marketing, which includes all activities concerning the distribution, transportation, wholesaling, retailing, and advertising of manufactured goods, the course this year has been given a much broader scope. To meet the public demand that there be some thought given to transition and post-war marketing and industrial trends, most matters of economic interest will be discussed. The course is expected thus to be of interest not only to business men but also to all students of current economic affairs.

The lectures are being given by the Department of University Extension and the Department of Political Economy, in co-operation with the Advertising and Sales Club and the Business Institutions of the City of Toronto.

Fee for the series of ten lectures, which will be given by leading men in business and economic fields, is $5. Students will be admitted free but only on presentation of their admit to lecture cards.

Dr. Jaffary States Need Of Social Aid

Describes Conditions Brought About in Post-War World Making for Increased Demand on Workers

WORK HAS ATTRACTIONS

"There is an increasing demand for social workers to staff both new and old agencies," S. K. Jaffray, head of the School of Social Work, told The Varsity yesterday.

This school, one of the schools of graduate studies of the University, scientifically deals with problems of social maladjustment, incompetency, and an understanding of living conditions.

In the past such things as family work agencies, children's aid societies and public welfare organizations have demanded the attention of these workers. But in addition to these standard requisitions, the present war status necessitates more complex adjustments. Selective Service, Wartime Housing scheme and the Department of Pensions and National Health seek social science graduates in their employ.

Also the facts that families are disunited and that mothers work in factories while school age children stay at home provide further incentive to the betterment of community standards.

"The present needs, however, are not momentary," Mr. Jaffrary said, "for as far as we can see in the future the whole trend is for social service." The post-war world will need social workers in such matters as Health Insurance, Public Housing projects and general readjustments of the shift of population from the country to the city.

"Salaries and working conditions for these workers are improving," Mr. Jaffrary said. The various fields of this type of work are coming gradually

Student Labour Club Sponsors Soviet Battle Film "Inside Fighting Russia"

Showing Is Scheduled for Tomorrow Night; Entire Proceeds to Go to Aid to Russia Drive

RUSSIAN MUSIC ON PROGRAM

The Soviet film, "Inside Fighting Russia," is being shown at 8:30 p.m. tomorrow night in the main hall of the economics building.

The film is being run under the auspices of the Student Labour Club as their contribution to the Aid to Russia drive on the campus. They obtained it, at no cost, from the Aid to Russia committee. This will enable the entire proceeds of the evening to be donated to the fund. The program also calls for the presentation of some of the more recent Soviet music.

The film is composed mainly of action shots taken on the Russian front under actual battle conditions and scenes of the action behind the lines which enable the lines to be maintained. The National Film Board of Canada has collected and edited these to produce this documentary film. Along with the film they have fitted in a commentary by one of the more famous Hollywood male voices. Those who have seen it report that it is one of the most grimly realistic films yet released.

Flenley Discusses Peace Problems

Discussion on the questions which will have to be answered with regard to Germany after the war was led by Professor R. Flenley of the Department of History, when the International Affairs Society met at the Women's Union yesterday.

Prof. Flenley pointed out that the problems facing the peacemakers will include: First of all, whether or not Germany will be a member of the peace conference; what form of punishment, if any, will be inflicted on her; territorial arrangements; the government of Germany; economic regulations; should there be an attempt at de-education from Nazi principles and last but not least, Germany's relation to any international organization which might be set up.

During the discussion which ensued on the question of reparations, Prof. Flenley, recognizing the desire for punishment of Nazi officials among the conquered peoples, explained that in his opinion, the two kinds of reparation, that is, economic and the type dealing with personal punishment, could be separated.

In connection with the geographical settlement, the possibility of a European federation similar to the United States of America was discussed. Prof. Flenley pointed out the probable impossibility of an equivalent of the American system, but expressed the belief that along with some kind of regional arrangements, there might be a wider organization combining military, economic and a measure of political unity. He stressed, however, that such an arrangement would have to be universal.

He said that the can envisage an international police force after the war, that is, an international force at the disposition of an international authority, to be called upon by the members—with assurance, of course, that such assistance will be forthcoming.

Avukah Society Plans Palestinian Programme

The next meeting of Avukah, on Thursday, Jan. 28, at 8:00 p.m. sharp, in the Women's Union, will be a Palestinian night.

There will be a brief talk by H. R. Warschauwer, and two sound films in technicolor, A Day in Daganio and Palestine at War. The latter film has just been released, and is of importance to anyone interested in the strategic defensc of Suez and Britain's life-line.

There will be refreshments and dancing to Artie Shaw and Duke Ellington. To correspond with the Palestinian night, Avukah is also planning a literary night and a theatre night.

Highlight of the theatre night, which will take place on Feb. 11, will be a play, The Man with a Pucket, directed by Martin Clenman. All proceeds will go to the Aid to Russia Fund.

EXTENSION COURSES GREW FROM HUMBLE BEGINNING

The history of the University Extension which skyrocketed from a small department instructing a handful of public and high school teachers to a super night-school teaching 2,133 adults of all trades, had its humble beginning with a delegation of farmers.

One day in February, 1920, a group of farmers visited Director W. J. Dunlop and asked if he couldn't teach 25 rural folk subjects they hadn't been taught in the little red school house. Practical subjects, they said, like architecture, economics, hygiene, history and perhaps some English.

Sure, replied Dircetor Dunlop, but did they think it possible to rustle up more than 25 students. About 50, perhaps?

We'll try, said the delegation. And they spread the good news to farm neighbours, who don't do much in winter anyway.

At that first lecture period 22 years ago so many farmers packed the University's West Hall that the lectures had to be concluded in Convocation Hall. There were 279 farmers in all.

Later on, new topics were added from year to year until today subjects range from short-story writing to plastics, from radio theory to lip-reading. And in special arts courses more than 700 graduates have attained B.A. degrees, including among alumni, Principal E. Cavell of Western Technical School and Principal W. J. Houston of Bloor Collegiate.

But don't get the idea that delegations don't still approach the Director. This year he was asked to establish evening classes in industrial chemistry, physics, French and psychology for employees of Lever Bros., the Swift Canadian Co., and Canada Packers. These courses have been sponsored by the management of the three business firms.

"Two new courses we are inaugurating this week have recently attracted favourable comment from the press,"

GRANDMA TAUGHT HIM ART, CHESS CHAMPION CLAIMS

David Bland, I M. and P., member of the University Chess Club, says two chess players over a board may be compared to two shrewd generals outwitting each other on the battlefield.

"A chess game, like a battle, involves all the strategy of prediction and ingenious tactics that the players can command," he says. "Both war and chess are won with brains."

No flash in the pan, chess-wizard Bland has been sliding rooks and castles over the board for more than six years, since he acquired the art in England through the teachings of his grandmother.

Carrying on her traditions, he will be found many an afternoon huddled deep in thought over one of the seven chess tables in the University Chess Club on the second floor of Hart House.

To those who scoff at chess as an old man's plaything, Bland replies that because it develops conecntration, chess is classified as a subject in every school throughout Russia and recently in a school in the United States.

"Although games last from one to three hours, chess is simple to learn," says Bland. "If the time element bothers lazy people, they can always limit the amount of time for each move."

The Chess Club, now in the preliminaries of its annual tournament, is always willing to teach students chess technique, be said.

Commenting on what he calls the "undoubted superiority" of chess as compared to checkers, Bland confides that checkers as a game is intellectually limited. While there are only 60 to 70 potenial moves in the first 10 movements in checkers, chess allows each player more than 1,000,000 moves in the first five movements.

The origin of chess is lost in time's obscurity, say members of the Chess Club. It may have been begun with the Hindus, the Persians or the Chinese. It may have started with Japheth or Shem. It is reported that the game may have begun with such oldtimers as Brahman Sissa or the fortune teller, Shatrenacha. But then again, perhaps not.

Chess pundits says, however, that in the 10th century, the son of Prince Okar of Bavaria was killed by a blow on the temple, struck by a son of the royal Pippin who was enraged by the vagaries

Don't Blame The Censors

With commendable cool-headedness, the University College Parliament last week brushed aside cries of "dictatorial" and "undemocratic" from the opposition benches and supported a measure defending censorship of the press in wartime.

Occasions have arisen when editors have been irritated and readers exasperated by apparently pointless rulings by censors which have withheld what appeared to be harmless information from the public. There has been talk of unjustified clamping down on legitimate criticism of the government by patriotic and disinterested parties and cases have gone before the courts when information which was released for publication without being submitted to the censors was deemed contrary to government wartime regulations.

The Varsity does not set itself up as a competent judge of the efficiency or impartiality of the present censorship arrangements. Its dealings with the censors are happily few and such relations as have existed have been uniformly amicable. But The Varsity joins with all the other newspapers in Canadad in welcoming the existence of a body which is competent to rule on the legitimacy of the growing number of news items which arouse doubt in an editor's mind. A growing list of censorship directives covering contingencies as they arise is in every newspaper office of the nation and censors are on a 24-hour call in all of the larger Canadian cities to deal with specific cases which may be referred to them.

Newspaper editors have generally found that press censors are anxious to co-operate in the speedy release of legitimate news to the Canadian people as fast as it is received. And they have been equally valuable in helping to keep legal battles between the government and the press at a minimum.

Existence of censorship in Canada has not shackled the press. The most important factor remains the discretion of the individual editor in deciding what he wishes to submit to the censor and whether he wishes to act on the censor's advice. For a censor's rulings are not binding; he acts in a purely advisory capacity and it is possible in some cases to disregard his advice without falling foul of the courts.

Intelligent censorship and intelligent newspapermen can give Canada the best news service in the world without giving Germany any information of value. Unintelligence on either side can cause serious domestic friction or worse. Both parties are responsible to the Canadian people for the maintenance of relations that will keep the news flowing freely.

Not Quite Useless

Early last month, Eleanor Roosevelt told a press conference: "I believe girls had better get out of college and go to work unless their college training is helping fit them for some specific task. Few have the right now to train themselves for nothing in particular. I don't believe people can get by without working in the world of the future."

As Dorothy Thompson pointed out in a recent "On the Record" column, Mrs. Roosevelt has advocated that everybody be trained and noboby be educated. And Miss Thompson took aggressive issue with Mrs. Roosevelt over the validity of this suggestion, advancing the proposition that "so-called 'useless knowledge' is the most useful knowledge that anyone can possess."

Gist of her argument runs this way: "The result of substitution of 'training' for 'education' would be to create a society of people, each of whom know how to do one thing competently, but all of whom would be at a loss under new circumstances which rendered his job unnecessary. The educated person is one in whom creative forces have been released, and whose mind has been so disciplined that he is able to train and adjust himself to new situations. . . . Actually . . . what may seem useless today may prove useful tomorrow, in the strictest sence of the word 'use,' meaning that you can turn it into money and live off it. But suppose it never proves useful in this sense at all? Is there no usefulness in having a mind that rejects quackery? Is it not useful to the citizen to be able to give an account of 2,000 years of human history and know what, in that history, accompanied prosperity and peace, and what has accompanied poverty, misery and war?"

Miss Thompson gives as her belief that— leaving aside our immediate war needs—what we are in greatest need of is more educated mechanics and educated artisans. And she says to college girls: "Educate yourselves. In the very difficult period that will follow this war you will have to retake a great many of your bearings—and 'training' won't help you do it. If you work at a lathe, try and read at night, and don't mind going to college when you are 25 instead of 21. For if the future world is not going to be a chaos, it will have to be made by people with 'useless' education."

Nor was Miss Thompson merely writing noble-sounding sentiments to fill space by the inch when she offered college-age girls this advice. Some, on reading it, would arrive at the conclusion that the advocacy of "useless" knowledge was merely a subtle form of reader-flattery directed towards the more lackadaisical of the relatively monied classes. But it is not only the exclusive possessors of this "useless" type of education who acknowledge its value in the more practical fields. An anecdote illustrative of this point was recently told of Professor S. P. Langley of the Smithsonian Institute, an expert in the intensely specific studies of physics and aeronautics.

Asked how he selected his laboratory assistants, Dr. Langley said: "I ask them a few questions in arithmetic." When his interrogator suggested that such a test was scarcely adequate, the physicist replied: "I also try to find out how much useless information they have. If they have acquired a good deal of useless knowledge, I can do something with them. They have intellectual curiosity and an enquiring turn of mind that will lead to discovery and make them creative scientists."

Dr. Langley's opinion is but one of many that concur in the view that the soundest basis for all thought is the properly-trained and well-stocked mind.

Let Us Know

From time to time The Varsity prints stories about graduates and former students of the University on active service. These stories rank high in news value, for a university's value is expressed largely in the achievements of its alumni, in war or peace. Such stories as have appeared in these columns have been gathered haphazardly from the down-town press or, on rare occasions, culled from information supplied by relatives or friends of the men concerned.

Without attempting to give a complete record of the University's war effort as expressed in terms of its alumni and former staff members, The Varsity would like hearing as much as possible about their achievements. The University wants to hear of her sons, and the men and women who contribute to its support should know that their investment is paying immediate as well as long-term dividends. A letter, phone call or personal visit to The Varsity's news offices would be appreciated.

ART-MUSIC-Drama

Charming Naivete

Claudia

Nobody could exist who acted in real life like the Claudia now appearing at the Royal Alec (at least so I hope. But the character there seems real while you watch her, and her antics are very, very funny.

Claudia is a play which is bound to be a success. It takes a sweet young girl (she never really seems to be a wife) and makes nearly everything she says completely unusual and unexpected. The unmentionables (why so, I am not quite certain) of polite society fall from her lips with such ease that the audience is completely charmed. That with her character such a vocabulary is completely natural never enters its heads.

Claudia herself is charming. The characterization by Dorothy McGuire is extremely artistic, and all the sweet naiveté of the part is brought out. Of course, the stuff is sentimental, but it is well done, and good entertainment.

Probably Miss McGuire herself is very tired by now of critics saying that she is a natural for the part of Claudia, but I will venture to add that she certainly looks it. I wonder, however, if she doesn't relax by looking as sophisticated as possible in her private life.

The other actors are good and support Miss McGuire very well, but it is she who lives and makes the play. Donald Cook as her husband and Frances Starr as her mother are the best, and they help the play greatly.

If I am to be completely honest, I must strongly criticize the 45 seconds or so which are taken up by a too-sentimental scene between the hired man and David Naughton. It didn't click, for me at least. I should also mention the fact that I disagree with the principle of playing a comedy as if it were a series of gag-lines strung together. After all, allowing an audience to laugh as it will is no more than a tacit admission that it cannot be controlled.

But these are merely incidental to

CATITOR INTERNED

Oldest Inhabitant of Campus Finally Put to Work; Will Be Released in Eight Months to Join Army; Is Now Having Babies

ACTION FOLLOWS EXAMS

At an unmentionable hour last night, new was cleased by the National Selective Service Board, that the Catitor, alias "Omega," alias "S. Q. Lapius," had been interned in a centre reserved only for the most serious cases. Some inkling of the action was obtained when the Catitor's name appeared in a list published by the Faculty of Medicine including the names of a large group of students who would no longer be permitted to attend undergraduate lecture courses. This action occurred following the recent examinations held by the Faculty.

It is understood that the whole group would not be interned at the same place, because this is believed to be too dangerous, and has never been done, in the history of the Faculty. "I'm sorry to see the boys go," said Scalpel O'Sawbones, Dean of the Faculty. "I feel there is so much that I could still teach them."

Rumors circulated to the effect that the action was taken after the students refused to pay fees for another year.

"An unheard of audacity," screamed a horrified fees-taker in the Bursar's Office.

The authorities seem inclined to be fairly lenient with the whole group, which numbered over 100. They are permitted to have visitors, and are fairly free to do as they please. The Catitor was visited by his colleagues Shamus O'Malley and Pie-Em Simon. "He seems quite comfortable," Pie-Em said in response to reporters' questions. "When we saw him he was wearing the regulation uniform of the place—white with numerous red spots, and large dark circles under each eye."

"He shouldn't get lonesome for these parts for a while," O'Malley volunteered. "The place is provided with a gadget called a pool-table, which can also be used (and it is) at night as an extra bed. It's quite comfortable, if no more than three sleep on it, you know."

St. Mike's Squad Extend Puck Lead

St. Mike's very aggressive bands of pucksters extended their lead in the Group A hockey league by virtue of a 2-1 win over Vic I yesterday afternoon. St. Mike's now have a total of five points and hold a three-point margin over Vic, U.C. and Sr. S.P.S., who share second place with two points each.

The Double Blue started off with a bang, registering two quick goals in the first period. Don Hector bagged the first on a pass from line-mate Bill Doyle within the first two minutes of play. Seconds later Morrison put St. Mike's two in front when he intercepted a Vic breakaway and beat Wes Dunn in the Vic nets with a hard shot that was labelled all the way.

Vic came back fast with a rush by Jimmy Street that was side-tracked to the corner. Fullerton gained possession and scooped a pass out to Paton who was loitering in front of the St. Mike's net. A follow-through wood shot flicked on the red light and Vic were within hailing distance with one period to go.

Vic's lone goal ended the scoring but started some action. Vic fought hard to tie the score but St. Mike's were trying harder to get a more comfortable lead. Neither team was successful but the last period was jammed with thrills and spills. St. Mike's buzzed around the Vic net continually and only some air-tight work by Wes Dunn kept the score down. "Butch" O'Malley and Eric Flewelling toiled the whole game on the Vic defence and did everything possible.

Egan, Kurlie and Haydon on the St. Mike's defence played a hang-up game with emphasis on the bang. On the attack Hector, Des Roches, Doyle, Morrison and McKenzie all went well. On three trips out St. Mike's have really been clicking and they will make a fair attempt to walk away with the league.

Vic — Dunn, Flewelling, O'Malley, Street, Paton, Fulletron, Fisher, Niero, Ogilvie.

St. Mike's — Gregson, Egan, Kurlie, Haydon, Hector, Des Roches, Doyle, Morrison, McKenzie, Jacob, Boland.

IRISH WIN OVER SCHOOL IN NOON BASKETBALL TILT

St. Mike's "D" hoopsters staved off a last half bid by School VI to win yesterday's noon-hour basketball encounter by a slim 27-22 margin. The Double Blue built up an imposing 19-8 lead in the first 15 minutes but saw it gradually melt away under the blistering School attack. Ray Stock was top marksman for St. Mike's while Misener's 10 counters pased the Engineers.

St Mike's "D"—Stock (11), Joe Kennedy (4), W. Springer, F. Temmerman (6), R. McAvoy (2), J. Armesto (4).

School VI — Mills (3), McCarthy (2), Misener (10), Christilaw (2), Darling (2), Sheppard, Bromley (3).

Speaking Of Sport

By Phil Shackleton

DID YOU KNOW . . .

That McGill, a university in eastern Canada, has a rope-climbing team? Now we had heard rather vague reports of this sport and one late afternoon saw a body hanging from a rope in Hart House (thought it was a Schoolman who had ended it all), but little did we suspect that it had grown to such proportions.

A short article in the McGill Daily last week, asked for "any student able to climb the length of a gymnasium rope using the hands only." Let it be known to all McGillians that Toronto students climb the rope without using the hands (or feet).

The object of the manly art of rope-climbing is to climb a rope. Simple, isn't it? But seriously, this is a serious affair and could bear looking into. The foremost question is, what has led to this manilla mayhem? Now, there are two schools of thought on this issue.

The first, and most logical, is that it has been brought about by an evolutional hangover. Men, in springing from monkeys, seems to still have an urge to swing from bough to bough and to climb tropical labyrinths of vines. (If the springing from monkey theory is correct, then it appears that H. Sapiens did not spring far enough.)

The second and less likely possibility lies in the "get you ready for Brockville" theory. This can hardly be possible, because a soldier cannot be rushing about during battle looking for a suitable place to hang his rope before climbing same. Wouldn't they look silly in the Libyan desert! (Is there a Yogi in the house?)

And besides, what with snoods and things, there's liable to be a rope shortage. And with that I have reached the end of my tether.

WHAT! STILL MORE SPACE?

In the morning's mail comes a plea from some enterprising individual deploring the waste of space in the Hart House quadrangle. "Look," he deplores, "what good is all that space doing outside? Why don't we make more use of it?"

It seems that this report is well-founded. Outside of providing an overflow-absorbing agent at graduation balls, the quad is little used. Now this vast space, 150 by 50 feet (approximately), could surely be put to some good use.

For instance, skeet shooting could be added to the sporting attractions of Hart House. The skeeters could take their stand in the doorways off the Great Hall while confederates expelled the clay pigeons from the windows of the S.A.C. office.

A second possibility is that of archery, and a third that of tight rope walking. A rope stretched from the windows of the Upper Gym to the S.C.M. Library would provide adequate facility for those eager to enter the world of entertainment upon graduation. Friend Conant promises to be the tightest of the rope trippers.

Perhaps the sanest suggestion is the establishment of a sun bathing colony. 'Nuff said.

Surprise

Gerhard Kander

Last night's violin recital in Eaton Auditorium was a surprise. What might have been expected to be cold, technical display turned out to be a vital performance. The violinist was Gerhard Kander, a recent acquisition of Toronto.

The first composition played, Tartini's Devil's Trill Sonata, made evident the artist's newly found expressiveness and dramatic power. And the last movement, with the Kreisler cadenza, left no doubts about the player's technical equipment.

The main work of the evening, the Mendelssohn Concerto, was performed with enough vigour to satisfy anyone. Kander played the first movement faster than it is usually taken, but resisted the natural impulse to sentimentalize in the slow movement. Here one noticed one of the most striking features of Kander's playing — his clear, smooth pianissimo passages.

Next came a clear-cut performance of the Beethoven Romance in F. The Bach E Major Prelude (with the added Kriesler accompaniment) was rather jerky both dynamically and rythmically.

The performance of Hubay's Zephyr should be specially mentioned for the clarity of the harmonics and bowing. However the Dvorak Slavic Donce was over-interpreted into a mysterious fog instead of the simple song it was meant to be. The program ended with a brilliant and technically perfect performance of the Wieniawski Scherzo Tarantelle.

U.C.'s Shackleton Sets Record On Indoor Track

Hec Phillips Happy as Hart House Meet Brings Forth New Trackmen Gillett, King, Baxter and Wesson

TIME: 2 MIN., 4 SEC.

By Roger Conant

In the fastest time in the history of the Hart House track, Phil Shackleton romped home an easy winner in the Senior 880 yesterday. It only took the ex-high school champion two minutes and four seconds to do the five and a half laps of the oval in the best time ever done.

In the half-mile novice Wesson of Trinity carried off the honours by nipping U.C.'s Baxter in the last lap and breaking the tape with the time of 2.16.

With 34 men out for the 50 yard sprints, some hot and close times were turned in, but veteran Verne Booth clocked a 5.37 to carry off the honours. With 5.9, Trinity's Cam Burgess gathered in second place but was followed by a three-way tie for third. Jack Gillett, Chuck MacDonald and Tom King all clocked an even six seconds.

Leading the eight seniors in a torrid race, Tom Barnett set the lead in the senior 880. He was a good eight yards in the lead until the second lap from home. At that point a general shift took place and Chuck MacDonald moved up to third spot and George Lewis followed him into fourth. At the same instant Shackleton and Barnett battled it out on the back stretch with the winner rounding the banked turn first. From then on everyone held their positions and Shackleton lengthened his lead to a good fifteen yards to make the new record for the track. Barnett, MacDonald, Lewis and Parke-Taylor were the next four.

In the junior affair Chuck Baxter of U.C. broke from the pack of 13 starters and maintained a 10-yard lead for the first four laps. Rounding the second bend from home Wesson of Trinity and Adams of School edged up on the tiring Baxter and nudged past him on the last lap. This was somewhat similar to the senior event when likewise the pacesetter was nipped close to the tape. First five finishers were: Wesson (Trinity), Adams (S.P.S.), Baxter (U.C.), Gianfranceschi (St. Mike's, Gillett (Wycliffe).

Thirty-four entrants hurtled down the 50 yards of one side of the track. There was plenty of new talent attempting the dash but it was left to the veterans to nab top positions. Verne Booth scorched the planks to win by a good two-tenths of a second. Trinity's ace, Cam Burgess, came next, then two newcomers, Jack Gillett and Tom King, tied favoured Chuck MacDonald for third. George Lewis made fourth spot a scot .03 seconds behind. Then for fifth, Wesson, the winner of the novice 880, did the honours for Trinity.

Hec Phillips, mentor and coach for the track throngs, was very pleased with the whole show with emphasis on the newcomers. With such comers as Gillett, Baxter, Wesson and King, he remarked, track on this campus is far from dismal.

APPOINTMENTS FROM COTC MADE TO RIFLE UNITS

One-quarter of the appointments from the University of Toronto Contingent, C.O.T.C., during the last academic year were made to Infantry Rifle units, according to figures released in the President's Annual Report last week. Figures announced are not necessarily completey as appointments came from various parts of Canada.

Of 421 known appointments, 102 were to Infantry Rifle units. Artillery had the next highest total, 57. Forty-three former members of the corps received commissions in the Royal Canadian Ordnance Corps and 37 joined the Canadian Armoured Corps.

Thirty-seven appointments to the R.C.A.F. and 30 to the R.C.N.V.R. are listed.

Today's and tomorow's columns we are going to devote to the noble art of swimming. Little by little things are progressing towards the big event—the intramural meet at Hart House. St. Joseph's College had a small but entertaining preliminary meet last Thursday up at O.C.E. and hope for a better turnout next time. Tonight at 7:00 the girls from St. Hilda's will have their meet and everyone from there who can swim is strongly urged to come along and join the fun. Judging from their large entry last year, their prospects look good to us.

There has been a slight change in arrangements for speed swimming practice. The place has been changed to Lillian Massey for convenience sake, so that now every Monday up until Feb. 4, speedsters will try their prowess there instead of at Margaret Eaton on Tuesdays. But, on Thursdays there will still be speed swimming at Margaret Eaton pool at 415 Yonge Street, almost opposite Eaton's College Street Store's southeast corner. Every Wednesday and Friday up until Feb. 4, there will be swimming practice up at Lillian Massey. Everyone is invited to dive on Wednesdays and to speed swim on Fridays. The pool is well known to most swimmers, and should be very satisfactory for newcomers. Freddie Baxter will be there to lend a helping hand and the facilities are excellent. So come on along on Wednesday and join the bappy throng of mermaids and learn all about swimming at first hand.

Turning to things a bit chillier, figure skating has got off to a grand start and the instructor up at Varsity's outdoor rink has been very busy indeed with all his proteges, especially when the ice was good for such a long stretch. More girls have taken up this graceful sport this year than ever before. If you are still interested in Sonja Henie's favourite pastime do come along over to our Athletic Office and find out the times that instruction is available as one of our many athletic privileges.

Leslie Stars At Foil Meet

The Senior Interfaculty Foil Meet, held last evening, proved somewhat of a turnabout of last year's meet, as Doug Leslie, III U.C., chalked up four wins in five bouts to become the new champion. Doug last year placed fourth. Dick Jeanes, II Vic, defeated Bill Horsey, V Meds, to place second. Horsey was last year's interfaculty champ. Fourth place went to Ralph Thiers, III Vic.

Doug Leslie, Dick Jeanes and Jim Rottenberg qualified only last week to meet last year's interfaculty champ trio of Bill Horsey, Ralph Thiers and Jim Tapsell.

The fencing master, Charlie Walters, refereed the bouts and took pains to explain his judgements during the meet.

The top threesome of Leslie, Jeanes and Horsey, will now meet a team from Buffalo State during next Saturday's Athletic Night. If you've never witnessed a good fencing match, we advise you to get a squint at these seldom-sung heroes of the blade and come next Saturday. Some keen competition should be in order.

MECHANICAL BEATS CIVIL IN 4 - 2 BASEBALL TUSSLE

Too much power at the plate gained I Mechanical a 4-2 verdict over the I Civil B nine in yesterday's 12 o'clock baseball tussle. Each team counted single tallies in the opening frame and were whitewashed in the second. Civil's broke the tie in their half of the third with Clive Williams scoring his second run but Mechanicals replied with runs by Jim Brown, Glover and Matheson to sew up the decision. Matheson and Glover led the Mechanicals' attack with two safe blows each.

under the realm of civil service while private agencies, which pay less, are dwindling. This fact, combined with the potentialities of social work, offers attractions to whomsoever is interested.

"The only qualifications is a B.A. degree," continued Mr. Jaffary, "but it is preferable that the student have some knowledge of psychology, economics and sociology." Hand in hand with this the school looks for emotional stability, a sense of perspective and common sense in its future students.

"This department of the University is a member of the American Association of Schools for Social Science," concluded Mr. Jaffary, "and it demands the maintenance of certain academic standards."

Approximately 30 students graduate each year. Ordinarily the course is two years in length but sociology graduates complete it in a year or 16 months.

Allcutt Wins Medal For Research on Fuel

The Plummer Medal for 1942 has been awarded by the Council of the Engineering Institute of Canada to Professor E. A. Allcut, Professor of Mechanical Engineering in the University of Toronto, President H. J. Cody announced last week.

This award has been made to Professor Allcut in recognition of the important work he has done for the National Research Council as Chairman of the Sub-Committee on Produeer Gas.

Professor Allcut was awarded a gold medal by the University of Birmingham in 1911 for work on the same problem which is a most important war-time problem—providing a new source of fuel for engines.

The medal will be presented to Professor Allcut at the annual banquet of the Engineering Institute of Canada in the Royal York Hotel on February 11 next.

ATHLETIC NITES ARE WUNNERFUL, if a bit crowded. There were lotsnlots of peoples there that fatcful sat. p.m. and most of them seemed to want to dance in the big gym, which obviously just wasn't big enough. In the course of the evening, waltzes were played, and the couples struggled manfully. As one couple were straussing it along, acting much like a cue ball in a good game of Russian, the co-ed was heard to murmur:

"Heck, this is no waltz; this is the bumps-a-daisy.

And then there was that little incident that ineidented at the pool. It seems that a skoolman and a gink from arts were watching the water polo and conversing on things in general. Came a pause in the proceedings and gazing at the icy depths below they gave to wondering about how humorous it would be if someone jumped. The discussion grew heated and money was wagered. School promptly arose, divested himself of all non-essential apparel, clumb to the balcony and did a Brodie before the astonished eyes of all assembled.

AH, SCHOOL!

Seems as how they had a drawing for tickets during the course of the night and nice expensive tickets they were, too. Well, who should win a set of lovely $3 ducats to Massey Hall, but an air-force woman. When she received her prize, her face fell.

"When are they for?" she inquired feebly.

"Next Friday."

"And I have to be in Montreal then!" she sobbed.

FRUSTRATING, ISN'T IT?

THE MILITARY will never cease to be a constant cource of wonder and amazement to us. Consider this little tale involving a be-pipped gentleman who called his sergeant to his side one afternoon.

"There is," he stated, "a man in our platoon who claims he can't get his buttons to shine. I want you to see him and find out if this is true and if it is, have him take the greatcoat back and get another one with buttons that do shine."

"Yes sir," answered the sgt. "And who is this man?"

"Oh, I don't know, but he's in our platoon."

PEOPLE WHO BORROW things can be annoying at times. Let us consider the case of the young man in residence who had a nice new camel's hair coat. A very nice camel's hair coat it was, so nice that people were always borrowing it on him. Well, to make a long story longer, one evening he had an appointment with the current heart-throb and due to various reasons he was a bit late in his primping. He decided he would wear his nice shiny new coat, which was still out on loan, so he dashed upstairs, reclaimed the garment, hurriedly donned it and departed to throw himself on the mercies of the T.T.C. and a waiting female.

She acted rather frigidly—quite coldly in fact. Much colder than she had any right to do under the circumstances, for he did have a good reason for tardiness.

He explained and explained, but she still kept getting madder. Then he glanced down at his coat and saw the reason—large red smears of lipstick.

Think fast, Mr. Moto.

"Sure."

"Well come here and tell me what this is, will you?"

Staff Committee Elects Members

The committee representing the Teaching Staff of the University has recently admitted four new members who were elected to the committee by ballot last term. They are Professor H. Bennett, Victoria; Professor A. F. Coventry, Zoology; Professor R. F. Farquarhson, Medicine, and Professor G. Norwood, University College.

"The committee is an entirely unofficial body," explained Professor R. F. Legget, the chairman. "It has no executive powers although it does now represent the teaching staff of the University. It cannot speak for the staff as a whole on public matters, except by authority of a special meeting of the staff."

At the first meeting of the new committee this term Professor M. St. A. Woodside was elected secretary and Professor Legget was re-elected chairman. The other members of the committee are Professor E. A. Allcut, Professor B. Fairley, Mrs. Kirkwood, Principal Wallace and Professor Wasteneys.

The recent death of Dr. Jabez Elliott, Professor of the History of Medicine, left a vacancy on the committee and Dean G. G. Cosens, Forestry, was invited to become a member.

Child Study Institute Plan Three Month Course

Beginning March 1, the Institute of Child Study will offer a three-month course in Child Study and Pre-School Education followed by three or four weeks apprentice work to those interested in the present wartime expansion of pre-school education.

Enrolment will be limited to candidates with appropriate academic qualifications and experience. Students wishing to apply may call Mi. 6090.

If you're feeling nostalgic about Hal Roach comedies, you'll find reminiscent touches in "Flying with Music," one of the two features playing at the Midtown this week. If you like MIDTOWN DOUBLE BILL looking at well-upholstered blondes (and who doesn't), if you like hearing lots of Latin music, and it you haven't gone completely sour on tropical scenery, you'll find them all served up in adequate quantities in the film.

On the other hand, if you want more serious fare, "The Moon and Sixpence" can hardly be improved upon. One of the finest pictures made in recent years, it is technically and artistically outstanding—E. S.

asking for a dontation," Bill Hanley, VI Meds, president of the Student Labour Club, told The Varsity last night. "It is an attempt to show people just how their money is going to help, and to aid in their getting a fuller understanding of the contribution our Soviet allies are making in their mortal struggle against the common enemy."

"To see this film," he concluded, "is perhaps just to begin to appreciate the all-inclusive intensity of their peoples' total war."

Record Snow Fall Keeps Men Busy

By Dick Mansell

The campus ground crew have been hard put this winter, trying to cope with Toronto's record snow fall. Not only are they just as likely as ever to start their day at midnight, but their work is inercasing, due to the heavy hall and to their reduced numbers.

On the overburdened shoulders of Mr. Corbitt, the Grounds Foreman, rests the decision of their plan of attack. With his former staff of anywhere up to 50 cut in half, he must know to a fine point the kind of weather to expect each day. If a thaw or a snowfall is in the offing, it would be useless to sprinkle the walks with sand; while, on the other hand, the amount of shovelling done must also be minimized.

In addition to keeping the nine or ten miles of campus walks open to traffic, these men have dozens of other jobs to do; a very large one of which is stores delivery about the grounds.

In other, happier times, it was possible to rent equipment from the city for plowing the roads, but not so this year. Even Nellie, the horse who plows the campus paths, is having labour troubles. In former years she had an assistant, rented from the city, but now she works alone.

Meanwhile, Colonel LePan, Superintendent of the Grounds, doubts the possibility of the C.O.T.C. being called in to help. "Only if walking became difficult would I make this request of Colonel Madill," he said, "for only then would it justify the interruption of military or academic studies."

said Director Dunlop.

One of these is "Marketing" which will be attended by 300 business men and advertising agents. The other is "Gliders and Gliding," said to be the first one if its kind. It will be taught by five leading engineers.

Director Dunlop says the war has hit many classes, chiefly because people who are giving full time to war work are unable to attend lectures. However, Russian classes are booming, with more than 50 students attending. Spanish courses are also widely attended.

"It became necessary to close the two-year diploma course in aerial navigation for the duration," said Dunlop. "The reason is that young men who enrol in this course are air-minded and enlist with the R.C.A.F. just as soon as they can."

"One of these classes which commenced with an enrolment of 28 closed with a graduation list of eight," he explained. "But there were no failures."

Director Dunlop says there is nothing so interesting as teaching night-school, because students—the majority of them middle-aged—are so varied in profession. Chief attendants of the classes are house-wives, manual workers and business men.

Most extension courses are held in University College and the Economics Building after 8:00 p.m., but each class in any one of the listed subjects is organized only when 40 students have enrolled. The fees vary from $6 to $12, and each class meets one evening each week from October to March, for a total of 20 meetings.

"There are no barriers to our courses as academic entrance requirements are not needed," said Director Dunlop. "If mother or father have a little spare time evenings, they are always welcome at the University night school."

Conference Delegates Meeting Next Week To Discuss Report

Delegates Have Received Copy of Report; Will Decide at Meeting Whether It Should Be Made Public

PRESIDENT CODY TO SPEAK

The Student-Staff Conference will reconvene at 8 p.m., Wednesday, Feb. 3, in the Big Hall of the Economics Building to consider whether or not its Report drafted last term should be made public.

President H. J. Cody, to whom the Report was submitted last term, is to address the Conference.

Notices of the meeting have been sent to the delegates as well as copies of the Report (which is to remain confidential pending a decision of the Conference next Wednesday.)

The executive of the Conference made the decision to hold the forthcoming plenary session at a meeting last Friday after a delegation had consulted with President Cody.

(The Student-Staff Conference was called last December to consider and report on the function of the University in wartime. A number of delegates were sent from each college and faculty, chosen to represent as far as possible all the different courses given at the University, and also a group of staff members.

(After several sessions over a 10-day period the Conference sent a delegation to present its Report to President Cody.)

New Scholarships Given by Eaton's

Six new scholarships have been donated to the University of Toronto by The T. Eaton Co. Ltd. for the academic year 1942-43, President H. J. Cody announced recently.

The scholarships are to be awarded to undergraduates in the School of Physical and Health Education, with which the Margaret Eaton School has been amalgamated. Two medals will be given also, "The Margaret Eaton Gold Medal" and "The Emma Scott Nasmith Gold Medal."

The scholarships and medals are donated by the company as a tribute to the memory of the late Mrs. Timothy Eaton and the late Mrs. Emma Scott Nasmith, first principal of the Margaret Eaton School of Literature and Expression. The awards are provided for a period of five years, commencing June 1943, and the company has asked for the privilege of continuing them, should the management so desire.

Both men and women will be eligible to compete for the prizes which will be distributed as follows:

Three scholarships of $250, $150 and $100 respectively, for students completing the first year with first class honours in the general course and proficiency in Literature and Expression.

Three second year scholarships of equal value and awarded under similar conditions to those of the first year.

The medals are awarded in the third year (graduating year):

"The Margaret Eaton Gold Medal" to the student with highest standing in the general course, and first class honours in Literature and Expression.

"The Emma Scott Nasmith Gold Medal" to the student having the highest standing in Literature and Expression with first class honours in the general course.

At the same time a cheque was received for $10,027.56, the surplus to the credit of the Margaret Eaton School at the time of amalgamation, together with a further donation of $5,000, as an endowment fund for the Library.

MASTHEAD MEETING

There will be a meeting of the Masthead of The Varsity in the Women's Office at 12:45 p.m. today.

Russian Aid Drive Beginning in U.C.

University College has set the goal of $200 for its Aid to Russia Campaign to be held on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of this week. Features of the campaign will be a box for contributions in the Rotunda, and the climax will be on Friday when a Drive for Dimes will be held in the U.C. Rotunda at noon.

A thermometer will be placed in the Rotunda today to mark the advance of contributions toward the goal. The box will be in the Rotunda from 12 till 2 on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday.

The Drive of Dimes is to be staged from 12 to 1:30 on Friday.

As well as money contributions, clothing is also being collected in another box in the Rotunda. An appeal is being made especially for warm clothing which will be sent to Russia.

Proceeds from the U.C. Arts Ball which is to be held Thursday, Feb. 4 will also be given to the Aid to Russia Fund.

Art Exhibit Contributions Due Today

The annual undergraduate exhibition which is one of the highlights of the Art Committee's activities during the year, will be hung in Hart House gallery Friday, Jan. 29. The official deadline is today when all contributions should be in the Warden's office.

"Owing to the fact that there may be still some undergraduate work which has not been handed in, contributions will be accepted until Thursday," Mr. W. B. Burwell, Secretary of Hart House, announced yesterday. "This year, undergraduate members of the House are busier than they ever have been, but the Art Committee felt, that in spite of the increase in the demands made upon students by studies and military duties, there must be a considerable amount of art work already produced which has not been turned in."

The dates set for the exhibit are from Jan. 30 to Feb. 12. 'This period has been selected to include the last Sunday in January." Mr. Burwell went on to say "This is a regular visiting day when members may introduce guests, including ladies, to view the exhibition."

VISITORS' DAY

Sunday next, Jan. 31, will be Visitors' Day at Hart House, when members may introduce guests, including ladies, to the House between the hours of 2 and 4 p.m. The House will be open for inspection. The Undergraduate Show will be in view in the art gallery.

Accelerate Queen's Arts Courses, Giving Extra Summer Classes; Move Said Unlikely At Toronto

Heads of Local Arts Colleges Point Out the Differences in Entrance Requirements and Basis of Curricula

TIME FACTOR ESSENTIAL

Heads of the four arts colleges of the University of Toronto agreed yesterday that a speed-up of arts studies here was improbable.

Commenting on the acceleration plan announced by Queen's University, Dr. W. T. Brown, Chancellor of Victoria University, pointed out that it was largely due to varied admission requirements at Queen's, which gave rise to problems that do not affect the University of Toronto where Ontario Senior Matriculation or its equivalent is the standard admission requirement.

"The real problem of such a plan is a financial one," Dr. Brown said. "The great majority of students require the money they earn in the summer to help pay for their tuition."

Dr. M. W. Wallace, Principal of University College, drew attention to a difference in the basis of the curricula at the two universities.

(The arts course at Queen's operates on a credit system, students receiving credit for each course individually. At Toronto subjects are developed simultaneously through the three or four years of the course.)

Debt to China Currelly Subject

"How poor our civilization would be if it had not included in its history so many gifts from our far-eastern ally," commented Dr. C. T. Currelly in his talk on "Our Debt to China," at the Arts and Letters Club meeting last night. And then he proceeded to enumerate our benefits received.

"Perhaps the first thing we of the western world acquired from the Chinese was the crossbow, which somehow reached Greece many years ago, and almost immediately was converted into an instrument of death. That in itself was possibly not such a pleasant acquisition; but because of the heavy stones it could hurl, bigger and better walls were constructed in defence.

"Silk came as a great boon, especially to the hot climate of Egypt, whence it came by way of the roof of the world—across nothern Siberia—down through Palestine. Coming in heavy cloth, it was traded pound for pound of gold and then unwound and rewoven in fine gauze. This light material could be worn in the 125 degree days and 110 degree nights with comparative comfort while keeping off the profusion of flies which bothered the humans of those days.

"Tea certainly came as a blessing, too. Can you imagine living in a country where water was dissastifying to drink, because it was so full of typhoid germs, and if one quenched one's thirst with wines it would interfere with working? That was the case largely until tea, which wouldn't kill you or handicap your working facilities came from China.

"Before the Chinese went to work on it, horses were either too large or too small to ride. So by cross-breeding, they produced an admirable specimen for mounting. Some time later, stirrups were also invented."

Dr. Currelly then launched into a story of the development of ceramics—first in China, then in Britain, and its effect on sanitation. The death rate in the west decreased greatly when this production from the east was introduced.

The speaker described how steel was made in the occidental world by the makers of armour, wheels, and machines, while in the orient armour was made from rhinoceros hide, which can hardly be developed into other forms of mechanism. "That is why," Dr. Currelly concluded, "China was—until recently—still in the machineless age."

The meeting was then declared open for discussion, and many questions were raised for clarification. The guest of the evening added some further information in response to the queries. Some of it was as follows: That we owe to the Chinese student our whole system of "cribbing"—even the encyclopedia—and that along this theme we have in the museum some 2,000 volumes of "condensed" Chinese literature, so great was their zeal for making "digests" of their works. That we are also very much indebted to the influence of Chinese art on our own. "Our furniture is often copied holus-bolus from theirs," commented the speaker.

Gordon Miller, the president of the Arts and Letters Club, announced that at next week's meeting Dr. W. E. Blatz, would speak under the head of "Psychology in everyday life."

Ruling Will Not Lessen Amount of Work Required, but Will Enable Students to Graduate Earlier

SOME TO GRADUATE IN FALL

Kingston, Jan. 26—(CUP)—Arts courses at Queen's University will be accelerated, according to a ruling announced last Thursday by the Faculty of Arts.

Under this new ruling, students lacking three subjects for a degree this May will be able to graduate this autumn. Similarly, students who have 10 courses towards a degree this May will be able, by taking courses during the summer months, to graduate in the fall of 1944 instead of the spring of 1945. Following are the complete regulations:

A. Students who now lack only three courses for degree may take these courses this summer by extramural or by extramural and Summer School work, provided that the courses are offered.

B. Other students may take as many as two courses during the summer.

This ruling is not for the purpose of lessening the normal weight of work during the session 1943-44, but to make it possible for students to graduate at an earlier date. For instance, students who have already completed ten courses may graduate in the fall of 1944 rather than the spring of 1945 by taking

(1) two courses during the summer of 1943;

(2) five courses during the winter of 1943-44;

(3) three courses during the summer

Drilling, Sewing, Typing War Courses For Co-Eds

By Harriet Leigh-Mallory
CUP Staff Writer

Women's War Training has become compulsory on the majority of the Canadian Campuses for the first time this year. However, since the outbreak of the war, women on all Campuses have been actively engaged in voluntary war work of various types.

A mass meeting was held last spring by the women at the University of British Columbia, and the co-eds asked for compulsory war training which has been instituted there this year. However, at McGill and Manitoba, training has been compulsory for two years.

Not all the girls wear uniforms, but there is variety among those who do. The members of the University Detachments of the Canadian Red Cross Corps all wear the gray uniform, but tie and cap flash are the colour of the particular University represented. At Saskatchewan the uniform is unique. There the girls wear black or blue skirts, white blouses, green tams, green windsor ties, and walking brogues.

Training is required of all women at McGill, Queen's, British Columbia and Alberta, while at Toronto it is required of those in second, third and fourth years and at McMaster, only those in the first and second years. The number of hours required varies from 60 to 110, or from two to four hours a week.

In the first year, basic training is given. This consists of a combination of First Aid, A.R.P. and either Drill or Physical Training. In the second year a wide variety of different courses is offered on each Campus. In this more advanced training, the student may specialize in the field in which she is most interested.

There are six University Detachments of the Canadian Red Cross Corps at present. These are at Toronto, McMaster, Queen's, McGill, MacDonald College, and the University of New Brunswick. Toronto was the pioneer in this field, and the Detachment there has been in operation for three years. The latest to be formed is that at U.N.B.

Membership in the Detachment cannot be made compulsory owing to the constitution of the Canadian Red Cross Corps which is a purely voluntary organization. However, it serves as one of the choices for war work, and prepares those who later want to join the Red Cross Corps or similar organizations.

Courses in Home Nursing, Motor Mechanics, St. John's Ambulance, Red Cross Sewing, Emergency Feeding, Office Administration, are available on almost all the Campuses as well as those basic courses already mentioned.

At Toronto the newest course is one in Community Needs and Resources, in which the lectures are supplemented by films and field trips which include visits to council meeting, the juvenile court and the University Settlement. Other new courses this year at Toronto include Civic Day Nurseries (theory and practice), Nursing Aids (demonstrations and practical work in hospitals), and Recreational Leadership.

At Saskatchewan the girls have an opportunity to choose from five classes including typing and filing, precision instruments and blueprints, and radio mechanics as well as other courses.

At U.B.C. map reading and drafting supplement the motor mechanics course. The examination in map reading and drafting, if taken after the motor mechanics course, gives the student the rating of a third class army driver.

On completion of the course in measurements and instruments at U.B.C., the students would be qualified to take a position as inspector in a munitions factory.

Physical training as part of the war effort is emphasized at U.B.C., McGill and Manitoba and a varied athletic program is offered.

At Manitoba the girls are offered the choice of 10 courses. The Canteen course includes emergency feeding, food purchasing and cost control, sanitation, working schedules for emergency workers, and record keeping.

In the first year of the clerical course the women are given training in elementary bookkeeping, the writing of business and formal letters, filing, office technique and cultivation of personality. The second year students receive courses in typing.

Senior students who intend to enter the active forces upon graduation are encouraged to take Radio Telegraphy. Before entering this course, students must pass an aptitude test given by army authorities.

The Food Production course provides instruction in several phases of agricultural food production such as fruit and vegetable growing, bee-keeping, poultry raising, dairy cattle feeding and management, care and manufacture of milk, cream, butter and cheese, and insect control.

Some of the Manitoba students who took the Home Nursing course last year are now doing V.A.D. work.

At Queen's, included in the program are courses in orderly room procedure, signals and Red Cross quilting. Students interested in Occupational Therapy teach soldiers handicrafts. Students who have studied Chemistry act as laboratory technicians in connection with the voluntary blood donations.

At McGill, much work is done by the senior students outside the University in laboratories, foundling homes and other social agencies.

The girls at Mount Allison are knitting, taking First Aid courses and making garments for refugee children under the supervision of the clothing department.

22 McMaster Men Lose Deferment

Hamilton, Jan 27—(CUP)—Twenty-two students at McMaster will lose their military deferment as a result of unsatisfactory standing obtained in the mid-year examinations.

The announcement was made on Monday by Chancellor G. P. Gilmour, after a meeting of the faculty of the College at which reports of students with low averages was discussed.

Their names will be reported to the district officer commanding, and they will receive their military call.

This announcement brings to 692 the approximate known total of students placed at the disposal of National Selective Service by Canadian university officials acting in accordance with government regulations on student status in wartime.

The number affected in the various universities are as follows:

McMaster 22, Western 55, Ottawa 20, McGill 66, Toronto 100 (approximate), Ontario Agricultural College 11, Manitoba 89, University of British Columbia 152, Queen's 90, University of Alberta 76, Dalhousie 11.

Great Men Meet

Once more Churchill and Roosevelt have met in secret, to clarify United Nations strategy, and possibly to outline the master-diagram of what may prove the decisive campaign of the war against the Axis.

Apparently the greatest harmony existed at the barbed-wire-enclosed hotel in Casablanca where statesmen and staff-officers gathered, and a measure of this harmony was even projected into relations between de Gaulle and Giraud. Such at least is the impression one gathers from the carefully-worded communiques upon which current news reports are based.

Actual accomplishment of the conference can only be gauged by forthcoming events—and battles. We cannot let over-confidence creep into our war-psychology now that action on almost every front is running in our favour. Whatever grand strategy is planned, and no matter how well such planning is done, there remains an untold sea of blood through which we must wade to reach the peace we seek. But the news is heartening, and we press on into what may, God willing, be close to the ultimate phase of the war.

Defeating Its End

Comments of the four arts heads at the University of Toronto on the plan to accelerate arts courses at Queen's appear to cover adequately the question of adopting a similar plan here. Under a credit system it is relatively easy to shift subjects about, taking some extramurally and speeding up the course generally. In the year system, development of all subjects is often interrelated and no one of them can be accelerated without unbalancing an entire course. The amount of time given to each subject and to different parts of each subject has been carefully worked out, and any attempt to tamper with these arrangements would lead to almost hopeless difficulties.

Aside from the practical difficulties, there is the question of the prineiple of acceleration as applied to arts courses. This is effectively dealt with by Father McLaughlin, who is quoted elsewhere in this issue as saying: "Time is essential to allow the knowledge gained (in liberal arts courses) to be assimilated. A great deal more reflection is needed to co-ordinate the matter received in an arts course and reflection requires time."

The financial difficulties, mentioned by Dr. Brown, could possibly be overcome as they have been overcome in other faculties, by government aid, but it remains questionable whether the country will derive any benefit in war or peacetime from the hasty mass production of intellectuals. If the arts course is to be preserved it must be preserved in its entirety, and the leisure time spent in reflection and assimilation of knowledge is a "credit" equal in value to anything learned in the classroom.

. . . To Your Attention

Next Wednesday the Student-Staff Conference will reconvene to hear the eomments of the President upon its recent Report, and consider the question of any further immediate use to which the Report may be put.

Althought events have moved with startling speed all year, and many may have perhaps already forgotten the significance of the Student-Staff deliberations, we still consider them of importance, and would like, at the risk of repetition, to re-emphasize their value. If students who engaged in them last term, and as many more as have time, will be present as the discussion on the present and future status of universities and university students is re-opened, they will be doing themselves and their colleagues considerable service.

To Bridge The Gap

It is not our custom to let other college editors write editorials while we sit back happily and apply scissors and glue to the task of filling these two columns. But occasionally, when we find one which agrees with our own ideas and expresses them with clarity and force, we submit to temptation and indulge in the vice of thankful theft. The article below was first published in The Reveille, college journal of Louisiana State University, and has been reprinted since in several college publications.

The War Time Advisory Educational Commission which has been set up in Louisiana is one of the many wartime agencies which will also prove valuable as a peacetime group. To it will fall much of the work of postwar planning, to bridge the transition to peace at the end of this conflict.

Those who expect a "return to normalcy" after the war are in for a grave disappointment. After so long a period of world chaos, it would be impossible for everything to slide back to its original place. War leaves in its wake the problems of rebuilding not only material but political, social, and spiritual devastation.

This is not just a war but a social revolution. Principles which have endured for years have been attacked. Intellectual progress has suffered a terrific setback, and it is only the mechanism of destruction which has progressed.

An advisory educational group faces the problem of insisting upon freedom for educators to teach whatever they believe now and always. War necessitates a certain curtailment of all freedoms, and these rights must be even more carefully guarded now.

We must be taught to expect and to cope with an entirely different postwar world.

Divisions of nationalism are fast disappearing, and the peace will bring a world of even greater interdependence. The United States as well as other countries must learn to share responsibilities in the community of nations, to plan now that the next peace may be a lasting one.

The world's leaders often depend on the opinions of youth for a clear view through trouble. Plans have already been made to hold an international youth conference in conjunction with the peace conference after the war. It should be the duty of a War Time Advisory Educational Commission to see that students are prepared to take on these responsibilities. If, by the time the peace is signed, the students of today are no longer the youth of the world, their education will be of even greater value as the signers of the peace.

The primary problem now is, of course, the winning of the war, but it is important to look beyond that. No nation can expect to arrive at the peace table without a well-thought-out-plan for reorganization and reconstruetion.

Correspondence

The Editor,
The Varsity.

Sir:

Much as there is to be commended in your editorial of Jan. 22, "On Annual Reports," I am unable to accept all of the implications of your view that

". . . such processes of defence, purification and strengthening of democracy cannot be undertaken by the technical courses, adequate as they are for their specialized aims, and vital as they are for the welfare of the community. Such processes surely fall to the lot of the courses in the humanities, where men and women are taught to think."

The spectacle of superior groups of thinkers who have come up through the humanities being set off against groups of workers whose approach to life has been through technology is bizarre, to say the least. There is no singular or exclusive source of those who do the constructive thinking of the world in the matter of democracy or anything else. It would be interesting to learn by what process of reasoning you have arrived at the confident assumption that those who have been trained in the technical courses are unfit to undertake the "defense, purification, and strengthening of democracy."

Unless my observation is totally at fault, those who have chosen the scientific and professional courses as their route have no need to take second place to graduates in the humanities in their appreciation or judgment of what is decent and wise and practicable in human relations, be the affected social or political units large or small. There is still less reason for them to yield ground in any matter or organization, performance or effective realization of desired objectives.

Moreover, we who argue the relative merits of alternative academic courses should, with humility, remember that the most significant contributions to human welfare have probably come from those who never had any formal instruction in the humanities or in anything else within the walls of a university.

It would do us all good, I think, to remember, as Macaulay forcefully pointed out, over a century ago, that too much importance ought not to be placed on the particular course or institution of which the individual is a product. There will be thoughtful and creative men even though they are trained in the professional schools. The

Crowded Kingston Conditions

(This is the fifth in a series of articles by a Varsity staff writer describing existing conditions in Ontario universities.)

Kingston, Jan. 26 — (Staff) — Conditions at Queen's University are fully as bad as those described at the University of Toronto and nearly as bad as at Yale. In particular the state of affairs existing at Lazonga's Restaurant is shocking.

The smoky, soup-stained tables are crowded with students clad in old lace and sipping arsenic, while long lines of patrons await a chance to gamble for free games on a pin-ball machine. That these patrons are entirely lacking in moral consciousness is indicated by the number of occasions upon which the "tilt" sign lights up on the machine.

It is calculated that the amount of electricity employed in Kingston student-haunts to illuminate tilt-signs is sufficient to drive the turbines of a Bren gun for six hours a day.

I am reliably informed by the Medical Editor of the Queen's Journal that "Chollie" Lazonga serves gravy with fish ordered by his patrons. He told me that this disgusts him, and a medical man and a regular reader of Shakespeare he is not easily disgusted.

All manner of crime is spawned in Lazonga's parlour. Only recently the Journal reported the case of a student committing suicide there by drinking two cups of hot chocolate served there under the name of hot chocolate.

Conditions are almost equally questionable at Grant Hall, university sponsored "night spot" where students and their friends gather in mixed company to indulge in such forms of vandalism as cutting rugs. I saw more than one student indulging in this hideous practice; and one of the more depraved addicts was hear to mumble, "Chop, chop, chop," to himself with a demoniacal gleam in his eyes.

Another hot-bed of evil I visited was situated in a well-known "hotel" located some distance from the campus. Here I met students from Toronto, Western, Manitoba and McGill, who had gathered there for a so-called "Arts At-Home." This was obviously a subterfuge, for there was nobody there by the name of Art.

But, in fairness to Queen's University, it must be admitted that conditions, while relatively bad, might conceivably be worse. One student told me philosophically: "At least most of the Presbyterians are in off the street at night."

The Shostakovitch 7th

Toronto Symphony Orchestra

Last night we were offered a special concert at Massey Hall by the Toronto Symphony Orchestra under Sir Ernest MacMillan. The major work performed was the Seventh Symphony of Shostakovich, which has received much publicity owing to the unusual circumstances of its creation during the seige of Leningrad. The most penetrating of contemporary critics has written of this composer: "Having been offered Shostakovich's music as an illustration of the fact that only a socialist society offers the basis for the affirmative, expansive emotions and attitudes that can produce healthy and great art, you will be surprised by what you actually hear in his music: the emotionally arid, ugly grimacing in the excerpts from The Golden Age; the same aridity expanded with slick and pretentious fluency to the diffuse lengths of works like the Symphony No. 5.

The tendency suggested in these words of B. H. Haggin, the tendency to inflate a trivial emotion into something purporting to be of great significance, this cheap pretentiousness, reminiscent of the music of Wagner, is carried even farther in the Symphony No. 7. For all the sincere feeling which this work conveys the composer might just as well have heard about the siege of Leningrad from a Venezuelan newspaper. The first movement begins with a simple theme built about C Major, which is manipulated fluently to a climax. In the quiet section which follows, there are a number of examples of one of Shostakovich's worst tendencies, which is to start a simple diatonic tune going and then twist it out of joint at intervals. This was perhaps appropriate to the malicious "sledge-hammer wit" of his early works but it is certainly disturbing to find such devices in a work in which the composer claims to be embodying "the supreme ideal of patriotic war." The main passage of the first movement is a steady climax lasting for fully 10 minutes in which a trivial theme is repeated with increasingly louder orchestration until finally it is blared out by the full orchestra with artificially contrived harmony and some imposed counterpoint from the augmented brass section (shades of Ravel's Bolero.). The second movement begins with a theme which promises improvement and reminds one of the second movement of his First Symphony, but it is poorly treated and the movement is padded out with old distortion of simple melodies. The third movement is what Tovey calls an introduction to an introduction to some preliminary passages which lead to an introduction to a transition which leads to a suggestion of a lyric melody which leads to an introductory passage, and so on to the finale which is even more inferior.

Sir Ernest gave the work an adequate performance, but of course it is only moderately difficult to play, and does not cause the immense difficulty which is entailed in a really good performance of a Mozart symphony.

I might add that there is an excellent Soviet composer living, namely Prokofieff, and even if he is, as Constant Lambert suggests, a completely bourgeois composer, his bright, charming and pointed music is much more worthy of our attention that that of his inferior countryman.

MILTON WILSON.

No Shadow of Doubt

The Gondoliers

There is "no possible doubt whatever" that the first-night performance of The Gondoliers by G. & S. at Northern Vocational, last night was out of the ordinary. Alfred Kidney, an old D'Oyley Carte man, besides directing the production, seemed to set the atmosphere for the rollicking, periwigged show.

Although the show was dated (1889), the interpretation of English humour on Venetian backdrops was highly amusing. Some remarks about rationing tca to two individuals who were acting as one king, were part of the original libretto, and not the after-thoughts of the director. Mr. Kidney did show his directing talents in original form when he moulded together a heterogeneous group of professional and amateur performers, and a chorus of church choir specialists, principally from St. Clair and Eglinton Churches. The movement of the cast, at times a large and seemingly unwieldy group, was handled colourfully and meaningfully, so that loss of tempo in the long acts was kept at a minimum.

The operetta began rather shakily and did not acquire feeling until the singers realized that the piano accompaniment was not carrying the performance as an orchestra would have done, but that it was their job to lead the pianos. Lance MacDowell, who directed the music, put enough vigour and persuasion into his baton to keep things well under control.

This leads to the singing itself. The Duke of Plaza-Toro, Alfred Kidney, had a typical Gilbert and Sullivan baritone, and combined with his ability to focus the action and develop the plot, he made a most significant contribution. The Gondoleri, Marco and Guiseppe, Harold Tilbury, tenor, and Arthur Sclater, baritone, had the virtues of being clearly understood when they sang in solo and exceptionally charming when they sang together.

Casilda, the Duke's daughter, with soprano Lillian Webb, who should have had a better build-up in the original plot, served as a useful stage-prop. But when she did get her one solo with Luiz (James Flucker) on stage, she did become real, as much as anyone can become real in a romantic sense.

The girls, Gianetta and Tessa, played by Molly Dyer and Nell Houston, got

Navy Men Learn Japanese Tongue

Boulder, Colo., Jan. 26—The largest group of Caucasian students ever to complete an advanced course in the Japanese language graduated recently from the Naval Japanese Language School at the University of Colorado.

All the speeches on the commencement program were in Japanese and naval certificates were presented instead of traditional diplomas. The graduates wore navy blue and gold instead of black gowns and mortarboards. The graduates, whose numbers are a military secret, will shortly go on active service in the Pacific.

The Japanese course for naval officers was opened at Berkeley, California, soon after the outbreak of hostilities between the United States and Japan.

all the limelight they needed. Gianetta, a soprano part, was the better of the two because she had more volume and more than a shade of ease and natural enthusiasm.

The whole production was most encouraging from the point of view of the ardent zeal that was displayed. The students of Northern Vocational did their part by efficiently handling the lighting, props and scene changing departments. The production still has two nights to run. BILL NICHOLLS.

Professional Engineers Fill Gaps In S.P.S. Staff

Regular Staff Depleted Because Several Members Are in War Work or on Active Service for Duration

TORONTO FIRMS LOAN MEN

Twenty-four professional engineers from the Toronto area are filling gaps in the staff of the Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering, The Varsity learned recently.

Leave of absence for war work and active service, has been given to 10 members of the staff of the faculty. By special permission of the University, at least five members of the staff are doing special part-time war work, which keeps them away from the University frequently.

"Since the Faculty of Engineering and Applied Science is a war industry, the number of members of its staff who are on active service or on special war work has been restricted," said Dean C. R. Young.

Three prominent engineers from Toronto act as special lecturers in the faculty. One of the lecturers is the head of an important manufacturing firm, which he took over when his father died.

The chief designing engineer for the Dominion Bridge Company in Toronto and an engineer from the Hydro Electric Power Commission are the other lecturers.

Twenty-one engineers are demonstrators in the laboratories. They are loaned by their companies to the University. Each week, they spend two afternoons in the laboratories and some time at night marking students' reports. After the war, some of the young engineers may become permanent members of the staff.

"Although they are not as good as a permanent staff," said Dean Young, "the gap is being ably filled. To the University, they are bringing their experience and knowledge of methods in industry. From the University they are learning new scientific methods and developments."

Most of the engineers are young so that they have not forgotten the theoretical side of their courses. One of them is a doctor of philosophy, who wrote a very good thesis.

Many well known companies such as Bell Telephone, Armstrong Wood and Company, Canadian General Electric, Turnbull Elevator Company, Sirocco Company and International Nickle have loaned members of their personnel to the University. The Hydro Electric Power Commission has loaned a larger number of engineers than any other company. Some of them are civil engineers from their large hydraulic department.

Surely there's not one among us who hasn't tried in vain at one time or another to phone a college residence only to hear in our ear the disembodied spirit of Bert Lahr chanting, "Gnungnung—nugnugnugnug" ad infinitum. At such times we wish there were two phones in the house so that we could get our own important nothings across immediately. Well, two phones in a residence would be nice, but they can lead to situations like this which arose at the University of Washington recently:

Pat and Virginia are two girls in the same house where there are two phones. One phone rings. Virginia answers it. It's Warren. Warren thinks Virginia is Pat and tries to date her. He is refused. He hangs up in bewilderment, this isn't like Pat.

Meanwhile, the other phone has rung. Pat answers and Jim asks for Virginia. Pat calls Virginia who is dated by Jim and goes off happily when he comes around to call for her. It looks like a good book for Pat—but good old Jim (we always liked him from the first) has overheard the first concersation while waiting for Virginia to come to the phone, and comes through magnificently to fix up Pat's shattered date.

Residences are cruel places full of beds that feel like upholstered bathtubs. One St. Joe's co-ed we heard of may have a bed that really is one. Seems the residence used to be a private home belonging to the Christie family.

"The room next to ours," she said, "used to be the master bedroom. And our room used to be Mr. Christie's bathroom!"

Things get pretty rough in the sweeteries sometimes, especially with crowds milling about. On one such occasion up at Bloor street somebody pushed a waitress, who, by the law of gravitation, was compelled to splash chocolate sodas over a couple nearby. The lady in question was ready to hit the ceiling, but the gentleman just sat there in his masculine calm and looked dazedly at the pool of soda water gathering about his feet and observed, "I certainly am glad I wore my rubbers."

This one comes from The Minnesota Daily, organ of a campus where apparently the blessings of seperate reading rooms for men and women have never been introduced:

Campus Vignette: It happened in the Library. A fellow walked into the periodical room and after glancing around went over and sat down beside a co-ed who was obviously waiting for him. They studied awhile, holding hands all the time. A little while later he excused himself, saying he was going out to the card catalogue.

Instead he walked over to the reference room, where another girl was waiting for him. He studied with this girl awhile and again excused himself. This time he went down to the reserve room where—you guessed it—another girl was waiting for him.

But this time when he excused himself after studying awhile the girl got up too and said she'd walk upstairs with him. At the top of the stairs whom should they meet but the girl from the periodical room, and at precisely that moment out come the other girl from the reference room.

The fellow's face turned a deep crimson and some interesting conversation took place. He is one fellow who really learned something in the library that night.

SABOTAGE is being done our war effort by one hotel-keeper in this city. He has had in his window for some time an old outmoded Victory Loan plackard. Track Meet Events See School in Lead

Little change occurred in the second day of this week's track meet but Meds' second year Fyfe burned a hot 50 yards to break into a third place tie with Gillett, MacDonald and King. Those three grouped behind Verne Booth and Cam Birgess in the first day of the meet.

Yesterday's entries brought the total to 63 for the two-day meet. Fyfe's third place brings Meds almost up to a three-way tie for second place with Trinity and U.C. School is out in the lead but the other three faculties are practically tied for second.

Record Programs Forced to Cease

The record programs of the University Record Club will be discontinued until further notice, The Varsity learned yesterday from Dr. A. M. Wynne, chairman of the committee administering the equipment and records which were donated to the University last year by the Carnegie Corporation.

Cancellation of the daily concerts in the Women's Common Room of University College is due to the necessity of repairs to the current convertor which is a necessary part of the reproducing equipment.

Dr. Wynne was unable to say how long it would be before the concerts would start again due to difficulty of obtaining a skilled technician to do the work. Attempts will be made at the same time to make the operation of the convertor more quiet so that it will interfere less with the enjoyment of future programs.

courses in which "men and women are taught to think" are not restricted to the humanities.

Sincerely yours,

C. R. Young.
Jan. 25, 1943.

We accept the courteous reprimand which the Dean of School has offered us with what we hope is becoming humility. It is true, without question, that those of us who are registered in the arts courses tend to place an exaggerated assessment upon their value to the community—an error the counterpart of which is sometimes manifest also in the technical faculties.

It was not our intention, although apparently it was the result of our writing, to imply that no men able to think were graduated from the faculties of science. But we believe that Dr. Young will agree that their training does not fit them specifically for such thought as is required for the planning of a better society, nor will the majority have a sufficient portion of their lives to devote to such thought. It is regrettable that such is the case, and that men schooled in practical work cannot, in the space of one busy career, devote as much of their time to benefiting their fellows in the spheres of religion, politics, practical philosophy, as many of them wish. This remark, by the way, is not to be considered slighting to scientists, for nobody will deny that their contribution to the community's material welfare is so great that we all are deep in their debt. They are already doing more than their share of making the world a better place for us all.

But we maintain—and sometimes, in the face of present trends of thought which we have regarded as examples of shortsightedness and oversimplification, we perhaps maintain a shade too vociferously—that it would be the gravest of all mistakes to make undue inroads, even under considerable pressure, upon the number of men and women educated in the "impractical" fields. A continued production of such men and women is, we believe, essential, for the maintenance of a balanced society. If we have placed undue stress upon the necessity of students educated along these lines, it is because, in recent months and years, there has been to much of what we consider ill-judged emphasis placed on the idea that such students of humanities are not immediately valuable.

Again, we would like it thoroughly understood that it is not our intention to stage an argument with Dr. Young on the relative merits of artsmen and engineers. They both have an important place to fill in the world in which they will live, and neither will be of much use without the other. Nor do we imply that it is his intention to give rise to any such contentious debate. His letter has served to demonstrate once again the interest he has consistently taken in the well-intentioned, if sometimes ill-phrased, sayings of The Varsity; and for this interest, and for the eminent sanity of his remarks, we are sincerely grateful—EDITOR.

Arts Courses Accelerated at Queen's; Move Said to be Unlikely at Toronto

"I don't believe in the acceleration of arts courses," Dr. Wallace said, pointing out that the time spent in studies was as essential as the courses themselves.

Rev. T. P. McLaughlin, Superior of St. Michael's College, expressed similar views.

"In view of the decisions reached at the National Universities Conference in Ottawa three weeks ago, I don't see the need for such an acceleration at the present time," he said. "A technical education can be acquired by learning one process after another and this lends itself more readily to acceleration; but there is little room for it in liberal arts. Time is essential to allow the knowledge gained to be assimilated. A great deal more reflection is needed to co-ordinate the matter received in an arts course and reflection requires time."

Rev. F. H. Cosgrave, Provost of Trinity College, also drew attention to the different in educational plan of the two universities.

"Our system does not parallel that of Queen's," he said. "Acceleration here would seriously injure our system of education. University education means more than taking a certain number of courses and passing a certain number of exams, and if anything of this kind is done here it will be done most reluctantly."

Sportswoman

By Betsy Mosbangh

We felt somewhat like a fish out of water when we penetrated the O.C.E. swimming pool last night. Through the swirling mists of steam we discerned St. Hilda's mermaids trying out for the class championships and the college team.

The Saints were in fine fettle and took the 20-yard pool quite in their stroke. Such an excellent exhibition was given that Connie Fellowes, the head of swimming at the college, is undecided as to whom to choose for the team.

Pat Patterson, 1st year, was showing her prowess in no uncertain way by winning the diving and several other events. Another freshie, Joyce Cobban, promises to be one of the standbyes of the team as she already has a couple of cups to her name. Six or seven years ago she won the Humber Bay swimming cup for the quarter-mile and last year she conquered the Branksome Hall laurels.

Other potential strokers are Mary Cockeram and Laura Fletcher, both of whom are first year.

More interest should be taken in the forthcoming water competitions, what with such favourable participants.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By Gord. Mack

WE HAVE THE CWAZIEST DREAMS . . .

If this were nineteen thirty-eight,
This guff would all be up to date;
But it is nineteen forty-thray—
Like College sport—it is passay.
SCOTTY O'TOOLE.

Periodically, members of the Varsity sports staff save enough money from salvaging old Varsities from watery graves on street car floors (and we don't enter by the centre door) to purchase a cup of real ersatz coffee, the fumes of which work strange wonders on their already shaky cerebellums. Such occasions have given rise to columns on all-star Varsity rugby squads IF only there were still an intercollegiate league, and the track team that Hec Phillips would have IF only there were still intercollegiate meets. While in the process of recovering from our caffeine debauchery and enjoying an effervescent Fomo-Belcher, we decided to utilize our clairvoyant powers and select the probable composition of a Varsity hockey team IF there were still an I.I.H.L. for it to compete in.

The majority of the first-string material would probably be reclaimed from aspiring pucksters who have at present left the local inter-faculty loop to seek fame and . . . oops (they're amateurs) . . . coloured sweaters in other local leagues. In these leagues they gain more experience against stiffer competition than exists on the campus, and it must be assumed (for the sake of the article) that outstanding players in the higher class outlaw leagues have an edge on equally outstanding local prodigies. There are about a dozen promising hockeyists doing figure-eights for other than faculty teams, and they are represented in the N.H.L., Sr. O.T.A., Jr. O.H.A., and various Sr. Mercantile leagues.

To guard the Blue and White citadel, it would be necessary to lure Dick Bridgman from between C.P.R. pipes in the Varsity T.H.L. major series. Dick was the pick of last year's inter-faculty goalies while performing for Vic, and is well known for his off-season goal-tending chores in lacrosse and soccer (we wuzz robbed). If need for a sub-goalie ever arose, the men of Ace Bailey could do worse than return Todd Morrison to the spot in front of the twine that he occupied for the last Varsity Intermediate team in 1940-1.

For the number one defence spot we'll stick by Happy Day's choice and nominate the Dental building's contribution to the blueline bone-crushers in the person of Bobby Copp. With this budding N.H.L. star as one-half of the rearguard combination, any twosome would look good, but by teaming him with big Glen Munro, a defensive combine is formed that would compare favourably with almost any in hockey. Munro, as mainstay of the Tip Top rearguard, possesses an imposing stature, endurance, and the ability to start and finish fast breakaways. Candidates for the alternate positions are led by Frank Bennett, a top-ranking defenceman for St. Mike's Jr. O.H.A. entry, and Stafford Industries on the West Toronto Mercantile League. Other capable performers include Jack Stafford, an engineer patrolling the Stafford Industries' blueline, Art Riddler, Jr. School veteran, St. Mike's Egan, and Sr. School's Hal Seymour.

The search for a forward to carry the mail down the right boards stops with Jackie MacLean, the engineering freshman who patrols the right wing on Saturday nights for a local sextet with a lot of promise, called the Maple Leafs. Flanking MacLean on the opposite wing is Bill Kosick. Playing twice a week each for Tip Top in the T.H.L. Major and Research Colonels in the Sr. O.H.A., Bill is near the top in both scoring races and is recognized as one of the outstanding local forwards. To centre this imposing pair, Bob Murray is drafted from his spot with Young Rangers. Bob is essentially a hockey player and can and does fill in at all positions on the Young Ranger forward line. This molar muscle-man is known on the campus for his prowess in rugby and lacrosse, and he carries the same fight and clutch-hitting characteristics with him when he dons his bob-skates for Ed Wildey.

Besides those players already named, there are many potent pucksters who would be making firm bids for team berths. Such players include Del Beaumont, a sensational School youngster who is leading the Jr. Marlboro sniping parade from his spot on right wing, Jim Bromley, another School freshman, who peddles his wares for Ostranders, and Gord Ball, who is leading the campus pot-shooters with six tallies in two games.

The list is inexhaustible, but space isn't—suffice it to say, that the above team, with alterations, would be capable of repeating the feats of the last victorious Blue and White squad in carrying off the I.I.H.L. title, IF there were only an I.I.H.L.

Arts Acceleration Not Favoured By Staff; Student Views Mixed

Survey Shows Students Are of Many Minds on Subject; Professors Turn Thumbs Down

"VACATIONS NECESSARY"

An informal survey of campus opinion on the subject of arts course acceleration yesterday found all staff members consulted united in opposition to any such move. Student comment was varied and ran to all shades and depths of opinion.

The most prevalent opinion, represented by Marguerite Wallace, II Pass, U.C., Elizabeth Page, I Soc. and Phil., U.C., and Nina Thomson, I Pass, Vic., was that it would be a fine thing to graduate earlier but both Marguerite and Elizabeth pointed out the dangers of brain-fag under such a system.

H. R. MacCallum, Associate Professor of Philosophy, insited that courses were as short as possible now, and C. B. Sissons, Professor of Ancient History at Victoria, pointed out that education in the proper sense of the term is a matter of growth. "You can't accelerate growth without losing much in the quality of the product," he said. "Vacations are necessary."

That acceleration was a good idea at Queen's provided it was optional, was the opinion of Dorothy Preston of I Soc. and Phil., Vic. And Barry Townley of I Soc. and Phil., Vic, joined her in the suggestion that it would not work under the present system here, but required a credit system to be workable.

Students in other faculties showed little concern for the problem of arts acceleration. An exception was Mary Lou Black, I Meds, who recommended acceleration so that men in arts courses could finish their education in a shorter time and contribute to the war. She insisted, "The artsmen are really just as important as those in the specialized courses."

Klaus Goldschlag, III Orientals, U.C., spoke for his course in saying that it was heavy enough without speeding-up. Walter Swayze, III English, U.C., who last year led a successful student effort to have his course lightened, pointed out that the war may be over before the speeding up could have any effect.

Professorial opinion coming closest to this was expressed by H. N. Frye, Lecturer in English at Victoria College. "I feel too optimistic about the war at the present time to feel that acceleration would do any good at this point," he said.

R. S. Knox, Professor of English at University College, considered acceleration educationally very bad. He warned against the danger of permanently reducing cultural courses to a junior college level. "We should give our best to the war effort and maintain our standards," he said. "The two things are not incompatible."

RUSSIA TAG DAY

Taggers are urgently needed for the city-wide tag day for the Canadian Aid to Russia Fund on Jan. 30. Any students wishing to volunteer may do so by phoning Mi. 1875.

Athletes Urge Aid to Russia

A brief but impressive ceremony took place at Varsity Arena last night as a part of the extensive Aid to Russia Campaign now being conducted throughout the city.

Prior to the first of the two hockey games scheduled for the evening, the Union Jack and the Russian national flag were carried, side by side, up the length of the ice. Miss Diane Woods and Mr. Sidney Soanes, well-known figure skaters, carried the flags, followed by the hockey teams in their colourful uniforms. At the end of the rink the two lines, led by the emblems of the two great fighting nations, converged to form the well-known "V" for Victory.

won the D.S.O. at Dieppe, faced off the puck for the first hockey game. The Tip Top Tailors' team swamped the Indians in the opener, 11-3; while C.P.R. edged People's Jewellers, 2-1, in the second game.

Collect Dimes For Russia This Noon

Principal Wallace, Miss Ferguson to Open Drive During Lunch Hour; College Organizations to Participate

GOAL SET AT $200

The University College "Drive of Dimes" to benefit the Canadian Aid to Russia Fund will take place in the U.C. Rotunda today from 12 to 1:30 p.m. Principal Wallace and Miss Ferguson, Dean of Women, will be present to open the Drive.

Shortly after 12, the W.U.A. and the Lit will lay down their contributions and from there, the rest of U.C. will carry on. The various women's fraternities and U.C. organizations will also be represented at the laying down of dimes.

It is hoped by the committee that the goal of $200 will be reached in the Drive this noon. However, if there are any who miss the Drive, there will be a box in the Rotunda on Friday where you may leave your contribution.

The large cardboard box which is now in the Rotunda, is for the collection of warm clothing which will be sent to Russia.

Mulock House has already collected $36 for the Aid to Russia Fund, and proceeds from the Arts Ball will also be donated to the cause.

Meds Graduate 103 New Doctors In First January Convocation; Four Receive Honour Awards

Bell, Acker, Best and Clarkson Receive Keys and Certificates for Undergraduate Leadership

HAD VARIED CAREERS

Four graduating students in Medicine yesterday received University of Toronto Honour Awards at the Medical Convocation. The men are R. Gordon Bell, Murray S. Acker, Stanley C. Best and Maurice F. Clarkson.

The Honour Award was instituted four years ago by the Students' Administrative Council "to be granted annually to certain students who have become leaders in the undergraduate life of the University as a whole, quite distinct from the separate colleges and faculties."

R. Gordon Bell, President of the S.A.C., was president of his class in Fifth Year and of the Medical Society in his final year. He acted as official University of Toronto delegate to the International Student Assembly in Washington, September, 1942, and was there selected to preside at the final session of the Assembly for the roll-call of the nations.

Murray S. Acker was cited by the S.A.C. as having been "active in various organizations designed to assist students of his own faculty and the University generally." He was secretary of the Student-Staff Council and chairman of the Ontario University Scholarship Campaign in 1941-42. This year he was a delegate to the conference of the Canadian Association of Medical Students

Civil Service to Hold Censorship Examination Before Close of Term

Due to a present shortage of people qualified in German and German script for censorship duties, the Civil Service Commission in Ottawa is asking for applicants.

The qualifications include High School and preferably University education, a sound knowledge of both English and German, ability to write concise and legible reports as instructed, adaptability and mental alertness.

The initial salary for Censorship Examiner is $1,560 per annum with various allowances. Due to the amount of training involved, people are not accepted on a temporary basis; the job is to last for the duration.

An examination for these positions, most of which are in Ottawa, is expected to be held before the close of the university year and students who are interested should forward their applications to the Civil Service Commission as soon as possible. Candidates are requested to fill out new forms as applications already on file with the Commission will not be transferred.

McGILL I. S. S. CAMPAIGN AIMS AT $1,000 GOAL

Montreal, Jan. 27—(CUP)—McGill I.S.S. campgain got under way Tuesday with its ultimate goal $1,000. Volunteers are collecting contributions and lack of funds will not be an excuse as written pledges from the students will be accepted.

Ribbons denoting the co-operation of the contributors will be given for each donation. Posters and illustrations explaining the work of the organization are on display at various buildings on the campus.

It is expected that the Arts and Science hop will donate their proceeds to the furtherance of the cause.

CORRECTION

Due to an editorial error, it was stated in yesterday's issue of The Varsity that the University College "Drive of Dimes" would be held Friday noon. The Drive will be held in the Rotunda today, from 12 to 1:30 p.m.

Russian Life Is Pares Subject

Sir Bernard Pares, K.B.E., 76, former editor of The Russian Review, authority and writer on Russian affairs, will speak on "Life in Russia," in Room 8, University College, tomorrow at 10:30 a.m. All students are invited to attend.

Considered one of England's most distinguished authorities on Russia, Sir Bernard was the former department professor of Russian History, Language and Literature at the University of Liverpool from 1908 to 1917, and at the University of London from 1919 to 1936.

An advisor to the British government on Russian affairs, he was attached to the Russian Army during the last war, from 1914 to 1917. He won the Russian Red Cross, the Soldier's Cross and the medal of St. George.

Sir Bernard is at present touring Canada through the coutesy of the Canadian Institute of International Affairs. His address on Friday will be given under the auspices of the University's Department of History. He will also speak over the C.B.C. Sunday from 8:45 to 9:00 p.m.

Sir Bernard visited Russia several times within the past 10 years, and has known the country under both the Czarist and Revolutionary regimes. He was an unofficial British ambassador to Russia during the Russian Liberal movement as exemplified under the former Russian parliament, the Duma.

Books he has written include: "Day by Day with the Russian Army," "Moscow Admits a Critic," "The Fall of the Russian Monarchy" and his most recent in the penguin series, "Russia."

He has also written a verse translation of "Fables of Krylov," and a Russian translation of A. Griboyedov's "The Mischief of Being Clever."

"Sir Pares has an abounding enthusiasm for Russian life and he might well be called the interpreter of Russia to the western world," said Professor R. Flenley of the History Department in an interview with The Varsity yesterday.

"Honour of the University, of the Profession and of the Country in Your Hands"—Cody

BRIG. CHISHOLM SPEAKS

One hundred and three medical students became doctors yesterday afternoon at the graduation ceremony held in Convocation Hall. They were the first class to graduate in a January from the Faculty of Medicine in this University. This was due to the speeding up of their course to meet the wartime demand for doctors.

"The honour of the University is in your hands," President Cody told the graduating students in his opening address. "The honour of your profession is in your hands—and never was that profession called upon to practice in a more noble cause than now. The honour of your country is in your hands, for you are a part of the great plans for 1943, and you will play a considerable part in the outcome of this war." The President concluded with a reference to General Smutts' recent address, saying, "Go forth and God bless you in this high crusade."

The Admissions to the Degree of Doctor of Medicine were then presented by Dr. W. E. Gallie, dean of the Faculty of Medicine, and bestowed by Sir William Mulock. Awards of medals and scholarships were also made to students who had attained a high standing in their work. Dr. Cody himself had donated three of the medals, which otherwise, due to their expense, would have been abolished.

The address to the graduating class was given by Brigadier G. B. Chisholm, Director General of Medical Services for the Canadian Army. "I am glad to see you medical students graduating in uniform," said Dr. Chisholm. "It is early yet to call you soldiers, for it is not the uniform which makes the soldier, or the equipment, or even the skill."

"Your function will be to keep fighting men fighting, efficient and in good health," the Brigadier continued. "But there is more to it than just preserving the soldier's body integrity. It is necessary in this common cause to have full trust in your fellow soldiers. To this end, we must frequently reverse the training which young men have been subjected to in civilian life. Many have been taught to be afraid, yet to be ashamed of fear. In the army you will see raw human life, and naked, unashamed fear. This is not to be

SEAL AND BEAR WILL BE THERE

By Ray Jackson

What would you think of a polar bear and seal act in the Hart House pool? . . . Fantastic? . . . Impossible? . . . Maybe, but fantastic and impossible things are what happen at School Nite.

School Nite, as you must have heard, is the annual show put on by the engineers in Hart House in which, among other things, is a burlesque show now notorious. And this year, despite any rumours to the contrary, there will be a show—a full hour show—besides other varied entertainment such as the House has never seen.

Denied the use of the Hart House Theatre except as an auditorium, the School Nite Committee has been debating for weeks on how to put on a good show with inadequate facilities. Now, finally, plans have crystallized. Starting from scripts for 10-minute skits, the show has developed into two full half-hour performance, to be presented simultaneously in the Great Hall and the Big Gym, and then trading places so that both audiences see the whole show without moving. Or, shall we say, the players and props will be peripatetic while the people stay put. (Read that out loud but don't aim at anybody.)

Last year the engineers had planned to introduce an elephant to the Hart House stage but were deterred by the smallness of certain doors. This year, according to Maurice Aykroyd, one of the committee, negotiations are under way with Barnum and Bailey for trained polar bears and seals and an invitation has been sent to Elsie, who is spending a couple of weeks with Mr. John D. Eaton. The animals, naturally, will go in the pool after the mermaids, not before. (Who wouldn't go in the pool after the Mermaids?) The mermaids, by the way, have a new and different show which will be seen for the first time in Toronto at School Nite.

An endless variety of entertainment is to be provided in the nooks and crannies of Hart House. Circus sideshow apparatus, a slack-wire performer, and other miscellaneous features are being arranged. Dingly Dan, the Diving Man, recently arrived from Russia to help the Aid to Russia Fund, will be a feature of one of the shows. He will dive on dry land. Stunt diving in the pool will be done by Howard Canty.

Carmen Miranda is expected for one of the shows, though she anticipates a little trouble with the perishables on her headgear, owing to the cold weather up here. Judging by the travelling done by important people these days, she shouldn't have much difficulty in persuading Uncle Sam to be her escort, too, which is what they say will happen.

Six bands will be there to make all space danceable on. Morgan Thomas, the Modernaires, Fred Evis, Mel Hammil, and Hannigan's Mountaineers, are the names on the list. Chester will play in the Chess room, was the latest information received last night from Pete Aykroyd, thus completing the list of six. By the way, this has not been a spiel to sell tickets because 1,000 tickets have been sold and there are no more.

Big St. Michael's Formal Combines Three Dances

Lights are burning brightly in the second floor of the new Brennan Hall on St. Michael's campus these nights as sweating committee members prepare the decorations for the first dance to be held there—the Fifth Annual St. Michale's College Ball, taking place this Friday evening.

The Ball is to be larger than in the past, for it is combined with the St. Joseph's and Loretto College At-Homes. Previously each college had held a separate dance, but in view of wartime conditions, it was decided to unite the three and hold it on the college campus.

The international motif will prevail in the decorations which, committee members assure, will be worthy of the occasion. Among the draperies are some that were used in Parliament when the King and Queen visited Toronto.

Dancing will be from nine till two, with music suppied by Morgan Thomas and his orchestra. In the course of the evening a buffet lunch will be served in the recently re-decorated common room beneath the main hall. The dance will be formal.

As part of the college's Aid to Russia drive, "warsages" will be sold to the couples, replacing the now defunct corsages and customary tags.

Co-conveners of the dance are Jack Casey, III St. Mike's, chairman, Mary Arnold, III St. Joseph's, and Marilynne Lunz, III Loretto.

Patrons and patronesses for the affair will include President H. J. Cody and Mrs. Cody, Rev. T. P. McLaughlin, Hon. Justice H. T. Kelly, Hon. Senator S. A. Hayden and Mrs. Hayden, Hon. Justice C. P. McTague and Mrs. McTague.

They're Doctors Now

Yesterday in Convocation Hall, 103 students were graduated from the Faculty of Medicine. To them The Varsity extends its congratulations, and offers its best wishes for the success of their future work.

We also extend particular congratulations to the four men—Acker, Bell, Best, Clarkson, to whom were awarded Students' Administrative Council Honour Awards.

To graduating students annually a limited number of these awards is made by the Council in recognition of outstanding qualities of leadership in all-university activities. It is interesting to note how some previous award-winners have continued to show similar qualities since their graduation.

The granting of these Awards was begun in 1939. Of those who have gained them since then, most of the men and several of the women are on active service. One—Nelson Earls, Vic 3T9—has since won the D.S.C.. Two—Paul McGillicuddy, U.C. 4T0, and Pat Strathy, Trinity 4T0—have been killed in action. One—Walter McGregor, U.C. 3T9—was taken prisoner at Dieppe. One—whose name is not yet released for publication—is reported missing. The judgment of the Council in making their Awards to these men was excellent. We congratulate Doctors Acker, Bell, Best and Clarkson once again, this time winning membership in so distinguished a company.

You Can Still Help

Deadline for inaugurating campus drives to boost contributions to the Aid to Russia Fund is Jan. 31. This means that student executives not already at work on some project or other to co-operate with the rest of the University have very few shopping days left in which to launch their campaigns.

Actually, we believe, such executives are now in the minority. There has been a great deal of activity here and there these last few day as the momentum of the campus drive grew. Dances, parties, films, hockey games, tag days have all played a part in piling up the mounting campus total. Although the final figure will naturally not be available for several days yet, it seems improbable that it will be unimpressive.

There are still a few days left, to give that mounting total another push or two. To any who have not contributed, to any who want to contribute again, we offer the almost superfluous reminder of the necessity and value of the Fund. It is a concrete manifestation of the gratitude and admiration that we all have for the raw courage of the Red Army, and the equally admirable spirit of the women and children of Russia.

There are still two suggestions for students who want to aid the Fund. More girls can be used as taggers on Saturday. They are asked to telephone their names in to MIdway 1875. And students handling the receipts of campus projects in aid of the Fund are reminded that they are requested to facilitate matters by turning them in to the S.A.C. Office as soon as possible. If the money is given in the form of cheques, they should be payable to the Canadian Aid to Russia Fund.

Correspondence

The Editor,
The Varsity.

Sir:

I should like to make a few comments on the recent letter by Dean Young of the Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering, and your remarks which appeared with it.

He says: "There is no singular or exclusive source of those who do the constructive thinking of the world in the matter of democracy or anything else," and taking this statement literally, I agree with him. I, then, an Artsman, have a perfect right to discuss and question a trained engineer's opinions on questions of statics, electrodynamics, the inner workings of turbines, and equally mysterious matters, if I consider my knowledge of these subjects, acquired by formal education or otherwise, adequate for the purpose.

However, let me hasten to assure the Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering that I have no intention of so doing, because I recognize that they have given much more time and energy to thinking about these things than I have.

So let it be in the humanities! Social, political and economic phenomena are just as complex and difficult to understand as the gyrations of electrons (if electrons do gyrate). Special techniques and hypotheses are required to define adequately the operation of social processes, and these techniques are not acquired in any other way than by hard study and mental discipline.

It may be said that everyone thinks about such things as democracy, society and so on. I agree; but everyone also things about light switches at one time or another. There is a difference, however, between the measured evaluations of an expert, and that vast, unco-ordinated mass of sentiments, prejudices and inacurrate snap judgments and streotypes which is glorified under the title of "common sense."

I am making no claim for the superior thinking abilities of Artsmen as against Engineers, or of university men as against those who have never got a degree. Anyone can think constructively if he wants to work at it, provided he is born with the necessary mentality. Dean Young is correct when he says "The spectacle of superior groups of thinkers who have come up through the humanities being set off against groups of workers whose approach to life has been through technonogy is bizarre, to say the least," but I believe he places a wrong interpretation on your editorial of Jan. 22.

At University, we all are, or should be, taught to think. There is a difference, however, in those matters about which we are taught to think, and herein, I believe, lie the just claims of the student of humanities to be considered superior in his field.

Sincerely,

D. J. Bairstow,
III Sociology.
Jan. 27.

As we understand Deon Young's comment upon our recent editorial, the main exception token to our remarks was directed toward our unwitting implicotion that men trained in scientific faculties were not equipped to "think" as obly as men trained exclusively in the humonities. For this suggestion, which was not intended, we have offered our explonation.

Hence we believe Mr. Boirstow to be somewhot off the subject of the discussion when he writes with the opparent chief purpose of telling engineers thot thcy are not as expert in the realm of humonities os ore the ortsmen. Most students of ony foculty would probobly agree to this thesis. We thonk him, however, for his reiterotion of mony of the points we have tried to moke concerning the value of orts courses.

But, in any cose, there seems little point in continuing the present unfortunate controversy. Although to dote the interchonge of views on the subject we raised in on unguarded moment hos been carried on reasonobly, we ore mildly feorful that it night become o trifle more heoted it it goes ony further—EDITOR.

ART OF MUSIC

Superfection

Anne Brown

"The gal in the groove" is how I shall refer to Anne Brown after hearing her performance in Massey Hall last evening. Perhaps it was the effect of a quiet, and rather unpopulated house in contrast to the mob scene at the Promenade Concert in October (where she made her last performance here) that enabled one to appreciate the full, rich quality of her voice. But Toronto didn't know what it was missing—the part of it that wasn't in those seats. Anne Brown was good.

The first part of her program was generally more heavy and dramatic than the second. But it exhibited the singer's range, technique, and particularly expression to excellent advantage. The opening number of Group I was the well-known eastern hymn Alleluia, and Miss Brown sang it with due exaltation. Handel's Let Me Wander, based on a line of Milton's L'Allegro, Schubert's Gretchen Am Spinnrade and Caecilie by Strauss were all done with a fervour of feeling and proved a very inspiring selection.

The three de Falla numbers which composed Group II were pleasant and attractive in their own Spanish way. The lullaby, entitled Nana, was almost

SNUGGIES GO ACTIVE

All university fees collected for the academic year of 1943-4 will be turned over to the Canadian Aid to Russia Fund, C. E. Higginbottom, Bursar of the University of Toronto, announced last night.

"It's simply a matter of bookkeeping," said Mr. Higginbottom roguishly.

A large part of the proceeds will be turned over to Dimitri Shostakovitch, popular Soviet composer, for the preparation of his Eighth Symphony which will use "The Blue and White" as its main theme.

The contribution to the Fund is part of a lease-lend program which will bring Marshal Semyon Timoshenko to the campus as officer commanding the University Contingent, C.O.T.C.

He replaces Lt.-Col. H. H. Maddill, who is being transferred to Jugoslavia to command the Chetniks, replacing Gen. Oraga Mihailovitch, who returns to his St. Thomas onion farm.

At the same time President H. J. Cody announced a special convocation to be held next month at which the degree of LL.D. honoris causa will be conferred on Premier Josef Stalin, Alderman Stewart Smith and "Red" Horner, noted guerilla warrior.

The University will also donate several shiploads of snow from its front and back campuses to be used for polishing greatcoat buttons on Russian white uniforms.

It is understood that the Engineering Society are auctioning off the Medical Building again, with proceeds earmarked this time for the Fund.

An unidentified Whitney Hall co-ed has aided the Russian clothing drive by offering a pair of red snuggies. "It's cold over there," she explained.

U.C. I In Second Place After Win Over Dents

Play Is Sloppy as Both Teams Scramble for Two Periods and Score in Third; Few Scoring Opportunities

DENTISTS SHORT-HANDED

U.C. I stepped into undisputed second place of Group I hockey standing as a result of their 2-1 win over Dents yesterday afternoon. Thirty minutes clicked by before a goal was scored and the tilt was strangely reminiscent of a woodchoppers ball or a blood and thunder battle in the theological group. Charges, boarding and such stuff went on with careless abandon with nary a penalty being dished out. Neither team showed the hockey that they are capable of playing.

Dents started the game with seven men. Probably in desperation they went out to play a close game and they nearly succeeded. U.C. had only two good scoring opportunities in the first period. The first came when Jimmy Graham stick-handled through the entire Dents team only to be outguessed by Bill Quigley in the Dents net. Whitley later caught the Dents goaler out of position and took a swipe at a loose puck that just rolled past the goal post. There was no scoring in the first period.

In the second period the teams picked up where they left off and scrambled up and down the ice for 10 minutes or so. Channel of Dents made a break up the right boards and rifled a pass to the far corner of the rink where Costoldi battered it past Skinner to put Dents in front, 1-0. Barely 30 seconds later Nesbitt teamed up with Amell to drill home a backhander through a maze of players to knot the count 1-1. Play tightened up again. With but 45 seconds left to play, U.C. started a power play which hemmed in Dents and resulted in the deciding goal by Jack Amell on a pass from Nicholls.

U.C. — Skinner, Nicholls, Kuryluk, Wade, Graham, Nesbitt, Amell, Furry, Warren, Whitley.

Dents — Quigley, Hambly, Ferguson, Swartz, Sibbold, Cousins, Leudi, Blue, Costoldi, Crouch.

Senior Swimmers Meet Saturday

The Senior Interfaculty Swim Meet, prologue to the choosing of the Varsity Swim Squad, will be held at next Saturday's Athletic Night.

School, who copped both the Senior and Junior Meets last year and who succeeded in repeating their junior victory this fall, appear to be able to hold the Fitzgerald Trophy for another year. The Engineers have a complete entry list in already and they are the only faculty so far to indicate any enthusiasm in the meet. The usual galaxy of School mermen will take part — Northwood, Moffat, Gilbert, Sansom and all the other natator names which are legend in swimming circles by now.

The usual events will be contested:

Free style—50, 100, 200 and quarter-mile.

Back—100 yards.

Breast—200 yards.

Relays—300 medley; 200 free style.

Diving—4 compulsory, 4 optional.

The Athletic Office requests that entry lists be in as early as possilbe and asks those in charge of swimming at the various faculties to kindly attend to this immediately.

Speaking Of Sport

By Jim Paton

FIRST COME, FIRST SERVED . . .

A restriction of a sort will be imposed on the attendance of Athletic Night No. 2 coming up this Saturday. At present it is not intended to curb the size of the crowd, although a bruised and battered body mutters that it might not be a bad idea. What is desired, however, is that people come a little earlier. Last Saturday evening the program started at 8:15 p.m., but the attendance at 9:00 p.m. was only in the vicinity of 300 persons. And since the ultimate count was some 1,397 patrons, it would appear that 1,097 wandered in unfashionably late. From two viewpoints this sort of thing is not good. In the first place these evenings are held as an Athletic Night and not a Saturday Night Swing Club, although the promoters have nothing against finishing off the evening with a brawl. (For safety's sake, we'll add an enjoyable brawl.) But it doesn't seem fair that so many players should contribute to the various athletic features before a mere handful of spectators. Moreover, these games are good and really worthwhile watching. But the main objection is to the conjection in the main corridor, aptly described as the "Black Hole of Calcutta," that is created by the late-comers as they make their way to the coat room. Patrons who have come early are unable to circulate from room to room as the hosts would have them do in order to make the most of the various features presented.

The hoped-for solution to this knotty problem is this. No tickets will be sold after 9:30 p.m. and there will be no advance sale of any description. . . . The only acceptable excuse for tardiness is a hand-engraved apology from your local T.T.C. motorman.

SO SOLLY PLEASE . . .

Sadly neglected in the matter of advance publicity (for which we humbly apologize) the preliminaries of the Junior Assault are scheduled for today. The Junior Assault is a novice tournament in Boxing and Wrestling and if you enjoy watching somebody beating somebody else to a pulp, then by all means drop into the boxing and wrestling rooms this afternoon. . . . It's a grand and gorious sight.

THAT EXPLAINS IT . . .

While browsing around the big gym t'other day we noticed that the practice backboards along the side of the floor had taken on a new appearance. Wondering if some erstwhile engineer had taken to practicing his sketch problems on Hart House basketball equipment, we set off in search of Warren Stevens, who reassured is it was merely an old device of basketball coaches to train their squads to concentrate on shoot. It seems the rectangle and diagonal lines indicates "sweet spots" which, if aimed at, will always result in baskets. Judging by the Blues' activity around the hoop last Saturday, Warren's charges are away ahead in their sugar ration.

SMOOTHIE . . .

And while on the subject of sweet stuff. . . . We noticed playing for Dents A hoop squad a very smooth basketballer. On investigation we learned that his name was "Joe" Ryan and that he was a member of the U. of B. C. Thunderbirds who turned back the Simpson Grads in the Dominion Basketball Finals a couple of years ago. Joe would be a valuable addition to the current edition of the Blues as he possesses an uncanny marksmanship, plus a wealth of basketball experience. How about it, Joe?

Sportswoman

By Aileen McNally

Those who braved the cold and stood leaning against the boards over at Little Vic rink last night had no cause for complaint. The games was certainly the best to date in the women's loop, for after a great struggle Vic defeated U.C. 2-1.

In the first period both teams took a little while to warm up. U.C., sparked by their brilliant defence player, Marg Ham, hit its stride first, and Marg banged in a goal to put her team ahead. A spill in this period resulted in the retirement of Isobel Hill, of U.C., who is one of their most dependable players.

The rest saw U.C. return to keep their command of the play. More than once Helen Stewart, the Vic Goalie, made sensational saves as "Hamy" and her team-mates swarmed round the Vic net. Then Vic got going and it was too bad for the Red and White. Shirley Pearce in a scramble in front of the U.C. net pushed in the puck to tie up the score.

In the last period it was Vic all the way. U.C. made some brilliant rushes but the Vic defence, guided by Helen Ptrack, staved off the attack. Near the end of the game Billie Bain scored the second and winning goal for Vic. In reality the spectators' comments of "colossal" and "magnificent" were not too exaggerated, and if last night's hockey is any indication of the brand played in the league—this year's season should really be successful.

Tomorrow's

PEOPLE OF AFFAIRS...

Today's students are tomorrow's citizens . . . and good citizens are responsible people — people who handle their affairs right.

One practical way to develop good citizensbip is by the regular saving of money. Though he may not be able to save much, every student should bave his own bank account; it establishes babits and connections of incalculable value in later life.

If you have not already a connection witb the Bank, your account will be very welcome at any one of the several offices convenient for students.

"And so," Brigadier Chisholm said, "you must take advantage of the opportunities you will have to learn about human nature. Although your ordinary formal development is being interrupted, your experience in the services will add much to it, and is therefore of no small importance."

At the conclusion of his address, four Honour Award Certificates were presented by the S.A.C. to Murray Acker, Stanley Best, Maurice Clarkson and Gordon Bell for the services they have rendered to the University during their student years.

A reception was held in the foyer of Convocation Hall for the large assembly present at the Medical Graduation.

and Internes and also to the International Student Assembly in Washington. Acker is now in the Royal Canadian Army Medical Corps.

Stanley C. Best was declared "an outstanding student executive both in Arts and Medicine." He was a Student Christian Movement officer throughout his course, being president of the University S.C.M. in 1940-41. He has been on a number of championship water polo teams and various Hart House committees. He was vice-president of the Medical Society and this year was chairman of C.A.M.S.I. and one of the delegates to the International Student Assembly in Washington. He is now in the R.C.A.M.C.

Maurice F. Clarkson was for three years Intercollegiate diving champion and winner at International Intercollegiate meets. He was President of the U. of T. Swimming Club. This year Clarkson has been liaison officer between the enlisted Medical students and the R.C.A.M.C. He is now in the R.C.A.M.C.

The award is in the form of a key and special certificate presented to each winner in person, usually at the Convocation Garden Party by the President of the University, whose signature it bears along with that of the President of the Council. The winners are selected by a standing committee made up of the President of the Council and the two vice-presidents, the two faculty representatives and the two secretaries.

Despite the recent ejaculation of one of our professors who was honoured in this column a while back, "Professorial remarks, Phooey!" Yes, he said (quote) phooey (unquote). We still think these gentlemen worthy of note, and frequently take down their words and cherish them but thoroughly.

Take for instance the little anecdote with which one of the philosophy profs is wont to brighten his course.

The story concerns the little abbreviation D.V. with which the pious used to interlard their public notices and whatnot. The two letters, in case you've forgotten, stand for Latin which means "God willing."

Well, there was once a bus line which advertised trips on certain days and after each day it placed (D.V.). When asked what this meant the driver replied, "The letters stands for Latin which means "Weather permitting."

We told that to some of the boys and girls in the Back Room and one of the ladies pipes up, "Oh, a pantheist, hunnh?"

Gowns and professors go together pretty steadily on this campus, and you'd think that the academics would be used to the weird things by now, but there's a prof up at Victooria who, on an average of three times a year, wears his to class inside out with the union label showing and has to go through the routine of getting its complicated cut straightened out. This one panies them.

Another professor revealed to his with a sense of wonderment that after all these years he had found a use for the big full sleeves that flop around rather uselessly. "I understand that they were once used for earrying books," he remarked, "but I find them very handy for dusting off chairs before sitting down."

Down at Louisiona State University they recently held big realistic-type manoeuvres for the R.O.T.C. It was one of those things where officers announce afterwards that the boys have learned "many valuable lessons."

For instance, one corporal qualified for his Boy Scout stalking tests by catching a rabbit.

And another learned to keep his eye on the ball. Turning his head to look back at the squad he was leading, he fell smack-dab into a ditch full of water.

One unit never did reach the firing line. It ran into a large, unfriendly black bull.

But another unit did. There's a fellow on the agricultural course down there named Harold Branton who is supposed to be the beef-critters' friend, so the commander of this unit instructed all his men to address approaching bulls in this manner, "Stop, I'm Harold Branton."

Prisoners were taken, sometimes by dubious means. One cadet sergeant leapt from the bushes to confront an opposing private. "You're my prisoner," he chirped.

"I ean't be," the private explained, "I'm a easualty."

"Shut up," came back the sergeant, "my eaptain told me to capture a prisoner. He didn't say a dead or a live one.

'Tis frequently all too true that so-ealled humor columns get rather unfunny towards the end, but The Walrus Column of the Boston University News regularly comes to the deadest ending of any we have ever read. For nearly four years now, and probably for a long time before, it has been followed directly by the advertisement of J. S. Waterman & Sons who, they claim, have, since 1832, maintained a local and suburban funeral service.

Tomorrow it will be hither and yon with neil macdonald. Neil will step over from page 2 where he usually fights it out with the editorials for space and the local virtuosi for the sheer love of it, to indulge in the less combative sport of hither writing. Tomorrow — backstage in a critic's mind.

Journalism as Vocation To be R. B. Cowan Topic At Victoria Today

Journalism will be the subject of a vocational guidance talk by Mr. R. B. Cowan, Circulation Manager of the Toronto Daily Star, in Room 14, Victoria College at 12:45 p.m. today. Mr. Cowan will discuss journalism as a profession, and offer suggestions as to the best way of breaking into the field.

This is one of a series of vocational guidance lectures sponsored by the Victoria College Union, and arranged by the Victoria College Alumni. Its aim is to help students who are entering the business world. A survey of opinion was taken among this year's freshman, and it is hoped that speakers will be found to discuss the professions students are most interested in. Already teaching, accountancy and law have been discussed.

Arrangements are being made to have speakers from the Navy, Army and the Air Force, and perhaps from the women's services.

Engineers' Orientation Aim of School Group

The recently inaugurated "Orientation Group" holds its second discussion meeting at noon-hour today in the S.C.M. library opposite the Debates Room in Hart House.

The idea for the group and its organization are both due to Mr. Richard Scott of the Electrieal Engineering Department who outlined the group's aims.

"The modern Engineer is much more than a technician. He must be able to co-ordinate science, art, literature, social institutions and religion. In our group we shall discuss certain subjects which are not on the curriculum but will enable the students to orient themselves to face the complex problems with confidence," he said.

oriental-sounding in its weird harmony. It was, in my estimation, the most appealing of all the songs in the first part of the program.

The latter half of the concert was also divided into two groups. The first one consisted of Rachmaninoff's The Drooping Corn, two light and charming folk songs, Velvet Shaes by Randall Thompson—a repeat performance of a hit at the Prom Concert last fall—and the pretty Love's Philosophy by Roger Quilter. These were received with tremendous applause by the audience which by now had succumbed completely to the grace of Miss Brown's recital and manner.

But the best was for the last, I felt. The peak of the evening was certainly reached when Miss Brown sang without accompaniment the Negro spirituel A City Called Heaven. She follower this with another, On Ma Journey, also done so well that one wondered why the whole program had not consisted of such. From Gershwin's Porgy and Bess (in which she starred) eame Summertime and Ma Man's Gone Now, the two concluding numbers on the program. And they also were sung with that virbrant and husky, yet fine, quality of voice which I have decided to eall "superfection."

Rifle Club to Hear Talk By Former R.C.M.P. Man

Continuing its practice of presenting talks by experts on the various branches of revolver shooting, the Rifle Club will hear Raymond Nelson speak on "Weapon Disarming" at 5 p.m. next Monday night in Hart House Debates Room. Mr. Nelson is a former R.C.M.P. constable who, in the course of duty has had to deal with some of Canada's toughest criminals. He will explain some of the best methods of rendering harmless a man armed with a revolver or knife.

Summer Speed-Up Used At McGill For Certain Subjects

Science, Arts and Medical Students May Complete Their Fourth Year During Summer Months

MUST JOIN ONE OF SERVICES

Montreal, Jan. 28—(CUP)—A Summer School in four courses for Third Year science students was approved by the McGill Faculty of Arts and Science, it was announced yesterday. Students completing the courses successfully will receive their degree in October.

Courses in chemistry, psychology, physics and mathematics (in so far as it is connected with physics) will be offered if the departments concerned are prepared to undertake the necessary work. Students must take three courses to qualify for their degree.

Enrolment in the courses will be entirely voluntary. Each student desiring admission is required to sign a declaration of his intention to join the armed forces or enter war work approved by the Wartime Bureau of Technical Personnel upon graduation.

Pre-medical students who have completed their second year of a science course and who have been accepted for entrance to the Medical School in September will also be admitted.

Students in arts courses who have completed their Third Year and who took courses in the Summer Term of 1942, when a wide range of subjects was offered, may complete their Fourth Year by taking any suitable subjects offered in the four departments mentioned above, or in the French Summer School.

More than 100 students graduated last October, following the first summer school, when students in good standing in all years were eligible to take the 12 courses offered.

(Acceleration of all arts courses at Queen's University was announced earlier this week. Courses will be open to students of all years and may be taken either in Summer School or in extramural work. Arts heads at the University of Toronto were of the opinion that the acceleration of arts coursese there was unlikely.)

Veteran Reporter Lectures at Vic

"The return of peace will in my opinion bring with it an upsurge of new publications," stated Mr. R. B. Cowan, Toronto Star Circulation Manager, in a lecture on Journalism at Victoria College. "With these will come an opportunity for newspaper employment."

Mr. Cowan said that owing to war conditions a newspaper job can be had literally "for the asking," and he added that almost every type of occupation is included in the operation of a newspaper.

He warned prospective journalists not to be afraid to join up with a local daily paper. Most newspapers men start out in this way and work up to a metropolitan paper only to become an editor of a small town weekly and settle down to enjoy life. On a metropolitan paper, the presses look like a giant dragon with its mouth wide open, he quoted Gregory Clark as saying.

The best training for journalists is to read biographies of big newspaper people, he continued. A good editor should be inspired with as much zeal as a man who feels himself called to the ministry, otherwise editorial columns will soon have a hollow ring.

RUSSIA TAG DAY

Women taggers are urgently needed for the city-wide tag day for the Canadian Aid to Russia Fund tomorrow, Jan. 30. Any students wishing to volunteer may do so by phoning Mi. 1875 today.

Use of Library Seen to Decrease

There has been a definite decrease in the number of students using the library since the 1940-41 term, W. S. Wallace, University Librarian, said yesterday. He attributed the decrease to the war.

"Students are working harder, but are not taking out as many books," he said. "This may be due to the students spending more time on military studies. Also there is a decrease in registration, especially in the arts faculties, who use the library more than, for example, the engineers who have their own departmental libraries."

The rush hours in the library come at the half-hour times this year due to the changed time-table. At the beginning of this term there was an unprecedented rush due to the importance attached to term examinations.

There has been no noticcable decline in the number of students using the library at night, Mr. Wallace remarked.

During the year 1940-41, there were 273,461 books given out, while only 253,817 books where borrowed during the 1941-42 session. Mr. Wallace predicted that even fewer books would be used this ycar.

Dr. Arnold Walter Discusses Music

"Our musical life is altogether off-centre, because the composer is out of touch with the listener," declared Dr. Arnold Walter, Director of Music at Upper Canada College, speaking to the Philosophical Society at their meeting at St. Hilda's, yesterday. Dr. Walter whose chief interests are the composition and history of music, spoke on "Musical Composition and Its Problems Today." The main problem of the modern composer if he is a serious one is to keep alive, since if a work is performed the returns are pitifully small. He can only be a part-time artist and is not the centre of our musical life even as much as the record salesman.

Dr. Walter outlined a normal musical life in historical perspective. The 18th century composers re-expressed old masters in their own style, but they performed new music. In our time we live in a kind of musical museum where only old masters have a permanent position. The performer used to be subordinate to the composer but now distribution has become more important than production. Contemporary composition has reached the point where it could be dispensed with without the regrets of the listening public.

This, Dr. Walter asserts, is partly the fault of the composer who has cast aside form for harmonic ingenuity. The artist has become a research worker in novelty, who attempts to create a strictly personal langauge of his own. These reckless people have tried to force a false progress which has no limitations.

Dr. Walter concluded, "As a craftsman the musician must work for his contemporaries and not for the future only. He must realize his responsibility."

Dr. Walter's paper was followed by a group discussion on music in present-day Russia, and on the place of swing in musical life.

New Features Planned For Athletic Night

The second in the series of six Athletic Nights will have Trinity and Dents as hosts. A diverse program features the undefeated basketball team from Rochester who come to face the Varsity Blues.

A premilinary basketball game will start at 7:45 when Dents meet the St. Mike's entry in the city cage loop. At eight the Senior Interfaculty Swim Meet will begin in the splashroom. Mixed in with the best swimming to be seen on the campus this year will be some fancy diving exhibitions.

Also at eight the junior assault-at-arms will take place in the upper gym. Here will be seen (and heard) the champion grunt and groan artists of the campus as they battle for university supremacy. Then comes the long awaited Varsity Blues-Rochester University cage contest at 8:30.

As usual, table tennis and parlour games will hold sway in the boxing and wrestling rooms, but in addition to that the committee is endeavouring to get shots from the famous "Inside Fighting Russia" movies for the fencing room.

An added attraction will be a military display of weapons and materials used by the men's and women's services. And then as an extra side-show the embryo dentists will set up a couple of offices in which everyone will be subjected to an oral inspection. And, oh yes—a prize will be given the couple possessing the best set of cuspids.

Then when the big game has been settled the usual melee will begin to the strains of all the popular ditties. But something new will be added—for the Molarmen will bring their famed Dentanties band back for a return engagement. This is the same outfit that, with Ferol Elliott as soloist, made such a hit last year. And of course the stronger willed will have their chance again in the upper gym. For the same "caller-offers" with their background of "music" will be in attendance to aid in the process of local mayhem.

But because of the crowdings of late-comers it has been found necessary that all who wish to partake of the enjoyments of the remaining Athletic Nights must plunk their two bits in the box office before nine-thirty or they will find the entrance to the honourable portals closed to them.

Co-Operative Residence Declares $1660 Dividend

The Campus Co-operative Residence, Incorporated, the Residence owned and operated by 100 students at the University of Toronto, has sent out cheques totalling $1,660 to its last year's members as their dividend on last year's operations, the retiring general manager, Eber Pollard, announced recently.

This amounted to a dividend of 7.6 per cent for the Men's Unit, which consists of four houses and 75 members, and 14.8 per cent for the Women's Unit with one house and 18 members. This dividend was declared after 20 per cent of the operating surplus was set aside for permanent reserve and 5 per cent given to the educational fund.

The financial statement, copies of which were distributed at the general meeting Wednesday, showed that the Co-operative did a business amounting to $21,000 during the previous fiscal year. The present general manager, Fred Turner, IV Comm. and Finance, expects that the business done this ycar will be even greater than that of last year.

The general meeting heard reports from the retiring managers, elected new officers, revised board rates for the coming ycar and set up committees to make recommendations regarding the filling of the residences during the summer months and to study the problems of operations for next fall.

Hart House Visitors To View New Gallery

The undergraduate art exhibit will be the feature attraction of Visitors' Day at Hart House this Sunday. The House is open to guests of the members on the last Sunday of each month.

The exhibit currently hanging in the Art Gallery will consist of oils, water-colours, and ink and pencil drawings done by undergraduates themselves.

Several faculties are to be represented in the exhibit. To date there have been entries from Forestry, S.P.S., Victoria, Trinity and University College.

Nash, Davidson, Legget To Lead Sunday Service

"Science, Christianity and Society," will be the topic of Rev. Arnold Nash's sermon at the S.C.M. Sunday Evening Service held in Trinity College Chapel on Jan. 31 at 7:30 p.m.

Principal R. Davidson of Emmanuel College will conduct the service which is the second in the present series.

A Fireside discussion will follow, led by Prof. R. F. Legget, assistant Professor in Civil Engineering. Prof. Legget will give a short address on "Faith and the Removal of Mountains."

A long, long time ago, we became suspicious of certain moves by our bosom frfend, Rex Wilson (he who is appalled by women). We have been collecting items therefore for a long, long time.

Some time ago there was a particularly black blackout in Toronto. It included Burwash Hall, too. Lights were promptly doused and the warden walked his beat, watching for incidents.

The boys of Burwash Hall watched the blackout drag on and on and the warden grow more and more bored with his existence. The blackout was only darkness devoid of incident for the poor fellow until a certain group of student enlivened his immediate vicinity with a real, honest-to-goodness incident.

One bomb, H.E., water.

And some boys in this same house at Burwash greeted their next door neighbour's guests at a Sunday tea with a raucous public address system, chanting the bawdiest songs!

A young man of our acquaintance periodically calls on a young woman who lives in a boarding house not far from this campus.

One night, particularly enthusiastic over the coming date, the wandered into the house and found that the furniture had been changed around. The bell by whose —.— he summonded his lady was missing, so he simply shouted her name up the stairs. (Naw, I won't tellya.)

Granting Of Credits To No. 1 Army Course Difficult, Says Dean

Would Be Given Credit for First Year Engineering at Most, Necessitating a Substantial Curricular Revision

COURSES NOT PARALLEL

The granting of credit for first year engineering work to graduates of the No. 1 Army Course when they return after the war would place an enormous responsibility on the university staff, Dean C. R. Young, of the Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering, stated recently.

The committee of the Faculty Council considering the course has not made any decision, he continued, but the course does not appear to parallel first year Engineering.

"Their studies in Surveying, Mathematics and Military Writing are fairly equivalent to our first year subjects," Dean Young said, "and they have a certain amount of Engineering Drawing and Descriptive Geometry. But of Dynamics, Statics and Electricity they take only a little; and of Properties of Fluids and Chemistry, none at all."

"These men could not be given credit for more than a year, at the very most," the Dean believed, "and even then a substantial revision of first and second year curricula would be required."

ATHLETIC NIGHT

No admission tickets will be sold after 9:30 p.m. for the remainder of the Saturday night Athletic Nights.

Dr. G. D. Cameron To Address R.C.I.

"Food and Drug Control in Canada" is the topic to be discussed by Dr. G. D. W. Cameron, Chief of the Laboratory of Hygiene of the Dominion Department of Pensions and National Health, speaking at eight o'clock tomorrow night in the Royal Canadian Institute's weekly lecture series in Convocation Hall.

The lecture will concern the precautions and corrective measures being taken by the government to protect Canadians against fraud and injury through the adulteration and false naming of food and drug products.

The Dominion government maintains a system of inspectors and laboratories throughout the country in order to help prevent harmful practices such as the use of antiseptics and chemicals to prevent food spoilage.

Dr. Cameron will illustrate his lecture with lantern slides, and will show how scientific tests serve to safeguard our food and drugs.

Graduating from Queen's in 1927, he won the Diploma of Public Health at the Toronto School of Hygiene. Later he became Research Fellow in Epidemiology and Biometrics at the Connaught Laboratories and in 1932 Research Associate.

V.C.F. Speaker

Mr. Roy C. Cook, B.A., B.D. of Farmer Memorial Baptist Church, Toronto, who will speak on "The Place of Religion in Life" at the U.C. Group of the V.C.F. next Monday at 12:30 in Room 4.

Parliament to Discuss Right of Formal Dances

The current controversy over formal dances will be fully aired today in the U.C. Parliament when the pro and con formals tangle in debate. Following their re-admittance to parliament at the last session, women will again attend to present the feminine point of view.

Speaking for the government will be the Prime Minister and the Minister for Public Morals, Hon. Betsy Mosbaugh. The opposition will be led by Hon. Dennis Wrong and Hon. Melina Matuska. The newly elected speaker, Hon. Bryant Kassirer, will be formerly installed when the House convenes at 4 p.m. in the U.C. Junior Common Room.

Russia Is Aided By U.C. Dime Drive

Fifty dollars, with still more to come, was collected in the drive of dimes for Russia held in the University College Rotunda yesterday noon. Miss Ferguson, Dean of Women, and Principal Wallace of U.C. officially opened the drive and their contributions were suplemented by various professors and students of the college.

Allison Foster, of the W.U.A., and Don Rowat, of the Lit, harangued the surging crowd with pithy slogans, while U.C. undergrads echoed the pleas at strategic positions throughout the Rotunda.

The executive of the college will make or have made contributions to add to those already collected. The second year council gave $5 from the proceeds earned at the first ycar dance last year.

The objective of $200 was not attained but there will be a box in the Rotunda today to receive any delayed contributions.

The comic was mingled with the serious as one thoughtful co-ed remarked, "I haven't got a dime but will a quarter do?" One rotund kahki-clad individual muttered as he stooped laboriously over to place his quota on the line, "This sure is good training for commando work."

Et Tu, McGill

News today from McGill concerning the acceleration of certain of the Arts Courses follows closely reports received earlier this week that such a plan was being developed ot Queen's. In the case of the Montreal university, such acceleration will be limited apparently to technical courses, in which students have already taken summer courses.

At McGill, of course, most science courses are given by the Faculty of Arts, and this acceleration is perhaps in some respects more parallel to the speeding-up of certain science faculty courses at other universities—especially in the United States—than it is to the projected Kingston arts acceleration.

Although heads of the Arts Colleges at this University suggested recently that such a plan as the one at Queen's would be neither practicable nor advisable at Toronto, we nevertheless are a little perturbed by what seems to be growing into a fashion at other Canadian colleges. Earlier in this event-packed year, sidelong suggestions were made and numerous trial balloons were inflated regarding the possibility and even the propriety of cutting arts course registration to women; men who are under age; or men unfit for military service. Due perhaps in large part to the general outcry of University opinion contrary to these suggestions, and also to the sane and farsighted stand which the Government has taken, as revealed in the now-famous Macnamara speech at the recent Ottawa Universities Conference, this danger seems to be averted for the time at least. But now another threat to the efficient education of artsmen and artswomen has arisen.

Surely it is generally agreed that students in the arts faculties do not amass the entirety of their education through formal study and classes. Rather, a liberal education consists also in large part of an opportunity to clarify one's ideas, compare them with the views of others, learn tolerance, and broad-mindedness. This end cannot be accomplished if an arts education adopts the practice of a mass-production plant with sociologists, philosophers, historians and linguists coming off the assembly line like so many Bren-gun barrels.

It is fallacious to harbour the belief that speeding up the arts courses will result in producing as good an article as formerly, in a shorter time. At the risk of being hideously trite, we would hazard the suggestion that this is one case in which the hoary adage, "haste makes waste," is strinkingly applicable.

Correspondence

The Editor,
The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

Having recently spent a few pleasant hours in the University of Edinburgh, I thought The Varsity would be interested in how the student over here lives.

The buildings themselves are scattered about the city, the law and arts faculties being together with the University offices in a building surrounding an oval cement quad. Medicine and the union are together next to the hospital, three blocks away, and Science is a short bus-ride distant in another direction. Perhaps this latter is a good plan. The sports field is in yet another location.

Here, too, there is no compulsion about attending lectures except about twice a week, when admit-to-lectures cards are collected, believe it ro not, at lectures to check on attendance. The students have three sets of exams, the first two being class exams and the last being the one that counts.

There is a fortnightly edition of "The Student." I glanced through one copy and actually thought that even "Acta Victoriana" was better.

Sports and socials clubs seem to be about as numerous as Toronto's, although there are no frats, and I could not find the Gym, if there is one. Few people live in residences now, as these have been taken over by the Government for training purposes. One point in which they varied from Toronto's social life in that every Friday the Students' Representative Council holds a "Hop" and every Saturday evening the Union runs a "Palais Union." There University debates are still alive as well.

In their campus training they have shown great wisdom; there is a University Naval Division, so that the male students, when they are called, can enter the senior service rather than be drafted into the Army or Air Force.

The women students (not co-eds here) also take training and are only allowed to finish that session during which they reach the age of 20.

They very kindly invited me to the Union Palais last night and although there were plenty of couples to bump into, they said the place was half empty because of the smallpox scare. My morals were shaken when I saw an actual bar inside a University and students drinking intoxicants. But after a two-shilling sip of their sherry brandy, I could not blame the boys and girls for imbibing such immoral refreshment. As for the Scots lassies, I still prefer the Toronto co-eds. Incidentally, an English Fleet Air Arm officer once told me that of all the places he has been in England, United States and Canada, it was his opinion that the girls in Toronto were the most beautiful.

The jitterbug has just recently arrived over here and makes himself a pest on most dance floors. Last night was no exception, although he did sit most dances out.

In the elimination they made all gentlemen who were taking their partners home get off the floor. The trams stop at 11 p.m. and some of the girls live miles away. They finished that dance with a wheelbarrow race, but I heard that at a "fresher" dance at the beginning of the term they finished the elimination with an osculation contest. The winner was too shy to encore.

At the bottom of one of the pages in the University Handbook are "useful" phone numbers; but there is only one that is useful to an outsider and even it is vague: Women's Union . . . 41115.

Here is their song. I hope it makes more sense to you than it does to me.

Gaudeamus igitur
Juvenes dum sumus;
Post iucundum inventutem
Post molestam senectutem,
Nos habebit humus
Nos habebit humus.

Vita nostra brevis est
Brevi finietur;
Venit mors velociter
Rapit nos atrociter
Nemini parcetur,
Nemini parcetur.

And that, Sir, is Edinburgh University as I found it. At present there are more women than men students and of these a great majority are in Medicine. Over here the interfaculty rivalry is between medicine and arts. I hear they recently had a merry time with sandbags and buckets of water on the occasion of the students electing a new rector as chairman of the University Court; and occasionally on the staid stone walls one still notices the name of some important person in bright chalk.

Hoping you find this of interest, I remain,

Sincerely,

J. E. Silcox,
III Vic.,
(R.C.N.V.R.)

Thanks to Mr. Silcox for his interesting sketch of first-hand impressions of one of Great Britain's great universities.—EDITOR.

Art, Music and Drama

Vronsky & Babin

A two-piano team of the calibre of Vronsky and Babin very seldom hits Toronto; as a matter of fact, I cannot recall any since they were here before, in my first year.

It is not hard to discover the reasons for their magic—they are never confronted by a technical problem they cannot solve with the greatest facility. The talk in this column of interpretation may have given the impression that it is considered above technique. Interpretation is useless, or nearly so, unless a capable technique accompanies it.

Vronsky and Babin never touch a note which shows any sign of strain, never play any passage which sounds in the least difficult. That puts the audience at its ease immediately. This technique would of course be useless if it were not accompanied by a musicianship which gives every note its due importance.

The most interesting music on the program was the group of Symphonic Dances by Rachmaninoff. The music which had preceded it was Bach (I like Bach very much, and this was excellent) and Schumann (whose variations were brilliant). These Symphonic Dances, however, had been arranged by the composer himself and they took advantage of every possibility for tone colour and rhythmic effect that was peculiar to two pianos. The Stravinsky Tongo and Circus Polka were of almost equal brilliance.

Most duo-pianists are content to make their recital sound like one super-piano. Vronsky and Babin made a differentiation between the two instruments which was noticeable in the audience. That is the measure of their skill.

NEIL MACDONALD.

Speaking Of Sport

By Roger Conant

NUMBER TWO COMING UP . . .

Well, here we are again, on the eve of another Athletic Night—the night when, for 25 cents, you can enjoy a four-ringed circus of the best sporting events you'll ever hope to see in these parts. And the one coming up seems to reach almost an all-time high, what with the triple-threat of the Junior Assault-at-Arms going on upstairs, the Senior Interfaculty Swim Meet making the walls of the swim-hall shake, and the big Rochester-Varsity game echoing throughout the rest of the Athletic Wing. Yes, even if the Dentantics band were not going to show up, it sure would add up to a full two bits worth of entertainment.

AND WHAT OF THE GUESTS?

It won't be the same clipping of Airmen's wings tomorrow, for the Stevensmen will be meeting one of the toughest teams in the east. For, delving back into sport statistics, we find that the visitors have an unbroken winning streak of two dozen straight games to their credit. And that ain't hay in any man's league—but when you note that such big guns as Yale and Cornell are among the slain victims you begin to wonder.

But it seems that Rochester has been a basketball town for quite some time. And especially when the Kodak King left a reputedly thirty million to the University did the cage-mall game take a jump. For part of the pile of green left after government blood money had been taken went to the construction of a super-duper basketball drome. It is one of the newest and the very finest in America, reports Warren Stevens. And he should known, for it seems he was bouncing the apple for Syracuse the day Rochester and Syracuse formally opened the joint. And what a joint! — oops. They call it the "Palestra" down there. For it was designed for nothing but basketball—with the rows of seats which hold 2,500 fans, well back from the court. The floor itself is a composite non-slide texture done up in a dainty green colour with red lines and markings. So it seems these boys are weaned on basketball on the other side of the lake and never get out of that stage.

BUT HOW ABOUT THE BLUES?

But, shucks, we ain't got nothing to cover up—see. For, to get back to English, we have quite a bunch of sharpshooters sporting the Blue and White. In another of their Thursday night tune-up exhibition games yesterday, when everyone gets a chance to show his stuff, West End "Y" went down again to defeat. But this time the score rose to 67-36. Reminds one of the score when the Rhode Island State College of Veterinarians went down to a fighting defeat before the pigskin chasers of the Upper Mohawk and Little Sioux Creek Military Academy played in the Finger Bowl on Thanksgiving Day. But, anyway, all 12 aspirants were out on the floors working up a sweat. And the first string for tomorrow were really clicking. For, although everyone batted in a basket or two, the starting line-up were the most prolific. Murray Thompson netted nine, Gordie Wallace slapped in eight, centreman Gibson chocked up 12, guard Ken Tettmar loped six and Stu Scott made the scorer work overtime with an even dozen. But every one of the alternates, namely, Durocher, Goldstein, Meschino, Waldon, Patterson, Booth and Dewar, were going great guns and will be able to bring up any amount of reinforcements to combat any successful tactics of the guests. However, it augurs for a hot time in the big gym tomorrow night, so we'll be seeing you there.

Grapple Champs To be Selected

Five men advanced yesterday in their climb to supremacy in the junior wrestling at tomorrow night's assault-at-arms.

Melvanivi eliminated Heffernan for the right to meet Meds' Lamberti in the finals tomorrow in the 135-lb. class.

In the 145-lb. Bob Delany of Meds won over School's Turnbull, Cartwright of Trinity outpointed Jones, and Yandel of Meds decisioned Ray of S.P.S. Thus Delaney meets Mathews of P.H.E. today and Cartwright takes on Yandel. The winners of these meet tomorrow night for the championship of their class.

In the 155-lb. two fourth year Meds students, Johnny Wilford and Georgie Lewis, meet in the finals tomorrow.

In the 165-lb. Olson of School eliminated Hamilton of P.H.E. for the right to meet the winner of today's Horwitz-Arthurs match.

The 175-lb. class will see two School men, Urban and Newell, battling it out tomorrow.

The heavy-weight class will display two Meds students to the assemblage tomorrow. Giardine and Pipton are the finalists.

Mittmen Proceed To Campus Finals

Seven aspirants for University boxing titles were eliminated yesterday in the preliminaries for the junior assault-at-arms to be held at tomorrow's Athletic Night.

In the 125-lb. class Lowe of P.H.E. t.k.o'd Ginsler of School for the right to enter the finals in the class tomorrow night against U.C.'s Goodman.

The 135-lb. class saw lots of action as Cooper of S.P.S. put out a brother Engineer, Taylor. Purcell of U.C. meets Trinity's Baker this afternoon for the right to fight Cooper. The winner of this bout today will go into the finals tomorrow against the winner of the Dafoe-Kendrick match which also comes off today. Kendrick had eliminated School's Geary while Dafoe had put out School's Bell.

In the 145-lb. class Tamblyn of S.P.S. t.k.o'd Salter of Meds. Tbus Tamblyn will meet the winner of today's Harshaw-McGarity fight for the right to battle Dents' Lind in the final tomorrow.

Adams eliminted Hadwen of Trinity yesterday to meet the winner of today's Barclay-Mulholland match in the 155-lb. finals tomorrow.

This afternoon at 4:15, up at the Varsity Stadium, the P.H.E. girls will take their first hockey bow. Their worthy opponents come from O.T. and bave already played one game of good hockey against St. Hilda's — even though they were defeated on that occasion.

Before this interesting game is played, let's have a little preview of the players who are going to meet Bud Leake's O. T. team to try their mettle. Capably coached by Dudley Wilcox of S.P.S., the girls from P.H.E. have had enough practice to get into the swing of the world made up of flying sticks and elusive pucks created on ice that is often far too slippery and presided over by referees who blow a multitude of whistles.

Betty Allen will do the honours in goal. She is almost a veteran already and aptly deflects most any puck that comes her way. Her defence is one of the best on the campus and can be counted on to help her at critical moments in the game. Lois Doucen, although in her first year here, promises to be an outstanding defence player in the league. She watches her opponents well and skates cleverly and shoots fast. Jean Stinson, a soph, is her steady and determined cohort.

The forward threat to O.T.'s goalie, Wetmore, is a strong one. The line includes only two veterans—Peggy Wallace (III) and Connie O'Connor (II), who played as freshies. Virginia Kitto, Pat Austin, Monica Fulkerson, Joan Davis and Nora Sharpe scarcely need an introduction in our athletics and can be counted upon to give the puck a merry chase.

But in spite of this line-up, we haven't a doubt in the world that O.T. will retaliate in kind. We have seen their good teamwork before and know that in Jean Gilroy and Ruth Thompson, they have—to mention only a few—two smooth plays to lend zest and interest to this tilt which should be well worth seeing.

Small Margin Favour Formals At U.C. Parliament Debate; New Speaker Inducted

Bryant Kassirer Introduced as New Speaker of Mock Parliament by Prime Minister Herb Christie

VOTE 10 - B FOR FORMALS

A bill to abolish Formal dances for the duration of the war, was defeated by a vote of 10-8 at Friday's session of the University College Parliament, in the Junior Common Room.

Following the induction of the new Speaker, Bryant Kassirer, the Prime Minister Herb. Christie introduced the bill and explained that the measure was concerned with formals in general, not just on the campus, and also that it was purely a war-time measure.

Despite what has been said by certain students on the campus, he said, formal dances are not essentially a part of our culture. The Prime Minister decried the unnecessary expense and waste of human energy which goes into the preparation of formal dances. He was of the opinion that it was not right that we should go on having formal dances in this country when people in other countries are starving.

Dennis Wrong, Leader of the Opposition, said that if people already have formal clothes they might just as well use them and not leave them to moulder till the end of the war. If we are going to abolish formals we might as well abolish "dressing up" altogether. Due to the fact that people enjoy formal dances so much in peace time, they must have some intrinsic value.

In favour of the bill, Betsy Mosbaugh, Minister for the Investigation of Morals, pointed out that the majority of people realize that formals are not practical these days. People are apt to make more elaborate preparations for a formal party than for an informal one, where people can relax more comfortably from the rigours of the day. In these days of restricted travel accommodations it is more difficult to go to parties in formal clothes than it was formerly.

Milena Matsuka, speaking against the measure, said that we are under a severe strain during war-time, and morale must be kept up; therefore we must have some opportunity to enjoy entertainment. Although the government has restricted the making of evening dress, many people have formal clothes and might just as well wear them.

let's go places

For those who like English comedies and for those who do but won't admit it, "The Goose Steps Out," starring Will Hay, will be a treat. The plot concerns an English schoolmaster who is planted in a German University as a British agent. His English class scenes poke some good fun at both the German character and the English language. Not much of the latter is very new, but it is still funny. Punch-drunk dialogue including a plan to blow up the Forth Bridge by the Fifth Column thus putting all England at sixes and sevens and other such Charivaria add to the fun.

EGLINTON DOUBLE FEATURE

"Time to Kill," starring Lloyd Nolan, is one of the light hearted "Michael Shayne" homicide series which will be closer to the local heart. 'Sbaffling, but as usual the flippant Shayne manages to get involved with some pretty beautiful (blonde) scenery, which is, of course, even more baffling.

The March of Time, "Mr. and Mrs. America," and Donald Duck in "Donald's Garden" complete the bill.

Diets and Drugs Are R.C.I. Topic

Dr. G. D. W. Cameron, Chief of the Laboratory of Hygiene of the Dominion Department of Pensions and National Health, discussed the purpose, methods and benefits of Food and Drug Control in Canada in the Royal Canadian Institute lecture Saturday night in Convocation Hall.

Our present food and Drug Act was passed in 1920 with its object, the protection of the public against the adulteration and mislabelling of products. An amendment came in 1927, and since then regulations have been passed explaining or expanding the terms of the act. The enforcement of the act is the responsibility of the Laboratory of Hygiene, and for this purpose the Dominion Government has set up a system of laboratories and inspectors.

Dr. Cameron pointed out how the importance of nutritious food is being demonstrated at present by Canada's Nutrition Campaign, sponsored by the government for the purpose of educating the people about the necessity of proper diet. However, the public still knows very little about its food, and for this reason it is of vital importance that the Department of National Health take the necessary steps to prevent fraud on the part of producers by misbranding and deceptive advertising or by the adulteration of the food.

In the matter of drugs, it is the duty of the Laboratory of Hygiene to guarantee their accurary, safety and potency. Because of the international flavour of our drug market, the Food and Drug Act recognizes the international standards in existence. Dr. Cameron commended the work of the Health Committee of the League of Nations in the preparation and distribution of these international drug standards. With a few lantern slides he demonstrated the accuracy and concientious detail of modern scientific experiments which are being performed to insure the safety of the public in the use of drugs.

In conclusion, Dr. Cameron defined the Food and Drug Act which is administered by a strictly impersonal agency, as the instrument of government which protects the public from unscrupulous manufacturers. At the end of his talk he expressed his appreciation to the Royal Canadian Institute for affording him the opportunity of acquainting the people with some of the intensive and successful scientific investigation being carried on for their benefit by the Laboratory of Hygiene.

S.C.M. Meeting Discusses Philosophy Of Engineer

Adequate Philosophy of Science in Relation to Life Must Be Conceived, Says Rev. Arnold Nash, General Secretary

IN TRINITY CHAPEL

"Scientists are becoming increasingly aware of the social implications of their discoveries," the Rev. Arnold Nash, general secretary of the S.C.M., said in his sermon at the second in the present series of Sunday Evening Services held in Trinity College Chapel last night.

The scientist can no longer take refuge in the notion that he can live without a philosophy of life, Mr. Nash went on to say. Both Marxism and Nazism present an attempt to correlate science — "pure" and "applied" — with politics and economies. However, whilst these two totalitarian diagnoses of the malady of our technical society are true as diagnoses, yet they prescribe a remedy which is worse than the disease they set out to cure.

"Only in terms of the Christian idea of the creation of the world and man can an adequate philosophy of science in relation to life be conceived," he concluded.

Prof. R. F. Legget Speaks on Influence of Spiritual Feeling on Work of Engineer and His Attitude Toward Nature

FIRESIDE CHAT

"There is a real connection between the work of an engineer and what he believes," said Professor R. F. Legget of the Department of Civil Engineering at the Fireside following the S.C.M. Sunday Evening Service last night. "No man can do his best work unless he has a faith in something beyond the material."

Civil Engineering he defined as "the art of directing and controlling forces in nature for the use of and benefit of mankind." The engineer is not a scientist. He takes the results of scientists' findings, and works with nature. He must be empowered by a faith within in order to achieve results. He must learn to "co-operate with the inevitable."

The engineer looks beyond the apparent material and translates calculations on paper and materials on hand into a beautiful and useful bridge. He is seeking not merely to increase the physical comfort of mankind, but he remembers that the spiritual is linked with the material, even if the material must come first. The engineer's ideal function is to improve his fellow-man's existence so that he may be left free to devote himself to the spiritual. The practical means to achieve the Utopian conditions are provided by the engineer, but, continued Prof. Legget, the task of bringing it about must be left to the social scientist.

Blame for the fact that the works of the engineer are now used as implements of destruction cannot be laid entirely at his door. He designed them as instruments of good. His productions are being used as much to stop the war as they are being used to wage it.

These thoughts from the mind of an engineer, Prof. Legget stated, are not peculiar to engineers, but are common to all men. Engineers no longer look only to their craft, but they are beginning to take their place in an integrated community. Through their material productions engineers are indirectly contributing to the spiritual growth of that community.

Prof. Legget concluded by quoting Sir Josias Stamp's well-known phrase, that faith can remove mountains, but a push in the correct geological location will do it a lot more quickly.

Russia's Peace-Time Task Is Internal Reconstruction Says Sir Bernard Pares

Stalin Working for Internal Transformation of Russia; All Nationalities in Soviet Have Equal Rights

HIGHER EDUCATION FREE

Sir Bernard Pares, well-known authority on Russia, speaking in University College, Friday, stated that after the war, Stalin definitely will not be concerned with world revolution.

Sir Bernard explained that the struggle in Russia fought on that issue, was between Trotsky, who advocated continuous revolution, and Stalin, a genuine worker who had never been out of Russia and who cared little about anything outside of his own country. Stalin, victorious, put Trotsky out and smashed the remains of the revolutionary party. Consequently two-thirds of the present personnel of the Communist Party in Russia is different from that of five years ago, he said.

While the rest were busy with the idea of world revolution, be continued, Stalin, a member of one minor nationality, was looking after the various nationalities in Russia and drafting the new federal constitution by which that question was solved. He explained that all nationalities in Russia now have equal rights and from this fact concluded that Stalin is not likely to be blind to the claims of minor nations outside of Russia after the war.

Sir Bernard explained that outside of attempting to establish Socialism (not Communism) in one country, Stalin will be chiefly concerned with his pet creation—the internal transformation of Russia. In his program for the latter he has attempted to raise the level of well-being in Russia and to make his country defensible.

Education Free

All education in Russia is free with the exception of a small sum imposed on university students since the war, Sir Bernard stated, explaining that Stalin regards the brains of the citizens as one of the country's greatest possessions. While originally education was merely a matter of interpreting Communism to the students, Stalin wants more objective study. The speaker also added that no payment is made for medical attention in the Soviet Union.

The speaker traced the history of the church in Russia, pointing out that by the end of the Czar's regime, the office of patriarch, created by Peter the Great, had become a kind of extra police office. The Bolsheviks, while not stating that it was offence to believe, be continued, passed a law saying that no religion was to be taught to persons under 18, in groups of more than three or four. However, since the attempt in 1923 to bring violators to trial, which caused such an uproar throughout the rest of the world, the frontal attack has never been renewed and Stalin has gone so far as to instruct his biographer to indicate his desire that Sunday be observed.

Speaking of the Russian Press, Sir Bernard explained that anyone may point out the fact that the government is not carrying out its policy properly and it will be rectified—so long as it is the execution of the poliry and not the policy itself which is attacked.

SYMPHONY TICKETS

A limited number of student tickets for the symphony concert tomorrow night will be on sale in the Warden's office today for members of Hart House.

Dents, Trinity Hosts At Athletic Night Show

Number two in a series of evening functions known locally as University Athletic Night, took place Saturday in the Athletic Wing of Hart House, sponsored jointly by Trinity and Dents, with 1,284 people plunking down two bits before the ticket office closed at 9:30 under the new ruling.

After checking their coats, which is a must because there wouldn't be room for everybody and his coat too, the boys and their women had their choice of diversion in the nature of a preliminary basketball game between St. Mike's and Dents, or they could watch sturdy University swimmers dodge the ice floes in Hart House tank. They could act intelligent and also rest up by watching the movie Inside Fighting Russia or they could be the guests of charming St. Hilda's women who were only too willing to explain the University A.R.P. system and demonstrate the equipment.

But if they felt in a robust mood they could go into the upper gym and observe gallant gladiators do their best to annihilate each other according to the Marquis of Queensbury rules. And it was astounding to see the number of ordinarily gentle speaking women taking a keen vocal delight in the proceedings.

If they could find a seat or a place to stand, they could attend the feature of the evening, the Varsity-U. of R. basketball game—a highly instructive affair. Between halves, Trinity men, complete with crimson blazers and St. Hilda's gals, put on an exhibition of square dancing in the Big Gym.

FRATERNITY QUARANTINED FOR SCARLET FEVER

A resident of the Delta Kappa fraternity house, Dudley Avery, II Forestry, was removed to the Isolation Hospital late Friday with scarlet fever. The house and 10 students were immediately placed under quarantine by the authorities. If no further cases are reported by today, the 10 students will be released.

We Are Earning
The Right To Lead

With the war moving deep into its fourth cataclysmic year, and with the United Nations gaining an ascendancy on nearly all the major fighting fronts, many press and radio authorities are already beginning to turn their arm-chair erudition to the task of outlining the shape of the post-war world; and accompanying their present optimism over the apparent imminence of the overthrow of Nazism with a concomitant optimism concerned with measures of social security with which the victorious nations will implement their promise of establishment of the Four Freedoms.

The subject of the post-war world has been one which has intrigued The Varsity deeply all year, and we agree heartily that already it is none too soon to give plans for that era our serious consideration. We project a fairly exhaustive editorial on the subject within the week, but in the meantime, we turn to a remark contained in the Governor-General's recent Speech from the Throne: "The immediate object of the United Nations is the defeat of the Axis powers." There is nothing very startling about this truism—but it contains a fact that some of us perhaps are beginning, for the first time, to overlook.

In the past, we have stressed and stressed again the need for university students to busy themselves with training which will fit them for leadership in the world to follow the peace; and we have urged them not to lose sight of their lasting objective amidst the excitement and nerve-pressure which surrounds their preparation for it. But in all things there is a middle course which should be followed, and we do not want to give our readers the impression that we, too, have lost track of the immediate end.

But we do not believe our readers have. We are indebted, for the next several paragraphs, to an article which appeared some weeks ago in The Financial Post, which offers in capsule form a panoramic view of the material war-work of Canadian universities.

General

"Today's undergraduate is far more earnest, far more serious, than his older brother. . . . Three days a week . . . he turns up to lectures wearing the khaki of the army or the blue-grey of the air force. He studies harder than his predecessor, reads more, is acutely aware . . . that he is completing his education on borrowed time—time loaned him by the government that he may better fit himself to serve his country. . . . Across Canada the universities are geared to total war. . . . Professors and students are working overtime; laboratory lights burn late as research staffs wrestle with complex problems . . . . Medical departments have . . . telescoped courses to turn out urgently needed doctors in the shortest possible time. Engineering schools, with the greatest registration in history, have streamlined studies to speed training of technical personnel for the armed forces and the factories . . . university authorities feel that their institutions have a definite and vital role in the war effort, and they have an overwhelming mass of evidence to prove the value of their contribution.

"Principal R. C. Wallace of Queen's University writes, 'Young men and women are not less loyal to great causes than they were 25 years ago. We . . . know the heart-searching they have had and are having (in deciding to stay at college). . . . The technical demands which this war makes have had immediate repercussions on the universities, and have placed on institutions of learning the responsibility to train these young men and women to meet these demands. . . . Speaking in a general way young people liberally educated are needed to maintain poise and balance in the temper of our thinking; but in the individual case . . . the decision is usually made that a higher service can be done by joining one of the branches of the armed forces.'

"Wartime students get along without the regular schedule of intercollegiate contests in major sports. . . . Dr. W. Sherwood Fox, President of the University of Western Ontario writes: 'After the students have discharged all their duties in regard to their academic studies and their military training, there is not enough time and energy left for the playing of games and for the travelling involved.'

Specific

"There are a number of wartime activities common to all Canada's 21 accredited universities—military training for all physically-fit male students; training for women in Red Cross Work, first aid, typewriting, telegraphy and other subjects calculated to make them of value in the emergency; the raising of funds for war charities. . . Most of the universities are conducting courses for radio technicians of the Royal Canadian Air Force and for certain other classes of specialists in the services . . . every one has war projects of its own . . . after the war, when the story can be told, it will be a bright page in the history of our colleges. . . . Censorship has been lifted a bit on a couple of the contributions. . . . One is the decompression chamber, for which a good deal of credit goes to the late Sir Frederick Banting. . . . The University of Toronto and the University of Western Ontario did the pioneering with this Device. . . . The University of Alberta is now running schools of medicine, dentistry and education continuously throughout the year. . . . Similar in many respects is the program of the University of Saskatchewan. . . . The University of British Columbia . . . is making investigations in explosives, munitions, gases, war minerals and metals, electrical and shortwave detection devices, radio, agricultural products affected by the war. . . . Because it is located at Halifax . . . there's a good deal of secrecy about the war work at Dalhousie University, but the contributions it is making can be said to be important. . . . Acadia University . . . has several senior members of its staff engaged in research work. . . . Mount Allison University . . . is carrying out research on making explosives from natural wood products, as well as on bactericidal light in operating rooms. . . . The University of New Brunswick . . . has established a blood processing laboratory, where all the blood donated in New Brunswick for transfusion purposes is semi-processed before being forwarded to Toronto for the final stages of preparation. . . . McGill University is, in a sense, the seat of Canada's postwar planning, Dr. F. Cyril James, its Principal, being chairman of the Dominion Reconstruction Committee. The great institution's . . . researches in the fields of aviation medicine have been extensive, as have researches leading to improved wartime industrial processes. . . . Queen's University . . . has made notable contributions in studies of gas gangrene and of ultra short wave. . . . The University of Manitoba has accelerated its medical course to enable a student to graduate in four . . . years . . . took the lead for Canada in requiring girls to take compulsory war classes."

Perhaps very little of the foregoing condensed summary of a few highlights in the war effort of our universities will be absolutely new reading for many. But when one considers all the myriad methods in which we are serving the country in time of war, one cannot help but be impressed once more with the value of the universities in war as well as in peace.

And so, when we turn, as we intend, to a consideration of the part universities must play in the post-war years, both through their influence upon their graduates, and through their current work and service, we believe that it will not be idle talk. University men and women, through their efforts now, are earning a mighty voice in the debate of tomorrow.

Art, Music and Drama

Genius

Hart House Concert

It is a thrilling pleasure for a critic to have the opportunity of reviewing such a musician as Gerhard Kander, violinist. It is thrilling because of the feeling that one is in at the making of history and pleasurable because one is always happier in reviewing someone who plays really well.

Gerhard Kander, I confidently predict, is at the beginning of a career among the great musicians of the world. There is always the possibility that somehow he might disappoint the promise he shows now, but it is extremely unlikely, because he is far past the so-called budding stage.

Kander is a violinist whose technique is adequate for anything he tries. The The Paganini Concerto which he played is one long tour de force of obvious difficulty. If it had been the only thing on the program I might have objected to its lack of interpretative possibilities, but it justifies itself because it showed us just how great his technique was.

What showed Kerhard Kander to be a real musician was the interpretation of the Brahms' Sonata, Opus 100, with which he opened the program. After all, it is comparatively easy to acquire a good technique (though not one of

Nothing Matters Now

We learn with grave concern that steps are about to be taken in certain directions. Thus we assume that all is not well. Although this assumption is based upon the theory that some have and some don't, we may disregard the hypothesis and and proceed to a fuller clarification of the concept.

First, since steps are about to be taken, let us consider by whom the steps are being taken. That anyone in this University could have the moral turpitude to take steps at such a time gives us pause to think. If, as we fear, the steps are taken very far, then how will they be brought back? By The Evening Telegram? We laugh in polite derision.

What, also, are the implications of the move to take steps? If, as we are given to understand, that's what they are, then we fear the worst. But wait. What are the broader implications? They are? Oh well, that's all right then.

In any case—but you wouldn't understand anyway.

Mice Are Nice

In view of the recent statement to a Varsity reporter by Professor I. M. A. Hunk Acheeze, international authority on the aerodynamics of mousetraps, that "After careful research over the period of the war years we have reached the carefully thought out conclusion that mice are being pushed around. This matter has now reached the proportions of a grave international crisis, for after all, many students on the international campi have, after careful consideration, been categorically classified as mice." We cannot but congratulate this worthy and long-overdue stand.

As we have stated before in these columns, the status of the mouse is now a moot point. In peace time the mouse problem was holed up and dormant. The problem has now reached gigantic, if not epidemic proportions. We view with alarm the situation of the mouse in wartime. Those in such practical courses at this University of Roque Forte as Advanced Mechanical Cheese Eating need have no fears. Those of more rodentary habits can still hope to contribute important contributions to the national war effort, possibly as future leaders of the government.

Where normal educational facilities for mice have been disrupted by the war, we cannot too strongly urge all mice to plan for the future. Course 3c offered by the Faculty of Plans A-Gley is but one of the vital courses offered by this University.

Rochester Hoopsters Outplay Varsity Squad 64-38

Junior B. & W. Draws Crowd

Despite the Varsity-Rochester cage test which was going on at the same time, the Junior Interfaculty Boxing and Wrestling Championships last Saturday evening drew a large and enthusiastic crowd of spectators. The grunt and groan fans had quite a field day while the various faculties split up the titles fairly evenly.

In the wrestling, three titles went to S.P.S., two to Meds, and one to Dents. And in the boxing, three went to U.C., two to S.P.S. and one to Dents.

The wrestling competition was divided into seven classes. The lightest class, the 125-pounder division, was dominated by Mason, of fourth year Meds, who won the title by default. Melvani of S.P.S. took Lamberti of Meds in one fall to snatch the 135-pound class.

The 145-pound field had five entries, Delaney (Meds), Turnbull (S.P.S.), Matthews (P.H.E.), Cartwright (Trin) and Yandell (Meds). Cartwright and Yandell met in the final match and Yandell had little trouble in dispatching his opponent in two straight falls.

McDonough of Dents took a closer bout over Lewis of Meds in the 155-pound class in the prettiest encounter of the evening. Both men were in first class condition and so evenly matched that the bout took considerably longer than the others.

The 165-pound title went to Arthurs of S.P.S. who took two straight falls over Olson; and Urban of S.P.S. won the decision over Newell, also of S.P.S., in the 175-pound class.

The heavy weight bout between Giardine and Lipton, both of Meds, began what promised to be the feature attraction of the show but Lipton turned an ankle early in the fight and had to retire. The decision was awarded to Giardine.

The boxing competition had more crowd appeal as evidenced by the increased shouting. Each bout consisted of three rounds of two minutes each.

Jim Lowe, a stocky and powerful Chinese lad in P.H.E., took the 125-pound championship by a decision over Goodman of U.C.. Althought appearing about equal in ability in the first round, differences in the two fighters stood out during the last. Lowe relentlessly pounded at Goodman and broke down his guard in the last round.

The 145-pound affair went to Lind of Dents who had a slugging fest with Harshaw of S.P.S., the victim. Harshaw did some fine boxing but was unable to stand up to the slugging of the winner. Lind was declared the winner by a technical knockout when the ref stopped the fight in the third.

The 135-pound contenders put on the finest display of all the boxers. Verne Purcell, of U.C., was awarded the decision over Dafoe of S.P.C. Purcell boxed persistently while Dafoe tried to move in and end the bout with slugging. Dafoe, however, was seldom able to catch the pride of U.C. and swung many a hard blow which landed where Purcell wasn't. Dafoe tired in the third and Purcell went in to take advantage of the openings.

The 155-pound final decision was awarded to Adams of S.P.S. over Mulholland also of S.P.S. Adams, slightly taller and with a longer reach than his opponent, had just enough advantage to keep Mulholland far enough away to do little damage.

The 165-poud title went to Alec Dixon when Babb of Trinity defaulted and the heavy weight title went to Barlow of S.P.S. who was the only entry in that class.

Speaking Of Sport

By Bud Smith

BUT GOOD!

Despite the unfortunate fact that the Blues came out on the wrong end of the score, we consider Saturday's contest one of the best basketball exhibitions we have seen for some time. It was not up to the standard of last year's Wayne game, but it came close. The Varsity shooting seemed to be off quite a bit from last week and the whole play seemed to be somewhat slacker, but of course a losing team seldom looks as good as a winning one.

Rochester was not greatly hampered by Varsity's zone defence. Not that the zone defence didn't work. It fulfilled its function of keeping the attackers out of the key-hole area and into the corners, where, according to theory, it is very difficult to score. Unfortunately for the Blues, Rochester found out how to get rid of the ball when trapped in the corner. They simply threw it in the basket and roamed back to their places quite content. As time wore on this sharp practice became quite disconcerting as the final score would tend to indicate.

We were quite impressed with the exhibition put on by Jack Baynes, high-scoring guard of the visitors. Baynes has averaged 15 points in each of Rochester's previous 16 consecutive victories this year, and is one of the smoothest performers to decorate Hart House gym for some time. And scoring is only incidental with this boy. He takes care of a large share of the defensive duties, as well as starting most of Rochester's offensive thrusts. Dave Flowerday displayed some mighty fine shooting ability, especially in the matter of corner shots referred to previously, and his 16 point total was tops for the night. "Mitch" Williams was another standout performer for the Orange and Black. How he managed to get the jump as often as he did against Long Don Gibson was a wonder to us. In fact, all in all, young Mr. Williams was quite a versatile individual. Rochester did not resort to their subs very often, their first string playing practically the whole game. The reason for this was quite understandable on the few occasions when their alternates entered the contest. Cole was the best of the second string, quite an aggressive player who managed to snare six points in his short shift. The whole play of the Rochester team bespoke an amount of practice impossible for a Varsity team to duplicate under present conditions.

Considering the competition they were up against, we thought the Blue put up a very good showing. If their shooting had been up to last week's standard the result would have been much closer. The lack of play together as a unit was also noticeable. As individuals the Blues showed a lot of drive which, however, was nonplused by the co-ordination of the Rochester squad. Murray Thomson played the best game of his Varsity career, in our opinion, keeping in the fight all the time. Don Gibson found his scoring eye occasionally, delighting the audience with some pretty shots. And Ken Tettmar turned in his usual dependable game at guard, taking time off to get a couple of handy baskets along with a number of "near-misses." The excellent free throwing of both sides was noticeable—out of 13 free shots awarded, 10 were sunk.

After Rochester, next week's Wayne game should seem almost a breather to the Blues, seeing that Wayne has lost the majority of their games this season. If the Blues regain their shooting eye, and get a little mor co-ordination, they should be in a position to make the contest quite interesting for the "LONG GREEN."

S.P.S. MEETS NO OPPOSITION IN FIGHT FOR SWIM TROPHY

School copped the Fitzgerald Trophy on Saturday night, making this the third straight year that they have won this award, which is emblematic of Interfaculty Swimming competition at the University.

School amassed the staggering total of 48 points to nose out U.C., the second placers, by a gentle 37 points. The complete standing was School 48, U.C. 11, Vic 9, Dents 3.

Meds, who had entered a team, failed to put in an appearance and so the meet, all in all, was poorly contested. Lack of interest at the outset of the meet proved discouraging for the swimmers. Spectators were drawn to the more spectacular display of hoopery going on in the hardwood flats adjacent to the pool and consequently a poor crowd showed up for the aquatic activities. However, as the evening drew along, the crowd gathered and when Sansom was on hand to do his photographic best in the 440, a full house cheered him on. Jim Martin, another Schoolman, followed closely on Fred's heels in this event and showed remarkable style somewhat like Stu Robinson's. Roger "Porky" Beames, veteran tank man from U.C., took on the job of following these two along and finished in third slot.

Bill Moffat, for years head man in the 50 free, took second place this year to which, considering a poor start, wasn't who seems to be in pretty fair shape this year, came home in 26 seconds flat, which, considering a poor start(wasn't too bad.

The 100-yard backstroke provided a fine race when young MacDonald of School tagged along behind ace John Northwood and finished but a second behind him for second place. Frank Balmer of U.C. took third in this race and followed it up two events later with a first in the 200-yard breast stroke. Dave Whittingham, young U.C.C. grad, took second, followed by Charlie Rimmer of School.

The diving was closely contested and was won by Lorne Sommerville of School who beat out Chapman of Dents by four points. Chapman was Dents' only entry and since it was their Athletic Night brought home the bacon to the tune of three points, their total for the meet.

Brother Crang of Vic swam a lovely race to take the 100-yards in 62.2 seconds. Following him were a little known swimmer from School and John Northwood. The two relays were both Schools all the way and added more points to their staggering total.

The meet was a success from the Engineers' standpoint and adds more laurels to their already crowded forehead, swimming laurels fairly won.

50 free — Graham, S.P.S.; Moffat, S.P.S.; Crang, Vic.

FIRST DEFEAT OF THIS SEASON SUSTAINED BY HOME TEAM

By Roger Conant

For their first loss of the season, Warren Stevens' Varsity Blues bowed to a superior Rochester University sextet at last Saturday's Athletic Night by a 38-64 score.

A weaving stone-wall zone defence kept the Varsity high-scorers at bay and relatively few opportunities were allowed Don Gibson and Ket Tettmar, the usually prolific Varsity point-getters. But finesse around the baskets, along with some spectacular shooting by Johnny Baynes—the high-point man of their team this season—sent the visitors far out into the lead from the initial tip-off.

For Rochester, the win was their 31st out of a possible of 33 in the last two years. They have lost only two games in recent years—one to Wyoming State "Cowboys," and the other to the University of Buffalo. They had an unbroken string of something like 26 wins till they met Wyoming a couple of weeks ago. For the Blues it was the first loss of the season. The homesters had come out on top by a wide margin in the numerours exhibition games and the set-to with the Manning Depot Airmen last Saturday.

Flowerday of Rochester drew first blood not 10 seconds after the opening whistle when he sank a beautiful shot from the corner. Then in quick succession Beall, Baynes and Baroody found their marks to put the visitors out in front. After three minutes the Blues pulled themselves together and Murray Thomson counted first points for Varsity. Then Flowerday did some fancy passing and feinting and bulged the twine. Getting partially back into form, the Stevensmen got five points in a row as Gordon Wallace sank a corner shot, Murray Thomson sank a free throw and Don Gibson outjumped Beall. With the score at 9-7 the visitors came back as Johnny Baynes sent a spectacular one from centre floor right through the twine without even touching the ring. Flowerday and Williams added to the score. Centreman Gibson sank a long one and Thomson added another for Varsity but to reciproeate Williams, Flowerday and Baroody collected points in short order.

Centerman Don Gibson sparked the Blues and scored 12 points for himself against Rochester U. last Saturday night.

At the 15-minute mark, with the score 26-15, the Blues' second line of Meschino, Dewar, Goldstein and Durocher held the play for several minutes far nary a point tally. Baynes finally sank another long loop from centre floor. Ken Tettmar came on and bagged a set-shot from the corner. To the half, Bill Dewar and Ken Tettmar added to the score but the visitors were always a jump ahead and the half ended 37-21.

For the first five minutes of the second, play bogged down to raggedness and no score was made as the teams missed several chances. Flowerday finally clicked but Don Gibson evened it up with a nice jump shot. Williams came back and Tettmar followed for the Blues. Gibson scored on an off-balance shot that left him sprawled in the corner of the court. Play swung back and forth, Beall, Thomson, Flowerday, Baynes, Goldstein, Baynes scored in succession. With nine minutes to go Flowerday added to his scoring total but Gord Wallace looped a beautiful long one from the side. Then Rochester trotted one of the prettiest plays of the evening which had the Blues completely baffled as Williams took the ball right under the basket to score. The score was then 32-52 and from then in Rochester lengthened the lead slightly but big Bill Dewar and long Don Gibson got a couple and Gene Durocher sank the last one barely a second before the whistle which ended the game 65-38.

Rochester — Beall (6), Chapman, Byrnes (3), Wilson (2), Flowerday (16), Cole (6), Williams (12), Thomas, Baroody (5), Urbon (2), Baynes (13), Cowing.

Varsity — Thomson (6), Durocher (2), Waldon, Wallace (5), Meschino, Gibson (12), Scott, Goldstein (4), Tettmar (5), Dewar (4).

Movies are being used more and more for educational purposes with remarkably fine results, so we are told. In fact, they can be a "howling success" even if the results are not those calculated.

Not long ago, two meetings at which movies from Ottawa were to be shown, were scheduled for the same night. In Owen Sound, a crowd gathered to hear A. Y. Jackson give a lecture on his work. The lights dimmed and Mr. Jackson began. Instead of the expected scenes of Quebec and the Canadian northland, there came before their eyes, huge turbines rolling, accompanied by the fast chatter of someone talking in a foreign language which was later discovered to be French. This was followed by a French version of "Canada Carries On," and a description of the Fighting French Movement, ..all in French, of course!

Meanwhile in Hamilton, those students interested in French films as well as those Frosh who were conscripted into the audience were gathered in Convocation Hall to hear the first in a series of French films. The lights were dimmed and eager Frosh sat with pencils poised ready to take down notes at a maximum speed. But to the great disgust of the Seniors and Professors, and to the huge delight of the Frosh, there were flashed on the screen, pictures by A. Y. Jackson, English versions of the war effort, and last, but not least, a Mickey Mouse cartoon!

The next six films, Ottawa promised, WOULD BE FRENCH!

But, back to our own campus and the C.O.T.C.—A professor in the history department (be's a captain now), who is one of the Coy. commanders, was heard pleading with the boys to shine their buttons. "Why don't you carry a small tin of brasso around with you?" he suggested. "Then you could polish them when you have some spare time, in your lectures if you like—BUT NOT IN MINE," he added hastily.

Now is that fair, Capt.!!!

The other day, two lads in the Air Training Wing were helping each other on with their greatcoats, and were having trouble with their top buttons. One tugging feverishly with his mate's recalcitrant button, kept ordering him frantically to "INHALE!" Now this sort of thing must stop as one co-ed watching the struggle realized, when she suggested they be issued with BUTTONHOOKS.

The nicest trick we've heard of in a long time was one played on the boys training for the air force when snowed in recently. They donned gas masks for sojourn in the gas chamber, and all were expected to remove their masks for one minute. However, before the event took place, those who didn't want to remove their masks were asked to indicate same and on leaving the gas chamber were each handed a shovel to do three hours constructive labour in the snow drifts!

DIMES seem to be coming into their own once again this year, with both U.C. and the President of the U.S.A. running dime campaigns. Not wanting to overwork the idea, however, U.C. this year substituted the words "Drive of Dimes" for the much-used "March of Dimes."

Mechanized, eh?

PEOPLE ARE ALWAYS SO HELPFUL DEPT.—We were about to leave the Chinese Library in the Museum one morning, when we noticed a mechanical-type fellow playing with the typewriter. S o as our ty prewrite r insists on le aving s paces in the most unex pected p laces, we asked the girl (who works there) if the mechanical-type fellow were a Remington Service Man, to which she quickly replied, "You will find one in the basement if you go down by the Totem Poles."

One of the Philosophy Profs. in remarking on the way lectures are attended, likens the University to a cafeteria where you drop in for the occasional lecture. "Of course, not many of them are like desserts, not many like savouries either . . . but then cold mutton is good for you!" And if Profs have their way about it, most of us will be plenty healthy. (It's Nutrition Month, too!)

We understand that Bob Chester graduated with highest honours in his class in COMMERCE AND FINANCE from the University of Dayton, and his wife does his bookkeeping.

And with all the big dances coming up, we pass on as a friendly tip to the co-eds, this rhyme from The Shcaf:

Any girl can be gay
In a classy coupe;
In a taxi, they all
Can be jolly;
But the girl that's worthwhile
Is the girl who can smile
When you take her home in a trolley.

this kind), but the development of an interpretation such as was produced in the Brahms' required a musicianship of real penetration and deep sincerity. That the violinist had this ability in himself must be granted, but surely a great deal of the credit must go to his teacher Kathleen Parlow. Probably, too, it was she who taught him the mastery of his pianissimo tone.

When a violinist such as Kander finds such an accompanist as Hans Neumark, he is indeed fortunate. Such unity of musicianship is rare and is attained, to my knowledge, only by some half dozen teams on this continent.

All in all, the Kander recital at Hart House must remain one of the pleasantest of my memories of the university.

In their first game of the season, on Friday afternoon, P.H.E. displayed some wonderful hockey technique and came through with a 7-1 victory over O.T. Varsity Arena simply hummed with action and the two 15-minute periods went along very quickly and smoothly. Right up to the end it was a shut-out for P.H.E.'s novice goalie—Betty Allen—and then—in a last-minute rush, O.T. flew around her net and put in a lovely shot. This shows just what a fighting team these gals are—and just how hard P.H.E. fought back to make the score mount in each period.

Speaking of St. Mike's, at 4:15 today they are playing the second game of their schedule with Vic on the well-known Vic rink (if it isn't submerged in snow). Vic have one game to their credit already, but anything is likely to happen. So come along if you're interested and share in this happy sport.

Meanwhile, let's not forget about Vic volleyball practice today at Lillian Massey at 4:30—or about the various swimming practices we listed in a last week's column. Our Intramural meet is fast approaching.

the world's pulse

W. J. Bromah, Secretary,
League of Nations Society
(Toronto Branch)

When the Chinese Military Mission was recently recalled to China on orders from Chiang Kai-shek, well-informed observers, always fearful and hypercritical, assumed that the political unity of the United Nations had received a severe blow. On the surface, it appears that in the General's opinion China is not receiving sufficient Allied support, his dissatisfaction determining the belief that the intention of the Allies to concentrate first on Germany and merely hold off Japan is not justified.

The Chinese feel that such a policy will give Japan an opportunity to entrench herself in the conquered territories and make extensive use of the raw materials on hand, thus prolonging her eventual defeat and increasing China's difficulties. Chungking's fears moreover, seem to be shared by Premier Curtin of Australia.

Chiang Kai-shek argues that China's war with Japan, now in its sixth year, must be concluded with all possible speed, and that this cannot be effective-port from the United Nations. He points out that internal difficulties may arise in China at any moment, directed by his old enemies. Aside from these elements, however, the Chinese are disappointed to hear that their Military Mission in Washington was hardly ever consulted by the groups that control Allied strategy, despite China's extensive importance in Pacific operations.

Undoubtedly, the Chinese are further perturbed because they are not receiving quantities of war materials from the United States, although aware of the transportation difficulties since the loss of Burma. Cargo planes operating from India provide the only direct means of transport communication. Accordingly, the Chinese maintain that the United States should take immediate steps to attack Burma more vigorously. Needless to say, Britain and the United States cannot afford to lose Chinese goodwill and must in some way dispel the idea now prevalent in Chungking that the Allies are fighting this war merely to preserve Anglo-Saxon imperialism.

As a consequence London and Washington are making diplomatic efforts to patch up the momentary understanding. The immediate result is the announcement that the Western powers are willing to relinquish their special extra-territorial rights in China, thus counteracting claims that the Atlantic Charter does not provide for China. It is recognized at any rate that further steps will be taken to see that the Chinese receive every consideration to which they are rightfully entitled.

Varsity eds and ca-eds will see and hear lovely Betty Bradley at the U.C. Arts Ball at the Royal York Hotel Thursday night. She's rated as one of the top vocalists in the country. The dance will be informal.

To Couple Couples For Arts Ball Through Revival of U.C. Date Bureau

The U.C. Lit and W.U.A. have set up a date bureau in connection with the forthcoming Arts Ball next Thursday night. A similar date bureau was established two years ago for the Arts Ball and according to committee members its success was attested by the ensuing happy marriage of Betty Nash and George Meen, both U.C. graduates.

Lists have been posted in the various Houses of Whitney Hall, Knox College, the U.C. Men's Residence and the Men's Fraternities. And for those not living on the campus, there is a ballot box in the U.C. Rotunda into which students of both sexes may drop their names. All names must be in by Wednesday noon, and must be accompanied by the applicant's height and age, to guide in the choosing of partners.

Each person going to the dance via the date bureau will pay $1.50, one half the cost of the ticket. Students requiring further information may phone either Marion Redfern (Hy 9798) or John Wood (Mi 0737).

Plans are also underway for choosing a Queen of the Arts Ball. The lucky contestant will be presented with her prize by last year Queen, Marion Norwich.

COMMUNITY NEEDS

No meeting will be held in the women war course on Community Needs and Resources today.

On Tuesday, Feb. 9, at 4 p.m., lectures will be resumed in the Economics Building.

40 PER CENT OF ENRDLMENT AT QUEEN'S, BLOOD DONORS

Kingston, Feb. 1—(CUP)—Over 40 per cent of the students at Queen's University have enrolled for voluntary blood donations. Medicine topped all the faculties with 77 per cent while Science followed a close second with 44 per cent.

A new system has been inaugurated whereby each year goes to the clinic in a group. A survey of the attendance of the various years shows that first year Meds ranks first with 100 per cent.

Innovations Introduced In 2nd Battalion Course

This year, members of the 2nd Battalion C.O.T.C. are receiving a broader training syllabus than did the same group of last year.

For the past two months, the khaki-clad Varsity rookies have been receiving instruction in the construction, use and care of the most modern weapons of war. Training in four additional pieces of infantry equipment have been put on the course. The Sten gun, by all reports, is one of the most efficient light sub-machine guns invented. Another sub-machine gun, the Reising, falls in the same class as the Sten. Anti-tank rifles and three-inch mortars have also been included in the course.

The study of these, plus the service rifle, the pistol, the Bren gun and the Lewis gun, constitute a well-rounded small arms training for the C.O.T.C. Major G. R. Lane, Chief Instructor of the 2nd Battalion, stated that the men's training has been broadened this year and results are very satisfactory.

This increase in the number of pieces available for C.O.T.C. training is the result of an equipment pool organized the University Ave. Armouries. Several units train here and rather than have each unit train with its own equipment, the time-table for use of the Armouries has been arranged in such a way that no two units train during the same period. Since most units train during the evening, the C.O.T.C. is able to make valuable use of the rifles, mortars and machine guns.

Major Lane, member of the famed "Mad Fourth" Battalion of World War I, said the additional training derived from this system will be of great help to the men when they go to Camp Niagara. They will know the weapons before they go to camp, he added, and won't have to become familiar with them on arriving.

Discussing training in general, Major Lane said it was inspiring to see the men develop as the year goes by. "The boys know they have a certain reputation to keep up and to see the raw, clumsy recruits improve with training to become smart soldiers is inspiring to me."

Speaker Explains Soviet Education

"The 'perpetual' student no longer exists in Russia today," said Miss Alice Carscallen in a lecture before the Sociology Club last Tuesday night. "The University students of the Soviet are aided financially to go through their courses if their ability merits it, and no one is forced to drop out because of poor financial conditions."

From the nursery schools, through the high schools, to the universities and beyond into trade unions and the Red Army, education plays a tremendous part in the life of every Soviet citizen, Miss Carscallen said.

Before the war, education was compulsory for everyone under 16 years. Children between the age of eight and 14 join such organizations as the Pioneer Club and, in war time, the "Teamerites," who assist in air raid precautions and guerrilla activities.

"The greatness of the Soviet educational system is shown when contrasted with the system before the revolution," Miss Carscallen said. "Before 1918 a huge majority of the people were illiterate. Today 85 per cent of the Red Army soldiers are high school graduates. There have ben more schools built in 20 years under the Soviet government than in 200 under the Czarist regime.

At the meeting the Sociologists raised $12.80 for the Aid to Russia Fund

Vic French Club Gives Musicale

The Victoria College French Club will present an all-musical program in its February meeting at Wymilwood tomorrow evening. "This is the first all-musical evening we have had," explained Jim Weld, president of the club, "and we have been very fortunate in the exceptional artists that are taking part. We expect the musicale to be a great success, and we would like to invite all music lovers to attend."

The program will be mostly French music, but some English and Italian pieces will be included.

Among the artists, Harold Brown, IV Victoria, will play two Debussy selections, "Reflets dans l'Eau" and "Minstrals." Other attractions include the Cesar Franck Quartet in D. Major, featuring Sam Margolian, first violin, Eric Koch, second violin, Paul Serson, viola and Paul Whitton, 'cello.

As vocal artist, Miss Dorothy Gass, who was to sing the female lead in the cancelled Victoria College "Pinafore," is to do a group of Italian and French songs. To round out the program it is hoped that the meeting will join in some French and Swiss folk songs.

100 ARP Co-eds To Take Gas Test

Approximately 100 co-eds taking the Air Raid Precaution Course will go through the gas chamber on the Exposition grounds next Thursday afternoon.

The girls will don respirators and enter the gas chamber which will be filled with tear gas, and they will go through various exercises designed to show the efficiency of the respirators. After this they will remove them for a period of 60 seconds in order to experience the efficiency of the gas.

PSYCHOLOGISTS STILL PUZZLED BY PEOPLE

Dr. William Emmet Blatz, M.B., who will speak before the Arts and Letters Club tonight on "Psychology of Everyday Life," confesses people still puzzle him.

Interviewed in his cozy, book-lined office at St. George's School of Child Study where he is director, the 48-year-old psychologist said, "It puzzles me why acquaintances think a psychologist can analyze character with a casual glance. My only answer would be to stay away from such acquaintances . . . as far as possible."

Considered one of Canada's foremost child psychologists, Dr. Blatz became interested in studying the mind during the last war when as staff sergeant he was attached to the army's military hospital in Hart House. Mental disorders among soldiers there aroused his curiosity, and since then he has continued to answer the question mark of the brain.

In 1917 he graduated from the University of Toronto with an M.A. degree and went on the the University of Chicago where he won a Ph.D. degree in the early '20's. He has been consultant psychologist for Toronto's Juvenile Court since 1926 and at the birth of the Dionne Quintuplets in 1935 he was requested by the quint's doctor, Allan Roy Dafoe, to act as consultant.

An inveterate chain-smoker, Dr. Blatz has written book after book just as he lights one cigarette on the stub of the last. His most recent psychology book was "Hostages to Peace," published in 1940. It was given favourable reviews, he said, and was selected as an alternative choice on the Book of the Month Club lists.

Commenting on his book, "What Do Children Think of the Movies?" Dr. Blatz said, "In war time as any time, children are more critical of their movie fare than parents. A child knows he prefers cowboy films and blood-and-thunder movies and demands them, but parents, so far as I can observe, will take whatever is served them on the programme."

While it is commonly thought that psychology texts are written after years of research and study, Dr. Blatz recalls that the big, illustrated "Collected Studies on the Dionne Quintuplets," was written by himself and a group of colleagues, bound and published within six weeks in 1936.

"We often stayed up until two or three in the morning," said Dr. Blatz. "But we finally got it out."

Other books he has written include: "Parents and the Pre-School Child," "Management of Young Children," and "Toys and the Play Life."

Dr. Blatz pointed out that he finds it beneficial to work at the Juvenile Court and at the School For Child Study. He said by studying the normal he could interpret the abnormal and thus he used both his consulting and directional jobs to full advantage.

But even a psychologist needs to rest his mind. For recreation, Dr. Blatz enjoys golf, bridge, music and cooking, in the last of which he considers himself a connoisseur.

Special Convocation Will Confer Degree On Hon. Lord Hailey

After Receiving Degree, Lord Hailey Will Give Address on Some Phase of the British Imperial Policy

MONDAY AT 8:30

Rt. Hon. Lord Hailey, British authority on Dominion and Colonial Affairs, will be honoured by the University of Toronto Feb. 8, when Chancellor Sir William Mulock will confer the degree of Doctor of Laws honoris causa upon him at a special convocation, President H. J. Cody announced yesterday.

Immediately upon receipt of the honourary degree, Lord Hailey will address the convocation on some phase of British imperial policy. The ceremony is scheduled for 8:30 p.m. in Convocation Hall, Dr. Cody announced.

His Lordship is at present on a speaking tour of several of the Universities on this continent, where his addresses are designed to clarify student ideas on matters of current imperial policy.

His talks, particularly those recently delivered at Princeton University, are for the purpose of correcting certain falacious popular beliefs concerning British policy, notably in relation to the Indian situation.

He recently addressed the Empire Club in Toronto.

George Lambert Gives Address To Newman Group

George Lambert of the Toronto Conservatory of Music spoke to the members of the Art and Music Group of Newman Club last night on "Singing as a Healthy Form of Education."

"The main object of music is to assist in a specific way what education does in a general way to fit persons for good citizenship," stated Mr. Lambert.

"The three basic divisions of a human being are directly developed by music," he said. "The body, through the control of the breathing muscles which regulate the intake of oxygen; the mind, through the necessary background in literature and art which give a greater opportunity for rounded knowledge; the character, through the essential vision of greatness."

Mr. Lambert urged the need for attention to technique and quoted R. L. Stevensons to this effect: "In your own art, bow your head over technique. If seen in terms of technical process your language will be apt and precise."

After Mr. Lambert's address Jacqueline Doiron sang a group of French Troubadour Songs and Olga Smalleck sang two selections by Mozart accompanied by Margeurite Legris.

Co-eds Make Bandages For First Aid Course

"The students of Occupational Therapy are hitherto unsung heroines of the campus war effort," Miss A. E. M. Parkes, Commandant of the University Detachment of the Canadian Red Cross Corps, told The Varsity yesterday.

This tribute was occasioned when the second year sewing class in O.T. volunteered to cut and fold 250 yards of factory cotton into triangular bandages for students taking the C.R.C.C.'s First Aid course.

The class spent one whole afternoon making the 300 bandages and then finished the job by carrying them to C.R.C.C. headquarters.

WOMEN DOCTORS ADMITTED TO LONDON HOSPITAL

Women medical students will now be admitted to all big London hospitals owing to the heavy call for doctors in the services. For the past 20 years London has been the only city in Britain where such a ban has existed.

In the past only four of Londons many hospitals have trained women medical students. But in the provinces more than one-fifth of co-ed medical and dental students are graduates of hospitals of other cities than London.

A limited number of women doctors of British nationality has been recruited in Britain to serve with the Indian medical service in India for the duration.

Science Students Regulations 1942 Declaration Forms

A supply of the Declaration Forms has now been received from the Department of Labour with instructions that they are to be filled out in triplicate by each male student concerned, and one copy is to be retained by the student for his own use.

Male students of all years in the Faculty of Arts who are enrolled in the Honour Courses in groups C and D (Mathematics and Physics, etc. and the Sciences) are required to fill in these forms without delay at the Registrar's Office, Simcoe Hall.

Male students of all years in the Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering will fill out these forms under arrangements to be made by the Secretary of the Faculty. Full information regarding these arrangements will appear shortly on the Faculty bulletin boards.

We Are All Planning
For The Future

Yesterday we gave editorial consideration to the mighty part that the Universities of Canada are playing in the nation's mounting war effort, and drew from a hasty and by no means exhaustive survey of some of the highlights of their specialized war work, the deduction that in the post-war years the universities would have earned for themselves an important voice in deciding the future policies of that nation in regard to reconstructing a world which we hope will this time be—is it too much to hope?—free for many years of the ghastly scourge of total war.

But before considering the part that the universities—and their present and former and future students—will play in that reconstructed world, we should pause here for a glance at what some of the other forces will be seeking to make of it.

And even before making that consideration, we must not, as we suggested yesterday, make the mistake of considering the winning of the present war a foregone conclusion. Although United Nations' armies are marching in every theatre of the war, and driving back and decimating Axis hordes in many quarters, the way will be long and bloody yet. Nor can we afford to overlook the recent warning of Prime Minister Churchill of the possibility that "the cyclone may rise higher in the Pacific" even after the European war is won. Nor the threat of increased U-Boat attack upon our shipping—most fearful weapon in the Nazi armory—implicit in the appointment of Admiral Karl Doenitz to replace Admiral Erik Raeder as chief of the Nazi Navy. There is much blood, sweat, toil and tears for us all yet, before we can breathe the air of peace.

Farsighted and Wishful

But already our post-war experts are talking large talk of the Four Freedoms, and of the Beveridge Report, and of the "charter of social security" which the Canadian Parliament will soon legislate for us. The world will be a better place—the people in it will be granted the opportunity to be better people. There will be sweetness and light on all sides.

We hope that these experts are right; and we do not stock our meagre experience of the world against that of some of the more authoritative of them when we glance gloomily at the world-wreck which resulted after the last war to end wars.

But we cannot subscribe altogether blithely to the belief that Canada will become a very much better country in which to live after this war without a struggle on the part of all of us which will equal in individual effort, if not in bloodshed, the struggle we are now waging.

To be a trifle more specific: the Beveridge Plan, on which, we assume, much of our reconstruction legislation will be based, was designed for use in a country ruled by a central government; and because of the legal entanglements which web about the interpretation of our British North America Act, it will be much more difficult to put into practice here, where one Federal and nine Provincial Parliaments vie for prerogative. Nor will all power-groups support such "socially-conscious" legislation. The employer class may balk, because it will feel itself being mulcted for the benefit of its employees—and we must remember that the latter class will not be so individually indispensable after the war as it is now—while the farmers may well feel that they are paying money to support the shiftless urbanites and the workers themselves may question the administration of the scheme under certain local conditions. In addition, there is bound to be opposition from the instinctively reactionary class, which views any change as one for the worse, if adequate precedent for it is not available.

Over-Simplification

It is gross over-simplification to believe, also, that legislation such as projected in the recent Speech from the Thone will be anything like ample to cure the ills of the nation in the post-war future, or even in the immediate ensuing months. As many of our metropolitan contemporaries have been saying recently, there must be adequate provision made shortly for unification of the agricultural industry; and for the settlement of disputes between organized labour and solidly-founded capital.

This may be an unduly pessimistic view of the present state of affairs and the outlook for the post-war future; we are not convinced that it is unduly so. But the reader should note that herein we have based most of our pessimism on the fact that individuals and groups are—small wonder in such a world as this—predominantly selfish, and short-sighted.

Which thought brings us to the end of the second part of our editorial trilogy on the part that universities must play in the world which we hope to build upon the smoking ashes of this one. If inspiration remains at our shoulder, we hope very shortly to complete the project with a few doctrinaire theories all our immature own.

Correspondence

The Editor,
The Varsity.

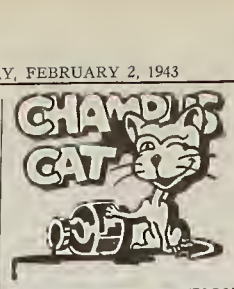
Dear Sir:

It is the opinion of many people both in Arts and in other faculties that the acceleration of certain arts courses would be of the utmost benefit to our war effort. All arts courses at Queen's University and certain arts courses at McGill University have been accelerated. Does Toronto University soon want to stand alone in being the only leading college in North America that refuses to alter its arts schedule on account of the war?

The excuses voiced by some arts students regarding the inadvisability of acceleration are decidedly "weak-kneed." Some say they would suffer from brain fag. Others contend they need a good four months vacation. The smug and complacent attitude of many Arts heads and professors is reflected when they state that the war will be over before arts acceleration could be of any benefit to the war effort. It would seem, too, that alterations in the arts timetable might interfere with the summer vacation plans of certain professors.

In last Friday's editorial you stated that students in arts faculties do not amass the entirety of their education through formal study and classes. Neither do we in Medicine and Dentistry gain all our education in formal study, but we feel in war-time that all essential courses might well use the major part of the long summer holiday in continued work and study. Too many of us at university fail to realize that war must be met with emergency measures in all lines of endeavour, including university education. Your assertion, in regard to arts courses, that "haste makes waste" would seem to be rather inapplicable. Would not a student who has studied 11 months each year instead of the usual eight, be better aware of his country's needs, and be better fitted to serve in his country's armed forces or essential industry than one who is "on the old peace-time schedule"? It is wise to remember that there are many people who consider university students as draft-dodgers, shirkers, and "shrinking violets." If the present attitude of the arts faculties continues, then the condemning remarks of outsiders will be not unjustified.

The present situation calls to mind the old adage, "It is never to late to mend." Essential Arts Courses that should have been speeded up a couple of years ago can still be accelerated to the benefit of both the student and his country.



Sincerely,
G. L. McBroom,
V Meds.
Jan. 30, 1943.

Surely Mr. McBroom is indulging in mild overstatement when he terms the University of Toronto the "only leading college in North America" which is not accelerating its arts courses.

Leaving aside for the moment, however, this bit of inaccuracy, let us consider the question of whether arts students in actual practice could afford to study 11 months of the year. Many men in the Faculty of Medicine found themselves unable to do so without the government aid which was provided them last year.

We feel, grateful as arts students must be for the interest a Medical student has shown in their studies, that they will prefer to accept the views of the heads of the four Arts Colleges rather than those of our correspondent in judging the practicability of the acceleration scheme on this campus. Nor do we believe Principal Wallace, Principal Brown, Provost Cosgrave, Father McLaughlin and the various members of their academic staffs are primarily interested in their vacation periods.

CAMPUS PUBLICATION BANNED

Government Takes Action Against Great Hall Newspaper Under Defence of Canada Regulations

HEPBURN PROTESTS

Ottawa, Feb. 1—(CUP)—Banning of The Eaters' Digest, a three-edition publication of the Great Hall of Hart House, was announced by the Department of Justice today. The ban followed suspension of the paper Saturday.

Reason given for the ban by Justice Department officials was an editorial published in several issues of the paper which they claimed subverted the government Food Controller by urging diners to leave unused butter on their plates.

"This is carrying the salvage campaign too far," declared Hon. Francois Mississippi, Minister of Justice.

Printed in bright Knox purple on Rinso-white serviettes, the paper's circulation was limited to Great Hall diners.

"Our paper was literally on every lip," moaned Butt R. Horder, editor of The Eaters' Digest. "And we'd just signed a brand new advertising contract with Fomo-Belcher."

Miss Calor E. Juggler, dietitian of Hart House and business manager of The Digest, explained that proceeds from the sale of the paper (30 cents per issue with a free meal included) were being turned over to the Canadian Aid to Russia Fund. Explaining reports that a part of the profit was intended for a noon-hour floor show in the hall, she said the whole was a publicity campaign for the fund. "Russia is wonderful," she said, counting the take from the Friday noon edition.

The government also claimed that butter left on Hart House plates was being pilfered by a St. George Street fraternity and served there as margarine.

The paper will be remembered as a chartered member of B.U.R.P. (Bicarbonated Universal Restaurant Press).

Campus comments on the paper, as revealed in a feature by Doc Ravage, Varsity staff writer, were varied. "I'm the actual originator," claimed Mal de Mer, III Moderns. "I've been taking my notes for years on paper towels." Dr. Earl E. Bird, veterinarian head of the University Health Service, disclosed that one student, absorbed in the paper, partook of a Hart House bun, mistaking it for food. His condition late Sunday was reported as critical.

School Paces Trophy Race

Due to the great number of baseball, basketball, hockey and water polo teams entered in interfaculty competition, School of Science jumped into the lead in the T. A. Reed Trophy race. Entering 30 baseball, 30 basketball, six hockey and three water polo teams—and what's more, winning with a lot of them—S.P.S. surged past Trinity by a good 600 points. Meds also advanced on Trinity through their large entry in the baseball and eageball fields. Here is complete points standings as released yesterday:

Hockey game postponed—too much snow—no ice. Ah, shades of last year about this time! Then, alas, all the games were played in the wide open spaces and anything was liable to happen to even the most carefully planned of schedules. This leaves St. Mike's and Vic to play off at their convenience—and, of course, when the ice is unoccupied. Since there is no game scheduled for today, practices—at the times designated for the various colleges—are in order.

Since there is a temporary lull in games—and all good things must stop now and then to gather momentum—we should like to remind you all about speed swimming practice this afternoon at 4:30 down at Margaret Eaton's famed pool. Yes, indeed, it's really a splendid way to while away an afternoon or chase away those pre- or post-examination blues—not to mention the skill you will sooner or later acquire in this beloved aquatic sport.

There will, in addition, definitely be a lot of plunging and splashing engaged in by the girls in white—our nurses—this evening from 7:30 on up at dear old O.C.E. These preliminary meets are a lot of fun for all those who indulge in swimming of any sort and are a sure-fire way of picking the right people for the team that will enter the Intramural meet. So you can all see that the more people who turn up, the happier everybody will be—and the stiffer the final competition will be. Take it way, Nurses, and good swimming.

INDOOR TRACK SCHEDULE

Feb. 8, 9,—one mile senior, 220 yard dash, one mile novice.
Feb. 15, 16—high jump, shot put, 440 yards.
Feb. 22, 23—two miles, 880 yard relay (six men).
Mar. 1, 2,—one mile relay (four men).
Mar. 8, 9—50 yard low hurdles, standing broad jump.

Speaking Of Sport

By Gordon Mack

JUST FENCE SITTING . . .

If you should be wandering unsuspectingly through Hart House corridors some evening and hear such cries as "A hit!" or "I abstain!" don't jump to conclusions! It is not an indoor baseball game between rival chapters of the W.C.T.U. It is a heated fencing tournament in progress.

With the stimulus of an influx of recruits from the P.T. classes, the fencing club has enjoyed an active season. All of last year's Varsity team that met, and defeated, Buffalo State, are still with the club and acting as volunteer instructors. These include, besides Varsity fencers Ralph Thiers, Doug Leslie, Paul Laughton and Bill Horsey, Jim Tapsell and Dick Jeanes, both of Vic.

The floor of the fencing room has a 33-foot rectangle painted on it which is called a "piste" or a "mat"—it's called a mat because it is bare floor with no mat covering. All fencers are required to wear protective white vests that resemble a dress shirt front in that they have no back, a spacious wire mask and regulation white drill trousers. Once properly equipped, the novices receive instruction in one of the three types of weapons.

The foil is a 36-inch piece of thin, lithesome steel, admirably adapted to deft manoeuverings and nice tidy assassinations. The target for the foil is the area between the opponent's groin and the top of his collar. The sabre is not much heavier than the foil but has two cutting edges besides the point. The target for the sabre is everywhere except the opponent's legs. The last and heaviest weapon is the épée (aypay as they say in Middle School French) which has three points—les points-d'arrêt—and a bloodthirsty individual armed with one of these civilized warclubs is permitted to chop away at any portion of his adversary's anatomy.

There are half a dozen different parries (a guard made against an attack) which are followed by a riposte (an attack made after a parry) which is turned aside by a . . ., and this goes on at a bewildering rate with each thrust and counter-thrust carrying a multisyllable French name. After the novices had accumulated the fine points of these attacks, a novice tournament was held.

At a fencing tournament, there are six men officiating for each duel. Four judges in each corner and a referee form a "jury" which decides whether a "hit" has been registered or not. If one judge should see a hit, and another judge "abstain" (didn't see it) or else doesn't believe there was a hit, the referee makes the final decision. The duel starts with the adversaries about 10 feet apart on the "mat." Before donning their helmets they salute one another with their foils and then they are given the command "en garde." With the misnomer command "play," the serious duelling begins. It continues so long as neither man is forced out of bounds (off the mat) or until a hit has been registered and play halted by the referee.

Perennial instructor in fencing is Mr. "Charlie" Walters. An able fencer who has won the Dominion championship in all three classes numerous times, and provincial championships still more often, he is excellently suited to the position. In fencing, unlike other sports accuracy, rather than age and speed, is the important element, and Mr. Walters feels he is a better fencer today than when he was younger. Any young fellows who want to get or keep in condition and have any ulterior motive such as a dextrous method of stabbing a rival in the back, are invited in to any one of the nightly classes.

We've waited four long months for this movie to hit town and now that we've seen it we're not disappointed. About all that need be said of the story is that it is based on the life of Larruping Lou Gehrig, the "Iron Man" of the famed New York Yankees. Gary Cooper plays the lead and is, in his bashful way, perfect. His embarrassing moments are your embarrassing moments and when he laughs you laugh. The picture has its touching scenes but they are human, not artificial. Whether you are a baseball fan or not, you shouldn't miss "Pride of the Yanks."

IMPERIAL "PRIDE OF YANKEES"

In the cartoon feature Disney clicks again with his Donald Duck version of "Right in der Fuehrer's Face." The final fade-out is most enjoyable.—J.P.

Surrounding the mysterious crash of a huge pilotless bomber in England lies one of the best war pictures produced to date, One of Our Aircraft Is Missing, now featured at the Midtown. The story is one of the attempts of the crew of this plane to worm their way out of Holland via an underground Dutch nationalist group. The quaint costumes and the courage of the country run hand in hand as dominant impressions of a country ground by Hitler's heel.

MIDTOWN DOUBLE BILL

The hope, determination and the sensible risk and danger are all brought out by the exciting chase and escape. One powerful conclusion reached by the drama is that the Nazi overlords would like more than anything the good faith of the conquered peoples. Perhaps this is remembered only too well from Steinbeck's The Moon Is Down. The same frustration reached in Norway is evident in Holland. Joan of Paris was another film of this type, but in the newer film the love theme is less apparent, and consequently the intellectual impact is more terrific.

Youth on Parade, which is the other attraction, needs no explanation beyond what the title implies.

SPORTS NOTICE

JUNIOR VIC BASEBALL

Important game against Junior School today at 6:30. Everybody out. Any new players welcome.

Burgess Cops 100 Yd. Dash

University and Trinity Colleges have surged into the lead in this week's track meet as the U.C. two-mile relay team and Trinity's Cam Burgess in the 100-yard, swept to victories in their respective events. Standings may be changed by entries today but the majority of the teams participated in yesterday's meet.

Twenty-nine starters faced the gun for the 100-yard dash. Despite some competition by some newcomers in the persons of King and Gillett, the old standbys and odds-on favourites came through to nab top honours. Cam Burgess did the job in 11.4 seconds, while School's Chuck MacDonald was the only close man, with 11.53. Wally Brown of School nabbed third spot with the time of 11.83. Then Frank Fordyce, also from S.P.S., gathered in fourth, hardly a tenth of a second behind. Tied for fifth spot, Tom King of St. Mikes and J. A. Gillett of Wycliffe, burned the plank with 12 seconds even.

The four-man two-mile relay proved to be somewhat of a thriller as School and U.C. fought it out over almost the whole two miles. Frank Fordyce, for School, and Rog Conant, of U.C., began the torrid contest with the latter getting the jump at the first bend. Stride for stride they sizzled the planks for the first four laps, then Fordyce drew up and eased past the wearer of the Red and White. In the last half lap School pulled ahead by a few yards. Then Jackes took over and gained considerably on Bill Sims of U.C. But then the tables turned and U.C.'s third man, Chuck Baxter, gained almost everything back over Adams. Receiving their batons scarcely five yards apart, Phil Shackleton almost caught Chuck MacDonald in the first lap and from there in it was neck and neck all the way. Shackleton would draw abreast of MacDonald only to be shaken off. At every turn the U.C. flash would come off the turn in a sprint but it was only in the last lap that MacDonald tired and Shackleton got away from him. The whole half mile was practically a dead sprint and it was one of the prettiest but most gruelling seen around the oval in many a day.

Wycliffe caught third place with St. Mike's and Vic following.

There will be more events today at five and the Meds quartet of Lewis, Fielding, Wilford and Delaney may chalk up a fast time but whether they can out-run U.C.'s 9.35.8 has the boys in the back room guessing.

Results of yesterday are:

1—U.C.: Conant, Sims, Baxter, Shackleton—9.35.8.
2—S.P.S.: Fordyce, Jackes, Adams, MacDonald—9.41.1.
3—Wycliffe: Gillett, Jeffries, Parke-Taylor, Barnett—9.49.3.
4—St. Mike's: Maskey, King, Cannan, Giofranschini—10.31.4.
5—Vic: Brown, Delgrande, Morrison, Herlick—11 min.

Fencing Finals To be Held Wed.

Preliminaries of the Senior Epee or duelling sword tournament will be held in the fencing room in Hart House at 5:00 p.m. Wednesday afternoon, to determine the three fencers who will meet last year's winners—R. Thiers, III Vic, J. Tapsell, IV Vic, and D. Leslie, III U.C.—for the finals.

The finals will be held on Friday at the same time. The meet is an intramural one, giving points in the T. A. Reed trophy. Winners of the three weapons will meet any competitors that should come, as in the case of the Buffalo meet, which was called off.

The Epee, or duelling sword, is the nearest thing to an actual weapon used in duelling. It is like an enlarged foil with a larger bell guard, longer and broader blade and three sharp points rather than a single button at the tip. The target consist of the entire body and there are practically no rules. As a result, contestants must be well padded and have a thorough knowledge of their weapon.

Nursing Offers New Health Course

One of the new courses inaugurated by the U. of T. School of Nursing this year is the Public Health Nursing Course which is one of the two choices girls proceeding to the degree of B.Sc.N. can make for the work of their fourth and final year.

Miss Florence Emory, Associate Director of the School of Nursing, spoke of it as one of the most "significant" of the courses offered by the school due to the new interest in this type of work which has developed as a result of the war.

In former years students wishing to obtain their B.A. along with the Nursing Diploma were required to spend six years of studying and the new four year course leading to a B.Sc.N. is a new development of this year. Provision has been made for graduates of previous years to get their degree through further study.

Housing Estate Shown in Film

A film of "Kensal House," a modern housing estate built in 1936 for workers in Ladbroke Grove, London, England, was shown at the Architectural Club meeting in S.P.S. yesterday afternoon. The scheme was designed by E. Maxwell Fry in conjunction with Robert Atkinson, C. H. James, G. G. Wornun and Elizabeth Denby.

In Kensal House estate, the workers are provided with flats at very low cost, which are built in two blocks running north and south, so that the bedrooms get the morning sun, and the living-rooms, the afternoon sun. Each flat has a balcony at the front and a smaller one at the back for hanging out clothes. With each flat is also an allotment of ground for cultivation.

In connection with the two blocks of flats are a nursery school and playground for the children, as well as an indoor club for the older children.

There is also a club for the grown-ups, where they can gather in the evenings to work at various crafts, take part in games, or eat together in the canteen.

The estate is run by the co-operation of those living in the flats. Several of these tenants spoke during the film, and expressed their appreciation of their living conditions which modern housing had made possible.

Rev. Cook Speaks On Christianity

"The Place of Religion in Life" was discussed by Rev. R. C. Cook, B.A., B.D., in a lecture to the Varsity Christian Fellowship yesterday. "This is the age of the psychiatrist," he said. "Conflicts of thought, belief and emotion are so rife that men and women know no peace."

Religion is the vital force which empowers a man to live abundantly and to make proper use of the tools which are placed in his hands by the progress of science, said Mr. Cook. The world's greatest tragedies have been brought about by leaders who had no sense of right and wrong. The sorrows of Poland, the blind striking out against the Jews, the era of "the little Corsican in the cocked hat"—all these were generated by a lack of moral consciousness.

"Morality must rest on religious faith," Mr. Cook told his audience. "A man can have no social vision without religion."

No human religion, he said, can give man a tender conscience and a keen sense of right. "Christianity has to its disgrace the horror of the Inquisition, the Massacre of Bartholomew. Christianity does not give a man a sense of peace. It is Christ," Mr. Cook said, "who imbues men with a conscience. The divine and never the human can give morality to men."

"It is up to the young people to make or break the world," he concluded. "There has never been a social reformer who did not look to religion for his sense of social justice. It is dangerous to snicker at the role of religion because it can be the only force which teaches men how to do the job."

Avukah Film of Palestine Depicts Jewish Soldiers

Jewish soldiers of Palestine, fighting side by side with the Allied armies, were depicted in the film, "Palestine at War," shown at the Avukah meeting last Thursday night. This and the accompanying film also described the cooperative communes conducted by the Jewish pioneers in Palestine.

Mr. H. Warschauwer spoke on the varied aspects of Palestinian life.

Houselights down; footlights up. Scene depicting the corner of Queen and Boy. Enter right, Rex in weedy tweeds that sog and bog; straw hat complete with trolley; molocco cone and no gorters. Enter left, Doc in pork pie hat with 8-inch brim, bow tie in six delicious colours; finger tip coat, cone-length cigarette holder, pointed yaller shoes with no soles.

Music — Darktown Strutter's Ball tastefully rendered by two violins, tinkling piano and hot oboe.

Rex: Howdy, Doc; see you're out of hock.

Doc: Greetings Rex—How's the old hex?

Rex: Oh, I don't go around with her anymore. . . .

(They brcak into a two-step routine all over the stage.)

Rex: Do you know the Editor of Tronnanesis, Doc?

Doc: Yeah, he's the Editor of Acta Vic.

Rex: Right, he's the Editor of Acta Vic.

Doc: That's what I said.

Rex: Organization photos for Torontonensis are due Jan. 31.

Doc: That's right.

Rex: But the Acta staff aren't getting their pictures taken until tomorrow. So the Editor of Acta and the Editor of Torontonensis aren't talking to him.

(They brcak into an ironic rendition of "I Love Me.")

Doc: You've heard of Annesley, haven't you?

Rex: Oh, what I've heard of Annesley!

Doc: Did you hear about the Schoolman who had a blind date there?

Rex: No, tell me about the Schoolman who had a blind date there.

Doc: Well, he's ushered into the reception room, you know, and settles down for the wait. A gal comes wandering in and he pops up . . . and she wanders over to some other glom what's also waiting. They sit down and talk in low whispers. Then another chiek meanders in and makes with the same routine. This goes on for a while until finally his date does show up. So he grabs he and says—"Let's get out of here, this joint's worse than a undertakers'." . . .

(They break into a two-step routine chonting:
"Ashes to oshes ond dust to dust,
If the Camels don't get you Fotimas must.")

Rex: Did you hear the one about last Saturday night?

Doc: Come clean about last Saturday night.

Rex: Right. Well, it seems there were three couples in a crowded eatery. All they can get is a booth for four, so they crowd in. After a while the girl on the outside end of one bench teeters a bit, and looks at the boy on the outside of the bench opposite and remarks. "How do you keep your balance, are you holding on to the table leg?" "No," he replies calmly, "it's your leg."

Doc: Have you ever been embarrassed, Rex?

Rex: No. (His suspenders snap, pants drop revealing full length red wollies.)

Doc: I knew a professor once . . .

Rex: That reminds me, I seem to remember registering in some courses once.

Doc: Well this professor was a meanie, see. Vicious brute with a nasty habit of calling the roll before each and every class. Course no one was ever there, and he would get very annoyed and say mean things. So there is one twerp who never shows up, see, not for days and days and then successive weeks. So this prof gets*very* annoyed and asks if maybe Mr. Xxx has some friends in the class who could remind the lad gently of the upcoming senate meeting in February. He leers meaningly at the class and adds that unless the character mends his ways shortly he is very apt to find himself in the army.

So then one of Mr. Xxx's friends arises. "He is in the army."

(They break into a snoppy Off-to-Buffalo, chanting the refrain, "We Are the Sunshine Boys," exiting amid a shower of over-ripe fruit. The orchestra plays their theme — "Strictly from Hunger.")

Auspicious

Organ Recital

I have said before, and I say again, that when Healey Willan starts playing Bach, the planets are in some fortunate conjunction because the result is always uniformly felicitous. Dr. Willan is a master of the organ at any time, but when he is playing Bach, he stops being its master and becomes its genius.

Perhaps that sounds extravagant, but anyone of the handful of people who thought it worthwhile to attend his recital yesterday will agree with me. His playing of the Prelude and Fugue in E Flat was inspired playing, as surely as ever I have heard it.

It is not difficult to discover why Willan and Bach get along so well together. First of all, in his own compositions, Dr. Willan has been called the modern Bach. This affinity of temperaments has made it possible for him to reach the interpretation he has of Bach.

Dr. Willan plays Bach without any striving after effect. He is content to let the music speak for itself. To this end, he uses only the basic registers of the organ most of the time, and makes his instrument carry the effect of the kind of ideal organ that Bach probably imagined.

Most of the program was familiar to addicts of Dr. Willan's recitals. The three chorale preludes were played perfectly, with a particularly brilliant performance of Come Holy Ghost, Lord God. The Prelude and Fugue in B Minor is exceptionally powerful, even for Bach, and it was given precisely the interpretation it needed.

Now for one criticism, which is completely personal. I don't like program notes which try to interpret dogmatically a certain section of music, such as "The fugue with its solemn rolling subject clearly has some deep meaning. It seems to suggest a meditation on the remorselessness of destiny and the helplessness of man in the face of it." Those are the words of Sir Hubert Parry.

My objection rests on the position that music, unless the composer has clearly stated his intention, does not represent feelings which can be expressed in words. Language, even poetry, says one thing; poetry says another. The two express the emotions of the human intellect, but music, unless the composer has given explicit directions (and even then I am doubtful), does not express feelings which can be translated into words by a commentator hundreds of years later.

But, no one needed to read the program notes to enjoy some of the finest music I have ever heard on the campus.

NEIL MACDONALD.

With One Exception

Conservatory Quartet

The Conservatory String Quartet gave the first of its new series of concerts Saturday evening. After a rather flat beginning, the quartet awakened to give a fine performance.

The work which raises this criticism is the first movement of the Beethoven Quartet in E Minor, the opening composition. It was taken too fast to allow the players to get the dramatic meaning out of the notes; but the chief difficulty was that they did not even try. The pianissimo opening came out a solid mezzo-forte, and the syncopated fortissimo chords of the cado were not much louder. Dynamics are important in this movement—it is full of passages such as fortissimo turning immediately into pianissimo—and their negelct, along with the increased speed, made this dramatic and powerful movement sound almost trivial. The rest of the quartet, however, was well played — the last movement especially was brilliantly done.

The Bloch Poysages were interesting little examples of tone-painting. The first two, North and Alpestre,—filmy, intangible combinations of harmonics and sul ponticello — showed off Mr. Fingelski's real viola tone to advantage, while the last, Tangatabo, was an orgy of African rhythms. The ensemble entered well into the spirit of these amusing novelties.

To close the program, Sir Ernest MacMillan joined the quartet in the Cecar Franck Piano Quintet. Here the musicians gave an inspiring performance, if one is inspired by this sort of symphonic music transferred to a piano and four struggling strings. But that is a different matter, and no fault could be found with the interpretation.

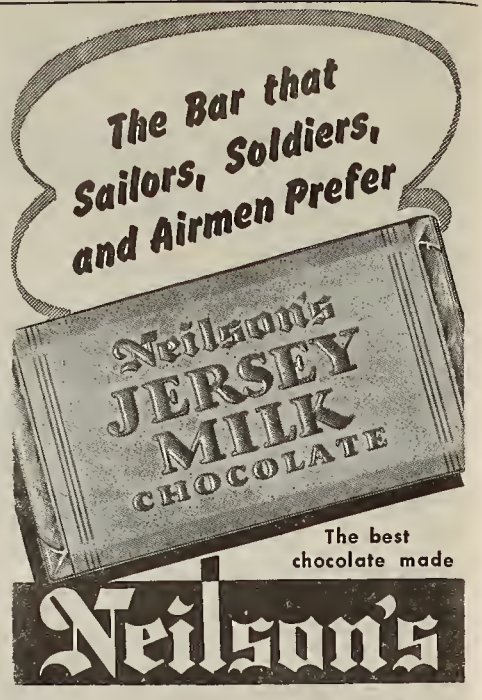
Man. Failures Listed; Students Leave Western

Winnipeg, Feb. 1—(CUP)—The official list of the 89 male students of the University of Manitoba who were refused permission to continue their studies because of failure in the mid-session examinations has been received by the officials of the Manitoba Divisional Board, Mobilization Section, National Selective Service.

The announcement was made last Thursday. Those liable to call will be included in the first immediate call-up, the registrar announced.

London, Feb. 1—(CUP)—Of the 55 students who have been dropped from the University of Western Ontario and affiliated schools, 20 are Western men and two were Western women.

It was also announced that 23 of the students were Americans, mainly at Assumption College. These men have been expelled, and those not eligible for war service will probably be put to work in war industries.



When the war is over the cases of these students will be reconsidered if they apply for re-admission to the University.

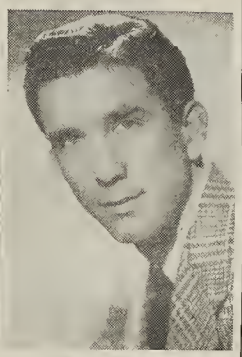
Army, Airforce Men Will Hear Bob Chester Perform In Hart House

250 Uniformed Men Will Hear a Half-hour Program in the Hart House Theatre at Noon Tomorrow

BRAOLEY, HOWARO, TO SING



Men of the Army Course and the Radio-locater Course of the R.C.A.F. at the University will be treated to two "jam sessions" tomorrow noon by the visiting American orchestra of Bob Chester. Hart House Theatre will be opened for the special double show for the two campus units.

At 12 noon in the theatre the 250 boys in blue training at the University will flock to hear a full half-hour of the finest "swing and sweet" from Bob Chester and his 15 music-makers. Betty Bradley, lovely songstress of the band, will sing for the boys, as will male vocalist Gene Howard. At 12:30, the Army Course—almost 200 strong—will take over to hear the special second show.

"I'm very happy to play for Canadian boys in their country's uniform," said Bob Chester in a phone call to the Arts Ball committee last night. "Although we can't do as full a show for the boys at noon as we can at the Arts Ball Thursday night, Betty, the boys and I will put our hearts into the two sessions, and we're really looking forward to our Toronto visit. Maybe the theatre could hold some undergrads, too, huh?"

The Bob Chester orchestra, featuring the 19-year-old brunette, Betty Bradley, and handsome Gene Howard will play at the annual University College Arts Ball tomorrow night in the Convention Hall of the Royal York Hotel. Although informal, the committee will be selling pretty warsages to aid the all-campus drive for the Aid to Russia campaign.

He Sings Too

The male vocalizing of the popular ballads of the day will be capably handled by Gene Howard, featured with Bob Chesteres orchestra, at the U. C. Arts Ball tomorrow night.

India will be the topic of an address by Rev. J. E. Mallis at today's lunch-hour meeting of the Varsity Christian Fellowship in Jackson Hall, Victoria College. Mr. Mallis is the son of a missionary and was born in India. As a child he spoke the native languages before learning English.

He was educated in New Zealand and Australian primary schools and at Kinsway College, Manchester, England. His career since then has been a varied one. He has been a tea planter, a missionary, and is now a conference Bible teacher.

When conditions permit he expects to return to India where, he says, his friends and interests are.

Award M.C. To Graduate

Posthumous award of the Military Cross to Lieut. D. S. Holmested, graduate of the University of Toronto, was announced last night. The award was for courage and devotion in the Middle East.

The citation said that in the area of El Alamein, from where Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery launched the victorious 8th Army drive to Tripoli, Holmested directed the recovery of a tank which had been immobilized by a mine. Holmested carried out the job despite a German infantry attack.

"Holmested got out of his vehicle and walked about directing operations and assisting in adjusting tow ropes," the citation said. "While this was going on an enemy tank attack and fire from all arms and both sides became even more intense. This officer continued his work of recovery with no apparent regard to danger. His action was largely instrumental in recovering this Sherman tank which was again in action against the enemy 12 hours later."

Student Rep Is Not Accepted

Winnipeg, Feb. 2—(CUP)—The University of Manitoba Student Union Council has turned down—on the Executive Committee's recommendation—the suggestion that there be a student representative on the Board of Governors of the University.

The suggestion came as a result of some student agitation expressed through the columns of The Manitoban.

Reasons advanced in opposing the recommendation were as follows:

1. That President Smith, who now acts as student representative, can better present a case than could a student.

2. The presence of a member of the student body at a meeting of the Board would make it difficult for frank discussion of such items as the dismissal of members of the staff, with the result that much discussion would be forced off the floor to behind the scenes.

3. The University of Manitoba Act in setting forth the powers of the Board of Governors definitely states the right of any group to send personal representatives to a Board meeting to protest or appeal any decision with which they do not agree.

Council adopted the Executive report with very little discussion on this particular question, though Ken Williamson and Morgan Wright of Arts did address some queries to the chair.

MacKenzie King Gives Support To Continuance Of Arts Courses In Wartime Canadian Universities

Prime Minister Expresses for Government the "Recognition of the Importance to Our Future as a Nation, and to the Cause for Which We Are Fighting, of the Maintenance of the Liberal Tradition of Education in the Humanities"

ENDORSED GOVERNMENT POLICY

Ottawa, Feb. 2—(CUP)—The importance of continuing arts courses in universities during wartime was pointed out by Prime Minister Mackenzie King in a recent letter to the Canadian Social Science Research Council.

In reply to a memorandum submitted by the Council concerning the government's policy as regards Arts students, the Prime Minister expressed on behalf of the government "recognition of the importance to our future as a nation, and to the cause for which we are fighting, of the maintenance of the liberal tradition of education in the humanities."

The council's memorandum endorsed the present government policy regarding arts courses and requested that regulations be not enforced too rigorously in order to permit a small number of graduate students to study for Master's degree in special research in fields related to the social sciences.

The Prime Minister replied: "I wish to acknowledge your letter of Dec. 30, transmitting, on behalf of the Canadian Social Science Research Council, a memorandum on government regulations concerning Arts courses in the Universities.

"I should like, through you, to thank the Social Science Research Council for its expression of appreciation of the policy followed by the government during the present war in facilitating the continuation of academic work in the Canadian universities. I wish, at the same time, to express, on behalf of the government, our recognition of the importance to our future as a nation, and to the cause for which we are fighting, of the maintenance of the liberal tradition of education in the humanities.

"In the provision already made by the government for assistance of men demobilized from the armed forces to continue their education, the importance of a liberal education is fully recognized.

"I am making a copy of your memorandum available to the Minister of Labour in order that the officers charged with the administration of the National Selective Service regulations may have the benefit of its representations. Yours sincerely, W. L. Mackenzie King."

The council's memorandum pointed

Groundhogs Give Professors Ideas On Polka Dots

By Marigold Booples

Did the ground-hog see his shadow? This question of vital interest to all faculties was thoroughly discussed yesterday at the professorial poolrooms.

A member of the English Department at Victoria propounded the myth current among undergraduates of the lower type—namely, that on Feb. 2, a certain member of the animal kingdom comes out with the express purpose of seeing his shadow and if successful, ducks back for a six-week hangover. On the other hand, if the poor guy is lacking in such an appendage, Spring is said to be just around the corner.

A friend of ours said he saw her yesterday.

Some of the more advanced pedagogues discovered a subtle link between the ground-hog's shadow and sunlight. This led to a highly technical dispute between two members of the Classics Department. One expressed his opinion that it was bound to be a long winter or a wet spring. His rubbers were worn out. The other professor reminded him of his newly acquired umbrella and seemed to think there was some connection between pink polka dots and sunlight. Both phoned the Meteorological Bureau.

Did the ground-hog see his shadow? The metcorologists were in considerable embarrassment. They felt simply torn in two.

A member of the Zoology Department doesn't think ground-hogs have shadows.

Student-Staff Reconvenes

The Student-Staff Conference will reconvene tonight at 8 p.m. in the Big Hall of the Economics Building.

It is believed that the agenda will include the appointment of a continuation committee and discussion of any other new business arising out of the session.

The question of giving publicity to the report which was passed by the conference last December and submitted to President H. J. Cody for consideration will also be discussed.

The report, resulting from a 10-day session last term, dealt with the functions of the university in wartime and included recommendations from committees dealing with various phases of the university's war effort and subcommittees of members of different courses.

President Cody will address the conference for the first time since his return from the Universities Conference held at Ottawa last month. The President last spoke to the conference at its opening session in December.

S.C.M. BOOK EXCHANGE

PEOPLE STILL PUZZLED BY PSYCHOLOGISTS

Dr. W. E. Blatz's talk to the Arts and Letters Club last night on "Psychology in Everyday Life," embraced the ever-present subjects of religion, morals, sex, and marriage. As an introduction he traced briefly the history of psycrology, saying that for centuries people had been trying to enunciate a simple doctrine to explain man's behaviour. There had developed Hedonism, for example, the idea that life is a continual search for pleasure. And a much later school of thought was the Freudian, which puts all human motivation down to libido.

But now instead of studying psychneuro behaviour, the principle of normalism is being used, Dr. Blatz continued. And that is why child study and child psychology has so largely come into the limelight of late. A small child is interested in neither hedonism nor libido but in security, another major problem. Shortly after birth, his parents become symbols of security to him; and this dependance on some sort of security agents must continue through life. These agents are usually either friends or religion, or both. All the religions of the world are founded on a faith which an individual develops to solve for himself the inevitable problem of why we exist. "And I do believe that religion should become a more vital part of education," stated Dr. Blatz.

"Morals are man-made," affirmed the speaker in dealing with the next of his subjects. "They are a technique by which people can live together more or less comfortably. They have become laws with a set of consequences in order to make people accept them. Their purpose of keeping humans in harmony with each other obviously hasn't succeeded so far." And he then went on to comment that economists were on the wrong boat; the accumulation of materials is the way not to security, but to insecurity.

"The development of brains in Canada is rather tragic," said Dr. Blatz. "If we would turn to salvage of brains as well as scrap metal, we'd be really doing something."

In speaking of the problem of sex in everyday life, the emminent psychologist remarked that it is by no means more important than the other natural appetites but has been vastly neglected. If one were never educated to the existence and use of the knife and fork as a means of eating when hungry till well on in the teens, what a pathetic situation that would be! Yet even the barest of sex education doesn't begin till the age of 16 in the average Canadian family.

Marriage, according to Dr. Blatz, is the companionship of two individuals based on four mutual qualities — the willingness to discuss your success without flattery, your failures without discouragement, your dreams without ridicule, your despondencies without desertion.

Following this talk there was a discussion on various ideas of Dr. Blatz's. There were many opposing opinions expressed in the large gathering of over 200. The arguments becames particularly heated over the question of discipline in education.

The speaker for next week, Gordon Miller announced, is Dr. Roscoe Graham, known among the medical students as the "great white father." His topic is to be "Post-War Reconstruction."

In Which We Ennunciate

The Fifth Freedom

Monday we filled these columns with a summary of the war-work Canadian Universities are doing, which will, we believe, justify these institutions having an important voice in the forming of the nation's future. Yesterday we dilated on some of the more pessimistic aspects of what well may result in that future, if major groups in the country continue to place their interests — which would seem altogether likely — ahead of the community's welfare. Today we offer our suggestions concerning the part that the Universities may play to alleviate much of the suffering and squalour which has existed and continues to exist within the civilized world.

Before launching into these suggestions, we respectfully draw the attention of the reader to the four lines of type appearing daily below the miniature flag which surmounts the masthead. These opinions are certainly not those of the Students' Council; the Editor is entirely to blame for them.

Four Freedoms

Following the Atlantic Conference between Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt in 1941, the President outlined to the world the now-famous "Four Freedoms"—of expression, of religion, from want and from fear—and gave the United Nations something slightly more tangible in the nature of a war aim than they had had previously, apart from sheer self-preservation.

Each of these "Freedoms" is well forth fighting and dying for; this editorial has not the presumption to question their merit. Nor do we quarrel with the fact that they are phrased in non-specific language—for the late summer of 1941, before the United States entered the war, before the immensity of Russian resistance to the Nazi onslaught was fully evident, and before lease-lend production of vital material had swung the balance of reserve power in our favour, was not a time in which war aims could be fully formulated, let alone put forward in detail. Again, we do not overlook that those aims have now been stated much more clearly by our leaders, and that the idea we are about to suggest has not been already touched upon by many of the advocates of various types of post-war social reorganization.

Our Panacea

But we believe we have struck upon a thought well worth considering thoroughly when we mount our sophomoric rostrum to postulate that the post-war essential which has been largely overlooked, and which we cannot afford to relegate to the background of our thoughts is the Fifth Freedom—Freedom from Ignorance.

At the risk of being told that we are filching our ideas from Plato and corrupting them to fit the present situation, we would like to make this observation: that some individuals are more able, more brilliant, more attractive, generally better men and women than others. And we believe that much of this margin of difference is bound up in the amount of education these individuals have received.

Before going further with our thesis, we here define education—again we are perhaps neo-Platonic—as the bringing to fruition of the native worth of the individual.

We believe that such education is in inverse ratio to the amount of ignorance which the individual has replaced with knowledge. If we are to discard the doubtful doctrine of innate ideas, we can consider each person born into the world as a completely ignorant creature. Upon birth his education begins—he learns through imitation, parental instruction, religious instruction, advice and conversation of his fellow-learners, and through "formal" education.

Education Faulty

Much of this education is extremely faulty; and complete ignorance is replaced only with misconceptions, prejudices and misinformation. We do not wish to appear in too juvenile a philosophic light by suggesting that absolute accuracy is possible in any type of education; but we foresee no argument with the dictum that much that passes for education under the limits we have set here for the word is vastly below the possible level.

Education, we reiterate, is the process of eliminating bigotry and misunderstanding from the mind of its subject.

Now, to return to the matter of how all these high-flown remarks bear upon the well-being of the inhabitants of the post-war world. It is our judgement that that world—as we suggested yesterday—will continue subject to the petty bickerings, the selfishnesses, the short-sighted refusals to co-operate in the common good that placed it in its pre-war state of moral and intellectual bankruptcy, if education of the proper sort is not made available to all. More harm is done to any idea by the dull-witted and ignorant opposition of those who do not understand it than by all the fair-minded debate in the world.

If we were able—by some miraculous combination of genius and honest hard work—to remove from the undereducated the gross impediment of ignorance of the matters with which they find themselves concerned, we would be three-quarters of the way toward building a better society. If people were educated to see things in the larger light of less immediate implications—if they were trained to think not in terms of self and today but in terms of fellows and the balance of time, it would not be difficult to make of our relations with our peers a better world—a world in which decency will be so commonplace that it will no longer be a "virtue," and in which unselfishness will no longer be cause for worldly-wise jeers.

What Universities Can Do

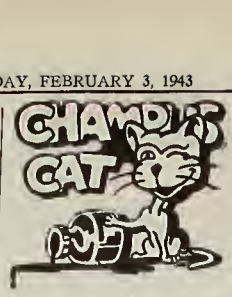
And here, after these wordy prolegomena, is the substance of our suggestion of the part that universities can—and well-nigh must—play in the world which we hope to inhabit.

We believe that education designed to free individuals from ignorance is virtually the only—certainly the most important—obligation which the state owes its citizens. And we believe that reasonable freedom from ignorance is an equally important obligation which the citizen owes the state.

As we have suggested, "formal" education of the type provided in the universities is only one form which this essential ingredient of the properly-matured person can take. But this type of education—purveyed impersonally and scientifically—can do more perhaps than anything else to counteract the misconceptions and bigotries which so often result from environment.

Hence we believe that university education should be made free to all who merit it. This will involve great expense on the part of the state—but we believe that in the long run it will prove money excellently spent.

All, of course, do not merit it. Some who are incapable of training themselves in this war must be regarded—again we resort to a modicum of neo-Platonism—as a sort of self class. This, we feel, will prove little hardship to its members, whose larger understanding will be of such an inherently limited nature that they will be content to serve the world as an Emersonian elbow.



The education we suggest—to depart from recent diatribes on this page—need not be confined to the liberal arts; and, indeed, training in some form of occupation which will support the person being trained is again almost an essential in a world in which specialization appears to be a growing trend. But we still maintain that a broad and apparently "useless" education is of tremendous value.

We bear in mind that a recent correspondent pointed out to us with accuracy and aplomb that all the great gifts to humanity have not been made by university-trained men and women. But we offer this thought in further substantiation of our present plea: that many who would have made great contributions to the welfare of us all—"mute, inglorious Miltons"—have been prevented from bringing the potential of their genius to fruition through lack of such training. There exists an untapped mine of intellectual resource in the mentality of the ill-educated.

So sum up, then, our suggestions for the implementation of our fond fancy, the Fifth Freedom—we ask that free higher education be provided to all; and that citizens partake of this education before gaining full rights of sufferage and citizenship.

If we have presented this thesis ineptly we ask our readers nevertheless to give it their consideration, and we particularly invite their comment. We present it as an idea—like all ideas it needs discussion before any attempt is made to transfer it from the realm of ideas to the realm of realities.

We repeat: the idea is our own—not necessarily subscribed to by the other members of The Varsity's editorial staff, and certainly not formally supported by the S.A.C. But we put it forward at a time when all sorts of well-intentioned ideas are being promulgated relative to the post-war world, and we personally support it whole-heartedly.

Scientists and police today were pondering on the mysterious disappearance of J. Mahatma Nirvana, Second Year Divinity student, who vanished in the middle of a Physical Training class, before over 100 of his astonished companions in misery.

Following a brisk two-hour warming-up period, composed of pushups and free-arm-swinging, the class proceeded as usual to the highlight of the day's activity, euphemistically called "rope climbing' by its inventor and chief exponent.

As is the custom on such occasions, the Chief Slave Driver, one "Lungs" Larkin, demonstrated the proper method of applying this self-inflicted torture, by climbing up with one hand tied behind his back, and another one in the pocket of his blue sweater. "Now," he snarled, as he descended, "youse guys try it!"

The first group of six students attempted to ascend the greased ropes, only to fall from a great height on the canvas-covered rocks called "mats." Special crews dragged the limp bodies away to government salvage heaps. Suddenly a voice was heard: "Let me try it." And there, pushing his way to the front, was Nirvana. Without a word he approached the infernal machines, chose one, and proceeded to skim up, up, up . . . and then, just as he reached the top, he vanished without leaving even a puff of smoke.

Several students claimed that they heard weird Oriental music playing while Nirvana ascended the rope, others claimed that this was just a vocal mirage, due to some co-eds playing Tommy Dorsey's recording of "Song of India" in MacDonald's drug store.

Larkin, on being interviewed by The Varsity, refused to comment, but as your reporter sneaked away, Larkin was heard to mutter. "All I got to say is that if that (Censored—Ed.) wants his P.T. credits he better come back here soon."

The Toronto Police and their relatives, the Campus Cops, have issued the following description of Nirvana: "Five-by-five, wearing purple shorts and a white shirt trimmed with woad. Responds to various names, chiefly, 'Hey, you'; and wearing a turban made of a Turkish towel stamped with the Nirvana coat-of-arms, which, in the English transliteration, reads 'PROPERTY OF THE ROYAL YORK HOTEL'."

Vitality Plus

Toronto Symphony

Ross Pratt was the soloist with the Toronto Symphony in the Rachmaninoff Piano Concerto in D Minor last night. He is a real artists with a remarkable technique, but he seemed to exhaust himself with his amazing vitality—near the end of the concerto the piano was often covered by the orchestra. The orchestra had a few mishaps—in one place in the first movement Sir Ernest had to pull the players together with superhuman effort when the rhyhm went awry. But a more important defect was the lack of clarity of the performance as a whole. However, this is a rather loose criticism, and may come from expecting the lucidity of the recordings from a concert-hall presentation.

The Haydn Symphony No. 88 in G Major was played exceptionally well. The precision of the strings in the first and last movements, and the warmth of their tone in the Largo made it a sheer pleasure to sit back and listen. And in the last work of the program, Beethoven's Leonora No. 3, Sir Ernest gave a really dramatic interpretation; the pianissimo passage just before the end was almost suffocating.

Meds, School Deadlock 3-3

School thirds battled Junior Meds to a three-all tie yesterday up in the Varsity ice palace.

Hoping for their first win of the season the Medicos slapped on the pressure from the initial face-off. Lawler sent them ahead in the first period on a play from Fyfe.

Striving to tie it up, Brenn came through for the Engineers in the second with the first tally. From there in it was a see-saw battle. Dixon notched a School counter and Brennan duplicated his feat for the last School goal. Hughes almost did the hat trick for the doctors by sinking the second and third goals.

Jr. Meds—Callahan, Hardman, Lawler, Fyfe, Hughes, McIntyre, Davies, Callaghan, Faber, Bryans, Fielding, Hill.

S.P.S. III—Kellam, Honeyman, Seymour, Gordon, Brennan, White, Cameron, Dixon, Kauffman, Mareh.

Speaking Of Sport

By Roger Conant

END OF THE BEGINNING . . .

With the numerous interfaculty schedules reaching their half-way mark, it may be an opportune moment to take a gander at the position of the stronger groupings.

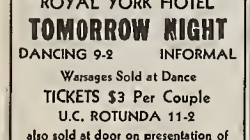
In the arena hockey we find that the Jennings Cup holders are finding little difficulty in retaining their grip on its handles. For Junior School, in group two, has won both its games. School thirds are second with a loss and a win, while the two Meds teams in the league are falling behind. Group one sees the strong St. Mike's entry out in front with two wins and a tie. Then U.C. is next in line with two wins and a loss. Senior School and Vic are struggling in the wake but our pre-season proteges, Dents, have failed to make the win column as yet. But we still think the Molarmen have a strong team—guess they just got in the wrong group. The other three groupings are well under the control of Trinity, Knox and Forestry, respectively.

AND IN THE SPLASHROOM . . .

In this department we begin to bring out the salt, a little mayonnaise and perhaps some catchup, and with this garnishing, begin to eat some words. For back when there was no sport activity in Hart House outside of the chess and poolroom, we stated that Senior Meds would have considerable trouble in retaining the Eckhardt Cup for water polo. Suffice it to say they have won all three tussles so far with ease. In fact, Junior Meds A are their only contenders in the group. U.C. is leading St. Mike's and Trinity in the second group and School thirds are far out in front of Junior Meds B, Vic II and Dents in the third.

WITH THE CAGERS . . .

The present holders of the Sifton Cup, emblematic of campus basketball supremacy, are making a strong bid for its retention. For P. & H. E. is undefeated so far in the first of the 12-group league. Sixty-three teams are battling it out to decide the '43 holder of said silverware. In group two Junior School has the monopoly, followed in order by Junior Vic, Junior Meds and Junior U.C.. Dents A, perennial contenders in the playoff rounds, are on top in the third. The fourth group promises some keen action as Trinity A and St. Mike's B are tied for top rung. Dents B are cleaning up group five, as is U.C. IV in group six. In the next groups, top teams are Knox, II Meds, U.C. Res. and Dent C. The remaining seven groups are School house leagues and the following are leading their groups: I Chem. A, I M. & M., II Chem., II Civil B, III Civil, III M. & M., IV Chem.



AND GOOD OLD MUSHBALL . . .

Fifty-five teams are fighting to take the Spalding Cup away from Dent A, but whosoever does finally accomplish this need have one very hot nine. For Dents are walking away from competition. Undefeated in four starts, U.C. I, Sr. Vic and Sr. S.P.S. are trailing them. Junior School are tops in group two, with Junior Vic, U.C. II and St. Mike's following. Pharmacy is leading the third group with Trinity A and S.P.S. III. Forestry is in command of its territory, but in the fifth group St. Mike's B, Dents B and S.P.S. IV are running neck and neck. School fifths have the sixth group subdued. The next three are Meds house leagues and are led by Med V A, Med II A and Med II B, respectively. But the remaining eight departments are School house leagues—no wonder they can jump into the Reed Race lead. But if you do insist, the following are out in front—I Mech. A, I Chem. A, II Civil, II Chem, III Metal, I Mech B, IV Civil, IV Elec.

BELIEVE IT OR NOT . . .

It seems that a chap named Robert Chester, whom, it is rumoured, is bringing a musical aggregation on the campus tomorrow, starred in his undergraduate days as a baseball pitcher. It also seems that he has hung up several one-hit shutouts for his Alma Mater—Dayton University—and that he turned down offers from several major league clubs, including the Tigers and the Red Sox. Pie Traynor even took a liking to the kid but a tenor sax evidently held more appeal to Mrs. Chester's little boy. Anyway, the season's longer.

Meds and Trinity Tie in Track Meet

George Lewis with his flashing Meds uniform scorched the 100 yards yesterday to tie Trinity's Cam Burgess for top honours in this week's track meet.

To bring to a total of 57 entries over the two-day meet, Verne Booth, Fyfe and Lewis tried their hand at the 100 dash and the Meds four-man two-mile relay team tried to better Monday's marks.

Verne Booth grabbed third spot with a 11.7 and Fyfe nosed out Wally Brown for fifth with a 11.8 to revise yesterday's standings. The final results of the 100 are as follows: Lewis and Burgess tied for first, Macdonald, Booth, Fyfe, Brown.

The Meds relay team of Fielding, Delaney, Lewis and Fyfe, failed to show their promised speed and made it in 10.13.3. Thus the U.C. team of Conant, Sims, Baxter and Shaekleton took the relay honours followed by S.P.S., Wycliffe, Meds, St. Mike's and Vic.

Teams Tussle In Water Polo

Junior School literally routed their big brothers 8-0 and S.P.S. thirds and Jr. Meds battled to a two-all tie in a couple of feverish water polo games yesterday.

Although the Seniors put up a stiff resistance in the first game, they could not fathom the Moffat, Kohl, Sansom combination. Centreman Moffat invariably was the first man to reach the ball after every face-off. He then passed to Kohl who rifled to Sansom who either tried to throw goalward or if checked, as was the usual case, passed back to Moffat. Thereupon Eastwood in the senior nets would be called on to try to make a save. The procedure went on until Johnny Northwood thought his team would fare better if he went in the nets. Only one shot came at him—and that was the eighth goal.

In the second game it looked all School at the start. Martin, the Engineer key-man, showed uncanny skill by being where the Medicos wished and thought he were not. The said Medicos, slow in starting, were at first outguessed and outmanouevered by Martin's tricky ball control and G. Boa's sure-fire aim. But towards the end of the half the junior doctors came to life and were only kept off the scoresheet by some miraculous goal-tending by Mason.

The second half saw the resurgent doctors take the initiative. Rains intercepted numerous passes which he tossed to OBrien who, after several attempts, drew first blood for the Meds. There was no stopping them now as they sunk the premature School supremacy and the combined teamwork proved its worth when Harman drilled his timely shot past Mason for the tying goal scarcely 15 seconds before time.

Sr. S.P.S.—Northwood, Payne, Hill, Eastwood, Dempster, Rimmer, Brenner, Iglesias.

Jr. S.P.S. — Sansom (1), Parker, Kohl (2), Quentin (1), Brant, Moffat (2), Spence (1).

S.P.S. III — Luch, Mason, Dentry, Martin, Timoko, Hicks, G. Boa (2), J. Boa, Gooch.

Jr. Meds — Dunfree, Hardmann (1), Raines, O'Brien (1), Nill, Lyon, Dunn, Currie. Cunningham.

And there was the pool, and there was the water—nice cool, green water, and, oh, so inviting, and there was one lone nurse and we weren't prepared to plunge. . . . So we both looked wistfully and walked slowly and sadly away. Nary a ripple disturbed the water, and spalshes were to have been the order of the night, for the Nurses were to have held a swimming meet. The attendants at the pool said that most nights there are very few who come out for these faculty and college swimming meets. This is too bad, as it is a great privilege to be able to use the pool. So let's have better turn-outs from now on. After all the Interfaeulty meet is not far off.

Volleyball seems to at last be coming into its own on the campus. St. Hilda's have now produced a team which will practice today for the first time at 4:30 at Lillian Massey. The Vic players are asked to note this change. They will not practice today, but a new hour will be arranged for Vic as soon as possible. Meanwhile, good luck to the new aspirants to the game.

Last, but not least, we come to hockey, and are we glad the bear saw his shadow yesterday. King Winter is supposed to stay for forty more days now, and we only need three to finish the outdoor hockey, so. . . . Today at six on the Vic rink, St. Mike's and Vic will play their postponed game of Monday. This should be quite a game, so let's see some spectators. Or if the noon hour is more to your liking, drop into the Arena at one o'clock when St. Hilda's will face off against P.H.E. Both these teams are unbeaten to date, and a win for either will put them in first place. Today will see the half-way mark in the schedule, so tomorrow we may be able to give the standings in both groups.

Pitiful Corpses In Museum Vaults

By Maureen Murphy

Could you, in cold blood, stand casually over rows and rows of dead bodies unflinchingly? . . . Sounds gruesome . . . but such a task faces one when initiated into the mysteries of the Ornithological department of the Royal Ontario Museum, by Mr. T. M. Short, Associate and Artist, Division of Birds, and Mr. S. C. Downing, Cataloguer, Division of Mammals.

Escort and guide, Mr. Shortt, standing alongside, unravels the tale of how 400 birds come to be a new feature in the Museum. "Last May, four of us set out on an expedition to James Bay, to carry out some research. Our supplies preceded us by two years. We brought 400 specimens back with us in July. All were shot, then skinned, and padded with cotton. Stomachs are preserved for nutritional diagnosis. We carried our compact travelling laboratory with us."

"What of the bird-collection in general?" the reporter asks. "Sixty-six thousand specimens in all, here . . . one of the largest on the continent . . . probably runs seventh in tht world," Mr. Shortt replies.

Layer after layer of gleaming corpses . . . each with feet crossed and tied, neck outstretched, wings folded back, chests puffed, eyes unseeing blobs of putty, feathers sleek and flat . . . pearly grey, earthy brown, jet black, snowy white, flecked red.

He talks, and the background of the "still-life study" unfolds . . . the island of Port Albany frequently inundated with water . . . the low flat swamp . . . mosquitoe clouds in the heat of the day . . . the heavy stillness at night . . . the easy-going philosophic people . . . their mad card-games . . . . the Indian tents . . . the ricketty log cabins . . . the salty tea-coloured water . . . the masses of wild summer strawberries . . . the orange fields of waving arctic cotton.

The interview ends. Corpses are stowed away, drawers pushed back, cupboards slammed, keys turned in locks . . . the procession moves off . . . but The Varsity reporter has reached a tremendous conclusion of soul-shattering importance . . . the romance of Canadian bird-life . . . on the shelf!

Signal Courses For Reserve Army

The Public Relations Branch of Military District No. 2 have announced that in preparation for the more intensive training to come during the summer, 10 signal schools for members of the Reserve Army have already been opened up in the District, and three more will be started shortly. The schools are run by signaling instructors of the respective units, but are closely supervised by Major B. C. Tebbs, District Signals Office, and his staff .

Each school lasts six weeks, nine hours instruction being taken during each week. Each Reserve unit sends in a nomination list for the course, but each candidate must pass a "passing-in" test. He must be able to send and receive messages on the buzzer at a rate of four words a minute, with a minimum accuracy of 90 per cent.

Following the course, there is a "passing-out" test in which the candidate must send and receive six words a minute with the buzzer and four words with the lamp. The accuracy minimum in this test is 98 per cent. Each candidate who passes, provided he has a perfect punctuality and attendance record and passes the annual classification test receives a bonus of $7.50.

All regimental signalers are eligible to take this classification test and if they are successful they get a cash award of $3 and are entitled to wear the crossed flags for the next year. This means that a regimental signaler may get $10.50 the first year and $3 a year thereafter.

There are no members of the C.O.T.C. attending this course at the present time, according to Capt. Diltz of "D" Company. This Signal Company of the C.O.T.C. has had no official information regarding the schools.

A startled Varsity reporter who had the audacity to enter the Observatory while the pipe band was practicing there found one piper tromping up and down, skirling away madly with large wads of cotton batting jammed into his ears.

"What's the matter?" asked the reporter when the piper stopped blowing and removed one wad so he could hear. "Don't you like it in the band?"

"Oh sure, I like it all right," came back the answer. "It's peachy, except I just can't stand the noise."

Students aren't always as intellectual as you might think (in case you ever did). Down at the Unversity of Connecticut, for instance, they stole a number of toys which were used as an exhibit at a dance. The only trouble is, the toys belonged to the young sons and daughters of the profs. So now, while the campus echoes to chortles of childish glee, the student paper, the Connecticut Campus, pleads with students to return the toys to their rightful owners. WHICH JUST GOES TO SHOW THAT CONNECTICUT HIGH SCHOOLS DON'T TEACH GOOD CITIZENSHIP HABITS.

In Hart House it is the custom, for various reasons, to take showers au naturel, and rarely is this rule broken. One of these rare occasions came around the other day when, to the astonishment of the soakers present, there materialized through the steam the form of a young athlete in full gym kit. In reply to their gasps and gazes he announced, "Don't worry, fellas, I'm not punch drunk. I just thought this soot was getting kind of dirty."

Inasmuch as advertisers will quote the hither, we see no reason for not extorting our pound of flesh by quoting advertisers. The occasion arises when we see in The College News from Bryn Mawr the following gems:

One eatery makes this suggestion to all jittery students awaiting exam results:

Before you hear the Outcome
To the Inn come

And a flower shop versifies:

The halls are grim,
The weather's showery,
So—give in to your whim,
Make your room all flowery.

And one eatery puts its faith in this example of uncapitalized free verse:

the cottage tea house
new management
luncheon, tea, dinner student charge accounts

—no pate de foie gras,
olas, alas—

And speaking of eateries. One of the local ones supplies such useful information as health hints on the back of its menu. Among the banalities on various fruits the following little gem of wisdom sparkled:

DATES—are good for people with poor circulation.
—IF YOU CAN GET THEM.

ICY BLASTS RESULT IN SNIFFLES

By Ruth Cohen

The cold virus is rife on the campus. Infirmaries are bursting with cold cases, and rich-blooded resistance is regarded as scabism. If you can't come through with a really resonant bronchitis, you are simply not considered in the game.

Three disgruntled freshies, arranged about supplies of Kleenex in their favourite booth at the well known Harbord street eatery were accosted and asked to pronounce on the matter. Said Jean Cavin, I Pass, releasing a billow of bacteria, "Cold! Well! Why last night, I was just terrified of being welcomed by the girls in my fraternity. I had to sort of squirm when they kissed me in, for fear of befouling them with my loathesome diseases."

Joyce Baynor huskily informed the press that she was resigning from first year Pass Arts in favour of a career as basso profundo at the Met, while Mary Lewis, I Soc. and Phil., resigned to the loss of the sense of smell and to a world seen through streaming eyes, philosophically commented that "we can't all be well."

Strangely enough, the question of the common cold was on two occasions expanded into theories on the Brotherhood of Man.

Sylvia Kohl, III Psychology, revealed that she had always associated cold epidemics with a feeling of group belonging. "One feels a certain kinship with one's fellow human beings when one observes them displaying the same symptoms as oneself," she quoted herself as saying. A rheumy Hutton House Inhabitant, on the other hand, has recently been able to make distinctions in the worthiness of certain of her friends. "Did anybody bother to come to see me?" queried she peevishly. "Did anybody care whether I was alive or dead? Friends, pah," she added.

A visit to the Infirmary at Women's Union, to spy on the inmates with a view to finding out whether they were using their "free time" to any practical advantage, netted discouraging results. "I did bring my books along, but we've been too busy to do much about them," bubbled Marjorie Tobin, of the School of Social Service, gaily chiming in with the carefree laughter of her two fellow inmates. The atmosphere was one of relaxed geniality with a touch of the festive. Catching an envious remark about "absenteesim" made by the reporter under her breath, the girls hastened to explain that they were anything but escapists, and had been sent to the abode of the infirm only after medical confirmation of the impaired condition of their nasal tracts. The air having been cleared, a friendly conversation ensued which inexplicably terminated with an invitation to come up to the School of Social Work and be readjusted sometime.

Suggestions as to what to do about colds were offered by some gals from Physiotherapy. "Don't pamper a cold," crisply stated Myra Wilinsky, II Physio. "Put yourself to bed and take sulphadiazene like mad. If you become an addict, so much the better," she said with dangerous open-mindedness. "Sulphadiazene has pulled me from the brink of the grave on more than one occasion—" she continued, warming up to her subject, but was brusquely curbed by the reporter who happens to be strongly adverse to people with enthusiasms.

Men have not entered into the survey beeause all those we quizzed immediately flexed their biceps and assured us that they were in the pink of condition and the last word in robust health. This is undoubtedly due to the wholesome exercise acquired in C.O.T.C. practice and also to their invigorating custom of popping in and out of hot and cold showers.

The payoff in this article is frought with irony. Having run ourselves ragged scurrying across the campus in search of student opinion (not to mention the entry into the infested confines of the upper story in Women's Union) we now find ourselves with crimson eyeballs, a running nose and an alarming throat-rattle. We feel it advisable to leave now and make our preparations for we know within us that they are going to whisk us away!

Student-Staff Conference Releases Report

Cody Says University Exists For Average--- Not For Brilliant Few

President Gives Ottawa Reaction to Result of 'Varsity Conference; National Conference Does Not Approve University Selective Service Board; But Other Resolutions of Value; Officials Working on Suggested Camp Change

MacNAMARA SPEECH DISCUSSED

Declaring that no university should exist only for the sake of giving advanced edueation to a small group of the most brilliant, but also to benefit the "average" students, President H. J. Cody addressed the Student-Staff Conference last night on their report presented to him in December.

President Cody described the reactions of the Ottawa Universities Conference to the Student-Staff report and outlined the further progress of discussion between university and government officials.

Dr. Cody said that the conference as a whole did not approve of the erection of a University Selective Service Board as suggested. He explained that it was felt that such a proposal is very far-reaching in scope and that probably in the end, an outside body would give a decision which would be more readily accepted.

"Undue Paternalism"

He also warned that when the functions of such a board are added together, it spells an "undue paternalism," that more responsibility should be put on the incoming student himself, and that as far as the need for advice goes, there are already adequate facilities. Moreover, he pointed out that the functioning of such a board would necessitate another department as large as that of the registrar, which would require considerable financial support.

Dr. Cody stressed the value of a number of the general resolutions submitted by the Student-Staff Conference, as for example the advising that military training eamps be held immediately before or after academic sessions. He said that military officials are doing all they can in the regard.

Dispels Rumours

Speaking of the speech delivered at Ottawa by Arthur MacNarama, Director of National Selective Service, Dr. Cody said that Mr. MacNamara had dispelled altogether the host of rumours that the government intended to suspend the Arts Faculties. Speaking of the discussion which followed on this point, Dr. Cody said that it was pointed out that in addition to the gap which would be left in the whole cultural life of the country it would be a fatal mistake to try to suspend Arts courses as a whole as there would still be a number of students not eligible for military service, and because of the possibility or returned men continuing their studies. The Dominion government has already passed Orders-in-Council providing for substantial support for returned men, in order to make it as easy as possible for them to resume their university work after the war, he said.

Mr. McNarama then considered the advisability of continuing scholarships given for the first time this year, to first year engineering students. Dr. Cody said that the general opinion of the conference was that these should be repeated if necessary, but that use of the scheme worked out by Prof. Burton for the Number 1 Army Course now being conducted at this university was advisable. Dr. Cody expressed his opinion that instead of some 600 students entering the first year of the Faculty of Engineering that a large number will enter No. 2 Army Course

S.P.S. Speed-Up Not Feasible

"It is impossible wisely to attempt to accelerate engineering courss," President H. J. Cody told the Student-Staff Conference last night.

Dr. Cody traced the financial and curricular difficulties in the way of acceleration and also laid stress on the importance of summer work as part of the engineering courses.

The President paid tribute to Prof. E. F. Burton, Head of the Department of Physics, for his "brilliant suggestion" which led to the establishment of the No. 1 Canadian Army Course and made it possible for a group of partially trained engineers to get into the war in one year's time.

The President predicted that the present overcrowding in First Year engineering courses, referred to in the report of the sub-committee of the Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering, would be alleviated by enlistments in the No. 2 Army Course next fall.

Burns, Victoria Regent Buried Yesterday

Dr. R. N. Burns, B.A., Hon. D.D., member of the Board of Regents of Victoria University from 1918, and Chairman of Victoria Men's Residences for 18 years, was buried yesterday after a funeral service at Emmanuel College.

Confined to his home for several months, he died Monday morning. He had also been president of the Victoria Alumni Association in 1936-37, and was a noted golfer.

REGISTRATION DATE

University students who are in age groups subject to military call-up and who have not yet received their notice to report for medical examination have until March 1 to register. Registration forms are available at the Simcoe Hall post office.

CONFERENCE REPORT GIVEN TO PRESS

Chief item of business on the agenda of last night's session of the Student-Staff Conference—apart from the address by President H. J. Cody—was the discussion of whether or not further steps would be taken to publicize the Report, adopted last December.

It was decided to release the Report in its entirely to the press; and to mail copies to the Prime Minister of Canada, the Premier of Ontario, Presidents of all other Canadian Universities, the Director of National Selective Service, the Minister of Education for Ontario, Presidents of the Students' Councils of all Canadian Universities, and Deans of all Faculties and Heads of all Departments in the University of Toronto.

It was decided to delegate to the present Executive Committee of the Conference the task of appointing a Continuations Committee to carry on the Conference's work if necessary.

(Present Executive Committee members are: Carl Burchard and Diana Chayfetz, Social Work; Jim Weld and Tom Nixon, Victoria; Geoff Johnson, University College; D. N. Cass-Beggs, Assistant Professor in Electrical Engineering; Leopold Infeld, Assistant Professor in Applied Mathematies; and T. A. Goudge, Assistant Professor in Philosophy.)

At the suggestion of Mr. Cass-Beggs, who acced as Chairman last night, the session was adjourned and was not dissolved, so that it will be possible for the Continuations Committee to reconvene the same delegates as have previously constituted the Conference. It was recommended in a resolution passed at last night's session, however, that the Committee "obtain if possible delegates in a more democratic manner, so that official action may be facilitated."

ROMANSATIRE LECTURE TOPIC

"Roman Satire," first in a series of lectures on satire at Victoria College, was given yesterday by Dr. H. Bennett, Professor of Latin. "Satire is one field in which the Romans owe no embarrassing debts to Greece," said Dr. Bennett. "The Romans were the first to write satire as a separate literary form; their's is the satire we know. Today, however, satire is a closed form. Shaw may write a satiric play, or Lewis a satiric novel, but no one is publishing books of pure satire."

The name originated in the word "satura," a kind of mixed dish, and was later applied to a literary hodge-podge. Ennius, who first used this form, claimed that the soul of Homer was reborn in him. His work consisted of fables, lialogues and poems in a lighter vein.

"But it was Lucilius who put the 'ire' in satire," stated Dr. Bennett. "He gave satire a definite form which later satirists were forced to follow." Dr. Bennett described the influence of other Roman satirists. "Many modern men who would scorn to be called Epicureans live according to the pattern of life proposed by the Epicurean Horace. Horace proceeded to satirize classes rather than individuals—the sober philosopher or the wealthy man who dissolves a pearl in his wine. Petronius, modern in outlook, satirized the newly rich at the request of Nero.

Roman satire culminated in the writings of Juvenal in which the ancient and modern conceptions of satire met. Often prejudiced in his opinions, he had no purpose but to vent his rage. Foreigners were his particular hate, especially those who made money.- Careful not to raise too much opposition, he mentioned no names except of those who were dead.

CHESTER'S FORCES SHOW

Due to unforeseen transportation problems arising in the last 24 hours, Bob Chester wired the committee for the U.C. Arts Ball that he would be unable to play the noon entertainment for the airmen and soldiers in Hart House Theatre.

Chester expressed the wish that he might play for them after five o'clock, when his train arrived in Toronto, so plans are proceeding to have an hour-long show for both the R.C.A.F. and the No. 1 Army Course immediately following their evening meal—about six o'clock. As a result the planned noon show in the Theatre is cancelled and the early evening show will be substituted.

HELP ASKED FOR SUMMER

Mr. F. H. Armstrong, City Playground Administrator, told The Varsity yesterday that with the opening of new playgrounds possible there would be a demand for some 40 male students and approximately the same number of women students. The men will be given a course in playground supervision in May and June when the children are still at school. The course for women principals, however, is now going on and is a series of five lectures in first aid, story telling and industrial handicrafts. "All girls wishing to do playground work must take this course as there are always new situations in this type of work which they must learn to handle," Mr. Armstrong stated. Previous counselloring experience is valuable but not essential as this work is different in some respects.

Toronto city playgrounds operate from May 17 to Sept. 4, and during this time accommadate some 2,000,600 children in competitive sports, games and crafts of all kinds. All camps are open each day from 9 a.m. until nightfall and constant supervision is required during the day so that a playground worker might be required to take morning, afternoon or evening duty. Applicants for supervisory jobs must have one year's residence in the city.

Commenting on this work for the summer, Mr. Armstrong said, "I think it is excellent experience for those who are going to become teachers. The pay is good, and the contact with and handling of the children is stimulating. The workers learn to take responsibility, avoid friction, and achieve self-control." Mr. Armstrong added that those who were not able to begin the principals' course on Feb. 3 should not be discouraged from applying as they would still be considered.

Report Recommends Creation Of Board To Select Students

Selective Service Within University Is Chief Resolution of Student-Staff Deliberations; Suggest Compulsory Military Training in First Two Years Only; Admission Requirements and Summer Work Are Other Topics

ACCELERATION OF COURSES CONSIDERED

Establishment of a University Selective Service Board was the major recommendation of the Student-Staff Conference during its session last December, it was revealed in the conference report released for publication last night.

Deliberations of the conference antedated the Universities Conference at Ottawa last January and a copy of the Student-Staff Conference report was presented to President H. J. Cody and was at the Ottawa gathering of university and government officials.

The proposed board, to be composed of representatives of the armed forces and the government with a majority representation from the university, is designed to determine the distribution and number of students in each course. (Reports of the Ottawa conference made no mention of the possible formation of such a board.)

The conference also recommended that military training be made compulsory only during the first two years, except for students proceeding to the armed forces.

Regarding acceleration of courses, the conference suggested that if selective service requirements necessitated a greater number of graduates in any course, it should be speeded up, but the quality of the course not be impaired.

Following is the report of the conference:

Preamble

The present world-wide struggle of the United Nations for their civilization and culture has made them take stock of their institutions and the contribution that these institutions make to the winning of the war and to preparations for the peace. The free university is one of the distinguishing institutions of the United Nations and symbolizes the liberty for which we are fighting. The university, as a symbol of the democratic way of life, should be the first to appraise itself and its work when the freedom of our civilization is threatened.

We, members of the staff and student body of the University of Toronto, have endeavoured to consider the function of our University in the present crisis.

We have been guided by certain general principles and have sought to harmonize these principles in the report which we present.

We have considered, first, the necessity of winning the war, on which the fate of the university, of Canada, and of civilization depends. We have sought to discover by what means the university may increase its contribution to the war effort.

We have felt, at the same time, that it was necessary to take a long-range view of the work of the University. It must turn out men and women of broad vision and understanding to deal wisely with the problems of the peace and reconsturction. It must maintain its present high cultural standards so that our successors and not least those men who have postponed their education to fight for liberty may find opportunities to pursue every avenue of scholarship. In short we must guard against an eagerness to blindly increase our immediate fighting strength to the detriment of the standards of our cultural life and of the quality of our teaching. Such was the general outlook of the framers of the report.

In presenting this report it is necessary to state clearly how the conference

Cody Clarifies Student Status

In his address to the Student-Staff Conference last night, President H. J. Cody made plain certain points of University of Toronto policy in connection with the interpretation of the Order-in-Council relative to the call-up of students who fail to pass mid-term examinations.

Names of male students who so fail will be forwarded to the appropriate Divisional Registrar, he said, but such students will not be directly expelled. It is left to the discretion of National Selective Service officials to call up such students who thus forfeit deferment of their draft calls.

Because women are not eligible for draft calls, Dr. Cody said: "Women undergraduates don't need to worry about being turned out of the University because they fail to pass a term test."

Campaign Funds Not Yet Received

The contributions being raised in the University for the Aid to Russia Fund have not yet all been handed in to the Students' Adminstrative Council, Miss A. E. M. Parkes, Acting General Secretary of the Council, announced yesterday.

So far a total of $168.31 has been received at the Council office in Hart House, the largest fraction of that, $115, coming from the Engineering Society, and the donation largest in proportion to student numbers, $18.06, from Wycliffe College.

Miss Parkes requested that all groups raising money for the Fund bring in their donations to the S.A.C. as soon as possible.

The Report Released

Last night the Student-Staff Conference released for publication its Report, adopted last December. The document is carried in full—minus appendices—elsewhere in this issue; it is worth thoughful consideration by the reader.

When studying the Report, it is well to remember that it antedates the recent Universities Conference and that therefore it naturally does not directly follow the same lines of thought as those contained in the Resolutions adopted at Ottawa. But it marks a serious and wortwhile attempt on the part of some of the more intelligent members of this University to see clearly the role that institutions of higher learning must play in the war years, and to offer suggestions for the further improvement of the university war effort.

As President Cody pointed out last night in his address to the Conference, the establishment of a University Selective Service Board—salient feature of the Report's suggestions—would present administrative difficulties of some magnitude, and the authority so constituted might find itself overlapping—if not actually in conflict with—previously-constituted "university organs and organizations." Nevertheless, it still cannot be denied that such a Board might be of considerable value in solving some of the problems which the individual student now faces. Again, as Dr. Cody said, this might mark a step in the direction of "undue paternalism" which would prove unwise. As we imply by these transparently-guarded remarks, there is considerable matter for debate in the Report.

Now that the Report is Public property, we believe that such debate on the part of students and staff generally should be conducted freely. It would be a grave error if we were to let the hard work of the Conference delegates be wasted by the slow-thinking expedient of merely ignoring their Report.

We have one complaint to register against last night's proceedings. Attendance at the session—publicized both through these columns and by personal letter to each delegate—varied between 30 and 50, as students and professors wandered in late or left early. This figure—which includes some who were not delegates—is not flattering to the majority of the more than 100 official delegates to the Conference. We believe that some of them might have shown just a little interest in its deliberations.

We congratulate the Conference on the work and effort and thought which went into the formulation of its Report. We will comment more fully upon it later, but in the meantime, we suggest that for the students who have not yet perused it, it is "required reading."

Air-Minded Education

In this age of great and varied changes in all kinds of knowledge and occupations which have an effect on the life of the world's peoples, it should not be surprising to anyone when one or another centre of learning adds new and exotic courses to its curriculum—courses designed to train graduates to take their place in the ever-enlarging new fields which are opening up. This is the Air Age—the age of air transport, air combat and air power, yet there are few air minded courses in secondary or higher education beyond those designed for aeronautical engineers. The creation of the University Air Training Corps in Canada has been a step toward educational recognition of the important new field open to Canada's youth, and by degrees our neighbours to the south have also developed formal air education.

Most interesting, and one of the most recent, experiments in air training in the United States, is the course in air-job training undertaken less than a year ago at Stephens College in Columbia, Missouri. What makes this new course all the more interesting is the fact that Stephens is a junior college for women, founded in 1833 as a "female academy" with study centred on the harpsichord, tatting and decorum. The College has continued to emphasize the home-making arts, but last year it stepped into the position of leader in the march to keep step with the times.

This air-minded educational program got its start when Stephens vocational clinic, which prescribes on the aptitudes and ambitions of all first year students, found that a large number of the girls were eager to fly or to work toward jobs connected with flying. Stephens staff members who were themselves interested in flying then combined to set up the new course, and with the active co-operation and help of the various American air lines, organized a varied program designed to turn out trained workers to step into positions with air lines.

The new course immediately proved its worth. Over 500 students, about one-third of Stephens' enrolment, signed up for the course. The few who have already graduated were welcomed by labour-starved aviation companies and the 300 who will graduate within the year have jobs waiting for them. The air lines have proved eager for trained, draft-exempt technicians.

By far the most intensive air-job training ever given to women, the successful new course is one of the only ones ever given outside the aviation companies themselves. Their co-operation has greatly affected the course; they listed the positions they needed filled and loaned their experts as instructors and lecturers. Besides flying, all sorts of ground jobs are taught: flight control, airport management, control tower operation, weather forecasting. New courses are added as the air lines report shortages in personnel.

The aeroplane manufacturing companies and now the Army Air Corps have appealed to the College and helped the course with the result that a machine shop has been set up to train girls for building bombers, and for blue-printing them. The Army called for aircraft inspectors, and donated a complete plane to Stephens for teaching in this line.

Co-operation has been the basis of this timely course. The girls fly from Columbia Municipal Airport, practice on the town's only teletype which is owned by a department store, and work at weather forecasting at the local weather bureau.

The girls who fly do their 15 hours of ground school and 35 hours solo to qualify for private pilots' licenses. That achieved, they go on to do 200 hours in the air, if they possibly can, and thus qualify as bomber ferry pilots. Since the cost of this further training is about $3,000 above tuition, and since when the war started there were only about 200 women commercial pilots in the States, Stephens hopes that the Army may soon underwrite advanced flying costs.

Stephens' air-minded courses are exensive but they are not allowed to interfere with the regular curriculum of general education. Much of the work is done in the girls' spare time and ,of course, each individual girl takes only one or two of the courses.

Stephens College has attacked a new problem successfully with its air courses. It is turning out trained workers in a new skill, but it is not neglecting the established work of higher education in arts, which have been under attack as being "useless" in these times when technical knowledge means so much. This interesting combination of arts education and modern technical training should produce a group of alert young women well able to take their place in the world.

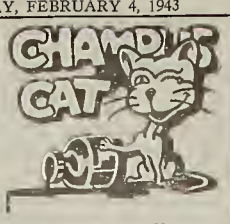
ART AND MUSIC

Student Efforts

Undergraduate Exhibition

There is not as much variety or talent in this year's undergraduate Exhibition as there has been in past years, but it is still an interesting show. The Hart House Art Committee has done well by the material sumbitted, and hung them to good effect.

Call it a toss-up between W. R. Benny, who gets one whole wall to himself, and P. M. Gardiner, who evidently has the services of an excellent framer. The former has four tempera paintings of considerable merit. Prairie Symphony, showing a wheatstook standing out against an eveing sky, is done with fluid Chinese brush-strokes. Wings Over the Prairie is effective design, with the figures modelled in poster style, but loses itself in the cloudseape. Northern Lights is definitely a pippin! It would be otherwordly, were it not for the grain elevators squatting stolidly in the landseape.



Mr. Gardiner seems to paint in several styles. The Old House, massively treated in pigmentation, is a striking canvas. Spring and Autumn, done in semi-abstract rhythms, are nicely contained within the scope of their ideas. The latter, bold in pattern and warm in tone, give more than a fleeting nod in the direction of Comfort.

Watercolours predominate in this show, and C. R. Worsley gives with the watercolours. They are pale-washed and precise, clean of texture and perfect in perspective. Perhaps the best is Panorama—Purple Hills. His single oil is in the same vein.

N. B. MacDonald has two worthy efforts, obviously done at the Arvida Project, where he worked last summer. They show a knowledge of spatial relationships, and absorbing interest in subject matter.

The line drawing of a girl's head by P. Kelener is executed with utmost economy of means, and has the impact of a Varari print. J. R. Blais handles his subject with a fair degree of competence in Felling, suggesting distance in tonality, but using rather muddy brushwork in the process. His Coureur de Bois is quite dramatic. L. G. Baker's watercolours of the Minden country are compelling, more so in the cloud treatment. One of the few examples of straight portraiture is the Airman's Head by R. C. Freeman.

BROCK BRACE.

Great Hall To Close For Next Six Months Says Tear-Stained Gilley

No Dieticians Available to Carry on Vital Work of Malnutrition, Warden Reports from Swimming Pool

HIGH TABLE HITS ROOF

Two months after the announcement that Hart House Theatre would close for the next six months, eame word from Acting Warden J. R. Gilley yesterday that a smiliar policy would affect the Great Hall.

"We just ean't find the dieticians, that's all," he sobbed. "Our head girl, Lucrezia Q. Borgia, has joined the staff at Camp Borden, at the urgent request of M.D. No. 2 authoritics. It seems that the commandos up there were getting too healthy, and they had to send for her before things got out of hand. That leaves us only a staff of junior dieticians, and none of them even know arsenic from cyanide."

His announcement was made from the floor of Hart House Pool, where he was searching for sea-weed to flavour the hash for today's meals—last to be served in the Hall, perhaps, for the duration.

He explained that the pool had been drained as a substitute for the soup generally served in Hart House, when one of the inexperienced sdieticians dropped the recipe in some gravy and it dissolved.

"We thought it would work," he explained. "But we had to reject the stuff. It didn't quite meet our exacting standards. The chlorine content was too low."

Members of Hart House Committees, usually priviliged to sit at the High Table during lunch-time, were enfuriated, when interviewed by a Varsity reporter.

"This is a sorry story," said Misty Christie, Curator of the Hart House Library. "I hate you and I loath you and I feel cross. Dirty Burwell," he added as an afterthought.

"He's right for once, thought I hate to admit it," commented Bev. Burwell, chief impressario in the Warden's Office. "Dirty Christie," he added as an afterthought.

Dents Win From Victoria For Season's First Victory

Sibbold Scored from Hart in Closely Contested Play to Put Victoria in Puck League Cellar

QUIGLEY AND DUNN STAR

Dents' fast-travelling hockey outfit finally hit the win column yesterday afternoon and climed out of the Group I celler position by handing Vic I a 1-0 setback. Vic now are the sole occupants of last place, one point behind the Dentists.

The first period produced fairly close play but offered very few real scoring opportunities for either team. Blue, for the Dentists, should have bagged a goal in the first period when he picked up a loose puck about three feet in front of a wide-open Vic net but he flicked the puck right over the cage.

After five minutes of play in the second period Dents took the lead on a goal by Sibbold assisted by Hart. The shot came through a maze of players and sticks and finally bounded through a Vic defenceman's legs into the net. This was the only tally of the game and it spoiled an otherwise perfect performance for Wes Dunn in the Vic net who has turned in three fine efforts to date.

The last 10 minutes saw the Scarlet and Gold press hard to tie it up and they succeeded in bottling up the Dents' defence but they couldn't score.

Dents — Quigley, Ferguson, Hambly, Schwartz, Castaldi, Crouch, Channel, Sibbold, Blue, Leudi and Hart.

Vic I—Dunn, Paton, Flewelling, O'Malley, McClean, Street, Fullerton, Niero, Fisher and Carroll.

Speaking Of Sport

*By the Guys in the First Aid Room

OVER THREE BEERS AND A RUNYON TEXT . . .

Yesterday noon as half the sports staff (all two of us) are fretting over the lack of contents of today's S.O.S., a burly, bespectacled, School-sweatered individual, recently pointed out to us in a local suet salon as Bull Ritchie, who manages a string of beak-benders operating out of the campus south side, ambulates into the pigeon-hole they call The Varsity office and in a small voice queries, "Whom do I see about getting some publicity on the Senior Boxing and Wrestling Assault?"

We wish to say that we do not ordinarily care to have any truck with Schoolmen, especially burly Schoolmen, as it is known to one and all that these characters are in the habit of demolishing more suds than the law allows. But as he has all the appearances of being a right jake we give him a large hello and ask him courteously to tell us all about it.

Now this Bull Ritchie explains that the Assault that he is plugging is not of that undignified type which provokes the attention of the local constabulary and generally finds the spectators doing a stretch in the local sneezer while the participants recoup in some nearby hayloft. It is all quite legal and consists of several guys climbing into a ring and attempting to boff each other on their respective noggins in the most effective manner or choking each other by other legitimate means.

He also says that such citizens as care to take part in these festivities will weigh in of a Wednesday afternoon next week and will deal each other a few sloshes in the chops on Thursday and Friday of the same week.

On the following Saturday such parties as survive will continue to carry on fisticuffs and other forms of modified murder for the enjoyment of the guys and dolls who gather about the Hart House atbletic emporium to observe such proceedings.

Warming to his subject and obviously enchanted with such an attentive audience the Bull drifts into a trance and treats us to an entertaining soliloquy on the merits of his boys. Among other things he reminds us how the citizens of School more or less snatched all the marbles in last year's bouts and how they might just do it again if the other campus jugs and groaners don't get busy.

We gather further that the Bull is particularly enamoured with the chances of certain of his eminent plug-uglies, namely Count Grosskurth and Swede Olson who are known to one and all as past masters of the squirm dodge, and Heffy Hefferman, a formidable dealer in cauliflower at 125 pounds. For the beef trust the Bull offers us Big Boy Gow, who mauled all the heaviest in these parts more than somewhat last season, and the Bull offers us considerable six to five that this guy will belt out anything the opposition care to match him with.

The Bull also makes mention of a group of characters in what he quaintly terms the novice class, namely Lowe, Purcell and Lind. Novices, he explains, are such citizens as have never yet been observed putting the blast on other citizens, at least not in this precinct. The Bull is not really very high on these characters because he explains they operate out of different stables.

By this time the Bull is walking up and down our table and threatening to put the arm on any citizens as do no wish to view the festivities. "It is a display of science and skill," he reiterates, "and the management requests all bookies to leave any change larger than C notes with the Hall Porter."

By Betsy Mosbaugh

There was a fair amount of activity in the realm of hockey yesterday as P. & H.E. clashed with St. Hilda's at noon and St. Mike's met Vic on the Vic rink last night.

The Saints apparently met their match in P. & H.E., as 10 minutes of over-time failed to bring forth any score. The game was closely contested with Trinity obtaining approximately two-thirds of the shots at the Physical Health Eds' net. Aside from this achievement, they also managed to chalk up the first penalty of the season.

Sidney Diamond and Betty Hungerford did some neat puck managing while the outstanding players for P. & H.E. were Betty Allan, Monica Folkestone and Connie O'Connor. The best tactics of the game were displayed by St. Hilda's efficient defencemen.

The outcome of the evening bout was not as debatable as the earlier game. Vic managed to hoist the puck past Betsy Gowan of the double blues not less than ten times. Undoubtedly the last period showed better play all around as only one goal was scored. All in all, it was not a particularly fast game, but Vic compensated for the lack of speed by manipulating some excellent passing. Mary Allers distinguished herself by scoring a goodly part of Vic's goals.

St. Mike's was well represented by the two Galligan sisters, Florence Cooper, Peggy O'Brien, Hope McSloy, Mary Farrel, and Betsy Gowan in the net.

We dropped into O.C.E. the other night to take a look at the pool. It seems a shame that the turnout for the swimming meets are not larger. P. & H. E. were executng fancy strokes last night, while tonight Vic's mermaids plan to take the plunge. This will be the last of the swimming events. This afternoon Margaret Eaton will be the scene of the speed swimming trials of P. & H.E. at 4:30.

REPORT RECOMMENDS CREATION OF BOARD

was assembled. The selection of the 65 student delegates was controlled by the recognized student-governing organizations of each faculty. The staff delegation was composed of some 40 members of the staff from different faculties and courses who were invited by the students to participate. Other students and faculty members gladly volunteered their co-operation.

While the report constitutes a representative expression of the views of the students, faculty opinion, as expressed thereby, is the opinion of the faculty members of the conference only.

The following are the resolutions of the conference:

I.

Constitution and General Function of the U.S.S.B.

1. That a University Selective Service Board be established in order to ensure that both students and staff contribute their utmost to winning the war.

2. That the University Selective Service Board (U.S.S.B.) consist of (i) representation from the armed forces (which shall present their needs for graduates and students with university training), (ii) representation from the Government (which shall present the needs of industry and of the community in general) and (ii) a majority representation from the university (which shall, as always, control the academic qualifications for admittance and the academic training of the students while attending the university).

Representatives of the faculties should be invited to give advice relating to their faculties when required.

3. That the official liaison between the U.S.S.B. and the student body be the Students' Administrative Council which shall bring before the U.S.S.B. any problems raised by the students and which shall inform the students of the policies and decisions of the U.S.S.B.

II.

Conditions of Admission and Enrolment

1. That the U.S.S.B. together with the university authorities determine the distribution and number of students required in each course according, on the one hand, to the need of preserving our culture and the requirements of post-war reconstruction and, on the other hand, to the needs of technical personnel in the armed forces.

2. That in dealing with the undergraduates now in attendance at the university the U.S.S.B. determine the distribution and number of students required in each course and where there is an excess in any course a system of selection based upon merit be employed at the beginning of the session 1943-44.

3. That the U.S.S.B. set up a committee to act as an advisory and information bureau to advise local and out-of-town students regarding qualifications, subjects and courses in which students are required.

4. That senior students be available to assist the U.S.S.B. in advising applicants as to their selection of a course.

5. That the U.S.S.B. co-operate with the admissions committees of the various faculties and schools of the university in order to make sure that the best qualified students are admitted to the various courses, irrespective of age.

6. That a condition for the admission of men and women to the university be their willingness on graduation to accept a suitable position for which they will have been trained and which would be offered to them by the U.S.S.B. in conjunction with the National Selective Service Board.

7. That it be the policy of the U.S.S.B. in conjunction with the National Selective Service Board to secure that students entering the university are those potentially most useful in the war effort irrespective of their means. This necessarily involves introduction of a system of Federal Government aid to students.

8. That at no stage of the proceedings of the U.S.S.B. or admission committees should any student be debarred by reason of nationality, colour, creed or sex.

9. That in accordance with the principle of this report whereby students are selected according to their merit, men with conscientious objections to military training or service be admitted to the university on condition that they do alternative service for a number of hours equal to the time spent by students in military training.

III.

Military Training and Summer Work

1. That all men students who are physically fit be required to take two years of basic military training, preferably in the first two years of their courses.

2. That military training taken in the first two years be accepted in lieu of the non-military Physical Training required by the university.

3. That students proceeding to the armed forces be given further military training specially designed to meet the requirements of commissioned rank.

4. That military training in the university be revised to make it more effective, for example, by elimination of superfluous repetition and the introduction of adequate incentives to serious effort.

5. That consideration be given to increasing the period in summer field-training and reducing the hours spent on military training during the academic session.

6. That efforts be made to hold military training camps immediately after or immediately before the academic session.

7. That where vacations are not eliminated students secure through the U.S.S.B. essential work which, whenever possible, shall be related to their studies. Where a student is in training for the armed forces this may take the form of military training at camp.

IV.

Acceleration of Courses

1. That if any academic course is not turning out a sufficient number of graduates to meet the yearly requirements of selective service, such a course should be accelerated but the content of the course should not be reduced to an extent that would impair its quality.

2. That students in all accelerated courses which require attendance for a yearly period much longer than the usual academic year receive adequate financial assistance from the Federal Government.

V.

That the standards of the Pass Course in Arts be altered in such a manner as to approximate to an Honour Course.

VI.

That recommendations for graduate work be submitted to the U.S.S.B. by the School of Graduate Studies, the U.S.S.B. to consider the recommendations on the basis of special talent and the necessity for continued study in relation to the war needs.

VII.

That a department of Russian be established within the University, offering if possible Honour Courses.

VIII.

That greater emphasis be placed on the study of those subjects which give students a better appreciation of the issues and background of the war, and the problems of reconstruction.

IX.

That the University continue and, if possible, increase its efforts to contribute to the liberal education of members of the armed forces and workers in war industries in Canada by offering them short courses of study.

X.

That marriage should not debar otherwise qualified women from positions on the faculty of the University.

XI.

That the government give consideration to the elimination or strict curtailment of many luxuries before serious reductions are made in manpower, money or time allotted to education.

XII.

Finally, that there be no suspension of the work of the University in the present crisis, but that it be maintained in all departments, whether sciences or humanities, both during the war and after the war, so that our cultural and intellectual heritage as a democracy may be strengthened and preserved.

Cody Discusses Effect of Report

which provides technically trained men in one year.

Two Tests

Dr. Cody explained that the government still stands by the general policy that military and academic training should be continued together, and referred to the two tests applied for the first time this year. In connection with the regulation passed last fall which stated that the name of any student failing in an examination should be forwarded to the district registrar, Dr. Cody pointed out that that does not mean that such students will be directly expelled. He said that this would be up to the Department of National Selective Service who will call the student at its discretion and for this reason the order obviously does not apply to women at present.

The second of these tests was that no student may change his course without the permission of the university authorities and of the district officer commanding, which, Dr. Cody explained, was to prevent any dishonest lengthening of one's course.

Pass Arts Course

Referring to the suggestion that the Pass Course be so altered as to approximate an Honour Course, Dr. Cody expressed doubt as to the value of such a move in that the course was designed for those students not capable of the higher requirements of an Honour Course. If a person works hard in the Pass Course he should get a good education, the President said, and stated that if instructors would have more respect for it and do all they could to make it more honourable and worthy, that it would become so. He added, however, that those students who are capable of taking an Honour Course but who have entered the Pass Course as the result of laziness or indifference, are "the curse of the university" and that he would gladly give them "their papers of demission."

Queen's Debating Society, To Vie With Victoria Team In Alumni Hall Meeting

First Intercollegiate Debate on Campus this Year to Be Held at Victoria; Federal Control of Economy Is Subject

TO GO TO McMASTER

In the first intercollegiate debate on the campus this season Victoria College Debating Parliament will be hosts to Queen's Debating Society on Monday night in Alumni Hall at Vic. The two teams will debate the pros and cons of a subject much discussed in Canada today, "Resolved, that the present Federal control of the Canadian economy should be retained after the war."

Upholding the affirmative, the Vic team of Victor Butts and Royce Frith will clash with the negative, supported by Vernon Falach and Earl Baxter of Queen's.

Commenting on the debate, Leader of the Opposition, John Dales, expressed the belief that the topic would appeal especially to members of the law course. "Both members of the Vic team are in Law, one in fourth year and the other in first. We're expecting lots of support from the St. George Street faculty."

Dales also entertained a hope that more men would be present at this debate. "So far this year the majority of the House has always been composed of females—knitting, I might add. While this is highly commendable, we would appreciate the presence of more men, and probably the girls would, too."

Victor Butts, Leader of Vic's team, said he believed the Queen's team would provide stiff opposition. "I understand that they are going on to debate at McMaster after they finish with us."

The House will go into session promptly at 8 p.m. in Alumni Hall at Vic.

REGISTRATION DATE

University students who are in age groups subject to military call-up and who have not yet received their notice to report for medical examination have until March 1 to register. Registration forms are available at the Simcoe Hall post office.

X-Ray For T. B. At Queen's

Kingston, Feb. 4—(CUP)—A mass tuberculosis survey by X-ray of students and staff of Queen's University will be undertaken under the joint auspices of the University and the Department of Health of the Province of Ontario during the week of Feb. 8, it was announced recently by Dr. J. T. Tweddell, Queen's University health officer.

Cost of the X-ray will be borne jointly by the University and the Department of Health and the work will be done by a mobile unit owned by the Province. It is expected that everyone at Queen's will be X-rayed in the course of this survey. Those who have taken tuberculin tests previously and have shown negative or slightly positive reactions may take this test again as well as those who have never been tested.

X-ray surveys similar to the one projected at Queen's have been taken at the University of Toronto and at Western University. By means of these mass tests in various geographieal regions, it is possible to prepare a statistical picture of the incidence of tuberculosis in part of the province.

No, I am not taking you there just because it will only cost me a quarter per; everbody will be going and . . . Yeah . . . Well, goodbye now. . . . Huh? . . . Of course I do. . . . 'Bye."

OPINIONS ARE VARIED ON CONFERENCE REPORT

Following the release of Student-Staff Conference Report Wednesday night, student opinion on the Conference as a whole was varied, The Varsity learned in an informal survey yesterday.

"The interchange of view-points brought about by the Conference is advantageous to the students, staff and the university as a whole," said a student in III Loretto.

However, Herb. Christie, II Phil. and Eng., said, "As far as I can see we are no further ahead than last September. A great deal of time has been spent in discussion but the general issues are as big as ever and the artsman is in as big a quandary as ever."

While some students were in favour of the recommendation that a University Selective Service Board be established, Mary Reid, II House. Ec., said, "I'm not in favour of a selective service board in the university as I think the names of those who failed should be handed in directly to the government rather than necessitating the impracticability of utilizing a non-essential group."

President Cody's statement clarifying the status of undergraduates who failed to pass mid-term examinations met with general approval.

"I think it's very reasonable not to eject male students who have failed before they are called up," said Anne Smith, II Pass.

"It's wonderful—quite a relief—after the terrific strain under which we have have been labouring," said Jaqui Samson, I Loretto, with regard to the President's statement that women undergraduates need not worry about being turned out of the University because they fail to pass a term test. Mary Feldhans, II House Ec., said: "I think it is one of the most wonderful things I've read concerning this issue of the expulsion of women from University owing to term failures."

Of the President's statement, Ed. Shaw, II Dents, said, "All in all it is a fine policy, quite in keeping with a democracy at war. And as far as the girls are concerned — it wouldn't be particularly practicable to expell them from University as they have no great duty to perform outside."

"I know that girls in their graduating year at least, are reassured by Dr. Cody's statement," said Gerry Wilson, III Pass. "It seems only reasonable that they complete their last three months—surely they aren't that useful to Selective Service."

Lindsay Savage, II Arts, declared the fact that girls are not going to be expelled from University was an excellent thing "as in the post-war world we must think in terms of what we'll be useful for."

Women Weep In Gas Chamber

Girls in A.R.P. Course Taken Through Gas Chamber; Trip Gives Definite Proof that Respirators Work

DOG GOES TOO

By Norda Bennett

Yesterday the girls taking the A.R.P. course at the University were escorted through the gas chamber at the Exhibition Grounds, and given a whiff or two of tear gas. Late arrivals, hastening across from the car stop, were greeted by the sight of comrades in various stages of gasmaskedness and by the ominous sound of "Wait . . . we'll take care of you soon," from Sgt. S. D. Mossie, the Gas Instructor at Stanley Barracks.

A photographer from one of the evening papers, having taken pictures of campus cuties with and without gas masks, was grimly donning one himself, while an accompanying reporter was heard to mutter, "If they think I'm going in there, they're crazy!"

To strains of "I cried for you," and wails of "Oh, why did I come?" the first lot of lambs, waving a brave farewell to their friends, followed the sergeant into the chamber. Shortly afterward they were out again, handkerchiefs in hand, for as Sgt. Mossie puit it, "If you just come in and go out again, you mightn't believe there's any gas at all; you might think we were just foolin' you. So we make you take off your masks for a minute." And according to one of the early victims, "If they hadn't opened the door then, I'd have broken it down."

Meanwhile we of the second division were confronted with a paper absolving those in authority from any responsibility. After we had signed it, we were issued with knapsacks, which were donned by a process which practically amounted to shaking hands with ourselves behind our backs. Our masks were put on and adjusted.

The reappearing Sgt. Mossie and the Assistant Gas Instructor, Rifleman T. Shanks, would clamp huge fists around the rubber snouts, and instruct up to "Breathe." If what was visible of our faces turned purple, it meant that no air was entering through unexpected openings, and we might safely enter the

Chester's Cats Play In Hart House

Bob Chester's Band Jives for Servicemen at Special Performance in Hart House Theatre Yesterday

AIR-FORCE STARS

By Philip Kerwin

If it weren't for military discipline the hep-cat of the R.C.A.F., the W.R.C.N.S. and the No. 1 Canadian Army Course would have been stomping in the aisles yesterday to the syncopation blasted out by Bob Chester and his orchestra for their special benefit in Hart House Theatre. As it was, they showed their appreciation for the performance by loud and prolonged clapping.

At first we didn't think we'd get in. Chester and the boys were jealously guarded from civilians by one of the more zealous of our campus policemen who was under the illusion that they were a military secret. However, we managed to sneak in after the army, navy and air-force bad been taken care of trying our best not to look like a Japanese spy.

And there they were, in blue and khaki, clapping their hands on the after-beat to the mellow cacophony of the 15-piece outfit, neat as a row of pins and cleaming dully in their old-gold uniforms. And there was Bob Chester himself, appropriately slack-limbed and limp-shouldered, urging them on to finer frenzies with staccato gesticulations.

"And now," Chester announced, "something you don't get any more—'Home Cooking'."

With "Home Cooking" the joint, to put it bluntly, was jumping. It was one of those brass-smashing, drum-thumping numbers that brought out the jitterbug in the audience.

There was only one thing that tickled them more. And that was when dark, petite Betty Bradley stepped up to sing "Do It Again" with the unexpected assistance of one of the boys in blue.

"I'd like to have Betty tell you," said Chester, inadvertently pointing to an air-force man in the front row, "the story of a girl who got kissed."

And the airman, taking it as a personal invitation, clambered up on the stage and went through an unrehearsed and very hilarious performance with

Lord Hailey Will Deliver Second Falconer Lecture In Convocation Hall Monday

Great Britain, India and the Colonial Dependencies in the Post-War World Topic of Talk in Convocation Hall

IS BRITISH AUTHORITY

Rt. Hon. Lord Hailey will deliver the second lecture of the Sir Robert Falconer Lectureship next Monday night at 8:30 in Convoeation Hall on the subject of "Great Britain, India, and the Colonial Dependencies in the Post-War World."

Lord Hailey is the British authority on Dominion and Colonial Affairs. His Lorship is at present on a speaking tour of several of the universities on this continent. His addresses are for the purpose of clarifying student ideas on matters of current imperial policy and of correcting certain faulty popular beliefs concerning British policy.

The Sir Robert Falconer Lectureship was established in 1938 by friends of Sir Robert, who was President of the University of Toronto from 1907 to 1932. "The incentive behind the establisment of this lectureship was the desire to pay tribute to the kindly gentleman, who, a president of the University of Toronto, took a great interest in the welfare of the members of the staff and of the students," stated Dr. W. J. Dunlop, Director of the University Extension.

Born at Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island, in 1867, Sir Robert Falconer was educated chiefly at the University of Edinburgh. In 1907 he came as president of the University of Toronto from Nova Scotia where he had been president of a small theological college. "This quiet, systematic gentleman,"

Preacher to Address Engineer's Dinner

Rev. James A. Stewart, world-travelling preacher who witnessed the mobilization of no less that 14 nations before the rising tide of German oppression, will address an Engineers' dinner in Hart House next Thursday evening.

In the course of three years Mr. Stewart personally witnessed the despair and anguish of the many persecuted peoples througbout Europe and in many instances himself suffered persecution and near death. During the last year he has been lecturing in the United States and has been accompanied part of the time by Senator Benes of Czechoslavakia.

Born in Scotland, Mr. Stewart has been preaching and travelling since he was 15 years old. His Christian doctrines often brought him into difficulties with the Nazis who trailed him throughout Europe and, on one occasion, in Austria, announced that he had been killed by the Gestapo.

The occasion of Mr. Stewart's address this Thursday is a dinner of the Engineering branch of the V.C.F. Tickets are available at the Engineering Society Office.

Coats to Speak At R.C.I. Lecture

The Royal Canadian Institute's Lecture for February 6 will be "Population Relations Between Canada and the United States" by Dr. R. H. Coats.

A graduate of the University of Toronto, Dr. Coats has had a veried career. He began as a reporter on the old Globe, then became editor of the "Labour Gazette," then Chief Statistician of the Department of Labour, and finally Dominion Statistician and Census Controller, wbich position he held until his retirement.

In his lecture on Saturday night Dr. Coats will present some Canadian and American census figures and develop these into a series of purely inductive and quantitative analyses of the population relations of Canada and the United States for the last 50 years to bring out the basic significance of these facts in view of certain popular conceptions generally held.

Beveridge Plan To be Discussed

Prime Minister Herb. Christie of the University College Debating Parliament announced today that his government would discuss the Beveridge plan this coming Friday afternoon, but that they would not attempt to deal with the whole report. Hence the motion would read: The government recommends the adoption of a system of social security for Canada similar to that outlined for Britain by Beveridge in his report.

The goverament will be assisted by the Hon. Betsy Mosbaugh, Minister of Morals, and Hon. Mr. Littman, Minister of Finance.

Tbe Opposition will again be led by Hon. Dennis Wrong and his colleague, Melina Matsuka.

Bear And Seal Will Not Be There But The Music & Mermaids Will

By Ray Jackson

Tonight in Hart House it comes off—please don't ask what. Its' School Nite, of course. When we stated before that all the tickets were sold we later found our source of information slightly inacurate—"but mainly it were so." There have not been any for the last three or four days anyway.

Another source of music has been added to the roster. It is the All-Night Record Men who will hold jive sessions somewhere on the second floor of Hart House. If you are still interested in music, the engineers will provide their own six-piece aggregation to accompany the revue.

It is said that the health authorities have clamped down on the seal and bear act in the swimming pool idea. (Could it be that the Great Hall soup might acquire too much flavour?) However, the mermaids will still perform—a new show to be seen for the first time in Toronto. Howard Canty will hold up the funny side of life with stunt diving. Moving pictures will be shown in the theatre throught the evening.

Those who go will have to keep one eye on the program so that they won't miss more than they have to (only Superman will see everything). Dancing starts at eight o'clock and continues to one in the morning to the music of Morgan Thomas, the Modernaires, Mel Hamill, Fred Evis, Hannigan's Mountaineers, and the All-Night Record Men.

There are rumours that this year the show may break tradition by being clean and funny (not just clean—er, sorry, not just funny).

The Voice Of An Expert

The University of Toronto will stage its first special convocation of the year Monday evening in Convocation Hall for the conferring of an honorary LL.D. upon Lord Hailey, British expert in the field of imperial and colonial affairs.

Students will be well-advised to pay the visitor the honour of attending while he receives his degree from the hands of Chancellor Mulock, for the Falconer Lecture he will deliver following the ceremony should be of value to anyone of us who is interested in current affairs in Imperial politics. His Lordship is at present on a speaking tour of many of the major universities of this continent, where he has striven to correct certain of the popular fallacious beliefs concerning problems of government within the empire, notably in India.

Often visiting dignitaries who receive honours from this University deliver speeches which are interesting only to those who are already familiar with their subject matter. Lord Hailey is a man specially chosen for his ability to make his subject understandable and interesting to both undergraduates and professors. Monday evening should be reserved.

World-Conscious Plan

Interesting proposals for changes or expansion of education seem to be the order of the day, at least in the English-speaking countries, and these proposals certainly show a receptive attitude toward improvements of various flaws in the existing educational system. Yesterday we examined the attempt made by Stephens Junior College for women to deal with the ever-increasing need for trained personnel in air-jobs. Not only the United States, but also Great Britain, has come forward with ideas for change, and we here reprint an editorial from The Globe and Mail dealing with a proposal put forward by the British Association for the Advancement of Science:

"There constantly is emerging evidence of the continuous intellectual activity of the British people in discussing and mapping out plans for their own future after the war is won, and there seems to be no reluctance to advocate bold experiments and rather startling innovations. One of the most interesting of recent proposals in this line comes from a committee on post-war university education, established by that august body, the British Association for the Advancement of Science. It proposes that a year of national or international service should be interposed for young men between the time they leave their schools and enter a university. At present the average boy in Britain begins his university career at the age of 18, and it is suggested that hereafter his entry be deferred until the age of 19 in order that he may undertake such service. The service which young men would be asked to undertake would not necessarily mean military service, which would not long remain universal after the war, but it would embrace a wide range of activities, including some relating to the post-war reconstruction of Europe.

"The question, however, is raised whether the right stage in a student's career has been suggested for the year of service. If the year in which he would be given an opportunity to acquire practical experience of the affairs of the world came between his school and his university courses, the complete break might produce a serious dislocation and an interruption of studies which would force a student on entering his university to spend precious time regaining lost ground. So it is being advocated in some quarters that the year of public service should begin at the end of the university course, and it is argued that if this plan were adopted a young man would secure in the interval between his academic life and his professional career a stimulating experience which would be extremely valuable to him in almost any walk of life, and would be particularly useful if he chose to join the civil service or engage in teaching. The proposal of the committee of the British Association is for the moment without any official blessing, but the very fact that it has been endorsed by educationalist and sociologists of high standing and has become a subject of public discussion seems an indication of a healthy mental liveliness in Britain."

The English have long been known as an insular race, and they have at times been proud of that name. But the strain and the new world awareness caused by the war has brought an end to the term insular as applied to them. This suggestion that the youth of the nation might profitably undertake a year of some sort of service abroad, or at least connected with the many problems which will have to be solved in post-war Europe, points toward a recognition of the necessity for broad knowledge in a world whose boundaries are rapidly shrinking, and also to a desire to do something constructive about it. While complete details of the British Association's plans are not yet available, their proposal seems a good one, and one which might be adopted with profit not only in Britain but also in other countries. Its adoption in Canada would do much to overcome the hampering insularity which is holding back our progress as one of the world's nations.

Last Call

Contributions to the Canadian Aid to Russia Fund have been rolling in from all parts of the country, so that the original objective of one million dollars has been reached and topped. On our own campus the money to help our chief ally has also been coming in, although rather slowly, to the Students' Administrative Council office. The total of the contributions now received is over $400, with more still to come in.

The S.A.C. has sent out a call to all campus organizations which have not yet sent in their contributions to do so as soon as they can. Apart from the need to get the help to our ally as soon as possible, we have also an obligation to fulfil toward the Canadian Red Cross, which is in charge of contributions to the Fund. They set the date for the end of the drive for Russia at the end of January so that it would not interefere with the regular Red Cross spring drive for funds. The University, as did all other Canadian organizations contributing to the Russian Fund, agreed to the date set. It is now up to all of us to get our contributions in to S.A.C.

While the Fund is now closed to any more contributions, in order to compy with the agreement with the Red Cross, we can safely say that the final amount which this University contributes to Russian aid will be a satisfactory one. But to have a final amount the S.A.C. must have ALL campus contributions.

ART, MUSIC and Drama

Magnificent

Paul Robeson

Having heard Robeson at Eaton Auditorium last night, the insistent urge is felt to trot out all the superlatives and dust them off. He was magnificent.

The great negro basso, of towering vitality, showed his wide culture and intellect, singing in English, French, Spanish, Hebrew, Russian and Chinese. He was graciously complemented at the piano by his compatriot, composer-arranger Laurence Brown. Sharing the laurels of the evening was young William Schatzkamer, a pianist of rare promise, who played Bach, Brahms and Debussy with sure distinction.

A moving interlude in the early program was the Hassidic-Polish Chant, sung as a cry of the oppressed peoples. Then Mr. Robeson intoned the Monologue from Boris Goudonoff with the authentic passion of Chaliapin; the formic dissonances of Moussorgsky were superbly realized.

At the other end of the pole, but quite as pleasing in their own right, were the English folk melodies, in the polyphonic arrangements of Roger Quilter, such as Barbara Allen and Over the Mountain. Then there was timeless, memorable Water Boy, without which no program by this giant would be complete. And in ringing tones, Ch'i Lai, the maching song of the Chinese guerillas, sung as a tribute to valiant Madame Chiang Kai-Shek.

Mr. Robeson reached incomparable heights in the spirituels, Weepin' Mary, in the Burleigh arrangement, and Steal Away, and Joshua fit de battle ob Jericho subtley transcribed by his accompanist. He moved from great organ to 'cello and viol in his vocal registration, and spoke the plaintive phrases in a way none can surpass. It was a thing to remember.

The Varsity Reviews

Trinity Review

January, 1943

Again the Trinity University Review appears as a slim, undernourished volume, but the best of it is a vast improvement over anything appearing last month, and the worst of it has no merits worth mentioning.

The fiction section shows itself in generally better shape this issue. R. B. Howard, who sustained the department single-handed last month, has come through with another and better little story entitled, "A Day in the Life of a Postman." With a smooth style, an eye for normal and abnormal psychology, Howard is becoming a competitor in quantity and quality for the crown assumed by Vic's Rigmore Christopherson.

"Nothing Personal," by Sheila Sharpe, is a revealing little vignette with all the poignancy of listening to one side of a catty telephone conversation.

"Charwoman," by Emily Wadley, is a worthy enough little attempt at realism, but suffers from over-long sentences and a climax in murder which isn't particularly convincing.

In poetry Milt Wilson's name leads all the rest with "Tithonus Revisited," which decisively took the cash prize for the best contribution. Wilson also takes the unofficial title of strongest contributor by publishing a learned "Note on Johannes Brahms." The poem is far above the usual average of undergraduate verse and deserves better treatment that we have time to give it here. The "Note" sounds as though Wilson konws what he's talking about, and since he is, after all, a member of The Varsity's Art, Music and Drama Department, we must assume that he does.

The rest of the verse is either light stuff on local problems, or run-of-the-mill verse which sounds like obscure passages from "Hiawatha."

WILL THE BIG BLUE BOW AGAIN?

One year ago tomorrow, almost to the day, the Wayne Green Tartars exertcd visitors' privileges over the Varsity Blues to the tune of 50-35. The page-wide streamer in the following Monday's Varsity read "Big Blue Basketmen Bow to Wayne in Cage Classic," and according to the account it was one terrific affair. Evidently the Varsity Blues held the big Tartars to 17-14 in the first half due to a stonewall defence of Hal Axon and Bill Roberts. But the homesters tired in the closing minutes and let the Wayne team get away from them.

The Tartars had a super team then with only two defeats all year, so the loss of the home team was nothing unexpected. As a matter of fact, rather unexpected resistence was presented by the Blues. It seems that two men did most of the scoring for the visitors— chaps by the names of Holloway and VanVleck. They notched 15 and 12 points each. And when we look over the advance publicity sent by their full-time publicity expert we find those same two gentlemen sporting the Tartar uniform this year. Holloway is a dusky individual who can hit the twine from every angle imaginable and every time he comes into the opponent's end of the floor he is dangerous. Bill VanVleck, a guard, is somewhat the same except that his forte is distance shooting. We also notice they are second and third in their team's scoring for the season. But what is more startling they have another chap by the name of Mobley who has even higher scoring averages. All three have each collected over 80 points in the 11 games thus far. But despite the fact that every man on the team is over six-foot-one this seems to be a lean year for the Green and Gold. For it appears they have anly won four of their 11 starts so far in comparison with the two losses in the season of yesteryear.

So, this may be Varsity's time over Wayne. Last year Murray Thomson scored three points and Ken Tettmar two, and long Don Gibson collected six for the Blues. And of course they will have plenty of time to add to their toll over Wayne tomorrow. Gordie Wallace, Bill Dewar and Stu Scott were all in last year's lineup for the game. So it seems we have some veterans to cope with the coming Green and Gold Tartar tide. But of course the Blues will sadly miss such greats as Jack Lavarnway, who was the main sharpshooter with 17 points, and Bill Roberts and Hal Axon doing staunch guard duty. And without such a payoff man as Lavarnway there may be some difficulty in piercing the tight blanket defence that coach Newman Ertell usually presents.

BUT THAT AIN'T ALL . . .

On top of the terrific cage game in the big gym the "A" will have loads of other contests, matches and plain stunts. One such thing we were interested in was a series of tests to discover potential athletic ability in such fields as strength, muscles, balance, etc. The P. & H. E. boys are offering these tests in the wrestling room so that the male (and they aren't restricted to males) may strut his athletic prowess before surrounding presumably admiring members of the other sex. Apart from amusement these charts and tests are the real McCoy and some are used extensively by the American army. So, for another evening of interesting fun and merriment, we hope to see even a larger crowd than last week. But remember the door closes at 9:30, so come early, avoid the rush and have a full evening of inexpensive entertainment.

U.C. Skaters Sink Sr. School; Jr. School Defeats S.P.S. III

Red and White's J. Graham Has Two Assists to Defeat Senior School 2-1 Last Night in Hot Game

G. Ball Is High Scorer for Junior School as S.P.S. III Pucksters Go Down Fighting By 4-2 Score

FREQUENT PENALTIES

Last night in a hectic ice shuffle, U.C. I clinched their hold on the upper rung by eking out a mere 2-1 defeat to the Sr. Schoolmen.

This encounter started as a fast but clean game of heads-up hockey but it ended by just being a fast game. The Red and White boys got under way with great gusto; they made their weight and long practice hours felt by keeping the play in front of the Schoolmen's net. There J. Graham rifled a shot to A. Nesbitt, U.C.'s able centre man, who bulged the twine for the first ally after two minutes of play.

Striving to tie it up the Seniors broke the tenacious wall of muscle obstructing their path but failed to break through the padding of G. Workman in goal. The play remained at centre ice until J. Graham picked up the puck, passed to Phoenx who sank the disk for the second counter. The score was 2-0 at half time.

In the second half the teams fought bravely for supremacy and penalties were frequent. The Seniors showed an amazing quantity of speed but failed to produce the necessary team work to capitalize on their speed. However, Douglas, of the Seniors, was able to slam in the face-saving goal before the final whistle.

U.C. I—R. Skinner, W. Nicholls, H. Kuryluck, L. Phoenix (1), J. Graham (A), A. Nesbitt, J. Amell, G. Whitby, G. Warren, B. Wade (A).

Sr. S.P.S.—J. Dickie, M. Douglas (1), R. Maughan, D. Grosskurth, R. Workman, P. Kelley, W. Moeser, R. Quinttenton, H. Seymour, R. Hamilton, G. Workman.

JUNIORS TALLY FIRST

A fast-skating Jr. School team handed their fellow engineers and rivals, S.P.S. III, a 4-2 setback in last night's hockey encounter.

Jr. School took immediate control of the puck and for the most part proved worthy of that feat. Within one minute of playing time H. Boynton, taking a pass from G. Ball, drew first blood for the Juniors. J. Boa, another Junior, to prove that the first goal was not an accident, clinched his team's position by netting the disk after receiving a well-aimed pass from a Ridler.

The Third team, rather provoked by the Juniors' audacious onslaught, staged a mass attack which bore the fruit of one goal in their favour. From here on the play developed into a tug-of-war, neither one willing to give an inch but both striving to take a foot. Shortly before half time G. Ball managed to slug a loose puck into the twime, making the half-time score 3-1 in favour of the Juniors.

The second half was played cautiously and methodically. Several times Spence of the Juniors was successfully called upon to save some difficult angle shots. G. Ball again was the first to start the scoring after receiving a long assist from Boynton. Shortly before the final whistle Iglesias made a lone break from behind his own net to score the last goal.

Jr. S.P.S.—H. Spence, A. Ridler (A), S. Ratcliffe, G. Ball (2) (A), H. Stricker, H. Boynton (1) (A), B. Houston, J. Boa (1., P. McDonnagh, H. Foulds, G. Carroll.

Noble With 13 Paces III Civil

One of the closest of this season's noon-hour basketball contests ended with III Civil nudging past III Mechanicals at the tape to reap a 27-26 victory. The Civils gained their single point margin in the first half and both teams picked up 12 counters in the last half.

Jack Noble led the scoring parade with a tidy 13, while Harry Berrin toiled in a losing cause, putting in five push-shots for the Mechanicals.

The Sportswoman

By Betsy Gowan

Of all the things that were discussed at the first meeting of the Women's Athletic Dicertorate on Monday afternoon, there was one that will particularly interest anyone who idulges in sport of any kind. It concerns something that is every important to us today—our HEALTH.

At some time or other all we athletes have wandered over to 44 Hoskins Street where Dr. Mulock and her assistants hold court and pronounce verdicts on physical fitness. Perhaps you, too, have sat for many long minutes twiddling your various thumbs or reading the various magazines whilst awaiting the approach of the zero hour. Then, when you are all through and have your eligibility slip safely tucked under your arm, quite humanly and naturally you breathe a sight of relief and consider your affairs with Dr. Mulock over for the season. But, "Aye, there's the rub."

We talk a lot about enthusiasm for our various campus sports—because we realize just what an important part they play in making our college life a better-rounded out and a happier one—but, over-enthusiasm can be just as dangerous as none at all. Dr. Mulock says there have been instances where players who have been injured have been put back into the play when they were in no fit condition to carry on and that often people who are ill do not report back to her before playing again. We say that This Sort of Thing Must Stop.

If the coaches, the managers, and the players themselves do not co-operate in this matter, there is a likelihood that certain compulsive regulations will be made. In addition, it fs quite likely that some form of penalty will be meted out to the team that disregards this piece of advice. It is the duty of the manager of a team to see why her players are away and if they are ill to have them checked up immediately by Dr. Mulock or her assistants. Permanent disabilities may result from carelessness in this matter, and although it may seem to be a trivial concern at the time, our medical advisor wishes, indeed insists, that we give the matter our serious attention—whether it concerns us this year or next.

What do you say, chilluns?

Chemical Nine Beats Metal 13-7

A 12-run deficit was too much for a fighting II Metal nine to overcome, and they fell victims to II Chemical by a 13-7 score in yesterday noon's baseball encounter.

The Chemical hitting attack was evenly distributed with every player at least denting the plate once, and Herb Young, Ross Moores, Bill Anderson and Lefty Jarvis pacing the parade with two runs cach.

The Chemicals garnered their first dozen runs in the opening two innings, but wchc held to a lone tally by relief pitcher Bryan McDonough, who took the mound at the beginning of the third.

Gord Webster led the Metal hitters with two for two and a walk, being the only player to cross the plate twice for their team. Their six-run rally in the third, however, fell short.

II Chem.—Young (2), Stephens (1), Ball (1), Anedrson (2), Thompson (1), Spafford (1), Moores (2), Jarvis (2), Allan (1).

II Metal—Webster (2), Francis (1), Kurata, Bourke (1), Ferrier (1), Gamble (1), Rosenthal (1), Gill, Watson, McDonough.

Canadian Army Routine Order No. 2763 dated 2 Jan. 43 is re-published for information and guidance of all concerned.

"Rifles and Machine Guns—Oiling of Magazines:

1. Under no circumstances should oil be used in the inside of magazines. If oil is used, it will not only oil the rounds which will give irregular ballistics, but will also collect dust and grit and eventually cause a stoppage.

2. The magazines must be cleaned out periodically, and immediately after a dust storm or use in a sandy place.

Rifles and Machine Guns—Care of Barrels after Firing Blank Ammunition:

3. Boiling water MUST be passed through the Barrels of all Rifles and Machine Guns immediately after firing blank ammunition, as the decomposition products from the cap composition will form a fast corrosive compound, with ultimate injury to the Barrel.

4. Funnels, Hot Water, can be obtained on demand in the usual manner.

An additional starter was Topsy, Sgt. Mossie's dog, who frisked around, ungasmasked and unharmed. The fumes merely made her sneeze once or twice.

Herded into the small enclosure that was the gas chamber, suffering alike from claustrophobia and weakness in the knees, we were just beginning to feel at our case when the cruel sergeant commanded us to remove our cherished, protecting masks, and then read a tiny notice pinned up in the corner remote from the door. It read, as we found out later by means of judicious enquiry, "Your respirators are 100 per cent gas-proof!"

The respirators, which were left in a dismal pile in an adjoining room, must all be disinfected and repacked. The job, taking about six minutes per respirator, is done by Sgt. Mossie and Rfmn. Shanks.

Beef and Brawn Are His Trade

For 10 years wiry, steel-muscled Charlie Zwygard has been teaching University students how to stoop to conquer weight, but his career just goes to prove that the gods of sporting fans are unpredictable.

When the 40-year-old Gymnastics Director first started hanging around gymnastic emporia in his Swiss hometown, Solothurn, he really intended entering the electrician trade. But the inhabitants of sports valhalla deemed otherwise and his gymnastics hobby wound up as a profession.

A qualified electrician, he still knows how to handle broken fuses, but as an instructor he is more proficient at building up brokendown bodies. He is proud of the fact that until the war hit intercollegiate gymnastic meets he supervised seven straight championship teams.

If all goes well, he points out, this ycar's gym tcam should rcach an equal top standard when the calisthenics athletic night rolls around on Feb. 27. His team will give four demonstrations: on the high bar, parallel bar, mats and horses.

Scolding those students who shirk weekly one-hour P.T. periods, Charlie recalls the two-hour stiff drill he once supervised at his homeland's Biberist Club where members would drop in after work to keep in trim.

Wistfully, Charlie likes recalling his gymnastic heyday when intercollegiate tcams were the style. His classes spawned such top-drawer gymnasts as Stuart MacDonald, now a medico at St. Michael's Hospital, big-framed Jack Toye, now in the Navy, and fleet-footed Wilson Mark, now at the Toronto Hydro Electric Co.

"In those days we had 20-odd students turn out for a weekly onceover," laments Charlie, "but C.O.T.C. robs students of time, and we get about eight fellows now participating."

Charlie's career is as varied as the list of his calisthenic exercises. A graduate from the famous Swiss School of National Gymnastics, he was struck by the wanderlust and meandered from Switzerland into Egypt. Here he worked as an electrician and it is unreliably reported that he gained a few honest shekels on the side from desert sheiks by exercising camels and so reducing humps on their backs.

At various times farming, then working as an electrician, coaching at the Royal Canadian Yacht Club, then working as an electrician, doing odd jobs, then working as an electrician, he finally found himself at the University of Toronto. And there he is now.

KWOTABLE KWOTES DEPT. And then there was the time when a certain campus publication finally got around to having its picture took for the Torontonensis. Seems as how there jinst weren't enough chairs to go around, or maybe there were too many editors, but anyway, everyone sat down except this one overset editor. Summing the situation up in a glance, he stretched himself seductively on the floor in front of the group and gravely announced:

AND THEN THERE WAS the time that this guy came wandering into his class minutes late—about 15 of 'em, to be exact. Then prof, being one of that kind, waxes rather indignant about it and in a sulking tone queries—

"And where were you all this time?"

"Oh, I've been at P.T. class," the lateeomer nonchalantly responded as he slip into his scat.

"How many others in this class took P.T. in the last period?" asked the prof getting quite nasty about the whole thing.

About 20 hands shoot up. (Traitors!)

"Well?" The state rested its case.

"But I took a shower!" came the plaintive reply.

ONE OVERHEARS the strangest things if one only listens long enough. There were once two young studes who were discussing, oddly enough, women. It seems that they both had problems. Stude No. 1 had a rival and was quite worried about it. So they talked and plotted and consoled for quite a while. Finally Stude No. 2 turned the conversation his way.

"I sure envy you," he sighed.

"Howcome?"

"Competition. . . . It makes life interesting."

"Well whatabout you?"

"Only competition I got is the Girl Guides."

stated Dr. Dunlop, "guided and directed the University of Toronto during the quarter of the century in which its grcatest material expansion took place."

Since his retirement in 1932, Sir Robert Falconer has not been idle. "Although Feb. 10 will find him in his 76th year," continued Dr. Dunlop, "Sir Robert is still quite busy writing, chiefly on theological and international subjects."

The leetureship bearing his name, deals with some aspect of contemporary internationalism to commemorate Sir Robert's interest in the promotion of an intelligent understanding of world affairs by young Canadians. The lectures are given once every two years. They are delivered by authoritative persons eminent in world affairs, yet of a non-partisan nature.

This lectureship was inaugurated in April, 1939, by the Rt. Hon. Earl Baldwin of Bewdley, K.G., former Prime Minister of Great Britain. Due to the outbreak of war, the lectures were interrupted and the lecture by Lord Hailey will be the second of the series.

"Tell me, what did you do to me?" she sang coyly, fluttering her eyebrows at him. The guy mugged bcautifully in reply, and the next time Betty fluttered here eyelashes, she did it at a safe distance. They practically had to shove the boy off the stage after the number, he was having such a fine time.

That was the highlight of the show, but before they were through, the band had given out with some boogie-woogie, aecompanied by wistful, dark-eyed Gene Howard in some ballads, and kicked the "V-for-Victory" around in a jam-session version of the three dots and a dash called, for some obscure reason, "From Maine to California."

Playground Jobs Hectic Experience

Summer playground work is a wonderful experience, according to Barbara MacIlroy of Second Year Law. You meet children of all kinds and nationalities, with the most poetic of names!

"I was in one of those districts where you hold your nose and step on the gas," she said. "Or used to, back in the good old days." The little Negro children were nicest, she decided, since blackness was their birthright, while the other children were just dirty.

Bert McComisky and Jim Bitove recalled a picnic with a troupe of children all under 10 years of age. One young vagabond of kindergarten age caused excitement by making the trip without parental knowledge or consent, only to be apprehended hours later in the middle of a swim.

Another adventure of Bert's occurred when he felt called upon to eject a certain individual who regarded persistence as a virtue. "Whynch tell his mother over there," another urchin suggested. His mother, as it turned out, spoke nothing but Greek, but peace was restored while a 10-year-old acted as interpreter.

Parisian Theatre Topic Of U.C. French Club

The U.C. French Club Thursday night heard an address by Professor R. D. C. Finch on the theatres of Paris and, in particular, on the contemporary French play "Altitude 3200," which will be staged by the U.C. club on Feb. 20.

Professor Finch said the play is representative of our times and expresses the point of view of youth. It concerns various mountain climbers who lose their way in the Alps and are trapped in a small chateau by a heavy snowfall. "But all is not l'amour," he said, "for the play is full of surprises."

The Parisian theatre may be divided into three categories, said Professor Finch, the theatre d'Etat, attended largely by students; the theatre des boulevards, presenting predominantly modern plays; and the Petit Theatre, which somewhat resembles our Little Theatre movement.

U.C. Debaters For Social Aid

A resolution that there should be a plan for social security adopted in Canada along lines similar to those set forth in the Beveridge report was passed by a vote of 16-9, at Friday's session of the University College Parliament. Passage of the bill followed the formation of a coalition cabinet on the invitation of the Prime Minister.

Speaking on the Bill, Prime Minister Herb. Christie said that although Canada is not similar to Great Britain, there are the same basic social problems in both countries. The days of post-war rehabilitition should not find us ill-prepared to cope with conditions as they will exist. While there may be opposition to the bill from the standpoint of those people who feel they represent the interests of the status quo, the Prime Minister continued, all the land-marks which have hindered the social development of the world must be done away with.

The Beveridge plan aims to provide economic security. The initial step in this plan demands that there be cooperation between the state and the individual. This plan uses the experience of the past as a teacher but not as a barrier to innovation, and advocates insurance against all types of legitimate interruption in wage earning.

Dennis Wrong, Leader of the Opposition, said that difficulties would be inevitable in the introduction of a report similar to the Beveridge report in Canada; this report is applicable to social conditions in England which differ from those in Canada. Constitutional difficulties would arise and if this report were to be introduced as a federal measure, a definite amendment to the British North America Act would be necessary.

Canada has to build such a system of social reform on her own basis, he continued. As far as social legislation is concerned, Canada is behind the other leading nations of the world. Something that will not serve as a mere palliative to social defects is needed, something which will bring real social security. We must start with the defects of the economic system itself, and them come to the point where we can deal with its consequences.

Minister for the Investigation of Morals, Betsy Mosbaugh, said that we must arrive at some means of maintaining liberty and security, when once victory is attained. The need for social action is so great that any man-made

Few Tubercular Cases Uncovered by X-Ray

Two thousand chest X-ray photographs have been taken of Toronto University students this year, and three cases of tuberculosis have been discovered. Several students as yet uninfected have been asked to repeat the test at regular intervals, and to get lots of rest in the meantime.

Those who have not heard from the Health Service can assume that their X-rays are normal. The amount of tuberculosis on the campus seems to be much less this year than last, according to the X-rays taken.

Must Double Number Of Blood Donors

Clinic on Sherbourne Street Now Open Monday and Thursday for Men and Tuesday for Women; Group Appointments Wanted

The Canadian Government has asked the Red Cross to double its quota of blood donors for 1943 to 1200 per week. To meet this demand it will be necessary to obtain the aid of every potential donor, and in this regard there has been a further simplification of the procedure for university students.

An explanation was advanced by the Publicity Department of the Toronto Branch of the Red Cross to those students who signed Blood Bank cards in the big University drive last spring and were never notified. As there are over 700 donors a week at the Sherbourne Street clinic, the Red Cross notifies all contributors by telephone in order to save postal expense. The phoning is done by volunteers who only work during the daytime when the University student is presumably taking lectures. Often these messages went astray, while other students who were contacted were unable to attend the clinic on either specified day.

It is hoped that these students will respond to the new system which requires no prearranged appointment. The clinic at 410 Sherbourne is open for men students between 9 and 1 on Mondays and Thursdays and for women on Tuesday morning. The only requirement is a "fatless" breakfast which means toast without butter, creamless coffee, and no bacon.

A more satisfactory plan is for organized groups to make arrangements for larger bodies (20 or more) to make their contributions on one specified day. This plan is already adopted by the U.A.T.C. and could be applied to fraternities and individual years or departments of the different faculties. This system is preferred by the Red Cross and they will gladly assist any group in its organization.

Weed 154 More At Saskatchewan

Saskatoon, Feb. 7 — (CUP) — One hundred and fifty-four students of the University of Saskatchewan have recently been reported to the District Officer Commanding. The number includes 65 from the Engineering Faculty, 43 from Arts, 14 from Regina College, and the remainder from Agriculture, Pharmacy and Accounting.

This brings the approximate total of Canadian university students reported as unsastifactory in accordance with government regulations to 846. At the University of Sasketchewan the number announced today brings the local total to 213.

Saskachewan students thus affected can only apply for deferment on grounds other than as university students, as for example as farmers.

The final decision as Saskatchewan University was made by a committee of faculty representatives and by Col. Redford as representative of the District Officer Commanding. Prior to this meeting individual faculties had reviewed each case; the committee reviewed all cases in order to ensure similarity of treatment of students of all colleges.

Aussie Airmen Cool to 'Arsenic'

Kingston, Feb. 7 — (CUP) — The Queen's Drama Guild presented "Arsenic and Old Lace" at the Norman Rogerts Airport last week, to an audience composed mainly of Englishmen in the Air Force and Fleet Air Arm, with a sprinkling of Australians and New Zealanders. The performance followed a three-night run on the university campus.

The players noticed a different audienee reaction from that which they had received in playing to Canadians. This was explained by the fact that to some extent the American slang of the play and its puns and wisecracks were unfamiliar to the audience.

One of the officers said that station audiences were frequently known to boo and hiss performeances that did not appeal to them, and that the Drama Guild should take credit from the fact that this did not happen to them.

Graduating Science Students Must Fill Out New Forms

The President of the University has received from the Wartime Bureau of Technical Personnel, Ottawa, questionnaires which are to be filled out by all students, both men and women, in Science and Engineering, who expect to graduate in 1943.

Students in Science in the Faculty of Arts, i.e., students enrolled in the Fourth Year of all Honour Courses in groups C and D, and certain students in the Fourth Year of the General Course, are required to come to the Registrar's Office, Simcoe Hall, without delay, in order to fill out these forms.

Students of the graduating year in the Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering will fill out these forms according to arrangements to be made by the Secretary of the Faculty, of which due notice will appear on the Faculty bulletin boards.

These forms are quite separate and distinct from, and are in addition to, the declaration forms regarding which an announcement appeared a few days ago.

Students in the graduating year in the Faculty of Household Science will fill out the forms in the Household Science Building under the supervision of the Secretary of that Faculty.

Staff Aloof Queen's View

Kingston, Feb. 7—(CUP)—A student opinion poll taken at Queen's during the past week showed a majority in favour of closer relations between students and staff.

Most of the students in both Arts and Sciences believed it would be advantageous for all courses to organize small groups similar to those in English and American universities to discuss students' problems with professors.

Arts men and women complained that professors held themselves aloof, conscious of their intellectual superiority. Science and Meds ,however, did not uphold this view as these faculties are more closely knit.

Eight-three per cent of the students expressed the opinion that they should be invited to faculty member's homes for tea and not only for various club meetings. In answer to a question regarding the student's participation in class discussion Artsmen replied that they were afraid of being considered "apple-polishers," but Science and Meds proved quite willing to ask questions and have them criticized.

Student Health Found 'Not Bad'

Of the 3,360 male students examined by the University Health Service until the end of January, 2,961 have been found fit for military training. Of the latter, 2,597 are fit for any type of service. In addition to those examined here, 111 men have been declared fit by the U.A.T.C., whose ratings are accepted by the Health Service.

"The health of the student body is not bad," said Colonel Urquhart, Director of the University Health Service.

"Infection is less here than in the rest of the population. I have also received the impression that students are ill less often now than they were before military training came in."

The number of unfit, 399 men or 11.5 percent, is slightly lower than for the general population, as gauged by military authorities, since most students come from bomes financially able to give children proper care. Visual defect is one of the chief factors placing students in the lower categories.

The annual physical examination is not compulsory, except for military puroses. The number of men examined is only a part of the male student enrolment of about 3,900. Such an annual examination is higluly desirable, however, and may be made compulsory. Students who have not yet come to the Health Service are urged to do so.

A summary of the classification by the Health Service and the U.A.T.C. is as follows.

A and B . .	2,708	78.0 per cent
C	364	10.5 per cent
D and E	399	11.5 per cent
	3,471	100.0 per cent

The Case For Pass

Clause number five of the report of the recent Student-Staff Conference recommends "That the standards of the Pass Course in Arts be altered in such a manner as to approximate to an Honour Course" and it has already caused heated comment. This is natural as the case for the Pass Course stands at present, with this much maligned course in the position of the academic whipping-boy. Students should not feel obliged to say, as they do now when asked what course they are in, that they "are only in Pass." The feeling of inferiority implied in that remark should certainly be dispelled, and as a step in this direction the sub-committee for the Pass Course drafted the clause we have quoted, to be included in the Conference report.

To alter the standards of the Pass Course so that they would approximate to an Honour Course would mean either that the passing examination mark be raised to the present standard of Honour Course examinations, with the Pass Courses themselves left as they are now, or that the courses be altered so that they are similar to those offered to Honour Course students. Or these two measures might be tied together.

As the courses stand it would seem that the raising of the examination standard would force some of the Pass Course students to study harder, but, except in those courses where the instruction is already near or at the Honour level, Pass would still not "approximate to an Honour Course." To change the content and instruction of the Pass Course so that they became Honour Courses would involve difficulties which our President has already pointed out in his address to the re-convened Conference last Wednesday night.

Dr. Cody expressed his doubt as to value of such a change in that the course was designed for those students not capable of the higher requirements of an Honour Course. If a person works hard in the Pass Course, he said, he should get a good education. Here, we think, the President pointed to one of the root weaknesses of the Pass Coures: not that the course itself is weak, but that too few people realize its potentialities. The Pass Course can truly be what one makes it.

The President then pointed out that if instructors would have more respect for the course, and did all they could to make it more honourable and worthy, it would become so. This is certainly true. Many ills of the Pass Course have come from a certain disdain for it on the part of its professors and lectures. But it is also happily true that there are many popular and well-loved instructors on the campus who take the pains with their Pass lectures and students that they do with their Honour courses, and to them we raise our hat. If their attitude were more general it would do much to reinstate the Pass Course.

However, Dr. Cody mentioned and condemned one other condition which does the Pass Course, and also the University, no credit. Students who are capable of taking an Honour Course but who have entered the Pass Course through laziness or indifference he termed "the curse of the university." These thoughtless students, while they are doing themselves no good, are also helping to lower the standard of the Pass Course and, in turn, that of the University itself.

The University needs the Pass Course for the benefit of the "average" student, as its needs Honour Courses to accommodate scholars in search of specialized knowledge. To improve the Pass Course most we need more interest shown for it by both staff and students, rather than a belated attempt to make it a small imitation of the Honour Courses. Then we shall have a course to be proud of, and there will be no need for anyone to say they are "only in Pass."

C.O.T.C. Problems

The news that military officials are doing all they can to arrange that military training camps for students be held either immediately before or just after the academic session, has done much to reassure C.O.T.C. members on one of the points which has caused much disatisfaction with their course. As one of the resolutions in the section on Military Training of the report of the Student-Staff Conference, it would be for the benefit of everyone concerned if it were adopted before the end of the present term, thus eliminating any waste of time or any break in the student's summer work.

A second recommendation of the Conference, "That all men students who are physically fit be required to take two years of basic military training, preferably in the first two years of their course," and "that military training taken in the first two years be accepted in lieu of the non-military Physical Training required by the university," also meet with general agreement. Since the great majority of students intend to join the armed forces on graduation, and many do before that time, they should gain the basis of their military training in the C.O.T.C. as early as possible, if it is to be of real value. And also, since time-tables are crowded, substitution of the C.O.T.C. for physical training credits would be a fair plan.

Logically following the preceeding clauses comes a recommendation "That students proceeding to the armed forces be given further military training specially designed to meet the requirements of commissioned rank." To repeat the basic training which the advanced C.O.T.C. members have already mastered, without instructing them in important knowledge they will need as officers of the forces is more than a complete waste of time. It not only discourages the Corps members, but it also damages respect for the C.O.T.C. as a whole, when the university students proceed to further training at military centres. The great need for officers to have knowledge in the handling of men seems at present to be completely neglected in the training as it is given. This, and an adequate idea of the problems they will have to meet and solve when they reach post-university training camps and the regular services, would do much to answer many of the problems in the minds of C.O.T.C. members. Knowledge of these important branches of their future trade should certainly be taught them.

One of the Conference's recommendations which has aroused most discussion is "That military training in the university be revised to make it more effective, for example, by elimination of superfluous repitition and the introduction of adequate incentives to serious effort." We have already dealt with the question of superfluous repitition. While the phrase "adequate incentives to serious effort" is vague, it seems to be aimed at matters which should also be dealt with. Possibly, as with the case of the Pass Arts Course, a greater interest on the part of instructors, especially in the methods of warfare developed in World War II, would serve to whet intcrest in effort. As time goes on, however, this is sure to come about, as land warfare develops.

The healthy interest and criticism aroused by the military recommendations of the Conference serve to show how important a place military training has in the minds and lives of the students. A desire for improvement in this direction cannot but have a beneficial effect on the war effort of both the University and Canada.

ART MUSIC Drama

The First Rule Of Art

Sincerity

Every now and then, someone writes this department a letter about a criticism which has recently appeared. Usually, the letter disagrees with some particular music review (drama and art are almost never touched) and it is usually anonymous.

Just the other day, I was asked how one finds the basis for his criticisms. How can one attack a great musician and praise a minor, quite unimportant one?

Some time ago, there was an editorial in this column which pointed out that all criticism must eventually rest on the personal impression given by the art in question. That is just another way of saying that aesthetic appreciation is something which cannot be bound up by rules, that any rule must be broken sometimes to include something which certainly is art but which refuses to be conventional.

But, all this does not say that it is impossible to lay down a general canon of criticism, statements which will be true in most cases and of most arts. The first of these in importance, to me at least, is the sincerity of the artist. That is the fundamental difference between a "pot-boiler" and a great work of art. Mozart wrote his music, as did Hadyn an others, in order to live; but his pot-boilers were inspired by his own true musicianship and, in consequence, are true art.

Bringing those statements into the field of performance, only the artist who plays with more than his fingers is great. The true musician gives himself every night to his audience. Perhaps there is the undercover reason that he wants the money which his audience will give him. Perhaps that is why he has come to the concert hall. Once, however, he starts his recital, the money, the commercial angle, even his own egoism, are all forgotten and he is playing because he loves playing the music, because he is compelled by the artistry within him.

Now all this comes back to certain statements which are sometimes made in this column—that so and so gave a bad recital, played down to his audience, chose music which would appeal without any interpretation, and got away with it because the audience was not sufficeintly critical.

The first rule of art is sincerity.

Peg Party Prices To Aid Russia

Board Subsidizes Effects of Rise in Dance Costs in Order to Avoid Inflation and Preserve National Unity

QUEEN WON'T TALK

Ottawa, Feb. 7 — (CUP) — Usually unreliable sources report here that the Moretime Parties and Play Board is about to embark upon a comprehensive program to increase the prices of Terpsichorean entertainment, more especially in that region in Toronto (stretching northwest from the Royal Snort Hotel to the Medical Arts Bldg.) in which a serious shortage is said to exist.

Interested officials say that if the Board does not soon take steps to remedy this deplorable situation the decline in revenue from our trade with our noby ally Terpsichorea will in all probability have to be met by a subsidy from the Aid to Russia Fund.

Board officials hint that such a price rise will make unnecessary the reprinting of ration coupons U (the blue ones) which are in use at present to regulate purchase of Terpsichorean products. The money thereby saved in reduced printing costs will be used in accordance with the government's recently adopted policy of subsidizing student incomes, so that the said students will be able to pay the enhanced prices of Terpsichorean products. This ingenious method of short-circuiting the money involved will help to avoid undue inflation.

At a recent meeting of the University Splutterary Society the chairman was heard to comment: "Now we can draw down a decent grant from the Aid to Russia Fund." The notorious maestro, Hot Pester, also expressed approval with the remark: "Now we can get our coats cleaned."

The Queen of the Arts Ball refused to comment.

Wayne Roll Up 62-44 Win Over Big Blue Hoopsters At Hart House "A" Night

Athletic Night Featured by Stellar Basketball; Gibson, Wallace and Thompson Lead for Varsity in First Half as Tartars Prove Over-eager; Then Invaders Score 30 Points in 15 Minutes

VAN VLECK OUTSTANDING FOR VISITORS

By Gordon Mack

Wayne, Wayne go away,
But come back some other day,
Without VanVleck and Halloway.

We really don't mean that. The green-garbed hoopsters from Wayne University provided us with one of the most exciting games of the year last Saturday when they polished off our Blues by a 62-44 count. The boys from Detroit lacked the methodical precision in their plays that gave Rochester U. their triumph last week, but a flurry of baskets in the latter part of the first half gave them an imposing lead which the Stevensmen couldn't wear down.

Bill VanVleck was the outstanding player on the floor. It was his last game with the Tartars and he sank 24 points during the night to celebrate it. This was exactly double his effort against us last year. Just to impress the fact that the Blues should have invited their guests up for next Staurday instead, their second high scorer for the evening was also playing his last game before entering the U.S. Navy Air Corps in the person of Paris "Twelve-Point" DiSante.

It is authoratively rumoured that a black cat crossed Don Gibson's path just prior to the game, and what happened to Don should be justification to exterminate all the black cats from Memphis to Mobile. The tall boy, who is the big gun for the '43 Blues, although he sank 9 points, which is par for most forwards, had one of those nights when the ball wouldn't behave for him, and he was robbed time and again by shots which could have rolled either way. Gord Wallace took over the night's scoring crown for the Varsity by potting 11 much-needed points,

VanVleck started the game's scoring for Wayne with Don Gibson immediately nullifying the lead. After Mobley and Stu Scott had both missed free tosses for their teams, the Blues began to look as though they had revenge in their hearts. Gord Wallace intercepted a pass on a Tartar pressing play and broke away for a two-pointer. Then Murray Thompson made one of the prettiest Varsity baskets of the night on a deceptive play from just outside the keyhole zone. Wayne were over-eager to tie matters up, and when their passing got a bit sloppy, Gord Wallace picked up a loose ball and made the score 8-2. Irving Cohen interrupted the Blue parade temporarily as he sank a shot, but Wallace netted two more baskets to put the Blues the furthest ahead they got all night with the count 12-4. At this point the tide of battle changed and a tidal wave of Tartar baskets enveloped the Blue's baskets in one of the most concentrated scoring exhibitions ever witnessed in the lower gym. In the brief span of about 15 minutes, the fugitives from St. Patrick's Day scored 30 points while holding the Toronto quintet to a mere half-dozen tallies. It was Irving Cohen who again sparked the Wayne team as he sank two baskets in a row to make the score 12-8. In rapid succession free shots by VanVleck and Halloway followed by a basket by VanVleck tied the score. Gene Durocher came on the floor and promptly put the Blues out in front again, but Wayne were not to be denied. VanVleck tied the score again for the green-shirts and then Disanto sank his first basket of the evening to put the Detroit college-boys ahead. Durocher missed on one of his rare free throws, then Kip Harding and Paris DiSanto sank another four points as play roughened up and Wayne began to draw away. Don Gibson found his eyes temporarily as he sank a long one from mid-court without it grazing the hoop, but for every Varsity basket the Wayne men counted two. Joe Halloway, a coloured boy with a lot of jump, knocked in Bill VanVleck's rebound, and then VanVleck sank one himself from under the basket. Ken Tettmar's basket made the score 24-18, but the Tartar's seemed to have a radio-beam trained on that basket until half-time. VanVleck sank a free throw, then Cohen took the ball and put it through the netting after some careless Blue passing had given Wayne the ball. DiSanto from mid-court and Halloway on a rebound were the next four points, with VanVleck's basket and Cohen's free throw ending a disastrous quarter-hour for the Stevensmen with the count 34-18 against them.

The second-half began with Wayne having all the scoring chances but failing to sink many. Joe Halloway increased the Tartar lead, followed by DiSanto, who counted another couple on a left-handed push-shot from way out on one side. Murray Thompson opened the Blue scoring after a long drought, and after Gibson and Wallace hand sunk a free throw each the score had become 38-22 with the Blues showing a lot of fight and carrying the play consistently into Wayne territory. Gibson sandwiched a basket between three picture plays by VanVleck which extended the Wayne lead by another four points. Baskets by DiSanto, Hank Goldstein, Halloway, Ken Tettmar, Cohen and Joe Meschino were alternated as the play ranged from end to end and neither team was able to gain an advantage. Play began to resemble the half-time tumbling exhibition as collisions became frequent and shooting erratic. Gord Wallace garnered himself another two points to bring the totals up to 50-32. Sparked by Gene Durocher and Joe Meschino, Varsity began to close the gap as Meschino nullified DiSanto's two points and Durocher sank two, Goldstein one as he ran under the basket and Meschino another on a push-shot from inside the corner area. With the score 52-41, however, VanVleck scuttled the Toronto chances as he added a basket and two free throws to his team's total. Durocher responded with a free throw for our side, but time was short and hope for victory had dimmed. VanVleck potted his 24th point before he left the floor, and he and Joe Halloway were given a huge ovation by the crowd for their outstanding performances. Jeschke counted a basket for the Tartars as he came on the floor to bring Wayne to the 60 mark. Don Gibson then ended the Toronto scoring as he had begun it with a set-shot from deep down the court. Kip Harding, who was also playing his last game before graduating and being inducted in the U.S. Navy, finished the game's scoring.

The Wayne squad used a man-to-man defence that consistently drove would-be Toronto scorers into the corners. Irving Cohen played one of the best defensive games of the night between rushes up the floor which netted him 11 points. As already stated, VanVleck was the night's outstanding performer, playing an effective game going both ways. The Blue's were not outplayed as a unit but their passing suffered from their eagerness and they missed Don Gibson's eagle-eyed sharp-shooting.

Wayne—VanVleck (24), Jeschke (1), Mobley, Halloway (9), DiSanto (12), Eckhardt, Grewe, Rutherford, Cohen (11), Terry, Harding (6), McDonald, Trevillian.

Varsity — Thompson (4), Meschino (6), Durocher (7), Goldstein (4), Patterson, Wallace (11), Tettmar (3), Gibson (9), Scott, Waldon, Booth.

Speaking Of Sport

By Bud Smith

I'VE HEARD THAT SONG BEFORE . . .

Well this year was no exception. As in the two previous contests Varsity didn't have the extra push necessary to beat Wayne. However, Saturday's game was a far cry from that of three years ago when the Tartars waltzed over the Blues by a score that was somewhere in the neighbourhood of 74-32. It was sad to see the Blues lose after piling up an early lead in such a commanding fashion (like last year). One lapse just before half-time did all the damage. Wayne started to rough it up and forced Varsity to play their sort of game. When the smoke cleared away the Tartars had a 16-point lead and Varsity didn't have a chance. We have some consolation, however, in that Wayne polished off Western Friday night 52-28.

Bill VanVleck sure went out in grand fashion. He has lead Wayne's scorers for three successive years of Intercollegiate competition and one can easily see why after observing his play on Saturday night. Varsity's chances would have been much better if they had played Wayne after VanVleck had finished his basketball career, instead of just before. We were not impressed with the Wayne team as a whole. They lacked smoothness and co-ordination. Compared with the smooth-working Rochester team they just don't rate, and it is easily seen why their record this season is rather undistinguished, having won five games and dropped eight so far. So far as we could see the only margin of victory the Wayne cagers had was their "unconscious" shooting. They just couldn't miss! Jumping Joe Halloway was not up to his form of last year but was effective at times. Next to VanVleck, the best performer for Wayne was a character named Irving Cohen. This boy was really deadly with his one-handed shots and did brilliant work on the defence. Paris DiSanto played a steady game for the visitors, as did Kip Harding. Both these boys were playing their last game for Wayne.

The bright spot of the evening for Toronto was the brilliant performance of Gord Wallace, whose all-round play was magnificent. In addition to leading the Blue sharpshooters, Gord was the most alert player on the floor and was in there trying all the time. Young Joe Meschino got his first big chance and he showed plenty. His three baskets were all masterpieces. Don Gibson had some tough luck; he just couldn't seem to hit the basket at times. In fact the Varsity shooting, all in all, was nothing to rave about. The Blues got plenty of shots away but few found the elusive hoop. Stu Scott still seems out of place in the guard position and went scoreless for the second week in a row, although he turned in a good defensive performance. We liked Ken Tettmar's work—that boy plays a nice, steady brand of ball and is probably the most dependable player on the squad. Murray Thompson showed well getting a couple of very pretty baskets. The Blues' play improved in the last half when they put Long Don Gibson under the basket to get rid of rebounds which the Wayne boys had a monopoly on in the first frame.

ON THE OTHER HAND . . .

While this sad defeat was being inflicted on Varsity in the gym, the Blue boys were victorious in other athletic endeavours. The swimming team washed up the Air Force rather easily to continue their successful record of last season. Upstairs the mitt boys won their three bouts with the "Y." We caught a brief glimpse of these proceedings and noted Alex Dixon and Georgie Lewis batting their opponents around the ring with gay abandon. The remainder of the bouts were all-Varsity affairs and ended as "no-decisions." The audience was somewhat smaller than usual, only 1180 hardy souls turning out for the proceedings. However, even at that Hart House didn't seem particularly empty.

Varsity Swimmers Defeat I.T.S.

By Hal Phol

The spectators of last Saturday night's natatorium show were treated to an educational, thrilling, hilarious and varied demonstration of aquatic skill staged by both sexes under the auspices of the P. & H. E. department. The program was comprised of 10 shows lasting from 8:15 to 10:15.

The crowning event of the evening came in the first show, in which the Varsity natators swamped the visiting I.T.S. team by a 51-14 score. In both the medley and 200 yard relays the Blues chalked up five points by outnosing the airmen. Porky Beames and Sommerville gained five and three counters respectively by out-plunging Weldon and Davis of the R.C.A.F.

Davis, of I.T.S., winning the 50 yard free, snatched five points while Moffat and Graham combined to collect four for Varsity.

In each of the 100 free, 300 free and 100 breast, the Varsity men placed first and second to gain 24 points. The third spot was in each case filled by an airman to total four points.

In the 100 yard back, however, Johnny Northwood was unexpectedly inched out by Bud Pascavage who but three days before had been shipped from Camp Borden to take part in the meet.

From here on the tank belonged to the mixed group who demonstrated the rudiments of life-saving. They also staged a three-legged, a ring-buoy, and dress-up relay race. After this the crowd was held spellbound by a daring diving exhibition.

Porky Beames, in trying to gain sufficient momentum for a front somersault, cracked the board on the first jump. The boys taking this as a challenge, tried to further the progress of demolition, which for the past two years they have failed to accomplish. The board finally gave way, much to the relief of everyone, to the incessant bouncing of Bob Russell, who with two boards to his record was heartily congratulated by his fellow divers.

The evening ended noisily as all contestants joined in an elimination race.

If the good old ice over at Little Vic is smooth enough to skate around on at six today, U.C. and Vic will do it justice. Both these teams will be out to win, since they each have one game chalked up to their credit and, you remember, Vic won their last game with U.C. 2-1. If you want to know in which direction the tide of the schedule will turn, come on along and see this game between these old playoff rivals and cheer your favourites on.

While we're still on the subject of the games and things in the great out-of-doors, we've heard a bit about the activities of co-ed skiers which we pass on to lovers of that sport. If we're going to have a Ski Meet at all this year—and we may very likely follow in the footsteps of our eds in this matter and find it impossible to stage one at all—it will be held on this coming Sunday up at our Newmarket diggins. As you have probably guessed, the obstacles are transportation and suitable snow—the latter being extremely important. The University Ski Club is a good place for the meet and we do hope that circumstances will favour us come next week-end

Speaking of circumstances, the war and all that has made it practically impossible for our badminton officials to buy any new birds. As a matter of fact, they are so necessary that if anyone has any birds in their possession that they are not using and would part with for the cause of our tournament—we'd love to have them or purchase them . If you would be so kind as to leave the birds at the Registrar's office or let your badminton representative know about them, everyone concerned would appreciate your co-operation no end. Of course, if you play and you have your own birdies—do make them last for the tourney which we hope to run off around the 20th of this month. Meanwhile, if you want to get in a little practice, call around to Margaret Eaton gym with your friends any Tuesday or Friday from 3:30 to 5:30; Thursday from 2:30 to 5:00; or Saturday from 11:15 to 12:30.

Tid-bits from the College Papers

"Here lies a man---O stranger look!
Who was so wont to give
His days and nights to musty books
That he forgot to live.

The red blood of his life was drained
To books and papers fed
Until there flowed through all his veins
Not blood—but ink instead!"

"One of the Philosophy Profs. in remarking on the way lectures are attended, likens the University to a cafeteria where you drop in for the occasional lecture. legislation which stands in the way of this must be done away with. If technicalities can be over-ridden in war-time, the probability of internal disorder should permit them to be over-ridden after the war is over.

Milena Matuska, speaking for the Opposition, said that since Sir William Beveridge based his report on conditions in Britain, a similar survey should be made in Canada so that the differences between the two countries might be considered. In so doing, the problem of provincial differences which might affect the introduction of such social legislation could be settled.

Inviting the Leader of the Opposition to form a coalition cabinet, the Prime Minister said that the whole question before the house was a question of degree and that technicalities of the British North America Act are not enough to prevent the plan's being introduced into Canada. He explained that what the government was advocating was not the adoption of the report as it stood, but that the proposed system be adjusted to suit Canadian needs.

The formation of a new party, the Independent-Surrealists, was announced by Goeff. Johnson. This newly-formed party led by Johnson will be the official Opposition to the Coalition Government in next Friday's session.

Canadian Army Routine Order No. 2763 dated 2 Jan. 43 is re-published for information and guidance of all concerned.

"Rifles and Machine Guns—Oiling of Magazines:

1. Under no circumstances should oil be used in the inside of magazines. If oil is used, it will not only oil the rounds which will give irregular ballistics, but will also collect dust and grit and eventually cause a stoppage.

2. The magazines must be cleaned out periodically, and immediately after a dust storm or use in a sandy place.

Rifles and Machine Guns—Care of Barrels after Firing Blank Ammunition:

3. Boiling water MUST be passed through the Barrels of all Rifles and Machine Guns immediately after firing blank ammunition, as the decomposition products from the cap composition will form a fast corrosive compound, with ultimate injury to the Barrel.

4. Funnels, Hot Water, can be obtained on demand in the usual manner.

The Red Cross are not the only people who are traditionally reputed to draw blood out of people. A member of the U.A.T.C. who went down to the clinic to give a donation happened to be a connoisseur of this sort of lore and while a lady was busy pumping the vital fluid out of his arm with the rubber bulb he regaled her with the remark. "You know what?" To this she quite naturally responded with ,"No, what?" "You," he annouced, "are a vampire." "Ugh, no!" "Ugh, yes," he insisted, "every time you squeeze that bulb—"

"STOPPIT," she screamed, "You'll make me sick."

Harvard men are plenty smart, and it's all not just so much propaganda. At least that's what The Harvard Crimson would have us believe. While millions of readers were panting and puzzling over the code message sent by their Hero, Flip Corkin, to his headquarters the Crimson was offering a can of beer to the first one to break the tape at the editorial sanctum with the correct answer. Spurred on by thirst and crytographical passion a lad named Hunnewell copped the beer.

Complication soon arose as thirsty losers screamed protests. One of them revealed that some Sunday papers bearing the correct solution were on sale on Wednesday and other people muttered. "There are ways, there are ways."

In reply to such charges all the Crimson says is, "But the beer is in Mr. Hunnewell." So, however you look at it, Harvard men are plenty smart.

After all the Cats that have been run on the subject you'd think that Varsity reporters at least would be wise enough to keep away from Hotbeds of Evil. Such is not the case, and the other day a rash newspaperman from The Undergraduate Daily ventured into the one known as the "Tuck Shop" and asked for a Stone Ginger. The corrupt attendant behind the counter was unusually prompt, but made no move to accept payment for the beverage. With understandable surprise the customer asked, "Am I not going to be allowed to pay for this?"

"O.k., o.k., O.K.," screamed the attendant, grabbed the proffered bill, nearly breaking the customer's wrist, and jangled at the till. With some petulance he flung the change on the counter and turned his back while the reporter counted his change, and found it seven cents short.

Up in the Vic residences it was a question of whether the boys meant welcome home, or speed the parting guest when one of the lads returned home from the infirmary to find a lovely floral tribute waiting for him in his room. But the choice seemed a bit funereal, being in the form of a large evergreen cross.

Actually it was the biggest thing the lads could get, and the cheapest. In fact, if the truth were known—need for children's playgrounds. On her first day, when the slide and swings were being put up, the children watched like droves of starved wild things, she said. One evening later in the summer, however, after they had become used to the amusements, the children went Hallowe'en; and Lois spent all next morning righting the slide and untangling the swings.

"It's fun, but hard work sometimes," said Norma Fraser, "when you have to referee a baseball game against a backdrop of heckling."

A student of Second Year U.C. nominated his playground as the toughest in the city. One of his charges, an 11-year-old boy, had committed a $200 restaurant robbery, he said. Red Ryan was the hero of the children in this district; and six or seven of them became famous among their chums, when they uncovered a gun cache while hunting the former home of their idol.

Although refusing to give his name, this student was emphatic about the need for supervision of children's recreation during the summer vacation. "The beneficial effect of the playgrounds on juvenile delinquency certainly is terrific," he said.

Vic to Entertain Queen's Debaters

Assembling in its fourth session of the current season, Victoria College Debating Parliament will play host to the Queen's University debating team tonight at eight o'clock.

On the subject, "Resolved, that the present Federal control of the Canadian economy should be retained after the war," Victor Butts and Royce Firth of Vic will attempt to prove the affirmative. The negative is being upheld by the Queen's team, composed of Vernon Malach and Earl Baxter.

Prime Minister Marg Dillon expressed pleasure in being able to entertain the Queen's team. "We have been trying to arrange this debate for some time," she explainde. "We're looking for a large turnout to support Vic.

The powerful trio of the Maltese Falcon fame—Humphrey Bogart, Mary Astor and that creepy, bulky and sinister Sydney Greenstreet—are acting together again in the current feature Across the Pacific now playing at the Eglinton.

EGLINTON
THE PACIFIC"

It wouldn't leave much fun if the mystery were explained, but here's a bit of the build up. Mary Astor, who is really but a cog in the drama is the lady from Madicine Hat who is being followed by Humphrey Bogart. Of course he does not know who she is and falls for her en route to Panama. In Panama he has a name which is slightly odious which is bound to lead him to lead-swinging engagements. Sydney Greenstreet makes no attempt to conceal his interests in obtaining essential information for blowing up the Canal—but he is so strong in the oriental gang that he could cover up his weaknesses.

Admittedly, the plot is not as gripping as the Falcon mystery, but it has its novelty in the unexpected, and exploits in judo. And, oh yes, the funny shorts are funny.

Ted Gray Of Vic Listed Missing

Flying Officer Gray Is Second Recent President of Victoria College to Be Reported as Missing

NOTED DEBATER, ATHLETE

FO. Edwin (Ted) Gray, 24, president of the Victoria College Union in 1940-41 and Victoria graduate of 4T1 has been reported missing after air operations, it was learned last night. FO. Gray, a fighter pilot, enlisted in April, 1941, and led his class on graduation in February, 1942.

FO. Gray received a Students' Administrative Council Honour Award in his graduating year in recognition of his outstanding qualities of leadership. He was a member of an intercollegiate debating team which toured several United States universities in the autumn of 1940, and a member of the Hart House Board of Stewards. He also held the interfaculty featherweight boxing championship.

Ted Gray is the second recent V.C.U. president to be listed as missing, the other being Eddie Wallace, who headed the Union two years earlier.

FO. Gray is the only son of Mrs. E. R. Gray of Toronto and the late Edwin Gray.

"He is one of my closest personal friends," Tom Nixon, president of the V.C.U., said last night, "and if I know Gray, he's over there somewhere, roaming around having the time of his life. I'm confident he'll turn up all right, either in prison camp or someplace else."

Room for More Co-eds In Playground Course

It is not yet too late for students to enter the course in Playground Supervision without which it is impossible to obtain summer employment in Toronto playgrounds, according to Mr. F. H. Armstrong, City Playground Administrator.

Approximately 30 co-eds were present at the first lecture in the series of five which make up the course for women principals, with many being turned away because they were not Toronto residents.

Women students still wishing to enter the course are asked to come to this week's lecture, at the McCormick Recreation Centre, 167 Brock Ave., on Wednesday at 7:00 p.m., bringing gym suits with them, as they are given practical as well as theoretical training. After this week, the course will be closed, as new entrants would then have missed too many lectures.

Men students interested are asked to telephone Mr. Armstrong, Elgin 9665, and make an appointment to see him, as their course of instruction has not yet started.

Queen's Beat Vic Debaters

Parliament Vote 33-22 Against Retaining Present Federal Control of Canadian Economy After the War

BUTTS, FRITH, VIC SPEAKERS

Two visiting debaters from Queen's University scored a clear-cut victory over their Victoria College opponents at last night's session of the Victoria College Debating Parliament.

Taking the negative side of the topic, "Resolved that the present federal control of the Canadian economy should be retained after the war," the visitors, Vernon Mallach and Earl Baxter, were adjudged victors by a 33-22 vote of the house. Victor Butts and Royce Frith were the losing debaters.

Butts, first speaker for the affirmative, warned against celebrating the conclusion of the war by allowing the edifice of wartime economy to crumble.

"Social legislation is here to stay," he affirmed, "and there is only one way to affirm it—through national measures."

Butts claimed that the alternatives of giving all economic control to the provinces would result in lack of uniformity and "let the law of the jungle see who comes out on top."

The speaker termed provincial rights "a facade for local interests of selfish men," and demanded that the federal government be granted the power to which it was rightfully entitled.

Speaking against the motion, Vernon Mallach pointed out that the efficiency of wartime control was due to its simplicity in concentrating on a single pur-

Lord Hailey Honoured; Gives Falconer Lecture

Points Out That a Nation Does Not Lose Its Independence By Becoming the Overseas Dependency of a Major Power; Declares Britain's Imperialistic Aspirations Will Not Stand in the Way of Security in the Post-War World

MULOCK OFFICIATES AT SPECIAL CONVOCATION

The Rt. Hon. Lord Hailey, delivering the second Falconer lecture at Convocation Hall last night, sought to dispel fears held in some quarters that British imperialistic aspirations will stand in the way of security in the post-war world. Sir Wm. Mulock, Chancellor of the University, conferred on Lord Hailey the degree of Doctor of Laws (honoris causa).

Lord Hailey pointed out that many critics picture Great Britain as a feudalistic and backward-looking country, ruled by a privileged class who maintain their position by exploiting the underprivileged masses; whose external policy is directed toward the use of economic strength to secure the overseas interests in manufacturing and investments and the reliance on a balance of power instead of international co-operation.

In contradiction to this impression, Lord Hailey remarked that a country taking statesmen from all classes of society and in which half the members of the House of Commons represent labour, can scarcely be said to possess an archaic government. He also spoke of the emphasis placed in recent years on schemes for social security and the social services and said that a country with such a domestic background will not likely hold a feudalistic and predatory view of international affairs.

Illustrating the British attitude toward weaker peoples, the speaker pointed to her treatment of China and such countries as Egypt and Iraq. While admitting that Britain's relations with India and her Colonial Dependencies, raises more fundamental issues, he reminded critics that a people doesn't necessarily lose its independence by becoming the overseas dependency of a major power.

He referred to the improvements in Indian internal conditions effected under British control. He pointed out that she is now among the eight leading industrial countries of the world, that she has now become a creditor instead of a debtor nation, that her cultivated area has been greatly increased and that the Canadian soldiers, from the colonel to the private, have accepted with enthusiasm the invitation of one of England's historic old universities to spend their leaves within her cloistered halls, studying under some of the best tutors the Old Land has to offer.

The courses were arranged through the efforts of the Canadian Legion educational advisor, M. L. Berlyn, who once was a student in that university.

Lectures on science, religion and the arts are invariably followed by lively discussion. A lecture on criminal law prompted a discussion that lasted all one morning.

U. T. Represented At U.S. Conference

In the presence of hundreds of students of international affairs, four round-table discussions were staged last Saturday by the Canadian Institute of International Affairs and the Foreign Policy Association (United States), in the Waldorf Astoria Hotel, New York.

Among the large number of Canadian delegates present was Professor F. H. Underhill of the Department of History, University of Toronto.

A digest of the views expressed will be released next month.

Figures Favour M'Gill Press Policy

Montreal, Feb. 8—(CUP)—In a recent poll of student opinion, it was discovered that 73 per cent of the readers of the McGill Daily favoured discussion of off-campus topics in the editorial columns. "Political Comment" was voted the most popular column, "The Owl," a humour column, was a close second.

Only 11 per cent of the Daily readers do not read the editorials. Sixty per cent held that at present the Daily gives unbiased news and editorials. And 51.1 per cent thought the paper should take a partisan stand on topics of current interest, and the remaining 48.9 per cent thought not.

Canadian University Press features and stories are read by 79.9 per cent of the students.

Harvesting Long Over But Books in Chaos

The harvesting situation of last fall sent the affairs of the S.C.M. Book Exchange in Hart House all out of kilter, its manager, Goeffrey Johnson, said last week.

Students who submitted books at the beginning of last term were asked to return for these or their money at a date which later turned out to be during the harvesting expedition. Since the manager was knee-deep in wheat at the time, this date was postponed, and some book-owners have been confused ever since.

These men are requested to claim their books or money as soon as possible. The Exchange's business for the year, amounting to about 1,200, is just about completed and Mr. Johnson wishes to clear up the accounts. "We want the fellows to come for their belongings," he said, "but these may have to be appropriated by the S.C.M. or the management if they are left."

ENGINEERS OF 1st & 2nd BATTALIONS WILL HEAR BRIG.-GEN. STURDEVANT

Brigadier-General C. L. Sturdevant, Assistant Chief of Engineers, U.S. Army, will speak to Engineering students of the 1st and 2nd Battalions of the C.O.T.C. tomorrow at 4:00 p.m. in Convocation Hall. His subject will be, "Engineer Training in the U.S. Army."

General Sturdevant will be in Toronto to speak at the Annual General and Professional Meeting of the Engineering Instntute of Canada on Thursday, Feb. 11, when his subject will be, "The Alaska Highway."

Since graduation from the United States Military Academy in 1908, General Sturdevant has had continuous service with the Corps of Engineers of the U.S. Army and is also a graduate of the Engineer School, and the Command and General Staff School. He has served as Division Engineer in the Phillipines and in several districts of the United States.

As Assistant Chief of Engineers in charge of the Troops Division during the past two years, General Sturdevant was charged with the planning, mobolization and general supervision of the Alaska Highway project from its inception in February 1942, until the North West Service Command was set up in September 1942.

Members of the C.O.T.C. will consult Orders Part I of their Battalion, for particulars or arrangements.

Talk to be Given By Noted Surgeon

In his address to the Arts and Letters Club tomorrow night, Dr. Roscoe Graham will speak on "Post-War Reconstruction" with special emphasis on the roles of brain and brawn in the post-war world.

Dr. Graham is very much interested in immigration and will discuss his opinion on the type of immigration which he believes necessary for successful peace time reconstruction.

Dr. Graham is one of the greatest American abdominal surgeons. He is a graduate of the University of Toronto and at present assistant professor of clinical surgery on the University staff. He has been on the staff of the Toronto General Hospital since 1916 and has been senior surgeon there since 1929. Dr. Graham was president of the post-Graduate Medical Association of the United States in 1940, Secretary of the Canadian Association of Clinical Surgeons, and a captain in the C.A.M.C. during the first World War.

Dr. Graham has sometimes been called the "Great White Father of Medicine," because of his white hair. It has been said of him that "he is full of life, action and vitality to amaze most people," and is "one of these rare types of medical men with an interest in anything and everything."

PEPPED-UP MEDS COURSE GRADUATES 93 at McGILL

Montreal, Feb. 8—(CUP)—The McGill University Senate announced recently that 93 medical students have qualified for the degrees of Doctor of Medicine and Master of Surgery.

These students are the first to qualify under the new wartime accelerated program. They will receive their degrees at the Spring Convocation.

STUDENTS EARN $41,500 TABLE-WAITING AMONG JOBS

Austin, Texas, Feb. 9—Learning to work in the kitchen and set the dining table at home might be a good inroad to getting a job that would help pay a student's expenses at the University of Texas.

The University's Student Employment Bureau secured 2,155 jobs for students last year, and out of this number 256 assignments were waiting tables, bringing the workers $41,500.

MAJORITY OF EDS AND CO-EDS CONSIDER PROFESSORS TO BE A FRIENDLY LOT

The feeling that professors hold themselves aloof, conscious of their intellectual superiority over their students, which was expressed by Queen's students in a student opinion poll, is not shared by the majority of Toronto students, the Varsity learned in an informal survey yesterday.

While some students in their first year agree with those at Queen's that professors do seem remote, this was not the feeling among students in their upper years. As at Queen's the Science students here feel that they have a better chance to get acquainted with their professors, as their classes are usually longer and the number of students in each course is not as large as in straight Arts courses.

"If professors seem aloof, it is a result of the attitude taken by students towards them," said Marion Taylor, II Sociology.

"I don't think that the professors are aloof," said a student in II Phil. & Eng. "They have to maintain a certain amount of authority over the students, and it seems to me that our professors have attained the golden mean in this matter."

Several students expressed the opinion that the professors in the traditional courses, English, classics and modern languages, are more prone to remain in their ivory towers than are professors in the newer courses, such as psychology, sociology and political economy. Professors in the older courses are too much steeped in the traditions of their subjects to take a personal interest in their students. It was generally agreed that a student who take an interest in his or her course will find that the professors do not seem so distant.

It is difficult for students to become well acquainted with professors outside their particular courses, except through the activities of campus societies.

"One of the outcomes of the Staff-Student conference will be the breaking down of barriers between staff and students," said a student in IV Pol. Sci.

"There are bound to be differences of outlook between staff and students," said Dave Bairstow, III U.C., "as there are differences in both age and activities as well as experience."

"Many professors are too busy to have time to get to know their students well," said Betty Nevin, IV Sociology. "Very often students who would like to discuss their work with their professors feel that they will impose on the professor's time."

Marion Lyons, III Vic, said that if students in the pass course could have small study-groups in their subjects similar to those in honour courses, professors and students would understand one another better.

"I look back with nostalgia on the days when professors were elected by the students and therefore could not afford to remain aloof," said Goeff. Johnson, IV U.C.

A self-confessed "apple polisher" in III Modern History, denied that the professors in the History Department were aloof. "Personally, I love my professors, each and every one!" she said.

Missing

The Varsity extends its sympathy to the mother of Flying Officer Ted Gray in her present anxiety over the fate of her son, currently reported missing after being shot down over enemy-held territory.

Gray left the University to fly for the Royal Canadian Air Force after an impressive campus career which gained for him recognition in the varied fields of student government, debating and athletics. He has not been forgotten here, and many of his friends at Victoria—notably Tom Nixon, present holder of Gray's former office of President of the V.C.U.—have expressed the belief that he will turn up "somewhere over there" safely.

We add our devout hope that they are right.

Without Apology

Last night members of the University had the privilege of hearing Lord Hailey speak on British Colonial policy. It was an address we were personally glad to have heard; for it provided us with considerable valuable verbal ammunition to hurl back at prejudiced detractors of Britain and things British.

He based his remarks so soundly on facts—salient statistics for the most part—and delivered his speech in so steady-minded and forthright a manner, that one did not feel—as one might have in listening to a less able master of words—that there was an effort being put forward to "justify" an aging and selfish Britain in the eyes of her upstart colonists. With cool logic and the experience of years of actual contact with the questions with which he dealt, he cut through many of the bigotries with which Britain often has been attacked and belittled in the past. And he left his audience convinced of the truth of his final statement: that we need have little fear, after the peace, of the spirit of British imperialism standing in the way of progressive world security.

While The Iron Is Hot

Sir Stafford Cripps, one of Britain's foremost diplomats, delivered a speech Saturday at the University of Aberdeen, warning his hearers against the possibility that now—just when ultimate victory for the United Nations seems almost assured—there is grave danger that we all may lose sight of post-war aims and succumb to a stultifying pessimism regarding the possibility of bettering our pre-war condition in the final peace settlement.

He spoke of current trend on the part of British thought towards "sour disillusion" regarding the future; and said that "doubts are creeping in and signs are not wanting that privilege and selfish interests are busily preparing to cast the future in the mould of the past."

He expressed concern at the diminishing prevalence of "the confident expectation which has been expressed over the past three years that we should never return again to pre-war conditions."

And he remarked: "Indeed it is almost commonplace in these days to hear the most confirmed advocates of change expressing the view that 'they' will never really implement the promise of a new Britain or a new world."

Sir Stafford demanded "who are those mysterious people referred to as 'they'? . . .

"'They'," he declared, "is not the language of democracy or even of the class struggle. 'They' is the language of dictatorship and the defeatism of the common people."

"We must put aside all such subservience within our democracy and speak instead of what 'we' want and will do or insist upon being done . . ."

He said that in the sense that all great wars are dynamic movements of social and economic progression or retrogression and are characterized by force, "they may truly be regarded as revolutionary."

"During these periods of revolutionary struggle in the past we have seen the urgent desire for change emerging during the course of the war, and we have witnessed what has become of it after the war has ceased.

"Apparent agreement in the hour of peril, when the whole man and womanpower of a country is essential for its very salvation does not at all necessarily imply that there will be the same agreement when the time of peril is past."

Once the danger of defeat has been removed, he said, "the old differences between the classes or sections of the community have come back to destroy the unity of purpose of the people. . . .

"The spell has been broken in the past partly because the spell itself was so potent. The very horrors of war themselves create the need for some compensating idealism, some hopefulness to offset the bitter destruction of young life. . . .

"We now approach once again one of those critical periods of hope which occur in every great war as the prospect of ultimate victory begins to loom on the horizon."

He urged his audience to "observe objectively the problem with which you and your generation are faced," and not to be led astray "by facile explanations of politicians or the trickery of the ruling class."

We have quoted Sir Stafford's speech at some length here, for it contains more than one idea that is well worth our close attention. He has implied, for instance, that now—"While the iron is hot" as streamer headlines quoted his speech in Saturday newspapers—is the time to do our reconstructing of the world, for once the immediate danger of destruction is past the opportunity for grand co-operation will have passed too.

There is much truth in this statement. The obvious difficulty is that too much emphasis on reconstruction now might conceivably vitiate the war effort, and in any case it is almost impossible to put into operation many of the ideas we are formulating for the years of peace in times when we are still engaged in all-enveloping war. But at least Sir Stafford's remarks bear out our own theory, which we have stressed and restressed in these columns this year—for students who have relative breathing space now, the present is by no means too soon to give thoughts on the world to come our close attention.

Art Music Drama

Aborigines To Moderns

The Art Gallery of Toronto

It is an encouraging sign for the present trend of thinking in terms of the world organization to follow the war, that the people of Canada and the United States have been given the opportunity to appreciate and understand the art of Australia. The Art Gallery of Toronto is now exhibiting representative art of Australia, and also, the first comprehensive exhibition of the Canadian artist, Emily Carr.

In a wide range of pictures stretching over a century and a half the development of the native aboriginal art of the modern Australian school is shown. The most modern twist seems to be a return on the part of some of the country's artists to the hyperrealism of the native art—one good example is Peter Smith. The earlier British artists left behind painting of a record variety, valuable in its own peculiar historical way, but it was not until the turn into the twentieth century that Australian painting as such emerged. Since then it has progressed by leaps and bounds.

The bark painting of the aborigines is most extraordinary. It has a technique of treatment and purpose all of its own. Hands, feet and a bird is a good example to work from. A piece of bark is stripped from a tree, heated and then pressed flat. The design is first grooved and lined with colour and filled with intricate lines. Colour is red and yellow ochre. Rather primitively the outlines of the animals are drawn strongly, and also the internal edible parts. But, the internal anatomy of men is never shown, which seems to indicate that men are placed on a different plane from animals. Indeed the work never aims at perfection—only a semblance of it; but it deals vitally with objects and essential truths.

The modern twist I suggested, as seen in Peter Smith, is illustrated by Kongaroo Hunt—full of motion, crude of figure and powerful in impression.

AMBROSE SMALL RETURNS

The Varsity—first with the news of the meeting between Mr. Stanley and Dr. Livingstone—again scores one of its momentous scoops with this amazing personal account of the late Ambrose Small's adventures during the past several years. Readers will remember how Mr. Small's disappearance from the Grand Theatre in 1919 created the greatest cause celebre in Toronto police annals. Sparing no expense, we herewith present to our readers Mr. Small's own eye-witness account of how he has spent the intervening years.

By Ambrose Small

I imagine all my readers will be pretty surprised to learn that I was not abducted from the cellar of the Grand Theatre and thrown into Toronto Bay. Nor was I disposed of in the furnace.

No, as a matter of fact I wasn't even in the Grand Theatre when it all happened. And the most amazing thing about the whole affair is that nothing happened to me anyway.

You see, it wasn't the Grand Theatre at all but Hart House Theatre. And the fact that the Theatre hadn't been built until some years after that may give you some idea of how difficult it was for anyone to find me.

You see, I dropped backstage to call on my old friend Eleanora Duse, who was playing Hart House Theatre that week. A revival of "Arsenic and Old Lace," if I remember correctly. And the fact that she had been dead some years may explain to you just how difficult it was for me to meet her in her dressing-room as we had arranged in 1901.

So there I am, walking quietly around backstage and looking for Eleanora. But she wasn't there, so by the time I had made sure of that, I tried to get out of the place. But it had already been locked up—I learned later that because of Mme. Duses's death the Theatre was dark that week and it had never been open—so I settled down in a corner to spend the night.

I was pretty tired, you see, and fell asleep. I was a sound sleeper in those days, and never noticed a thing, when they came along a few years later and started to build Hart House Theatre.

By the time I had noticed this, I was thoroughly bricked up; so I had no alternative but to go back to sleep. It was quite quiet, and I spent a very pleasant couple of decades in there, until I awoke last Thursday afternoon with a splitting headache.

The noise in the confide space of the Theatre was tremendous. I later learned it was being made by Bob Chester, a man who was supposed to have been there four hours ago; this confused me.

However, I started a commotion, and tried to get out. My efforts were unavailing, until I noticed that the plaster was coming off the walls with Mr. Chester's rendition of "Maine to California." Quickly climbing through one of the holes that appeared in the wall, I strode out and collapsed in a dead faint.

A slug of Hart House soup (1929 vintage) out of the Warden's personal hipflask brought me around, and here I am, although the Warden is in England.

Irish Pucksters Tie Dents; Red & White Down Vic

Driving Plays Only Earn a Tie for Top - Notch St. Mike's When They Clashed With Bottom-Rung Dents

In their second tie meeting of the season, the league-leading St. Mike's pucksters only managed to hang up a 1-1 verdict over the cellar dweller Dents sextet.

The Irish played the whole game with every man up trying to hang up a big score, but the Dent defence and goalie frustrated every attempt. After 10 minutes of furious but futile St. Mike's attack, Castaldi broke away from the ganging Irish and stickhandling past two backcheckers sifted in from the boards giving the goalie scarcely a chance.

Down a goal, the Double Blue redoubled their efforts and threw everyone into the attack but the goalie. The power plays had its regard finally when, with scarcely a minute to play before the half, Des Roches slipped a short pass to Hector who sank the puck into the corner of the cage for the tieing tally.

The second half showed not let up in tempo, but the Molarmen held the Irish with their strong defence.

St. Mike's — Hector, Doyle, Des Roches, Gregoir, Boland, Spadona, Haydon, Egan, Jacob, Gregson.

Dents — Quigley, Hambly, Ferguson, Schwartz, Channel, Castaldi, Crouch, Sibbald, Lewdi, Cousins, Hart.

U. C. Speed Plays Click to Sound a 5-3 Victory Over Hard - Fighting Men from Vic

Fast skating Jim Graham was the deciding factor in U. C. I's 5-3 defeat over the hard fighting Vic I team in yesterday's 5:15 hockey kame at Varsity Arena. The victory strengthens the Royal College sextet's lead in their group.

Within two minutes of play Graham came from behind the Vic net to slip a fast one on the Vic tender, Wes Dunn. A few minutes later on a short pass from Dalt Nesbitt, Red Graham banged in his second goal. Following this George Whitley snatched the puck from a Vic man inside their own blue line and rifled the disc into the Vic twine to make the score 3-0 within five minutes of play.

Dalt Nesbitt slipped in the final goal of the first period on an assist from Bill Nichols who led a rush into the Vic corner and then cleared to the centre.

In the second half the Vic team started off with a bang and scored two goals within the first three minutes of play. Jimmy Street smoothly sifted through the U.C. defense and fired a deadly angle shot past Jimmy Skinner for the first one, and Butch O'Malley banged in the second on an assist from Jim Paton. Then Jimmie Graham decided the issue by beating the Vic defence to a loose puck, then proceeding to outwit the scarlet and gold net-minder for the third time. Vic came back with the final goal of the game, Paton to Carrol.

U.C. I—Jim Graham (3), G. Whitley (1), D. Nesbitt (1), L. Phoenix, Warren, Kuryluck, D. Nichols, Wade, J. Skinner.

VIC I—J. Street (1), Carrol, (1), B. McClean, Fullerton, Niero, Flewelling, B. O'Malley (1), W. Dunn, Paton.

Sportswoman

By Betsy Mosbaugh

We've heard of the old giving place to the new and this year we're seeing ye proverbial saying enacted. Interfaculty baseball has slowly died a natural death and compensation is being found in volleyball. Florence Joy, III Vic, has thrown herself body and soul into the organization of the game and is more or less its head.

It is her intention to run off a series of league games around the last week in February. These will be in the form of a round robin.

Volleyball is a comparatively young sport on the campus and as yet is not fully recognized. There are at present four teams, consisting mainly of freshies, who have played the High School variety of the game. We are told, however, that there's a great difference between University and High School volleyball. Apparently at Varsity the game is along much more scientific lines and tends to be faster.

The practices take place at the Lillian Massey gym. On Monday from 4:30 to 5:30 Vic has its work-out. On Wednesday, at the same time, Trinity holds the field. And on Friday from 4 to 6 P. & H. E. and U.C. warm up.

All the Colleges are valiantly holding their try-outs in preparation for the preliminary meets to be held on Wednesday, Feb. 24. The finals will be held at Hart House on the 27th, which is an Athletic Night, and ough to offer inducement to any damsel, mermaid or not! On top of that there will be four guest male artists to show their prowess in the water.

There are more teams this year than last, owing to the fact that the nurses and Meds are entering contestants. Any team or individual can practice on Monday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday from 4:30 to 5:30. The winners will gain points for their colleges.

Unfortunately the hockey game between Vic and U.C. didn't materialize last night as old man weather wouldn't come across with the required ice. But the game is scheduled to occur on Thursday night from 6 till 7.

Shackleton Won Senior and Conant Junior Mile; School's Chuck MacDonald Took the Laurels for 220 Sprint

CRICKET CLUB CUP IS GOAL

Grabbing off victories in both the Junior and Senior miles yesterday, University College climbed considerably on S.P.S. for the Toronto Cricket Club Cup, emblematic of Interfaculty indoor track supremacy. School garnered more points, however, as Chuck MacDonald took the 220 sprint.

In the 35-man field in the 220, which is about one and a half times around the Hart House oval, Meds were School's only contenders despite a large entry list from the Arts Colleges. A large number turned out from U.C. and Trinity and more are expected from St. Mike's in today's meet. Meds also expect such veterans as Fielding, Fyfe and Rutherford to clock in today, which may change the standings. However, four favourites nabbed top honours yesterday while the following two positions were captured by relatively newcomers. Results:

MacDonald, S.P.S., 25.8; Lewis, Meds, 26.1; Wilford, Meds, 26.2; Fordyce, S.P.S. 26.5; Brown, S.P.S., 26.9; Wakely, Trinity, 27.

The Senior mile was one of the prettiest but toughtest that has burned up the planks in quite some time. Phil Shakleton broke from the pack at the gun and, although threatened several times was never headed. Tom Barnet of Wycliffe matched him stride for stride the whole distance pounding in his ear all 11 laps but the U.C. freshman never faltered. Roy Foulis of School, Gord Lorimer of School, Bod Delaney of Meds and Geof Parke-Taylor of Wycliffe, shuffled back and forth through the grind but in general they held their positions to the tape. Roy Foulis ran exceedingly well under the circumstances and edged into third slot but the race was all Shackleton's who sprinted the last lap and lengthened his lead. Time, and near record it was, came to four minutes and thirty-eight seconds. Barnett was just over one second behind.

The Junior mile presented more of a see-saw as the 10 starters constantly shifted position throughout the long 11 rounds. At the gun Gausby of Trinity took the lead followed by Cannan of St. Mike's. These two went out in front of the pack by about a quarter of a lap with the rest closely grouped. After two laps Gausby fell back and Baxter of U.C. moved up into second position with Conant of U.C. gradually edging out of the pack into third slot. Wood of U.C., Giofranschini of St. Mike's and Sellars of Trinity battled it out for following positions. Then, with four laps to go, Conant started to move up and caught fellow U.C.'er Baxter on the next round. With a lap and a half remaining he passed the leading Cannan who had paced the pack for most of the way. From then in the winner lengthened his lead to about 25 yards at the finish. Time was 5.17.8 for the winner, five seconds better than Cannan.

Baxer (U.C.), Wood (U.C.), Gausby (Trinity), Sims (U.C.), Giofranschini (St. Mike's), Rowat (U.C.), Sellers (Trinity), Mullen (Trinity) followed in that order.

Beveridge Report Is Jaffary Topic

Professor Stuart K. Jaffary, Director of the School of Social Work, University of Toronto, called the Beveridge Plan a "tidying-up job," in a recent address to York County Council.

Dr. Jaffary said that what they have in Britain at present is "a patch-work scheme, patchy in application and in benefits, with the local Poor Laws filling in the gaps as best they can."

He said present defects have been obvious for many years, and have often been investigated, and most of the Beveridge suggestions have already been made, some as long ago as 1908.

The one really new thing in the report, he said, is the assumption that children's allowances will be paid up to the age of 15 years.

Speaking of Sport

By Don Grosskurth

EDITOR'S NOTE: As a guest S.O.S.'er today we have with us the athletic spokesman of the School of Practical Science. Don Grosskurth needs no introduction to those in the sporting know about the campus, but suffice it to say his official position is President of the S.P.S. Athletic Association. And also suffice it to say that views as presented by the School spokesman are not necessarily that of this department of The Varsity.

Away back last year someone got the bright idea that a representative of the Athletic Association of the various colleges should submit an article (preferably on sports), to the most widely read column in Toronto's most widely read (for free) morning paper. So saying, we shovel a shilling's worth for School.

MASTERMINDS OF MIT AND MAT . . .

At one time or another we all hope to get a crack at the Japs or Jerry. The Japs are supposed to be pretty handy in the art of jiu-jitsu. Jiu-jitsu used to be taught here a few years ago. We recall standing with a crowd at an Athletic Night, watching two students of the art trying to rip the lapels off each other's coats and at the same time throw their legs around each other's ankles. After five minutes had passed and no bones had been broken, some grad in Honour English was heard to say in a disgusted tone:

"They ain't got nothin' that a good straight left wouldn't stop."

That "Joe" was about right, but the moral, dear reader, is as follows:

Interfaculty B&W&F competition offers you two mighty fine coaches, eager to teach you how to throw a good straight left or a right cross. Mel Glionna knows the leather-pushing game inside out, believe me; he didn't get those ears from listening to a hot conversation on a party line. And Chesty Martin can show you a few holds in the wrestling room that will pin anyone's ears back.

So, men, large and small, call around any night at the boxing or wrestling room; Chesty and Mel guarantee to make you disgustingly healthy within a week.

SHAME ON THE STANDING COMMITTEE . . .

This load would hardly be complete without a beef. (We fail to see any shortage.) Back in the fall of 1942 the standing committee in rugby and lacrosse committed a couple of, shall we say, mistakes.

At the first meeting in rugby it was decided that two teams from Group I, consisting of Sr. Vic, Cr. Meds, Jr. School and Sr. School, should go on to the playoffs. The first place team getting a bye to the finals and the second place team playing the first place team from Group II, consisting of St. Mike's, Trinity, U.C., Jr. Meds and Dents.

That was a fine idea, but halfway through the season, the standing committee changed their minds an decided that two teams should go on to the play-offs from Group II.

Well, that was nearly excusable until the same ruddy thing happened in lacrosse. The boys in the back room changed their minds again.

Now, fellows, let's not have that happen in this year of victory. After all we are told that changing the mind is a privilege left to the fairer sex.

Of course the same standing committee had a good excuse. They simply reminded us of the fellows out west stooking at the time, so blame it on the harvesters.

FIFTY AND FOUND . . .

According to the other morning newspaper a few of the Athletes down south of the border are squawking at their paltry 50 bucks and keep. It seems they are jealous of higher wages paid at other industries. They intend to go on strike, if they don't get at lest $75 and food per month. These chaps aren't exactly professionals for they work. Sure the boys have a job like emptying ash trays in the Hart House gym or saving chesterfields in the library for tired friends. Strange that some fellers are never satisfied.

S.P.S. sent a delegate to a dinner at McGill University a month or so before Christmas. They treated him like a long-lost brother and finished up a swell evening by taking in a hockey game. Not a pro game, dear reader, but a game between McGill and another team in the defence league. Reports have it that the students enjoy rooting for the McGill Redmen again as in the days of Intercollegiate Hockey.

The University of Toronto still have a few good hockey players kicking around and a team might easily have been entered into this Wednesday-Saturday T.H.L. series which takes place at Varsity Arena. Why not? You got me.

Lord Hailey Honoured

days when she was ridden by famine and pestilence are now forgotten. He added that progress depends on the natural conditions of a country and on the people themselves as much as on the administration.

With regard to the administration in India, Lord Hailey spoke of the substantial approach toward Indian self-government made already, which has been reinforced by the promises embodied in the Cripps declaration. He explained that 10 out of the 15 members of the Central Executive are Indian and that the central legislature elected on a wide franchise has practical freedom in ruling over the Indian people in all but a few matters. The official establishment has become largely Indianized with 632 Indian members of the Civil Service to 573 British. Britain's economic interest is no longer such as has been supposed, with British primary investments in India less than in Argentine.

In connection with Britain's policy toward her colonial dependencies, Lord Hailey explained that she has been willing to extend measures of self-government where desirable, and pointed out that they have offered a less attractive field for British investment that is often thought, taking only six per cent of total British overseas investment. In 1940 Great Britain agreed to the expenditure of £55,000,000 to be spent over 10 years on schemes of social welfare.

The disregard of space as an element is most peculiar when two different sets of figures doing two distinctly different things are set in a freize-like arrangement in Australians pursuing Chinese: an Emu hunt.

Intermediate work has been profoundly influenced by European traditions, but when a Picasso style is placed on Australian scenery, the result at least, looks different. A typical long-necked Madiglione by George Russell Drysdals called The Rabbiter and his family reflects is one way the lack of originality in many of the pictures.

There are many exceptions to this generality—the truthful pictures of Australian scenery, The Bail Out (Australian version of a wild west stage coach hold-up) and Design for Ballet by Loudon Saintsmith. The last named piece is an excessively abstracted perspective achieved through design, colour and an idea. The idea was of having a dance by the Mrs. Browns (tailor's dummies) in an attic.

It is relatively easy to find the motives and expressions in Emily Carr's work; but whether or not it is liked is another thing. The idea seems to be to take a tall fir tree (telephone pole variety) and, or some totem poles and place them off-centre (accepted style) to right or left. The lower part of the picture is taken up with green seaweed swirls or smoke rings, and the upper part with a cathedral vault sky. If there is any other room left it is to be filled with cones with green, blue and purple as alternative colours. The result is a style, and once a Carr creation is seen, it is almost impossible to say which one it was upon recollection.

A description of one of these pictures may make this more concrete. Vanquished is a desolate green landscape, done in characteristic swinging curves aimed at a geometrical impression; in fact Miss Carr breaks her lines well. Practically all the above motives can be detected from there on.

The Art of Australia, however, is an education it itself, and some understanding of its cultural significance should become a part of the knowledge of every socially-conscious undergraduate.

From time immemorial, Medical students have flirted with nurses, and, frequently, vice versa. Recently, at one of the hospitals, a fifth year student was working hard, trying to better his standing. Once he got past the introductory repartee and opening meteorological observations, he tried to elevate the whole matter to a lofty and intellectual plane. "Do you like Shostakovich?" he asked.

"I don't know," answered the bewildered but lovely little nurse—"I've never had any."

The other day in the men's office a tired mastheader was beating out 200 words on a routine news story. On finishing it, instead of going over to the news basket to deposit the pages therein, he handed his effort to another mastheader with the request: "Here, put this in the basket." Imagine his chagrin and amazement when his erstwhile pal crumpled the typed page into an unrecognizable ball and deposited it in the waste basket.

Here's something we got out of the Minnesota Daily: "A group of professors shared a car to ride to school every day, and a fine school it was, too. Throught the long summer months they chugged merrily along, happy in the knowledge that theirs was a good friendship, and that they had a car to share.

"Through the months they toiled, pounding knowledge into the heads of reluctant students who sat stolidly in their chairs, trying to find a nerve in their left wrists.

"When fall came, the professors found their enthusiasm undimmed. In fact, they were tireless workers. So they had to find another way to get to school. Two of the professors bought bicycles, one bought a motorcycle, and one, an economies professor, rode to school on a business cycle."

We didn't get it either for over an hour.

At last, an honest man.

pose, where peacetime required the satisfying of diverse and contrasting interests.

Mallach declared that planned economy gave control to the producer and tended away from the interests of the consumer. He also claimed that government planning could not stop short of complete control and that such a system would be impracticable and too greatly subject to pressure groups.

Royce Frith, second affirmative speaker, maintained that the power to control should be retained even if some of the actual control was dropped. These powers would enable the government to aid shifting from wartime production to essential civilian manufacture. They would also facilitate the curbing of rises in price in products which might be scarce at various times after the war. Finally, the government would be able to re-mobilize labour and place returning soldiers through wartime employment bureaux.

Earl Baxter, final speaker of the formal debate, dealt with specific controls to show the disadvantages of the planned economy system. He claimed that the present economy had difficulty in readjusting itself to new factors and asserted that individual enterprise contained "the answer to our problems."

For continued excellence and artistic thoroughness, we would, were it our place to do so, hand the Academy award to Alfred Hitchcock. With none of the braggadocio of Orson Welles, none of the fanfare of DeMille, Hitchcock continues to produce excellent movies. The casting and direction evidently were the result of some thought, and, as usual, the scenes are three deminsional—the background is as much alive as the foreground, and adds to the fulness of the action, without in any way distracting the watcher's attention from the central theme.

UPTOWN "SHADOW OF DOUBT"

The story is not as important as the presentation. The picture starts with a tense scene which sets the keynote of suspense which is sustained without undue melodrama for 90 minutes. In concerns a man whose insight into life is clear, though his evaluation of it is warped—and because of this he almost succeds in justifying to himself and to his beloved niece his crimes against mankind. But enough of that. Joseph Cotton does a more than adequate job of this role of the cynic who can find no rest, and Teresa Wright, who has more inborn acting ability than most actresses in Hollywood, is a pretty, sympathetic ingenue, who never, never simpers. The supporting cast is good, and the picture, though depressing, is good entertainment. —H.Z.S.

S.C.M. to Hear Yale Secretary

Rev. Luther Tucker, from Yale University, will come to Toronto to address the S.C.M. on Sunday, Feb. 21, the Universal Day of Prayer of the World's Student Christian Federation.

Mr. Tucker is now general secretary of the Student Christian Movement at Yale. He was formerly secretary of the World's Student Christian Federation for the Pacific area. During this time he was interned by the Japanese Government, who construed his efforts at keeping open the lines of communication between the Japanese S.C.M. and the Chinese S.C.M. as espionage.

The effects of the war on American universities and colleges and the work of the S.C.M. there will be discussed by Mr. Tucker at a supper meeting for members on the same day.

The Universal Day of Prayer will be observed on Feb. 21 in the 40 countries where national organizations of the World's Student Christian Federation exist. The Federation was founded in 1895 in Sweden, by Dr. John R. Mott, an American. Now, the organizations in many countries are forced to carry on as underground movements, but all will participate in this Universal Day of Prayer.

The service at the University of Toronto will be conducted by Surgit Singh, a graduate student at Emmanuel College, who was formerly the secretary of the S.C.M. at Lahore, India. This service will take the place of the regular Sunday evening service, originally scheduled for next Sunday.

St. Michael's College is presenting the third play called "Trial by Moonlight," which tells of the troubled adventures of an overly romantic young man. The young man is Charles O'Connell and the leading lady is Shirly Flynn. William O'Connor is the director.

Buswell to Speak At V.C.F. Mission

Dr. J. Oliver Buswell, Jr., M.A., D.D., LL.D., president of the National Bible Institute of New York, will be the speaker at a mission to be held here next week, under the auspices of the Varsity Christian Fellowship.

Dr. Buswell was for 14 years president of Wheaton College, Wheaton, Illinois; during this time Whcaton became the largest liberal arts college in the State. He received his B.D. degree from McCormick Theological Seminary in Chicago in 1923 and his M.A. the following year from the University of Chicago. The D.D. degree was conferred on him by Evangelical College, Dallas, Texas, and the LL.D. by Houghton College, Houghton, N. Y. A veteran of the last war, when he served as a chaplain, he was wounded in action and cited in General Orders for courage and devotion to duty.

In addition to the presidency of the National Bible Institute, Dr. Buswell holds the chair of systematic Theology in Faith Theological Seminary, Wilmington, Delaware. He still finds time in the midst of this double life to do a considerable amount of speaking at sundry Bible conferences and the like; work among students is his specialty.

Theme of the mission is "Christianity is Christ." and meetings will be held Monday through Friday both at noonhour and in the afternoons from 4:30 to 5:30. Further details will appear in The Varsity later.

Frye to Review Undergraduate Art

Representative work of the undergraduate members now on exhibition in Hart House will be reviewed by Mr. H. N. Frye, lecturer in English at Victoria College, tomorrow at 1 o'clock in the Art Gallery.

The exhibition is an annual event and brings together for appreciation and comparison the work of students of all faculties. The School of Architecture and the students in the Fine Arts course are principal contributors, but many of the pictures have been painted by amateurs who have art as a spare time hobby, or a summer pastime.

Mr. Frye has a wide background of knowledge in Canadian art, W. B. Burwell, secretary of Hart House, said yesterday, particularly in reference to the relationship between art of the "common people who like to paint" and literature and life.

Mr. Burwell said that the Exhibition was somewhat smaller than in other years, but that the standard of the work on display was well up to average.

He said that he had taken A. Y. Jackson, noted Canadian artist, to see the exhibition yesterday, and that Mr. Jackson had commented that three of the exhibitors displayed "merit of execution and originality of imagination." The three he singled out were W. Beny, N. Kelemen, and Perce Gardner.

From College Student To Bottle Blood Serum Speeds To Battle-Field

By Barbara Jones

When a pint of blood is drawn out of a college student, or any one for that matter, and given to the Red Cross, it is already on the way to a battlefield in any corner of the world you might care to choose.

What starts out as blood is first clotted, then it goes through a process which draws off the serum and the cells, after this the liquid is frozen and dried. The result is something that looks a good deal like brown sugar. To turn this into a perfectly good blood substitute, add distilled water and use.

The serum in one bottle is equivalent to two pint donations of blood and one patient may require as many as five bottles. In some cases the serum is better than an actual transfusion, since it contains the proteins that are really needed in cases of shock particularly, as well as serious burns. Last week approximately 7,000 people across Canada donated their blood for this purpose.

The University of Toronto is the drying centre for Canada at present and does all the processing for Ontario and centres as far as Winnipeg, though the Red Cross has arrangements in other places snch as the University of New Brunswick, for redncing the blood to serum before shipping it in cases marked with a Red Cross to Toronto where the process is completed.

This serum is doubly useful because it can be administered to any blood type and can be kept indefinitely and shipped anywhere. It has been used on many Allied battlefronts and in the Newfoundland fire.

Orientals Society Discusses India

"There are 389 million people in India and only one million in the army, because only a national government in which they have confidence and power can arouse the people to a sense of the war," stated Mr. Surgit Singh, a graduate student at Emmanuel College, at a meeting of the Orientals Society last night.

The failure of the Cripps' mission and the point where the congress broke down was, in the last analysis, a matter of defence, Mr. Singh believed. It is obviously the Indians, he stated, who are most anxious to defend India, but the Indian people, desirous of dominion status, are demanding that a provisional national government be set up as a concrete token of that which is coming in the future.

With regard to the question of illiteracy and minorities, Mr. Singh expressed his opinion that with regard to the first, intelligence is not limited to the educated, and for the second, that all are willing to co-operate in time of war and that there is no immediate danger of civil war or anachy if the government of India be made responsible to the people. It is more a question of the fnndamental distrust between the Indian people and the British war office.

Sir Stafford Cripps, with the best of intentions, was unsnccessful because the constitution with which he was working was too inflexible for him to be otherwise; because the "semblance of co-operation" involved in the acceptance of Indians in the civil service is only a matter of subordination and by no means a transference of the executive power.

Reconstruction Is Topic Of Arts & Letters Speaker

Problems of Re - employment and Rehabilitation of Armed Forces into Civilian Life Stressed by Dr. Graham

LEISURE TIME IMPORTANT

"Although Reconstruction is my topic, I must first stress that the most important single factor in the world today is winning the war," stated Dr. Roscoe Graham to the weekly meeting of the Arts and Letters Club last night. "All our efforts must be directed towards that end," he continued, "and we cannot all join the armed forces. But we can still make a contribution—no use waiting till the problem is at our threshold."

"To be specific," said the guest spcaker, "the problem wihch immediately concerns us is the re-employment and rehabilitation of members of the armed forces into civilian life." To do this, Dr. Graham went on to describe a peaceful and satisfying way of life in this country as our new-Canadian forefathers knew it. These pioneers found in the grim environment—so at variance with Europe—a fullness of achievement.

And that way of life is still available, the speaker asserted. Of course the men coming back from the war will be different in many ways from carly pioneers. They will have an insight into science; many will be happier—for a time at least—in a duty-assigned life as in the services; but all will clamour for comfort and security.

"We as Canadians are totally unfitted for totalitarian government, but we must remember that we owe the State something as citizens." Two hazards of the prc-war situation which Dr. Graham mentioned were: (1) The fact that people biologically fit to found a family were handicapped by economic disability. This the speaker pronounced "unnatural and bad." (2) Inherited wealth—which, however, Dr. Graham said the government was solving quite adequately. So perhaps the basis for reconstruction might be defined in an economic sense as a minimum standard of living for all, before luxuries for a few.

The immigration question was then dealt with by Dr. Graham. He believes that they are necessary to further the progress of this great country. There are unknown mineral resources, oil fields and agricultural possiblilities. But Dr. Graham feels that the immigrants should be physically fit and with a fair knowledge of both English and French when they enter Canada.

"But one of the most crying needs in post-war reconstruction," affirmed Dr. Graham, "is in the intelligent use of leisure time. Individuals who work 40 hours, sleep 56, still have 72 hours of 'play' in a week. It is up to the educated

Must Keep Rules During Blackout

Details of plans for tonight's blackout have not been revealed by A. J. Butlin, University of Toronto section warden. "It will be a more or less routine drill," he said and advised that everyone should stay indoors and make themselves comfortable for the hour-long period of blackness.

The control room in Simcoe Hall will be the main centre of activity where the complete routine of A.R.P. organization will function and telephone calls will be received and relayed. Students who are taking A.R.P. instruction will not be used in this raid, Mr. Butlin said, as they have as yet had no practical work, although their theoretical work is nearly completed. There will be a practice for them on Thursday.

Students are reminded by the authorities that, in view of the advance warning given of this "raid," infractions of the blackout regulations will be severely dealt with. They are also asked to remain indoors and refrain from using the telephone.

"French Satire" Is Lecture Topic

"French Satire" will be the topic of a lecture to be given by Mlle. L. Riese, of the Department of French, at Victoria College this afternoon at 5:10 p.m. in Alumni Hall. This is the second in the series of lectures on the satire of various countries sponsored by Victoria College.

In her lecture, Mlle. Riese will trace the development of satire in France from its beginnings to the present time.

Next Wednesday, Mr. H. N. Frye, of the Department of English, will deal with English satire.

It's Up To Us

All year long—and particularly in the past few weeks—we have been harping happily on one of our favourite themes: post-war reconstruction and the part we may be called upon to play therein. We have been informed by some that they have heard about enough of the subject for a while; and we imagine that others probably have the same attitude.

However, we do not apologize unduly for what may have the casual appearance of thoughtless repetition. It isn't. We have been attempting in our editorials to inculcate into the reading students the idea that a very large part of the task will be theirs.

Here is a rather saddening fact which serves to substantiate this thesis: in a pool conducted by the Canadian Institute of Public Opinion just before the present Parliamentary session began, only about 26 per cent of the average citizens questioned had any idea of what the Beveridge Report—most important document yet published in the English-speaking world relative to reconstruction plans—was all about. Of this 26 per cent, more than four-fifths wanted a similar plan to that outlined by Sir William Beveridge put into effect in Canada. But—and the fact bears repeating—only one person in four had even heard of the suggestions contained there.

Now that Parliaments in both Westminster and Ottawa will soon be considering legislation of the type adumbrated in the Report, it will soon, in all probability, become much more familiar ground for the average man. But in the formulation of opinion on the Report the "average citizens" have had little part.

We venture the opinion that already more careful thought has been devoted by students to the momentous Report than by any other section of similar size of the population. Which is commendable. But it is also highly necessary. And when the so-called "average citizens" are either so cramped for time or so lackadaisical that they cannot give their attention to such matters, it becomes more and more the duty of students to shoulder a great share of the burden of thinking for the post-war world.

More About Manpower

The Varsity is indebted to Professor Ralph Flenley of the Department of History for calling to our attention to the following article which appeared in the Bulletins from Britain series some months ago. It was written by J. F. Duff, Vice-Chancellor of Durham University.

British universities have played a much more positive part in this war than they did in World War I, and have kept themselves in being to a much greater extent. This is the result, at first sight a curious result, of the immediate imposition of conscription in September, 1939.

In 1914, under the system of voluntary enlistment, leadership was wanted for the young men of the country as a whole, and it was given in overwhelming measures by the young men at the universities. After a few months there were few left except those who were unfit or pacifists. But in 1939 students were bidden not to give a lead by volunteering, but to follow the Government's instructions; and for large categories of students those instructions were to complete their courses and thus qualify for special duties.

This policy insured a wiser use of manpower. But it had its drawbacks in the first year of the war, when students seemed occasionally rather blind to the seriousness of the emergency, and more concerned to assert than to justify their privilege of deferment from military service. This was never true of many, but the few attracted attention as small minorities sometimes do.

With Dunkirk and the fall of France, the position of Britain was seen in its naked gravity and proclaimed by Winston Churchill in his broadcasts. The universities, staff and students alike, found their wartime feet. It may be a paradox, but the more intense realization of the war and the much heavier demands of all members of universities have made the second and third years of the war less oppressive to the spirit than the first, or even the lowering uncertainty of the last year of peace.

It is now true to say that practically every male student at a British university is there because the Ministry of National Service deems it in the national interest that he should be. From now on the same will be true of women students. They are thus almost completely relieved from the need of making a personal choice; and on balance and in view of the inevitable wartime stress, this authoritative direction is an advantage to them.

The normal length of time which a non-technical student can put in at university before being called up is now one academic year. No doubt many schoolboys decide that this one year is not worth while and do not come up to the universities. But those who do, almost without exception, say that they are glad to have done so. In spite of the heavy calls on their spare time during this year made by the requirements of pre-service training, or perhaps just because the time is short, they put more into it and get more out of it and develop faster, both in character and as students of their subjects, than the freshmen of peacetime.

Technical students (using this term broadly to cover all those for whom special deferment is granted because of the nature of their course) stay longer—maybe only two years instead of the normal three; maybe the full five years, for instance, of the medical course.

University life in wartime is not the same thing as before the war, and it would be deplorable if it were. Yet in all essentials universities are still true to themselves. There is much less leisure: day by day time has to be found for the activities of training corps or air squadron, to which all who seek deferment must belong unless they are undertaking some equivalent service such as civil defense. Night by night relays of fire-watchers are on duty. Games have been drastically cut for sheer lack of free time, especially in the residential universities where before the war some form of outdoor exercise was a daily rather than a weekly or bi-weekly event.

The only visible effect of this change has been a marked improvement in the men's bearing. In this respect parades can do what the football-field cannot, though much of the pre-service training now takes place in lecture-rooms and not on the parade-ground, thus taxing a man's intelligence as well as his muscles.

As for fire-watching, if it is true that an important part of university edueation is the result of argument in the small hours, then these potentially gloomy vigils serve a purpose for which they were not designed. When I visit a fire-watching party the chances are that they are discussing netiher Hitler nor stirrup-pumps, but the old themes undergraduates have always discussed with the same endearing mixture of levity and vast seriousness.

Staff no less than students have foregone their leisure, and perhaps the difficulties of original research in wartime make them less disposed to regret the loss. The younger teachers have nearly all gone, some into the forces, more perhaps to war work for which their particular qualifications specially fitted them. Those who remain are mostly doing more than one man's work; special war courses make heavy demands on scientific staff and extend often through the greater part of the vacations. Teaching is eked out by bringing veterans from retirement or Vice-Chancellors from their offices. I am now teaching Latin prose again after an interval of 20 years, and I enjoy it though my class may not!

Besides this there can be few dons except the physically unfit who are not taking their share of ARP or similar work. Nor, for all the difficulties, has original work in non-technieal subjects come to a standstill, though inevitably there is less of it, and some of what is done has to remain unpublished because of paper shortage.

Univcrsities as a whole are surprised and gratified to find themselves still active and useful after nearly three years of war. Loss there is, of more sorts than one. Of one sort there is no need to speak since it is not peculiar to any section of the community. I mean the casualty lists, not catastrophic as at the Somme or Passchendaele, but steadily and inexorably lengthening.

Then there are two other serious losses to the wartime undergraduate. First is the absence of the young don, who can and should bridge the gulf between teacher and pupil in the way that proves the essential difference between school and university. Perhaps the undergraduate of today does not realize this loss but it exists and it is serious.

Second is the curtailment of art, music, the theatre, and "speakers from outside," although it has been said that in recent years Oxford and Cambridge undergraduates gave too much time to such activities at the expense of their degree courses.

Yet for all the confusion and gloom of the world situation today, the war may nevertheless result in giving the university a clearer vision of aims which it must set before itself, its country and the world.

Must Reconstruct Post-War World, Speaker Claims

Food Is Essential Speaker Stipulates in Fighting Speech; But Westward Look the Land Is Bright

RATION RATION COUPONS

"Food will play a vital part in post-war reconstruction," J. Undistributed Middleton, Professor of Economics at the University of Toronto, claimed in an address prepared for delivery last night to the Trinity College Social Conscienee Club.

"If the present government policy of unrestricted food rationing is carried to its logical extreme, the consequences will be disastrous to the nation," Dr. Middleton declared.

"You cannot eat ration coupons," he added. The audienee tittered.

Turning to the subject of the post-war world, Dr. Middleton outlined his blueprint for a balanced peacetime economy.

The international order must be stabilized, he told his admiring listeners, and the free flow of international trade must not be impeded. Relations with foreign countries must be improved, he insisted, and the government must meet labour problems in a spirit of open and impartial inquiry.

"Farmers ought to have more ethics," Dr. Middleton observed petulantly, "and they should be encouraged to produce by being paid occasionally."

Housing conditions must be dealt with, he stated. "It is imperative that Canadian citizens have a ceiling hanging over their heads," he declared amid thunderous cheers.

The demands of the Indian and Chinese masses must be met and Russia must be aided and pacified, he said. "In spite of all that has been said to the contrary, you can't hold the Chinaman down."

Discussing the place of women after the war, Dr. Middleton declared "dogmatically" that this question must be settled once and for all. "Women have a right to know," he said.

Universities must be maintained in the post-war world, he stipulated, although he expressed the opinion that "present staffs and students are expendable."

Discussing the amazing advances reeently made by seienee, he stated that "The aeroplane is here to stay—for a time at least."

Deserihing what he modestly described as his "Master Plan for Canada," Dr. Middleton unassumingly suggested that after the war the production of ships, tanks, guns, bombers, munitions and stink-bombs must be maintained at the maximum rate, "or even faster," and that the manufactured articles be turned in to the nation's scrap drive. "In this way," Dr. Middleton sand, "full employment may be supported for an indefinite period and the national income kept permanently at its present unprecedented level, or even higher."

It is the duty of a conscientious conductor, not only to keep the standard orchestral repertoire alive and in shape, but also to introduce both those modern works which he thinks worthy of attention, and also the great neglected works of the older composers, works which through chanee and cireumstances have been erowded from the repertoire, or perhaps have never been given a chance. Geez, Mabel . . . let's go bowling!

You can spin the bowls, lickety-split like, down the lines, any afternoon of the week from 2 to 5 at the Midtown.

But, mark our venerable words, youse all had best be most partic'lar to enter all games on the score-pads, or a shattering disturbance of cyclonic proportions will sweep down on the Athletic Association with no uncertain aim. If the score-sheets do not tally with the number of lines played, registered in the bowling files, youse are in for trouble. Please note well, as there has been much disorganization lately at the Alley on this account. Should this slackness on the part of bowlers continue, all may have to suffer for the few.

To date, over 50 enthusiasts from Trinity, Victoria and U.C. are registered to bowl, the ranks being considerably swelled by freshies putting in time for P.T. credits.

From the alley to the tank is a quick change and a short glimpse, as we take words out to mention the U.C. Swim Meet which took place last night. Between splashes we venture to forecast a star team in the near future, with variety of stroke and good form worth honourable mention.

Wednesday night, O.T. and P. will gather for a swimming turn-out at 7:00 p.m. in the O.C.E. pool. A capacity quota is urged to attend.

Could we possibly sign off without mentioning hockey? This afternoon at the Varsity Stadium, from 4:15 to 5:15, St. Hilda's is scheduled to team off against P. and H.E. This is an excellent four for spectating, and we can even promise standing room. The last game played off between these two teams came out even, with no score. As neither team has yet met a better, the game should furnish many thrills.

Finally, please note that Vic and U.C. will meet for their play-off on Thursday night, 6-7, at the Varsity Arena.

Speaking of Sport

By Vernon Lang

Yesterday our beloved Sports Editor got out of writing this column on the plea of having run a race. He must have tired his poor old limbs right out because this time he comes to me and barks in his best Queen's Park military manner that he has to stay away from the Press again, this time to take a course in motor transport. Just how, I ask you, is a decrepit Managing Editor to catch up with a guy like that?

HE SKIS, TOO!

So do I, but even at that pleasant pastime the aforementioned Sports Editor got away out ahead of me in last year's race.

BUT WHO SKIS NOW, ANYWAY?

Getting around to the subject of Sports as apart from Editors, the above query seems a fairly pertinent one. "The Army" is one blunt answer. Maybe if Toronto's snow conditions were more consistent we might get our C.O.T.C. to help keep the sport alive; they do that at the University of Alberta, we know, since CUP dispatches earlier this term brought us word of the special ski troop the Albert C.O.T.C. has formed as an alternative for some of their training. However, our Toronto snow conditions are just at the moment pretty obviously not suitable, and gasoline shortage plus absence of excursion trains to Collingwood seem to preclude our roaming further afield.

All this seems to offer some justification for the way the Athletic Association has erased this potentially great winter pastime from this year's intramural schedule.

But skiers are an imperturbable race, especially the bunch down at School. Stray groups of them still manage to somehow find enough gas to drop up to the University Ski Property at Aurora, some fork out $1.50 to go to Dagmar on the train, and at least one bunch has dug deep enough for the new $3.70 fare to the Blue Mountains at Collingwood. Not only that, but the faraway fields that look green (sorry, white) are being outdone in popularity by local spots within street-car range, such as Rosedale and High Park.

These local spots seem to be showing undreamed of possibilities. Bill Kingsmill, the University Ski Club President, claims that he knows a spot up at Rosedale where he could set a downhill course to fox most of the average skiers around here. Jumping is out, since the nearest built-up jump is up at Aurora this year; but there is certainly lots of local scope for a cross-country grind.

INDIVIDUAL MEET OK?

Skiing, I have always maintained, is a sport for individual competition, anyway. Past attempts to run giant intramural meets with small-scale mass entries from each faculty have sometimes been pretty confusing, besides dragging on over several successive week-ends.

So with intramural meets vetoed, we say: why not let the the enthusiasts(?) of the ski club dig up and show off what barrel-stave prowess there still must be around Varsity in a downhill, slalom and cross-country meet of individual competitors at a local spot. Everyone will have fun, even if they aren't allowed to garner up a whole lot of points in the intramural race that way.

School Pucksters Capsize Meds, 7-2

Jr. School continued on their undefeated way yesterday afternoon as they treated Jr. Meds to a 7-2 pasting. Meds started well, grabbing two goals in the first three minutes of play. From the face-off School gained possession and made an unsuccessful rush. Meds came right back and McIntyre sank number one on a pass from Cuddy Faber. Meds' second goal came when McIntyre again broke loose from an S.P.S. ganging attack to race the length of the ice unhampered.

Having only eight men available for duty, the Doctors soon fell behind the pace and before the end of the first period the Engineers had tied the score and added two more. While both teams were a man short a Stricker to Boa combination clicked. Harry Boynton snared the tying counter while McIntrye was serving time for trying to play without a stick. At the 17-minute mark Herb Stricker started a rush down the right boards, circled behind the net and passed out to Gord Bell who slammed the rubber home to complete a very pretty play. At period's end Stricker hit the scoresheet again on a pass from Foulds.

In the second period the Schoolmen harvested three more tallies. Fuzz Foulds skated right in on Callaghan, the Meds goalie, who stopped a hard shot only to be beaten as the carry-over dribbled over the goal line. Boynton got his second of the game on a scramble in front of the net. On the last rush of the game Gord Carroll and two other Schoolmen had only the goalie to beat but the shot went right past the goal. Art Ridler picked up the rebound off the backboards for the final tally.

Jr. School—Spence, Ridler, Stricker, Ratcliffe, Ball, Boynton, Houston, Boa, Foulds, Carroll.

Jr. Meds—Callaghan, J.C., Callaghan, Fielding, Faber, Lawlor, McIntyre, Hughes, Davies.

Assault Entries Deadline at Noon

Plans are shaping up for the Senior Assault-at-Arms which will be a feature of next Saturday's Athletic Night.

Entries will be accepted until noon today, then the draw will be made by four this afternoon. So many entries are expected that bouts may have to be run off this afternoon, however, that will not be known until the draw is made.

Weighing-in will take place during the noon hour during which time the entries will be officially placed in their respective classes. Three pounds is the only weight allowance that will be made in the classes.

Mentor Chesty Martin is expecting some keen competition in preliminaries during the remainder of the week and is confident of presenting some of the best boxing and wrestling that has been exposed on the campus for some time in the finals that will form a popular part of the next Athletic Night.

U.C. Threatens S.P.S. Track Lead

Having won four events of the first 10 in the spring indoor track meet, University College has slashed the long-time complete monopoly of S.P.S. Only seven points behind the leading School tracksters, U.C., followed closely by Meds, is making a valiant bid for the Toronto Cricket Club Cup which has been held by School for innumerable years.

Winning the two mile relay with Conant, Sims, Baxter and Shackleton composing the winning team, the Red and White first made its bid for the lead. Then when Phil Shackleton walked off with the senior half mile and mile events and Conant took the junior mile the threat became more clear. However, School took a big lead at the beginning of the season when the team of Booth, MacDonald and McDonough nabbed the first two relays. This was followed up in the 50-yard dash by a victory of Verne Booth and in the 220 by Chuck MacDonald. The other two events run off so far were taken by Trinity, when Wesson captured the junior half mile, and a split between Meds and Trinity when Georgie Lewis and Cam Burgess divided the spoils in the 100 sprint.

Not since the heyday of Larry O'Connor, almost 10 years ago, has U.C. threatened on the track. Since then Wycliffe came into the limelight in the distance events. School took over shortly afterwards and with such men as Goodwin and Creighton, and in the past few years with Roy Foulis, has dominated the general track scene. Meds have been the only opposition in recent years with such men as the Delaneys, Lewis and Wilford.

So it is a new departure for an arts college to be in the top brackets. But this was only accomplished by the spectacular running of freshman Phil Shackleton who knocked off some of the best men who have appeared in the past 10 years. However, there are nine more events before the season's end and anything can happen in the forthcoming field events.

Standings to date for the Toronto Cricket Club Cup with five points given for a first, three for a second and one for a third, are:

S.P.S.	29¼
U.C.	22½
Meds	15¾
Trinity	12
Wycliffe	7¼
St. Mike's	3¼

U.C., Vic to Vie In Fencing Finals

In the Senior Epee finals run off Friday afternoon, Bill Horsey, of V Meds, carried off top honours with four wins out of five. Ralph Thiers, III Vic, came second with three mins and 10 hits against him, while Jim Tapsell, IV Vic, defeated Paul Laughton, II Vic, for third place by reference to the hits scored by each, each winning three bouts and having 11 hits scored against him. Doug Leslie, III U.C., and Dick Jeanes, II Vic., were the remaining finalists in the meet.

Those who like the more spectacular type of action should come out on Wednesday at five to see the Senior Sabre preliminaries, as the masters of the slash and wack come to blows.

to stimulate these workers to utilize their leisure time. Adult education is necessary, especially when there is an influx of Europeans, as there is bound to be after the war."

"Above all, we must remember," concluded the speaker, "that we live in Canada, and this problem is our problem."

The ensuing discussion in the Club brought up several points for debate, one of which was the relative importance of economics—the earning of enough money for three meals a day, and education. It was decided that they are equally important and should proceed simultaneously.

Dr. Ryerson gave a quotation at one point that "there should be a new subject taught in education along with history, since the latter makes one like a driver looking out the back window of his car while going forward."

Another suggestion was for a new form of economy, which would involve co-operative companies, with the present large individual profit system thus eliminated.

The discussion was cut short by the time (the club always closes at 8 o'clock). Mr. Miller, the president of the organization, announced that the meeting next week would be a Little Norway night, with Norwegian Airforce speakers to tell of the invasion of Norway, and of their life in Canada, and to show some coloured movies.

hither and yon

with harriet leigh-mallory

Our colleague, r.w., is not alone when he declares that women appal him, although our reasons may differ somewhat. The other day in one of the Vic Residences, a winsome young ski enthusiast arrived to borrow her friend's ski pants. After carefully wrapping them up in a paper bag, she found to her horror that the bag had ripped in one corner exposing a small area of the garment in question. "But don't worry," she said apologetically to their owner, "they won't get wet, because it's not snowing!"

The story in Monday's Varsity about the closing down of the cafeteria at Queen's on account of meat shortage, reminds us of the trouble they had last autumn with the housing shortage. It got to the point where, when a student knocked at the door of a boarding house, he was greeted with the remark, "COULD I INTEREST YOU IN A TRAILER?"

It might solve the question of getting to those early moring lectures on time. You could park by the required building, and the obliging professor could tap on your door when he arrived in the morning.

But as it is professors have a difficult time of it, for their classes just won't co-operate. Or so a certain professor in the Fine Art Department would tell you.

He lectures to a class of architects in his office, and at their last meeting, which occurred around lunchtime, one of the budding young architects opened up her lunch and passed around the cookies. Declining the proffered food, the professor remarked, "You can smoke here." . . . No response. Then he queried, "Doesn't anyone want to smoke?" . . . Still no response. . . . Finally in desperation he exclaimed—"HASN'T ANYONE A CIGARETTE?"

If any of your are wondering why we have philosophers, you may heed the remark of one of our philosophy professors who says, "Philosophers aren't necessary in a society like this; they are only sent upon peoples for their sins." (He was discussing the ideal, but impossible community described by Plato.)

The Indianapolis News has one idea re the traffic situation. "The employment of feminine operators would assure at least one woman a seat on each car."

Valentine's Day is approaching. The committee running a party of sorts scheduled for this Saturday (which party will, no doubt, drag over until the early hours of Valentine's Day) thought that the significance of the date might provide a basis for some gags to brighten up the do; so a runner was dispatched to the library to dig up something about St. Valentine. The Encyclopedia put a quick end to his enthusiasm with the following: "The connection of St. Valentine's Day with the lovers' festival is purely accidental, being apparently merely because the date is in the spring-time."

Premature, eh!

And with this bit of doggerel from The Shcaf, we leave you.

Many words of former ties
Have passed from modern use,
For tempos of the present day
So—
We don't say "homo sapiens"
Now when we mean "a man"
Although we readily admit
That truthfully we can
Sometimes rely on brevity
To simplify the matter:
Omit the first word of the term,
Abbreviate the latter.

good critic, should never accept an estimate of a work without examining the work itself, and when he finds that the work is excellent and is not recognized because of inadequate opportunities, he should play it, even if it has been frowned on by all the leading musicologists for a century, who quite probably had not bothered to examine the works themselves. The conductor should, like Sir Ernest MacMillan, produce Walton's First Symphony, but unlike Sir Ernest MacMillan he should not announce that Sibelius' Seventh Symphony and Bloch's Schelomo will be played and then decline to play them. Nor should the fact that we are an ally of Britain cause him to play inferior English works which his musical perception would surely condemn. We should indeed hear such English works as Delius' Brigg Fair and In a Summer Garden, or Walton's First Symphony, but not Elgar's First Symphony and Holst's Planets Suite or Somerset Rhapsody, whose inclusion can only be excused on patriotic grounds which are, in point of fact, more than slim.

To return to the neglected works of the older composers. It is generally recognized today that Mozart's piano concertos are among his finest works, and, indeed, in their genre are only equalled by Beethoven's, which are less numerous. One would imagine that these great works would be played continually, and pianists would explore them eagerly. But do they? Not at all. For as the pianist is playing all the time in different cities, all he needs in his repertoire is two or three concertos. If one is to judge by the works they play, the permanent repertoire of even Rubinstein and Horowitz is very small. And most pianists choose the same two or three. Now here is where the conductor comes in again. As B. H. Haggin has pointed out, concertos should be regarded as part of the orchestra's repertoire. If the conductor wants to play Mozart's Concerto in C Major K. 491 (and any conductor worth his salt does want to), he should engage a pianist for the sole purpose of playing that work. The conductor must regard the concertos as his own property as well as the pianist's. Otherwise Mozart's Concertos in C Minor or in C Major K. 467 or in B flat major K. 495 (to mention a few), although they are among the unsurpassable monuments of the form, do not get played.

Similarly the old legend about Berlioz, the monstrous fraud, whose orchestration was brilliant but could not cover up the poverty of his ideas, this old legend is still with us only because conductors do not play his extremely difficult scores. Like everybody else I have heard only a few of his works, but the Symphony Fantastique, the Roman Carnaval Overture, and those parts of The Damnation of Faust, Romeo and Juliet and the Childhood of Christ that I have been privileged to hear have convinced me, as they have convinced many prominent critics, including B. H. Haggin, W. J. Turenr, Cecil Gray, Arturo Toscanini, Sir Hamilton Harty, Sir Donald Tovey, Tom Wotton, etc., that Berlioz is "an artist of the most astonishing and fascinating originality and subtlety," whose melodic invention has been surpassed only by Mozart and Schubert, and who displays qualities of restraint and precision, which one is astonished to find so flagrantly misrepresented by musicoligists and pedants, who would be hard put "to tell a stroke of genius from a technical error."

The conductor's duty is obvious here. Let him live up to his exalted calling.

Veronica Lake and Fredric March give two evenings' entertainment in one in "I Married a Witch." Besides that there is a pleasant little short called "Enemy Agents," an Ellery Queen thriller which combines thrills and patriotism. So it's a good show.

MIDTOWN "I MARRIED A WITCH"

Aside from the well known voluptuousness of Veronica Lake (one must inevitably wish for witch's eyes in the burning hotel scene), the picture is interesting as a slight exploration in the fields of witchcraft. Here is something which makes a whee of a show—you have all the chances for amazing trick effects, weird sound effects, and hocus pocus that your heart could desire, and you have a justification for them all.

One of the most relaxing pictures I have recently seen, "I Married a Witch" presents laughs and beauty and thrills. It is sure-fire entertainment.

Springtime in the Rockies, with Betty Grable and Carmen Miranda, is in technicolour, and your girl-friend can always admire Lake Louise (it's in technicolour too). For an evening of top-rate light entertainment, the picture is worth taking in. The music is supplied by Harry "Ciribin" James, and is worth the price of admission in itself as they give classical renditions of several modern ballads. The plot is old stuff but dressed up with a lot of funny situations with Edward Everett Horton, Carmen Miranda and a double-jointed blonde called "Phoebe" stealing the gag lines. In what there is of the plot, the Broadway team of Payne and Grable have a quarrel with the result that Betty the Beautiful goes to Lake Louise with Cesar Romero and is promptly followed by a slightly stewed John Payne with his valet, McTavish, and his secretary, Rosita Murphy. At Lake Louise the darndest situations arise, but don't think we're going to tell you.

SHEA'S "SPRINGTIME IN ROCKIES"

On the supporting program there is a timely and informative "Canada Carries On" on the African campaign, a newsreel feature on the historic Casablanca conference and a Donald Duck cartoon on the "Rubber Shortage."

Dental Students' Parliament To Award New Scholarships

Dental Fund Distributed By Student Vote; Is a New Departure to Promote Interest in Student Affairs

ONE FOR EACH YEAR

For the first time on this campus, a student organization will be granting scholarships this year.

The Students' Parliament of the School of Dentistry announced yesterday that a scholarship fund has been established. Each man in Dentistry pays $8 Student Parliament fee, out of which is taken $1 for an Injury Fund. A part, or all, of this fund will be used for scholarships to be awarded in each of the five years.

Scholarships will be given to those students who, in the estimation of their classmates, are generally proficient, take an active interest in athletics and extra-curricular affairs and who have a pleasing personality. There will be no nominations for the scholarships. Secret ballots from Dental students listing their preferences will be used to select the winners.

Purpose of the scholarships is "to stimulate the interests of students in faculty affairs and to allot scholarships for other than academic interests," according to Don Moore, President of the Students' Parliament. The members of the faculty of Dentistry unanimously approved this unique idea at their Council meeting last Monday night.

With noticeably fewer injuries to be paid for this year and the University Health Service providing for lesser injuries, the Parliament was able to provide a sum of money for grants out of the Injury Fund.

Country of Iran To be R.C.I. Topic

"Iran, the Country and the Architecture," is the subject chosen by Mr. Myron B. Smith for his lecture this Saturday evening at 8:15 in Convocation Hall. Mr. Smith is lecturing in the current R.C.I. series, and brings to his subject a wide and varied experience as archaeologist, architect, traveller and writer.

In Washington he holds the position of Consultant in Islamic Archaeology, Library of Congress, and Director of Archives for Islamic Culture and Art. In this connection, his investigations have led him to study many little-known aspects of Persia and its culture. Through his interest in camera-craft he has built up a large collection of unusual photographs and coloured slides. Some of these will be used to illustrate the lecture.

As well as discussing religious architecture in Persia, which he has studied intimately and as first hand, Mr. Smith will present a study of the less known field of the development of towns and town planning in Persia. He will also describe the influence of Asiatic art on the development of Gothic art and architecture in Europe.

Mr. Smith is taking the place of the intended lecturer who was to have spoken on "The Aztecs of Mexico," but who was called to Peru on government business.

Meeting Saturday For All Interested In Joining Navy

Throught arrangements which have just been completed a University Naval Training Division (U.N.T.D.) will be established immediately in the University of Toronto. For the remainder of the present session only the following male students will be allowed to enrol in this Division:

(a) those who signify their intention of enrolling for active service with the R.C.N.V.R. before the opening of next session; and

(b) those who have not enlisted during the present session in either the C.O.T.C. or the U.A.T.C.

For next session it has been agreed that enrolment in the Division shall be limited to those male students who are prepared to go on active service with the R.C.N.V.R. upon leaving the University.

Students in the Faculties of Medicine and Dentistry will not be allowed to enrol in the Division.

The Division will be a part of the complement of H.M.C.S. York and under the direction of the Commanding Officer of H.M.C.S. York.

A Ship's Office for the Division will be established in the University.

A meeting of all male students interested is called for Saturday, February 13th, in the Debates' Room, Hart House, at 4:45 p.m. Representatives of the Naval Service will be present and will outline the plan and give any information that may be desired.

Moss Memorial Recipient To Be Selected Shortly

Highest Quality of Leadership and Scholastic Ability Is Basis for $300 Award to Be Given Arts Senior

NOMINATIONS PLANNED

Within the next four weeks graduating classes in the Arts Colleges must decide upon their nominess for the Moss Scholarship. This scholarship of the sum of $300 is given each year to that arts student in any of the colleges found to have the highest quality of leadership and scholastic ability. Each senior year elects the person they believe best meets these qualifications and the four people chosen are then examined by a special committee who choose the winner.

Don Rowat, President of the U.C. Lit, announced last night that nominations for the U.C. candidate would take place Tuesday noon in Room 3, University College. Elections will be held next Thursday at noon in the Rotunda.

Victoria College will bold their nominations the first Friday in March and their elections one week later. Tom Nixon, President of the Vic Students' Union, said that the results from that college would probably be submitted about March 15.

At Trinity the day for nominations has not yet been set but it was expected that this would be decided upon sometime within the coming week. St. Michael's also were not certain as to the date of elections as theirs are held at a tea given by St. Joseph's and Loretto girls for the graduating year.

Court to Judge Newman Debate

An innovation in debating proceedure, in the form of a Parliamentary Court, a departure from the traditional Mock Parliament, is to be held by the Newman Club Debating Society on Sunday, February 14 at 8:30 p.m. in the Oak Room at the Club.

This Court is believed to be something new in the manner of debating anywhere on the campus.

The Speaker, under this system, is replaced by three judges—from now on to be known as their Lordships. The speakers will address their arguments to their Lordships; and at the conclusion of the main addresses the discussion will be opened to the forum—a vote of which will then be taken. The leaders of the losing team will then have a right of appeal to their Lordships, whose decision will be final.

The subject of the debate is as follows: "Resolved that the present Government restrictions on the sale of intoxicants contribute substantially to the Canadian War Effort."

The speakers for the Affirmative are: Al O'Mara and Aileen McNally; and for the Negative: Gene Duchesne and Gerry Wilson.

The Judges are: Chief Justice Rob Collins; Assistant Justice Don Rohr; Assistant Justice Lillian Callaghan.

Nutrition Survey To be Discussed

Results of a nutritional survey of East York will be one of the papers to be presented before the Toronto Biochemical and Biophysical Society on Thursday, Feb. 18 at 7:45 p.m. in Room 13, Medical Building. The survey was conducted by a group of six members of the society.

Subjects of other papers to be given are: The behaviour of fish in gradients of temperature, by K. C. Fisher and Grace Workman Scott; Reducing properties of fibrinogen, by L. B. Jacques; The phenomenon of "immersion foot," by M. Bunker and D. Y. Solandt.

Professor A. Weinstein To Lecture to Quebecers

Dr. A. Weinstein, Professor of Applied Mathematics, has been invited to give two lectures to French-Canadian students in Montreal and Quebec City. The Association for the Advancement of Science in the Province of Quebec has asked the former Maître de Recherches of the University of Paris to give his lectures next March 19 and 20.

Before coming to Toronto, Prof. Weinstein lectured to the French school of advanced studies in New York.

Reserve Divisions O.C. Defines New Naval Unit

Same Opportunity for Appointments to Commissions as Others in Naval Reserves; Also Planned for Other Campi

The projected University Naval Training Division is simply a naval contingent at the University from which university men may join the R.C.N.V.R. in the same way as they may join it through other channels, it was stated last night by Cap. Brock, Commanding Officer, Reserve Divisions, when telephoned by The Varsity.

Capt. Brock explained that the U.N.T.D. will not be specifically an officer's training course since naval officers, executive branch, are no longer being appointed directly to provisional sub-lieutenants as formerly; that those carolled in the University Division will have the same chances for appointments to commissions as any other men in the Naval Reserve.

It is proposed, he stated, that the Division have a camp period during which it may possibly have some sea time.

He went on to explain that Lieut. Cmdr. Baker, who is in charge of the scheme of University Training Divisions, is at present working on a similar setup projected for Queen's University, and that McGill and Western are also expected to have Naval Divisions.

Capt. Brock stated that the University of Toronto Division would be part of the complement of H.M.C.S. York and would have its Commanding Officer appointed from among the members of the faculty of the University.

He emphasized that, coming late in the training programs of university units connected with the Army and Air Force, the Naval unit was anxious not to upset the Army or Air Force arrangements.

EXPERIENCED BOOK-MENDER HANDLES U.C. PERIODICALS

By George Elliott

Upstairs in the University Library building, well-hidden from the prying eyes of the public, is the library mending and rebinding department. As a result of the war, it is understaffed now, with Miss J. Rathbun in charge, aided by Miss Margot Thompson.

The war has also affected the volume of work done in this little-known room. An average of 115 volumes per month were mended in the year ending May 31, 1942. In the same period, 479 damaged books were rebound.

This department also handles all the periodicals coming into the University that have to be bound into large volumes. This constitutes a greater part of the work than repairing. Miss Rathbun has five files filled with about 1,500 cards representing periodicals to be bound into more convenient volumes.

Miss Rathbun started her bookbinding career 18 years ago in the University Library. She had no experience at the time but was willing to take a stab at the virtually unknown handicraft. Since that time, Miss Rathbun has gone to Columbia University, Cleveland, New York and many other schools to pick up valuable tips in her profession, till now, she is able to say, "I'm quite proud of our system of mending here."

When an early imprint of an old book is brought in to be repaired, Miss Rathbun will try to mend rather than rebind it because the value of an old book decreases once it is rebound.

So far, the war hasn't affected the supplies of bookbinding materials; but that doesn't prevent the using of old covers for rebinding to save both money and materials. Only a few English-made binding cloths have stopped coming into the bookbinding room.

The average life of a rebound text book is three years, Miss Rathbun said. But she added that a book has to be treated with normal respect. "And don't drop your books into a snow-drift or let the dog get hold of them," she said. To preserve a new volume, she said, run your finger firmly down the inside margin of several pages through the book. This "breaks in" the back gently and the book won't tend to fall apart too rapidly.

Miss Rathbun was, at one time, a champion figure-skater with the Toronto Skating Club. This and wood-carving are her favourite hobbies, but the scarcity of help makes it almost impossible for her to pursue them. When asked whether or not she read many books, she smiled and said, "I've read less than ever before since I started mending and binding books, that is, beyond the title pages."

"In this business," she concluded, "you get an extraordinary feeling for the physical well-being of your books and you're able to tell at a glance how well other people treat their libraries,"

ROOMS INSPECTED YEARLY BY VETERAN S.A.C. OFFICIAL

By Jackie Singer

"Landladies prefer men," says Jim Murray, VI Meds, Rooms Inspector for the Students' Administrative Council. "They are much less trouble and they don't do washing at midnight."

For students who are unsuccessful in securing admission to one of the University residences, the S.A.C. office in Hart House prepares annually a list of accepted and approved rooming houses.

For the past three years, Murray has been inspecting rooms and grading them according to living standards regardless of the rate of rent and board. In each room these factors are taken into consideration: size, heating, bed, furniture, lighting—both artificial and daylight—cupboard space, study conveniences, bathroom facilities, location, home privileges, and general personality and manner of the landlady.

A single A-1 room averages from nine to 10 dollars a week, a double room slightly less. The best rooms are not always the most expensive. No fee is paid to the S.A.C.. This is a service for the students of the University which has been made more necessary during the war by the use of University residences for army and air force students.

This year 900 to 1,000 students were placed, the majority of the first year men. Letters and telegrams of reservation arrived from May to the fall, and in September there was a long waiting list.

"It is unfortunate," stated Bob Murray, II Dents, who assisted Jim during the year, "that students who come in late are unable to obtain A-1 places. We were able to find suitable accommodation for all students this season, despite the apparent shortage of rooms in comparison with previous years, but it is important to make applications early."

Because of the food situation, many landladies have stopped providing meals. The decrease in available rooming-houses is due to the influx of war-workers boarding in the city all year round in places which formerly accepted students of the University.

A few homes provide room and board in return for a certain amount of work done around the house. In the past two years several students have been placed in some of the fraternity houses, "But this is in no way a rushing game," stated Jim, "and the student is under no

The Navy's Here

Major news story today is the formation of a University Naval Training Division at this University. It is a step frequently bruited in the past, but news of its immediate inception comes without advance notice. We congratulate the authorities upon their move which rounds out the array of training corps in which male undergraduates may enlist to fit themselves for active service upon leaving college.

Official release of the news from the Registrar—carried elsewhere in this issue—leaves a few points as to eligibility for enlistment unclear. Main point which needs a modicum of clarification is what policy will be adopted towards those who wish to transfer from either the C.O.T.C. of the U.A.T.C. We assume that this point and other details will be fully explained at Saturday's organization meeting set for the Hart House Debates Room at 4:45 p.m.

The formation of a U.N.T.D. on this campus marks another important milestone in the University's path of vital war service.

With Apple In Hand

Our Kingston colleagues who direct the policies of The Queen's Journal seem on the brink of a large-scale editorial campaign for the broadening of out-of-lecture-hours relationships between students and staff members. A recent leading editorial in that paper says in its preoration: "We should like to see students become less shy of professors and professors more open to students."

The whole suggestion arises, we understand, out of a student-opinion poll conducted a few days ago by The Journal, to which Queensmen replied that "They were in favour of establishing closer relations with the teaching staff of the University." Thus the campaign which The Journal is conducting will apparently have considerable popular support.

It deserves such support, for the project is indeed an excellent one, and we gather that it is a move the need of which has been growing more evident recently at Queen's.

At this point there is a strong tempetation to adopt a holier-than-thou attitude and remark that such a campaign would be wasted at the University of Toronto, where already there exist many evidences of close harmony between staff and students in the extra-curricular hours. Outstanding example of this harmony, naturally, is the recent Staff-Student Conference, when professors and students met on equal footing to discuss the future of their University. And in the broad sense, such a campaign is unnecessary here.

But, unlike the University in Kingston, which is a small community in a district where amusement facilities are restricted by the size of the town where it is situated, the University of Toronto is the largest in the British Empire, with registration running high into the thousands, and it is located in a city where—except on Sunday—there are all sorts of attractions which take students off the campus in their spare time. It is impossible thus to maintain the close community of interest here among students and staff-members which may exist at smaller, more intimate colleges. The place is too big; there is too much else to do. This fact may be regrettable; it would seem at least unavoidable. If we are to accept all the views of The Journal on the subject, Toronto students actually lose a great deal by not having the same opportunities as are presented at Queen's. This unfavourable comparison is now offset by the admission that at Kingston the students are not taking full advantage of these opportunities; but it would seem their intentions to improve in this respect.

The Journal's idea is a good one; although it does not take a clairvoyant to suggest that it might easily be carried too far, and become vaguely ridiculous. We are confident, however, that this pitfall will be avoided.

But we are still left with the thought that perhaps professors will eye the move just a trifle askance at times. It is all very well to be cordial to students when the occasion demands. But to have such occasions arising very often might tax the patience of several professors we can think of. We do not flatter ourselves that some professors do not find students an extremely dull lot.

February 12, 1943

Tomorrow is the 25th anniversary of the birth of one of the most notable of the young men whom this University has sent forth to war. The poem below was contributed to The Varsity by his father.

Today Paul would be twenty-five
If now he were alive.
He never counted up the cost
Of what he gave or lost.

Blithe boys grow up and learn to light
For what they think is right.
Will we remember why they fought
Or what their blood has brought?

Dead Language

A Critic Has a Brainstorm

From the usually cultured typewriter of Hector Charlesworth, one of the most respected of Toronto's little coterie of music critics, came some rather astonishing ideas.

Writing in yesterday's issue of one of the local dailies, Mr. Charlesworth finished off a review of a Conservatory faculty concert with the following:

"Eileen Law . . . sang lieder by Brahms and Schubert in German. Why? Good English translations of all the lyrics are available, and hardly a soul in the audience understood the significance, except through previous knowledge of these translations. There is a reasonable hope among civilized people that within a few years German will have become a dead language on the concert platforms of America. So, why not start now to sing in English such German lyrics as we wish to preserve?"

If the above passage came from any less eminent source than Mr. Charlesworth we would dismiss it summarily as arrant nonsense and expend the country's dwindling supplies of newsprint and descriptive adjectives on a more worthwhile topic. However, under the circumstances we will wearily drag out a few well-used arguments, stowed carefully in the back of a filing cabinet since the hysteria of the last war died down, and summarize them as briefly as possible.

German lieder are musical settings of the great poems in the German language, great in themselves but greater for the rich and musical flow of language commanded by German poets who rank with the world's finest. As Mr. Charlesworth rightly suggests, it is necessary either to read rtanslations or to learn the language in order to understand the

Valentine Edition 10

THE TOIKE OIKE

Valentine Edition

While faintly reminiscent of the Christmas Edition of 1933, this issue has a definite soul of its own, and contains many artistic monumenta aere perennius, some of which will go down in university history as epics of this generation.

One of the most invigorating of the essays presented is, After Communism—What? This literary gem endeavours to present the argument for, and aganist, experimental democracy; while retaining, at the same time, that refreshing attitude towards human nature which one appreciates to the full in articles of this type. The author of this piece is, of course, Phosphorus de Exbydetee, who gave us, After Bureaucracy—What? in the Frosh Reception Issue.

The piece de resistance, however, is an ode called, Ode Damn, by Tangent McSliderule, Mech. IV, President of the Engineering Society. It is written in iambic hexameter, and blank verse, but with recurrent bits of internal rhyme every seventh line. This is very good, but not up to McSliderule's average (absit invidia), probably because he has diverged from his usual field, that of didactic monologue.

The issue is rich in five-line sonnets, one of which goes:

There once was a lad from the Louvre,
What had quite a rep, as a hoofer;
But instead of . . .

and so on. Ab uno disce omnes. Also of great interest was the page of Short Short Stories, each of which showed a genuine understanding of the idiosyncracies of social psychology.

All in all, the issue is good, and gives a fine demonstration of how faculty periodicals can and should be written. Proxima accesserunt!

» The Sportswoman «

By Betsy Mosbaugh

Dear Gowan:

I have just swum up to the O.C.E. gym and back. Regret to inform you that there was no swimming meet. O.T. and P. aren't to blame, however—after tonight's experience I should say any swimmer who didn't venture forth in thise rain executed a very clever stroke.

And speaking of clever strokes, the heads of hockey chalked one up to their credit by arranging to have today's game played in the arena. P. and H.E. and St. Hilda's clashed in order to break the tie of a former game.

All in all, the game was very well played. The shots at the nets were equally divided, with P. and H. E. gaining their 50 per cent towards the end of the game. It was only after a hard fought try that St. Hilda's scored the one and winning goal in the second period. Marg Alexander was the heroine for the Saints.

Both teams exhibited fast playing, coupled with unusually clever stick-handling. All during the game each side came quite close to the goal with shots that should have been in and missed their desination by a half an inch or so.

Those of the Saints who were particularly deserving of mention were Marg. Fletcher for her speed and stick-handling, Elizabeth Stark for her ability in the goal, and of course Sidney Dymond for her body checking.

The P. and H. E. damsels worthy of mention were Connie O'-Connor who managed some very good rushes on St. Hilda's goal, Zoe Christie who seems to have the ability to play defence and still try a shot at the Saints' goal, and Monica Folkerstone.

St. Hilda's will play against O.T. and P. on Friday and if they win will be in the semi-finals.

Betsy.

Speaking of Sport

By Jim Paton

Despite the noble effort of Bull Ritchie to whip up a little opposition for his string of pugilists from the campus south side, the entries for the boxing end of the Senior Assault carded for next Saturday night have been pretty poor. In the seven weight classes, ranging from 125 lbs. to 175 lbs. or over, only two bouts have been carded. The 145 class has three entries and the 155 has four. In the other five weights one name has been received for each. All of which isn't exactly an enthusiastic response. Why this should be we can't understand. There was a fairly heavy list of entries in the Junior Assault two weeks ago and it was a novice or a "closed" meet. The Senior Assault does not imply that the competition is any tougher than that encountered in the Junior Assault or that it is restricted to those who have previously "won their weight." The Senior Assault is an out and out "open affair." Entries will be accepted until 5:00 p.m. today for additional contestants.

The preliminaries in the 145 and 155-lb. class in boxing and wrestling will start this afternoon at 5:00 p.m. Those who are entered in these classes may find the result of the draw at the Athletic Office as the draw wasn't made in time for publication today. The draw for Saturday's bouts will appear in tomorrow's issue of The Varsity.

JUST IN PASSING . . .

It is not our custom to go around picking on our guest columnists because they are very handy and obliging people to know, especially when you have a party or something coming up on your night at the press, but Friend Grossgurth, the athletic spokesman for the little red Schoolhouse, has registered what he calls a beef against the Standing Committee and we find ourselves in slight disagreement. So we pass the beef right back. Don intimates and very nicely avoids saying that School "wuz robbed" by the poor ole standing committees for rugby and lacrosse and even the patriotic harvesters are nudged gently.

Now if we remember correctly there was a slight matter of snow and stuff that influenced the S.C. in no small way in its decision to make a change in the rugby playoffs. And we think they made a wise decision because very definitely the weather did not clear and we did have a Mulock Cup final. As for the lacrosse, the Schoolmen won out in the end and we believe they should find an even greater pleasure in that victory which they certainly deserved. There is really nothing to be gained by digging a system which, in spite of all its troubles, manages to be one of the best among the larger universities. And . . . Oh yes . . . the harvesters weren't stooking , , , they were pitching . . . and, brother, what a difference there is!

JUST IN CASE . . .

. . . you don't read the small boxes scattered about your favourite morning paper and knowing that you never fail to read the S.O.S. (???) we would like to remind all Varsity team players of the picture-taking session in the big gym this coming Saturday noon. Who knows, you might spoil a page in Torontonensis.

Favourites Beaten In Cage Battles

Among those to fall in yesterday's cage tilts were the Group Six leaders and the previously undefeated U.C. IV team. St. Mike's D squad was the aggregation which slapped down the Red and White in an 18-11 score. The noon hour game went to I Elec, who piled up 32 counters while I Ceramic scored 17. And a late afternoon scrap was credited to Trinity A over Pharmacy while the score-keeper settled for a 32-29 decision.

In the all-School game at noon Gibbs and Howarth led the blood-shedding for Ceramics with eight points each to their credit, while Sonley garnered nine of Electries' 17 tallies.

In the Arts strife, featuring U.C. IV and St. Mike's D, again the high scorer found himself on the losing team. Stett is his name and he snagged six points, while Stock, Springer and McAudy each claimed five for the Gaels.

The Pharmacy-Trinity strife was a more open game and as a result higher scores were recorded. Riley showed the way for Trinity with 13 points and was closely followed by Peterkin with nine. For the drug-dispensers, Leibovitz grabbed 12 and Callowhill 11 points.

Trinity Keep Lead By Defeating U.C.

League-leading Trinity pucksters demonstrated their superiority by trimming the U.C. II team in a 2-0 shut-out game yesterday afternoon at the Arena.

The Anglicans took the initiative during the first half, storming the Royal College's cage for minutes at a time, only prevented from scoring by some air-tight work of Barney Apple. The Red and White team battled gamely and offered no little resistance to their persistent opponents.

The second period opened up at an increased tempo; rushes from both sides were alternately featured. Don Pringle broke the spell at the five-minute mark when he intercepted the disc inside his own blue line and raced the length of the ice to sink the first counter of the session. Flash Horkins and Purcell of U.C. featured in the ensuing retaliatory struggle, but due to a shortage of manpower the Red and White blitz raids gradually slowed down. Johnny Aird clinched Trinity's victory by snatching a loose puck inside his opponents' blue line and rifling the rubber into the cage to make the final score 2-0. Bryson deserved credit for his shut-out.

U.C. II—B. Apple, J. Morton, B. Purcell, F. Horkins, K. Rotenberg, Tartaglia, D. Rowat, B. Nichol.

Trinity—Bryson, J. Aird (1), B. Inglis, T. Hull, B. Leake, B. Spence, D. Jones, D. Pringle (1), P. Greer, R. Laidlaw.

BIRD CAGE, TEETH, CHICKEN QUARANTINED IN THEATRE

Various articles left in Hart House Theatre will probably be unobtainable for the duration, Norm Nicholl, retiring acting manager of the theatre said last week. (The theatre has been closed provisionally for six months by order of the Board of Syndics.)

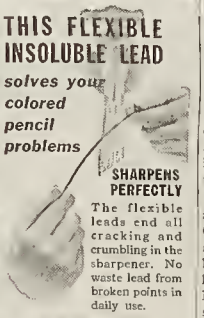
"As a reminder of last year's School Nite two stage props have not been picked up—one was a large bulky bowl and the other an office table," Norm remarked.

"From The Man Who Come to Dinner, the U.C. Player's Guild production last fall, there's a bird cage still in the theatre. The Follies cast left behind a scout hat, 'Jane Smith's jacket' and a lot of platforms belonging to Harold Marquette.

"Vic players are just about as bad as the U.C. bunch," he continued. "There's a three-cornered hat from The Devil's Disciple packed away in the moth-balls. Then there's a half a package of soap flakes used in the 'Bob'." Norm remembers how hard the soap flakes were to clean up, and the struggle he had to prevent Dents from using the same package for their show.

"But Dentantics was bad enough. There were hard plastic masses used for making impressions of teeth left about, and a large number of molars left in the footlights."

"One show left a chicken behind, another a half-turkey, even eggs.



"The most embarrassing thing ever left behind was a big live dog, although women who left their children ran a close second. There are a great many things down there, but they will all have to wait to be reclaimed until the House lights are turned up again."

Slippery Sheets Bring Students Fun and Fears

In a display of Toronto mid-winter weather rain and sleet covered sidewalks with a sheet of ice yesterday that made for some rather interesting situations around the campus. Buses were a bit tied up and many students missed first lectures but, as one second year woman remarked, "It certainly makes people very friendly while they're waiting." Then she added somewhat cynically that people would be friendly with so many potentialities for broken ankles around.

Near a U.C. residence we received an interesting answer to our query about the weather, when a House. Ec. soph replied, "Oh, it's not bad but I hate the thought of just sprawling when there are so many of the Air Force around."

A Trinity freshie revealed that the hill leading up to that college from the path to Bloor was about the funniest sight she had seen, what with people trying to get up using all fours. "I saw some lovely co-eds doing their good deed by helping an elderly gentleman to his feet and guiding him along St. George.

A touching spirit of co-operation could be observed anywhere an campus by the sight of co-eds clinging to one another for safety. Apparently this spirit became co-educational around noon when we noticed an S.P.S. man identified as Ted Thring, third year, gallantly flung his arms about a slipping co-ed near the Women's Union.

We heard one tale of a student who helped out in the emergency by driving a busful of women and children for a busman who had sprained his wrist. This was Harry Clinch, IV Modern History, and apparently this was his first lesson in driving.

Asked what he thought about the icy weather, Hugh Ford, VI Meds, was very non-committal and only grunted coyly, "Huh, do you think you can corner me on that?"

Rooms Inspected By S.A.C. Official

obligation to join." The co-op houses are in touch with the S.A.C. office and if vacancies occur, students are sent there.

Some landladies are the motherly type and specialize in University students. One woman has been on the list for more than 10 years, and on her wall are hung the pictures of students who have lived there. Another wants nothing but Med students. "They're such nice boys," she says, "and I like to have a doctor in the house."

Jim starts making the rounds about the first week of August, covering all the rooms on last year's list in addition to the new ones which have come in. He has discovered a clue in grading landladies and rooms: "You can tell whether they're for or against the student by talking to them, and by looking for dust in the cracks of the stairs walking up the steps."

He peeps into closet doors and under mattresses, and moves from one easy chair to test another, while talking to the landlady and asking questions. "Can't say I've found anything under the beds," he said, "but I've had the odd chair break underneath me."

A Rooms Inspector meets a lot of landladies, but the payoff came last summer when Jim rang a doorbell and was answered with, "Ah, bonjour, monsieur." She couldn't speak a word of English. It took some time before Jim convinced her he was looking at rooms, but she finally led him upstairs to the front room.

He carefully filled in the S.A.C. card, opening cupboard doors and testing mattress springs, and when he was through he glanced at his lost to check off her name. He said: "Merci, Madame J—." She smiled and said something which was the equivalent of "Ah yes, Madame J—, she is the mistress of the house; she will be home shortly. This is my suite of rooms, jolie—non?"

MAYBE YOU THINK that just because the Exchange Editor is generally appalled by women, and so is the CUP Editor, they are a pair of old softies. . . . We thought so too for a while. . . . "Hmmmff," we used to say down our nasal passages, "They just can't take it." . . . But we apologize heartily to them and allow that on reconsideration women appal us too. . . . What made us change our mind was an item from last Friday's Minnesota Daily which dealt with the currently recurrent question of students giving donations of their blood to the Red Cross. . . . And it seems that this here campus cutie was having her bluddy old blud drained into a bottle while she chittered merrily away to the officiating interne. . . . "Ooooh, lookeee, it's coming out lickety-split," she cachinated. . . . "Say, Doc, do you think I could leave one of those little sample bottles of my blood? I could put it on a chain and wear it around my neck. It would make a perfectly darling piece of costume jewelry!"

NOW IT'S GETTING so we appal easy, because professors are starting to appal us. . . . We have in mind one member of the staff of the Faculty of Medicine who peered wistfully at his class the other day and remarked, more in sorrow than in anger, "So you're the class that will graduate next year? . . . Well, well . . . I see. . . . Well, it's not much use trying to teach you anything now; I'll just go out and worn the public."

Here's some putrescent verse from the University of Colorado Silver and Gold:

Four and twenty test tubes,
A beaker full of lime;
Men and women yawning,
Asleep most of the time;
When the tubes are opened
The fumes begin to reek;
Isn't that an awful mess
To make three times a week?

WE ARE A CONNOISEUR of vapid and irrelevant remarks which are often overheard on the campus highways and hedgerows. . . . One of our spies brought us this one, gleaned from the ruby lips of a south-bound co-ed passing Whitney Hall last week. . . . "So when I saw him lying there, all dead and bloody, I fainted—right in the middle of the car tracks."

WHICH BRINGS US BACK AGAIN to the morbid subject of Wimmen . . . and recalls that the University of Alabama Crimson-White conducted a poll last week about what women on that campus thought about their student government. . . . The Crimson-White reported editorially—and we quote—that it had probed "women's politics and what the co-eds think about the present rules and what the co-eds think about the present rules and . . ." . . . Which seems like an extremely subtle distinction indeed.

IT IS NOT OUR intent to promote promiscuity, but we think you ethnologists will be interested by the mores of the natives of North America, as set forth by the following remarks in the University of Saskatchewan's Sheaf:

The Indians known as the Sioux
Spent oodles of time pitching wioux;
Extra-marital ties
Were praised to the skies,
And nothing was ever tabioux.

HERE WE ARE AT THE END of this hither, and probably at the end of the Last Hither We'll Ever Write, too. For the benefit of frosh and sophs and those who never knew the summer woods two years ago, we explain that we used to write the column regularly. And it seems the correct and nostalgic thing to do to jerk a maudlin tear at the thought that we may never get another chance to put three dots together before the last gag. . . . And for this paragraph of Hither, we can't think of a suitable gag anyway . . . we'll just reiterate, with a tearful glance over the bowed old shoulder that writing hithers SURE IS FUN. . . .

Weather Alters Blackout 'Co-Hop'

In spite of rain and slush which cancelled the blackout the Campus Co-operative staged a Co-Hop last night in Kagawa House that attracted almost a hundred people. Proceeds, which amounted to around $20, will be turned over to the Canadian Aid to Russia Fund.

This party, sponsored by the Social and Educational committee of the Co-op, was to have been a blackout party but the dangerous weather conditions which prevented the blackout necessitated a change in plans and the skits scheduled to take place could not be presented.

The program featured several hours of dancing to modern records. During intermission two showings of the Canadian Pacific film, "Coast to Coast in Canada" and "Skiing in the Laurentians," were enjoyed in the front dining-room. During the evening blank sheets of paper placed on the walls were filled with caricatures and water-colour drawings as the guests displayed their artistic originality. At 10:30 refreshments were served in the Don's apartment.

The Campus Co-op plans one more social event for this year—the Annual Dance to be held in the Boulevard Club, Feb. 25, to which all students are invited.

ART, MUSIC & DRAMA

significance of the lyrics. But having once read the translation, however excellent, no listener with any feeling for the music (except, perhaps, Mr. Charlesworth) would prefer to hear the translation rather than the original.

As for Mr. Charlesworth's hope that German will become "a dead language on the concert platforms of America," if he is sincere in that belief, it would be better that German musical compositions be barred completely. If America is in imminent danger of conversion to Nazism because of the sound of an umlauted vowel or gutteural consonant, how much more dangerous to democracy are the magnificent but Teutonic strains of the Eroica Symphony or the B Minor Mass. If the German language is proscribed, surley German culture is not worth preserving. Mr. Charlesworth and his "civilized people" are showing themselves a trifle remiss in the carrying out of their great mission.

Government Releases Plans For Calling Up Students In American Reserve Corps

Joint Committee of Army, Navy, War Manpower Commission, Chooses 281 Colleges for Specialized Training

CLARIFY STUDENT STATUS

The final plan for calling college students in the Enlisted Reserve Corps to active duty and the initial list of non-federal education institutions approved for utilization by the War and Navy Departments for specialized training in the armed forces have been released from Washington.

Two hundred and eighty-one separate educational institutions have been chosen for the initial list of those to be used for specialized training of the armed forces. The joint committee of the Army, Navy and War Manpower commission which is administering the plan has announced that it is still receiving applications for placement on the approved list from other schools and colleges. The committee will continue to approve other institutions and in some instances additional training programs will be instituted in colleges already approved,.

The status of the Enlisted Reserve Corps which has been worrying its members in various crises throughout the current school year has at last been settled. All members of the Reserve now in college will wind up their civilian campus life between now and the end of June, 1943. Some of them will return to campus in uniform immediately, others will leave for basic training centres to return to college

Swept by Illness, Parliament Off

A wave of illness which swept both sides of the house forced cancellation of today's session of the University College Debating Parliament, Prime Minister Rt. Hon. Herbert Christie announced yesterday.

Speaking in a somewhat husky voice, the prime minister revealed that party whips, attemping to gather sufficient ailing members to make a quorum for today's debate, had themselves been stricken, and surviving members of both parties decided in a joint caucus to call off today's session.

The parliament is tentatively scheduled to meet a week from today, when the decimated ranks of its members are expected to be somewhat restored.

REGISTRATION DATE

University students who are in age groups subject to military call-up and who have not yet received their notice to report for medical examination have until March 1 to register. Registration forms are available at the Simcoe Hall post office.

Volunteer Help Re-Opens Caf

Kingston, Feb. 11 — (CUP) — The cafeteria at Queen's University, shut down because of lack of help and a food shortage, was reopened this week when students volunteered to serve during the lunch hour. An appeal to the students was made last week-end, and the response was sufficient to allow reopening of the cafeteria for the noon meal, although it will be some time before it will return to the customary three meal schedule. The students work in pairs and are paid for their services.

Air Force men stationed at Queen's are awaiting Ottawa's decision on a suggestion that they be served full army rations.

Arrangements have been completed to take pictures of the 1942-3 Varsity athletic teams. The following teams are concerned—English Rugby, Soccer, Track and Harrier, B. Trenton Five Battle Blues Saturday Night

Senior Assault, Swim Meet with Trenton, Are Other Features on Fourth Athletic Night Card

SCHOOL HOSTS

This coming Saturday evening will see the fourth Athletic Night of the season take place as usual at Hart House. And this time the Engineers are going to be running the show. Attendance has been dropping off in the past couple of nights and it is hoped that the Schoolmen will stir up enuogh interest in the event to start the attendance soaring once more.

However, with the program the Engineers have lined up we expect to see Hart House bulging. First of all there is the basketball game. This time the Blues will attempt to regain their winning stride against the Trenton Air Force squad

For the people who manage to fight their way onto a street car at the first attempt, there will be a first class preliminary contest taking place from 7:45 on. The Varsity alternates will get a chance to show their stuff when they take on an all-star School team composed of various brilliant members of School's 30-team farm system.

The upstairs gym will be turned into a battle zone—the Senior Assault. And there will be a full complement of bouts if the boxers have to fight the wrestlers due to lack of competition for the burly sliderule wielders. For example, the 175-pound class has but two entrants, Will Henry and Walt Sharpe, both of School, who are thinking of tossing a coin to decide whether they will put gloves on before they enter the ring or not.

And then there is the pool. One of the most attractive aqueous exhibitions in some time is scheduled to take place. First of all there is a swimming meet, Trenton versus Varsity. After their crushing defeat of the Air Force last week the Blues should be in good shape to do a repeat job on Trenton. Then comes a water polo game between Trenton and an All-Star Varsity team picked from the various interfaculty squads. After the water polo feature is finished and the bodies have been removed from the pool, comes one of the sensational attractions of the evening. Let U.C. and Vic boast of their wimmen, School is going to display Mermaids! (Due to the submarine menace, they are easily obtainable for inland performances nowadays.) In case any of you have not seen the ornamental swimming display that the Mermaids put on, we assure you it is well worth viewing (as are the Mermaids themselves!).

ATHLETIC NIGHT

No admission tickets will be sold after 9:30 p.m. for the remainder of the Saturday night Athletic Nights.

Frye Praises Undergraduate Art Work

Commends Consistency of Oils By Gardiner; Criticizes Water Colours and Drawings with "Limited Objectives"

TWO MAIN GROUPS

Speaking as "the voice of the public," H. N. Frye, of the Victoria College English Department, reviewed the Undergraduate Art Exhibit in the Hart House Art gallery yesterday at 1 o'clock.

Mr. Frye described the exhibition as dividing itself into two main groups. The first, he said, consisted of those who produced competent drawings and water-colours with what may be referred to as strictly limited objectives. The other was made up of those who sought to produce something more imaginative with less regard for technique.

Chief representatives of the first class were C. R. Worsley and L. G. Baker, both of IV S.P.S.

Mr. Frye commented on the hard, dry light of Worsley's painting, and said that his watercolours gave the impression that the painter could have done any object equally well. It was not always clear just why a particular subject had been chosen. Baker, on the other hand, he found to have a little more feeling for his subjects. "Especially for that architectural lunacy that is typical of Toronto."

Another member of this first class, A. F. Mackenzie, II Architecture, was commended for his feeling for the inner picturesqueness of primitive buildings. Neil MacDonald, IV Vic, was pointed out for his feeling for the grotesque, which, however, the critic found was rendered too timidly and precisely.

Elaborating on his carlier remarks concerning a lighter regard for technique in the second group, Mr. Frye criticized Wilfred R. Beny, II Trinity, for a lack of an underlying unity in his use of colour, which turned his "Symphony" into a cacophony.

Percy M. Gardiner, IV Vic, was praised for a consistency of success in his oils. His "House" was described as full of power and sincerity, but not entirely successful.

N. Kefeman, I S.P.S., was commendably mentioned. His chief fault was a certain confusion of rhythm in one of the portraits, Mr. Frye remarked.

Futher competency in oils was found in J. R. Bais, of III Forestry, in two scenes of Canadian woods in winter.

Awards Offered Graduate Students By National Research Council

Bursaries, Studentships and Fellowships for the session 1943-44 are being offered to postgraduate students in science by the Nationa I Research Council.

Bursaries of the value of $250 will be open to award to applicants who have graduated with high distinction in scientific study. Studentships of the value of $650 will be open to award to applicants who have had experience in research work in science for at least one year following graduation. Fellowships of the value of $750 will be open to award to applicants who have given distinct evidence of capacity to conduct independent research in science.

The granting of an award by the National Research Council does not exempt a grantee from the provisions of the University Science Students Regulations, 1942, or the National Selective Service Mobilization Regulations.

The departments of science in which capacity for research will be accepted as qualifying for an award are: Biology, Chemistry, Engineering, Geology, Metallurgy, Mineralogy, Physics and Mathematics.

Any applicant for a Bursary, Studentship or Fellowship must be a British subject resident in Canada. They are open on equal terms to men and women.

Qualifications required are detailed in the regulations governing awards, copies of which may be obtained from the Registrar of the University.

A few application forms are available in the Registrar's Office, Simcoe Hall, or they may be obtained from the Secretary-Treasurer of the National Research Council in Ottawa. March 1st is the final date for the receipt of applications which should be mailed directly to "The Secretary-Treasurer, National Research Council, Ottawa."

Western Naval Division Operation Largely Similar To Local Training Unit

Transfer from Army and Air Force Units Not Encouraged Unless "For Definite Advantage of All"

QUEEN'S COURSE PROBABLE

London, Ont., Feb. 11—(CUP)—A University Naval Training Unit similar to the Naval Training Division to be set up at the University of Toronto is in operation at the University of Western Ontario.

The group is headed by Commander Hunter and is affiliated with H.M.C.S. Prevots, the local station of the Royal Canadian Naval Volunteer Reserve.

The Western Gazette revealed that transfers to the naval wing from army and air force training units Western were not being encouraged "unless they are to the definite advantage of all."

(Captain Brock, Commanding Officer, Reserve Divisions, said the Toronto naval unit was anxious not to upset army and air force training arrangements.

(The new division is not an officers' training course, but simply a contingent from which University men may join the R.C.N.V.R. Members will have the same chance for a commission as other R.C.N.V.R. personnel.

(A similar course will probably be organized shortly at Queen's University and McGill is also expected to have a Naval Division, naval officials said.

(Further details concerning the new course will be published in The Varsity following a meeting of all students interested with naval representatives tomorrow. Information concerning this meeting is contained elsewhere in this issue.)

Slash 30 Per Cent From Harvard Rolls

With the loss of 1,000 men by draft, mid-year examination failures, and calls of the Enlisted Reserve Corps enrolment at Harvard University is down 30 per cent, The Harvard Crimson said last week. It is expected that another 500 men will bet taken from the rolls before March 15, leaving a bare 2,000 men in the University.

Already the student population of the traditional rival, Yale University, is down to the 2,000 figure and some 200 are expected to leave that University in the next month.

Paralleling undergraduate shrinkage, a report from the U.S. Office of Education reveals that 8,000 college faculty members have left their posts due to the war.

ARTS EXAMINATIONS

Arts students are reminded that applications for examination must be handed in before March 1. Forms are now available at the offices of the University and College Registrars.

U.B.C. COLLECTS PENNIES FOR AMBULANCE QUOTA

Vancouver, Feb. 11 — (CUP)—University of British Columbia's War Aid Council is directing a Penny drive to complete the quota set last fall in an "Ambulance Drive." "Apathy of the students, and the pressure of exams" resulted in failure to meet the quota, and in order to keep students mindful of their war aid, the Council has embarked on a novel money-collecting scheme. The name of each faculty will be chalked in the "Quad," and the students of each Undergrad Society will cover the name of their faculty with pennies.

SUNDAY EVENING CONCERT

Arrangements for the Sunday Evening Concert in Hart House will proceed as usual in spite of the black-out between nine and ten o'clock on that evening. Students are urged to be seated well before nine.

Prospective Naval Trainees Meet Tomorrow Afternoon

Throught arrangements which have just been completed a University Naval Training Division (U.N.T.D.) will be established immediately in the University of Toronto. For the remainder of the present session only the following male students will be allowed to enrol in this Division:

(a) those who signify their intention of enrolling for active service with the R.C.N.V.R. before the opening of next session; or

(b) those who have not enlisted during the present session in either the C.O.T.C. or the U.A.T.C.

For next session it has been agreed that enrolment in the Division shall be limited to those male students who are prepared to go on active service with the R.C.N.V.R. upon leaving the University.

Students in the Faculties of Medicine and Dentistry will not be allowed to enrol in the Division.

The Division will be a part of the complement of H.M.C.S. York and under the direction of the Commanding Officer of H.M.C.S. York.

A Ship's Office for the Division will be established in the University.

A meeting of all male students interested is called for Saturday, February 13th, in the Debates' Room, Hart House, at 4:45 p.m. Representatives of the Naval Service will be present and will outline the plan and give any information that may be desired.

A. B. FENNELL,
University Registrar.

The City Needs You

The recent call for university students to work as playground supervisors in the Toronto district during the summer months has become doubly urgent through examination of the present situation in the city's parks and playgrounds. The problem of rowdyism in parks has come up for discussion again before the Toronto civic parks committee, when complaints were heard of children being injured on city skating rinks through rough treatment. The committee heard that the same situation may be found in 60 per cent of the city's skating areas.

According to Parks Commissioner C. E. Chambers, more supervision is the solution to the problem, but at the present time the committee urged consideration of means of organizing a co-operative plan among parents of the children and community groups to help ease the situation.

Although students cannot help in playgrounds during the present skating season, there is a fine opportunity for them not only to help the city but also to gain valuable experience with children, not to mention the excellent wages, during the summer months.

Mr. S. H. Armstrong, City Playground Administrator, has stated that with the opening of new playgrounds possible there would be a demand for about 40 male students and for about the same number of women students to work from approximately the middle of May to early in September. Prospective supervisors will take courses in playground supervision, the men during May and June while the children are still in school. The women's course has already begun, but those who were not able to begin the course for playground principals on February 3 need not be discouraged from applying since they will still be considered.

Previous experience as camp councellor is helpful for a supervisor but it is not essential, since, as Mr. Armstrong pointed out, the work in playgrounds is different in some respects from that in camps. The course for women principals, which is now going on, consists of a series of five lectures in first aid, story telling and industrial handicrafts. The course is designed to give basic instruction in playground work and to give the supervisors skill in handling the many new types of situation which develop in this kind of work.

Toronto city playgrounds operate from May 17 to September 4, and in that period they accommodate some two million children in competitive sports, games and crafts of all kinds. The parks open at nine o'clock in the morning and close at nightfall, so that there is need for constant supervision during the whole day and the playground workers will be assigned to morning, afternoon or evening duties.

Experience in dealing with children is one of the benefits of this type of work which would be of particular value to students planning on a teaching career, but it would also be valuable to anyone. And, most important, the work itself is worth doing.

Scientist's Chance

Plans for the coming year are already under way with the announcement of various scholarships. The much sought after British Council scholarships for women have already been announced, and now the National Research Council of Canada has sent out its annual information about bursaries for students woh have "won high distinction in scientific study during their undergraduate course," and studentships and fellowships for graduates of scientfic talent to continue research for the advancement of science or for the application of science to Canada's industries.

Open to both men and women students and research workers, as long as they are less than thirty years of age and are British subjects resident in Canada, these bursaries and fellowships are a boon to the scientific worker in Biology, Chemistry, Engineering, Geology, Metallurgy, Mineralogy, Physics and Mathematics.

The emphasis on the branches of science which aid Canadian industry makes these National Research Council awards particularly important, especially at the present time when ever increasing improvements on the scientific home front can do so much toward winning the war. The responsibility of our scientific workers is thus double, and the Council here holds out a helping hand to them.

Printed elsewhere in this issue of The Varsity are the regulations governing the bursaries, studentships and fellowships. Since all applications must be sent in by March 1, those students who could benefit by the awards are urged to send theirs in immediately. Application forms are available at the University Registrar's office, or may be obtained from The Secretary-Treasurer, National Research Council, Ottawa.

Correspondence

Editor,
The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

The courteous gesture of The Varsity in giving Lord Hailey editorial praise appeared slightly ridiculous to me, printed as it was, immediately above an urgent warning by Sir Stafford Cripps against the trickery of the ruling class. This didn't tally very neatly with Lord Hailey's final statement, the truth of which you are so happily convinced. Elsewhere in Tuesday's issue are enumerated the features of the second Falconer lecture, on the basis of which Britain's slate is wiped all but spotless.

I, for one, sincerely believe we have everything to fear from the spirit of British imperialism blocking "progressive world security," a fear justified by facts too numerous to point out here. However, as it is not the normal privilege of undergraduates to air their convictions through their college newspapers, neither should mastheaders be allowed to insinuate their prejudices into columns supposedly representing campus opinion.

If the author of the editorial is so open to salient statistics (his love of selected ones being obvious), I recommend "America Is Worth Saving" by Theodore Dreiser for thought-provoking entertainment. But no doubt there will be "no time" for such extra-curricular enlightenment; which leaves me to state the reason for this letter: disapproval of political commentary by The Varsity.

Very truly yours,

David Fox,
Music III.
Feb. 10, 1943.

To Mr. Fox, we would point out that the inconsistency to which he has drawn attention is not perhaps so great as it would at first appear. Lord Hailey's speech which received "editorial praise" dealt with Britan's relations with her overseas Dominions and colonies; Sir Stafford Cripps' remarks were more closely concerned with certain attitudes of thought which he considered were growing more prevalent among the people of Great Britain. Nor were they entirely "an urgent warning . . . against the trickery of the ruling class"; it was, we believe, rather directed towards the common people to urge upon them their duty of preventing any unfortunate re-establishment of certain unsavory pre-war conditions.

Dealing with Mr. Fox's second paragraph, we would point out that "prejudices" which mastheaders "insinuate" into these columns cannot be overly hidebound, or even such inconsistencies as our correspondent has laid his adept finger upon would not appear. If printing two—slightly unrelated—sides to an argument constitutes prejudice, we plead guilty.

Mr. Fox is in error when he asserts that "it is not the normal privilege of undergraduates to air their convictions through their college newspapers." On only one occasion this year have we withheld publication of signed letters to the Editor; then it was mere space restrictions which prevented the letters from being printed.

We are sorry that Mr. Fox disapproves of our "political commentary." We believe that many will disapprove of his.—EDITOR.

Control

Minneapolis Symphony

There can be no doubt that Dimitri Mitropoulos is more than a competent conductor. His performance last night made that clear. From the very first bars which the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra played it was evident that Mitropoulos was exerting a firm control over the players. He possesses those qualities of leadership and personal magnetism without which competence and higher qualities of musicianship cannot achieve their effect. Moreover his conducting displays a vigour and even power which are impressive. He is able to make the orchestra follow him in the execution of dynamics whose range is considerably less than tame. In the lovely suite from The Foithful Shepherd by Handel, he made the orchestra conform closely and with some precision to the conception of the work which he was trying to get across. One certainly felt that Mitropoulos was in charge. The orchestra's general excellence of execution was also apparent in the enjoyable Walk to the Paradise Garden of Delius, and to a slightly less degree in the mildly pleasant Scherzo Capriccioso of Dvorak.

But Mitropoulos' limitations were no less evident than his excellences. In the Bource of The Faithful Shepherd, for example, the dance tune was inflected in an exaggerated style. The gradations of volume, although they illustrated the conductor's ability to make the orchestra do what he wanted, were more than the tune should be required to bear. With regard to the Tschaikovsky Sixth Symphony I was reminded of a story told by the brilliant English critic W. J. Turner. In the middle of a passage he suddenly stopped the orchestra and cried out, "You there with the French Horn, play forte!" The horn player blew until he was purple in the face. "Will you please play forte!" screamed the conductor. "But I'm playing just as loud as I can," interrupted the player. "Exactly," replied the conductor. "That's why I asked you to play forte and not fortissimo." Mr. Mitropoulos sometimes reminds me of that French Horn player. He breaks up his performances into a series of violent crescendos. These somehow do not fit together as well as they should. Tschaikovsky's peculiar quality of inevitability in a square cut pattern, his ability to achieve formal continuity within the limits of antithetical phrasing, were lost in the impact of a succession of impressive noises. Mitropoulos does not achieve a continuous line. He lives too much in the moment. But even within the narrow limits of phrasing, of imparting a distinctive shape to each phrase as it comes up, he can often be very dull, as in the second movement. And his texture is often uninteresting and coarse. I am afraid that Mr. Mitropoulos is not a very subtle conductor. Still, within his limits, there is very much to commend in his performances, and it is indeed a pleasure to listen to so well disciplined an organization.

By Aileen McNally

Winter sport is our topic for today and we really feel we have a timely theme . . . or have you been out yet? The Sportswoman hasn't . . . but anyway, here's the dope on the ski meet. We regret to report that due to circumtances beyond our control (honestly, the lack of snow and the present restrictions on travelling are entirely out of our hands) there will be no ski meet this year. We did our best but it is just one of those things. However, gals, the men aren't having one either, so cheer up. (This is not a sports' staff plug, but the S.O.S. had some brilliant ideas about strumming up some competition among your own pals, so if you want to ski, drag your gang out to High Park—rumour has it that the skiing is quite good out in "them thar hills.")

Slipping into the Arena we saw a super-game of hockey in which, after a great struggle, Vic conquered U.C., 1-0. The whole game was marked by brilliant defence on both sides, though U.C. certainly missed their fast-skating blonde flash, Marg. Ham. Shortly after the face-off Shirley Pearce of Vic made a brilliant break-away, but the U.C. defence held. Then Jesse Finlayson made a rush for the Vic net but Helen Stewart was right there . . . literally speaking she just lay down in the net . . . and U.C. didn't have a chance. Early in the second period Leone Eunson sailed merrily down the ice and put the puck very neatly in the corner for the winning tally. The last frame saw U.C. fighting hard and the game ended with them really shooting the puck, but with the goalie in the net they just couldn't score. Peg Graeb of U.C. played a bang-up game, ably assisted by Jessie Finlayson and Eileen Cameron. Pearce and Allen were equally good for Vic, while the goalie's performance reminded us of some games we've seen at the Gardens.

Tonight at 4:15 O.T. plays St. Hilda's and if the Saints win it will make it four straight. That's what they're aiming to do, so, to see some good hockey, drop in.

Speaking Of Sport

By Roger Conant

AND NOW IT'S TWO BLUES . . .

To give more actual game playing time to all the Blues who are trying to make the first string, Coach Stevens is dividing up his cagers for the coming big Athletic Night. His plans entail the forming of a reserve squad which will play an all-star team from S.P.S. as the preliminary attraction on the big gym floor. And the six men whom he has chosen will represent Varsity in the feature of the basketball program—the tussle with the Trenton R.C.A.F. Fliers.

As perhaps the final test before the decision was made Steve put the lads through a stiff workout last night and selected "skins" and "shirts" for a little half-hour scrimmage. Gordie Wallace, Hank Goldstein, Stu Scott, Gene Durocher and Murray Thomson donned blue jackets. Ken Tettmar, Tommy Patterson, Don Gibson, Verne Booth and a Vicman, Groover, peeled above the waist. Man-to-man play was the order for the first 15 minutes and it was pretty tight ball. However, Stu Scott lapped up this type of play and ran in for five baskets from close quarters. Long Don Gibson also was at home here and chalked up nine points from close range. Ken Tettmar, Gordie Wallace and Murray Thomson shook themselves free for a half a dozen counters apiece. For the second 15 minutes the zone system was brought into play and the "shirts" walked away with the game, clipping off 22 to the "skins'" 15. In this session the long range and accurate shooting of Hank Goldstein and Gene Durocher were the striking features but in general the play became ragged when the game was stepped up.

But it was quite a work-out and brought out some of the weaknesses of the shooting besides the passing attack. Whether by design or fortune, the six top scorers of the game were selected as the regular team to go against Trenton. Gordie Wallace, Gene Durocher, Murray Thomson and Don Gibson will carry the brunt of the attack, while Stu Scott and Ken Tettmar will stand as the rearguard. And in our estimation no better choice could have been made—all six have displayed real basketball talent in the previous games.

To make up the reserves' team—to play the all-star aggregation tomorrow—Hank Goldstein, Tommy Patterson, Verne Booth, Joe Meschino, Tom Walden and Bill Dewar will carry Blue colours. This will be no slouch of a team and cage-ball fans are warned to get to Hart House well before the main game begins.

AND WHAT OF THE BIG GAME?

Well, it may seem that we say that every game will be the best. In this case we'll fool you and say that the Blues will be playing the next best Ontario basketball team. And, from what we gather, the two squads are rather evenly matched. For Wayne beat Varsity by 20 points, Wayne beat Western by about 40 points and Trenton beat Western by about 20 points. So run down to the poolroom and haul out the nearest Schoolman's slide-rule and you may find that by past scores the two squads are about on even ground. As a matter of fact, Coach Buff Horton's Fliers have dropped only one game in their last 15 starts, and that one they avenged by a lop-sided return victory. And among the line-up we note one of the famed backfielders on the Hayman Hurricanes of last fall, Joey Richman is his name and No. 3 bears watching tomorrow. Brit Britton played last year on this same team as did Ken Bundy. The latter is a former soccer and cageball toter of repute from this city. He is stationed at Brantford now and is coming down specially for this one game. So she looks like a tight little set-to when the Blues will try to repeat last year's victory over the Fliers.

Goals Galore In S.P.S. Tilts

Fifths Apply Whitewash to Emmanuel, 7-0; Juniors Continue on Undefeated Way in Classy Style

BALL AND BOYNTON SHINE

By Hal Pohl

Up at Varsity Arena yesterday School pucksters showed a decided superiority over their opponents as the Fifths whitewashed Emmanuel 7-0 and the Juniors trounced Senior Meds to the tune of 9-2.

The first encouter, slow in starting, was on the whole a one-sided game of consistently poor hockey which developed into a shinny game of the first water. However, School started the scoring in four minutes of play when Bob Moorish, on an assist from Spratt, set off the landslide. From here on Thomson, the Engineer goal-tender, had a most boring afternoon watching his team-mates glide to victory; only now and then was he called up to dribble aside a mouldy shot.

In the five o'clock game, the flashy Junior sextet took immediate command of the situation by grabbing the disc on the face-off and guiding it into enemy territory. The determined doctors, try as they may, could not fathom the ferociousness of the junior commando blitz. Ratcliffe, on a beautiful back-swipe pass from Gord Ball started the parade. Two minutes later Carrol, intercepting the puck at centre ice, sifted a pass to Boa who, flicking the rubber through Lewis' legs, bulged the twine.

The medicos turned on the steam to get the scores back and Laidlaw was only kept off the scoresheet by a clever save by goalie Spence. But the Engineers were relentless; McMillan carried the pill past the blue-line, passed to Art Ridler who relayed it to Pat McDonnough who sent a smoker past Lewis for the third tally.

The Meds tried the attack again under the sparking of Spence but Harry Boynton snagged a loose puck and made the score four. Driven to desperation, the Doctors repeated their drive which this time bore the fruit of a singeing goal from Laidlaw's stick. But the cause was hopeless as Gord Ball, on a pass from Harry Boynton slammed in the final tally which ended the first period at 5-1.

The Schoolmen kept up the barrage in the last canto and Gord Ball and Herb Stricker both notched counters in short order. Foulds then collected on a pass from Stricker. But the undaunted doctors kept coming back and their courage was rewarded after 18 minutes when Laidlaw, assisted by Spenee, backhanded the disc into the twine. With 15 seconds left, Harry Boynton broke through for the final goal of the evening to make the score 9-2.

It isn't like us to cast aspersions on business people of long and respectable standing, but the following ad in The Harvard Crimson was viewed by us with a somewhat cynical eye. It read:

Tbings are tough all over, we know, but you'll go a long way before you'll find such a situation as the one rumoured around Annesley Hall. According to an emergency ruling up there mere illness is no guarantee of a soft bed in the infirmary. Now the girls have to qualify with a temperature of at least 100 degrees Fahrenheit by actual test.

Professors are very respectable people, so it is not surprising that while on a trip in France a few years age one of the pundits of the classics department should take suitable steps to protect his respectability.

It was this way. He was scated with a number of his confreres in an estaminet quaffing away for dear life at the various wines of the region when it occurred to him that some dirty snitch might report back home that they were intoxicated. His companions scoffed at the idea that they were any such thing. "Of course we aren't," the first prof assured, "but we should take steps to prove it. Let us get a postal card and send it to some responsible person back home as proof that we are quite, quite sober."

The company fell in with the suggestion and named a certain Professor John Doe as addressee (not to be identified with the impecunious John Doe recorded in the Arithmetic books as a prolific signer of promissory notes).

On his return home the classies professor met Professor Doe and asked him if he had ever received the indisputable documentary evidence of the collective professorial sobriety. "Yes," replied Doe, "but I don't know how it ever got to me. It was simply addressed, 'Professor Doe, CANADA'."

later to continue their studies. Still others have a definite "maybe" attached to their college futures.

Reservists generally, that is, those who are not in military colleges, medicine, or engineering, will be called to duty at the end of the current term. Following basic training they will be eligible for further college training under the Army Specialized Training Program. They will not necessarily be returned to the colleges in which they were previously enrolled.

Medical students (including dental and veterinary students) in the Enlisted reserves will be immediately assigned to schools to continue their studies, and in some cases they will continue their studies in their own schools.

Pre-medical students in the Reserve will take basic training and will undergo selection upon induction, for further training in medicine. Meds and pre-meds who are not in the Reserve and are drafted will be allowed to continue until the end of the first full term in 1943 and will then be eligible for further training.

Seniors in Engineering who are taking approved courses will be allowed to return to college after their basic training if they have not been able to graduate before the end of the current term. Juniors in Engineering face selection for further training.

Sophomores in the Reserve and Juniors not in the Reserve also face selection for further training.

Students who are members of both the Reserve Officers' Training Corps and the E.R.C. and have completed advanced R.O.T.C. training have the opportunity of being assigned to specialized training in branch service schools and will be commissioned after three months of service. Non-Reserve members of the R.O.T.C. will be given the opportunity of being inducted into the E.R.C. in order to avoid possible drafting.

NAVAL TRAINING CLARIFIED AT MEETING HELD SATURDAY; FOUR UNIVERSITIES INCLUDED

Enrolment This Year Restricted to Those Who Plan to Join Navy Before Next Term or Those Under Military Age

CO-OPERATION STRESSED

The preliminary organization meeting of the University Naval Training Division was held Saturday afternoon in the Debates Room at Hart House.

Keynote of the proceedings was the complete co-operation expressed by the heads of the three units now represented on the campus. Col. H. H. Madill of the C.O.T.C. and Squadron-Leader Hutchison of the U.A.T.C. both stated that complete co-operation was needed between the three branches of the service and that this co-operation should start as soon as possible.

Lieutenant-Commander A. W. Baker, from H.M.C.S. York, was in charge of the meeting and before outlining the proposed Naval training plan stressed the purpose of the U.N.T.D. "This meeting is called primarily to answer questions concerning the Navy way of doing things," he said.

He pointed out that the Naval Training Division is not an Officers' Training Course nor is it a high pressure recruiting campaign for the navy. Commander Baker, in charge of all University Naval activities in Canada, emphatically stated that the Navy won't promise commissions to men taking the new course; but said that students will be given every consideration toward becoming officers.

In joining the U.N.T.D., a student is enlisted in the Navy as a rating. His enlistment, though, is subject to the needs of National Selective Service. Enrolment in this new service is restricted to those students who are definitely planning to join the Navy before the beginning of the next academic term and to those students who, because they are under the age limit, are not in the C.O.T.C. and who plan to join the Navy.

Training in the third branch of the service on the campus will be a combination of ratings' training and officers' training. It will take the same form as that of the C.O.T.C. and the U.A.T.C. There will be two two-hour lectures a week and Saturday afternoon the ratings will "go on board" H.M.C.S. York on the Exhibition grounds. Ratings' pay will be assigned in the Navy in the same way as is C.O.T.C. pay.

The U.N.T.D. will be under the command of a faculty member who has not been appointed by the Navy yet. The commanding officer of H.M.C.S. York will be in complete command of the University Division. Lieut.-Cmdr. Baker explained that, despite the fact that deferment from military call-up will be granted, the U.N.T.D. has no intention of interefring with the academic work of the students. He said that students' first responsibility is to the University and their membership in the Navy wouldn't lighten that responsibility.

About 140 students were present at the meeting and almost all of these were enrolled in the Faculty of Applied Science. Commander Baker referred to the 1942 Regulations concerning science students when he said the Wartime Bureau of Technical Personnel has priority over the armed forces to place trained engineers. Several men raised the question of transferring from C.O.T.C. to U.N.T.D., and both Col. Madill and Lt.-Comdr. Baker emphasized the priority of W.B.T.P. and National Selective Service in the allocation of men.

Squadron-Leader Hutchison, of the U.A.T.C., said that very few men from his corps had come to seek a transfer into the Navy.

Room A of Hart House will become "Ship's office" on Monday morning, 9:00 a.m. Lieut. Carmichael will be in charge temporarily and will give out application forms and information.

In his concluding remarks to the students present, Lt.-Cmdr. Baker said, "It is our hope that the U.N.T.D. will become an integral part of campus life in this University."

Dr. Healey Willan, University organist, will present the following program this afternoon at 4:30 on the Convocation Hall organ:

Queen's Principal Announces Formation of Naval Training Division After Meeting Last Thursday

McGILL, WESTERN, TOO

Kingston, Feb. 14—(CUP)—A University Naval Training Detachment will be established at Queen's University in the autumn, similar to the Naval Training Division being set up at the University of Toronto, stated Principal R. C. Wallace, following a meeting last Thursday of the Queen's University Military Board with Lt.Cmdr. A. W. Baker, who is responsible for establishing Naval Training at Canadian universities, and Lieut. H. Webster, of H.M.C.S. Cataraqui, Kingston.

(Plans for the establishment of a Division at McGill University have been approved by the McGill Senate; the Division will be part of the complement of H.M.C.S. Montreal.

(A Naval Training Division is being established at the University of Western Ontario similar to the one at Toronto.

(No divisions have been formed at the University of British Columbia or at McMaster, and no information has been received from other Canadian universities.)

At Queen's, men wishing to join the Navy on graduation will be enlisted as ratings and exempted from military call up, subject to Selective Service Regulations. They will not be enlisted as officers, but all recruits will be given a chance of becoming such, although the Navy has given no assurance that such appointments will be made. It was proposed at the meeting that students wishing to join the Navy on leaving the University this year be given an opportunity to enlist immediately in the Kingston Division.

Students enlisting in the U.N.T.D. will take the same number of hours training as the C.O.T.C. and the U.A.T.C. and will have two weeks training in the summer at a Naval Establishment. Full details have not yet been announced, but it is expected that the ratings will take part of their training at the University and part at H.M.C.S. Cataraqui. Instructors will be provided by Divisional Headquarters, and a member of the University Staff will be recommended as O.C. A three-year training program is being worked out, and uniforms will be provided for all recruits.

Although the Division will not actually be formed at Queen's until next autumn, 25 students who intend to continue their studies next year will be allowed to enlist now, and thus form the nucleus of the Division next year. If the applicants are accepted, they will have to make satisfactory arrangements with the C.O.T.C. or the U.A.T.C.

Principal Wallace, commenting on the formation of the U.N.T.D. said, "The Military Committee welcomes the opportunity of having Naval Training on the campus."

DARKNESS DOESN'T DAUNT PIANIST

By Doc Savage

Music lovers were treated to a new type of concert last night in Hart House, and a singularly beautiful one it was, at that, as Madame Lubka Kolessa carried on despite the inconveniences of a blackout.

When the sirens sounded before the start of the concert, all the lights in Hart House were darkened, including the ones in the Great Hall were the concert was to take place. The audience, forewarned, had all come in advance, and ushers stood by with blue shaded flashlights in case people had to leave.

The only light in the mammouth Great Hall was a single dim blue one on the piano, which barely illuminated the keyboard. Madame Kolessa was dressed in a black velvet gown which left her arms bare to the elbows.

The scene was one of a weird and macabre beauty—a dim blue light shining upon the white ivory of the keyboard, the white blur of face and arms and the long weird shadows of her arms cast upon the floor as she swept up and down the keyboard creating music of matchless beauty.

The music, literally, came out of the darkness, and the audience sat entranced.

"I will always remember this concert," she said afterwards. "It was the strangest that I have ever played. It was much harder than I expected . . . you hear more in the dark . . . the audience noises bother you. . . . I couldn't see all of the keyboard, so I was playing blind."

"I enjoyed it very much though. You seem by yourself. I would like to have all my concerts this way," she concluded.

"We are very grateful to Madame Kolessa," stated Acting Warden Gillie. "When we heard about the blackout we were afraid we would have to cancel the concert, but Madame Kolessa very graciously agreed to do it this way. This was the only way we could still have the concert and not violate any blackout regulations."

And so the concert was held, a blackout concert, and the audience will always remember an evening of music out of the darkness.

Queen's Music Prof Demands Apology In Review Flareup

Kingston, Feb. 14 — (CUP) — Dr. Frank L. Harrison, Professor of Music at Queen's University, last week accused Doug Wilson, News Editor of The Queen's Journal, of reviewing a concert in which Dr. Harrison appeared in a manner "neither sincere nor objective." He added that Wilson's criticisms were "malicious" and based on personal ill-feeling.

He demanded that the review in question be discredited by The Journal over the Editor's signature, and said in an interview with Editor Ken Phin and Assistant Editor Hugh Buchanan that he was "prepared to go to any lengths" to see that this was done.

Dr. Harrison based his accusation of personal animosity on Wilson's part on the fact that he had failed Wilson in Music I in the previous academic year. He said he did not know Wilson by sight but deemed this "sufficient evidence" to conclude that the review was premeditated, "libelous" and a "slanderous attack."

Wilson said that personal motives had nothing to do with the review in question, and that he had gone to the concert "with a completely open mind."

He continued: "I am very sorry to hear that a musician whose musical ability I respect has seen fit to interject personalities into what I had intended to be a purely academic discussion. I can only say that Dr. Harrison has definitely misinterpreted the spirit in which my review was written. . . . I went . . . prepared to enjoy myself, as the first part of my review shows. . . . Before putting my thoughs on paper I consulted three other people at the concert whose opinions I have always respected. Only when I found their views coincided with mine did I write a word. For what I have written, however, I assume complete responsibility."

At an emergency meeting of The Journal's four-man Editorial Board, the following statement was unanimously passed: "We, the members of the Editorial Board of The Queen's University Journal, are sorry that such ill-feeling has arisen but we have found no reason to believe that our reviewer had any personal motives in adversely criticizing the performance. We maintain that, according to the principles of freedom of the press, a man is quite entitled to express his own opinion under his own by-line provided that hes not obscene or personally libelous. We have no satisfactory evidence that either of these restrictions has been violated and we continue to have absolute confidence in Mr. Wilson's integrity."

BLACKOUT SEES A.R.P. REALISM

By Jackie Singer and Ruth Cohen

(For A.R.P. practice during last night's hour-long blackout, students participating as air raid casualties received slips of paper on which were written the supposed injuries they had received during the time when Convocation Hall was supposedly bombed by enemy planes. These casualties were treated by first aid orderlies in the various stations to which they had been sent as though they were real injuries. Eyewitness description follows.—Ed.)

Last night a bomb fell on Convocation Hall. Eleven casualties resulted from the direct bit which partially demolished the building. Seriously injured, the students, who had been attending a Sunday evening lecture, were treated in the black-out foyer of Simcoe Hall while calls were put through for ambulances. Although suffering from shock, fractures, haemorrbages, the casulties did not succumb to panic and kept up their morale while waiting to be transported by singing snatches of songs and exchanging data on their injuries.

A.R.P. wardens meawhile were busy extinguishing incendiary bombs of the new high-explosive type used by the enemy in recent raids over England.

Two stretcher-bearers and a first aid orderly, employees of the Robert Simpson Company with St. John's Ambulance certificates, arrived in response to the emergency call sent out from control headquarters. The injured persons were speedily treated. Barbara Swan, III Fine Art, whose right foot was mangled by falling splinters, and Marjorie McKenzie, II Modern History, unconscious as a result of severe head wounds, were laid out on stretchers and carried into the ambulance. This was a converted Simpson's delivery truck.

Two castulties with haemorrhages and broken bones were taken to the Men's Medical Centre at 43 St. George and there treated under the direction of Mr. J. M. Thomas. Both patients displayed shock symptoms and were kept warm and spoken kindly too, while people from the St. John's Ambulance training course applied pressure to cut arteries. One, suffering from a broken jaw, was bandaged with a strip of material which had been converted into a specialized jaw-support by Mr. Thomas. "You usually treat these cases with a slight construction, but you would rarely have one with you," Mr. Thomas said to his aids. "But you can improvise a bandage from a strip torn from an undergarment, or anything handy, and use it this way."

At Gosvenor Street firehall No. 10, local First Aid Station, the suffering students were removed from the stretchers and placed on operating tables. Two graduate nurses, Mrs. James and Mrs. Covey, supervising four efficient women in white uniforms examined the injuries and gave further treatment and hat water bottles to the patients.

In the University control room at Convocation Hall during the black-ont Miss Parkes and four able assistants carried on. April Cohen, II Physiotherapy, who completed the A.R.P. course last term, answered calls from the various posts on campus. One hundred and forty-three wardens, staff volunteers and students were on duty, in addition to those members staffing the two first aid stations at Hart House and 43 St. George St.

Thunder Over Kingston

Current controversy at Queen's University, arising out of a Queen's Journal review of a two-piano concert in which one of the performers was a member of the Faculty, is one that calls for comment from this newspaper.

The CUP story of the affair, carried elsewhere in this issue, relates how the pianist in question accused his critic of personal motives for adverse criticism, based on the grounds that he had failed the writer in the previous academic year in one of his subjects. It continues with the writer's denial of such motives, and with the statement by the Journal Editor Board that its members retain "aboslute confidence" in the integrity of their reviewer.

Most significant remark which fell from the indignant lips of the Faculty member fas that he was "prepared to go to any lengths" to have the review discredited by the Journal's Editor in a signed statement.

Such sayings redound very little to the credit of a man who has attained high academic status. He accuses an undergraduate whom he does not even know by sight of a very low standard of journalistic ethics on the thinnest evidence; and he adds to this accusation the totally unfounded epithet of "libellous."

There was absolutely nothing "libellous" in the review of the concert which the Journal printed. It is impossible to pass judgment on the worth of a concert performed 300 miles away, so that we cannot argue that the reviewer was not in error; but perusal of his review assures us that it in no way transgresses the normal rules of honest and decent journalism.

Hence we congratulate the Editorial Board of our contemporary for its firm stand in refusing to be intimidated by the blustering of a Faculty member, who, for all his musicianship and professional ability, is apparently much too thin-skinned to perform publicly.

And we respectfully suggest to the performer that if he carries his somewhat ridiculous campaign to have the review discredited any further, he will appear in an even more ludicrous light than that in which he has already placed himself.

Radio Becalmed

Of particular interest to the graduating year, interested in ways in which they may make use of their four years of university education, but also of interest to those in other years, is the so far experimental program of educational broadcasts sponsored by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation. This means of education is progressing rapidly and can look forward to a great era of expansion and increasing importance as soon as victory is won and Canadian energy can return to peace-time pursuits. What will be needed then will be a large group of persons interested in both radio and education, and sufficiently trained to work in their chosen field.

University graduates are well equipped to handle such a job. Those particularly who are sufficiently modern-minded to grasp the immense untapped potentialities of radio would be welcomed with open arms as workers in this new field, in which "painless education," if we can call it that, is being perfected. Orson Welles has given us a good example to follow in his series of educational broadcasts on the Latin American countries, in which statistics and information are never allowed to become dull and, with the help of Carmen Miranda are made entertaining.

A recent article, Education Without Tears, by Frank Chamberlain, published in the Canadian Association for Adult Education's monthly Food for Thought, gives an illuminating account of Canadian progress in educational broadcasting, and its possible future. We take the liberty of quoting some of the most provocative sections in which we feel sure a large number of students will be interested:

"There can be no doubt about the educational value of the radio programs of "Radio College," a series of programs heard five nights a week over the French network of the C.B.C. These broadcasts are under the direction of Mr. Aurele Seguin, and are for the benefit of students of high school and college standing in the province of Quebec. "Radio College" is two years old. In his report for 1941-42, Mr. Seguin states that these educational broadcasts were followed last winter by 52 per cent of special schools of lay pupils; over 41 per cent of special schools for religious teachers (men); 56 per cent of special schools for religious teachers (women); over 35 per cent of classical colleges (men); 50 per cent of classical colleges (women), and nearly 58 per cent of domestic science schools. In addition, a non-school audience of 2,500 registered by mail with "Radio College."

"During the current season, "Radio College" is presenting courses in science, history, botany, drama, diction, geography, music, as well as as series of actuality programs describing scenes of Canadian life. . . .

". . . I might say something about the curious state of affairs in Canadian educational broadcasts which allows some provinces to do such splendid work in school broadcasting, while one province (yes, I shall name it— it is Ontario) has so far shown very little interest in the whole field of radio broadcasting. The Ontario Department of Education is doing what some newspapers have done—refused to recognize that radio is here to stay, and that radio is a great educational force. If newspapers and departments of education were alive to their responsibilities they would recognize radio, turn it into useful channels, use it in a manner which would do the most good. . . .

"These listening groups (in connection with "Farm Forum") are unique in North America. The Canadian Federation of Agriculture and the Canadian Association for Adult Education have done a remarkable piece of educational extension work. But why should listening groups be confined to people interested primarily in agricultural problems? What about religion? Economics? Politicis? Post-war problems?

"Education by radio, without tears, has made its first baby steps in Canada. A few people have recognized the possibilities of extending the educational facilities of radio to the masses. A few organizations, a few universities, a few departments of education have shown their iterest. There is a long way to go yet. National cohesion and direction are needed. A ten-year-plan of educational broadcasting would give some purpose to the present trial and error plan. More co-operation between the provinces and the organizations interested in educational broadcasting would help."

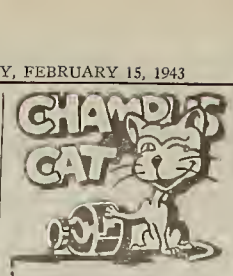
One of the universities which Mr. Chamberlain mentions is our own, which have given encouragement and the use of the Economics Building to the Workers' Educational Association for its Friday evening round table discussions on a variety of post-war problems. Mut much more can be made of the challenging new medium, radio, which we now possess. This challenge lies before us, the students, and future makers of Canada.

ART, MUSIC and Drama

The Show Goes On

Hart House Concert

Probably very few of those who attended last night's recital by Lubka Kolessa in the blacked out Great Hall know what she looks like. She is petite and her personality flashes in many directions at once. Last night she displayed a technique perfect in itself, and her power might rival that of the strongest man.



Bach and Scarlatti were the heights of the program to me. The Adagio in the former was especially subtly performed.

Chopin is a composer who is generally disliked by non-pianist musicians. The reason is that it is too easy to let the the wrong kind of romanticism appear dominant in his music as too many amateurs have done. What Chopin needs is some one who can cut through the superficialities and give him strength. Madame Kolessa was successful.

Probably this recital will go down in Hart House history as being the first one at which it was necessary to provide a war blackout. If it should be necessary to hold another under similar conditions, I hope the audience then will be more quiet than it was last night. The whispering was very distracting where I sat. HART HOUSE LIBRARY

So there it is! Yes, slide your hand along the oak panelling at the top of the central stairs and before you know it (often in less than twenty minutes if you know which hidden knob to press) the medieval portal will groan and swing open, revealing the cloistered simplicity of—Hart House Library!!!

Enter! (Don't be bashful. This as a Cat, and won't take you more than two minutes, 30 seconds to read.) Enter!! (C'mon, the Hither will keep.) ENTER! 'Well, are you going to enter, or will we have to push you in?

. . . Ah, there you are now, all comfy and cosy, stretched out on one of those big, soft, overstuffed novels the library abounds in. We are very glad you managed to fight you way to this dust-ridden nook, with a gay draught for each and every neck. And we are indeed proud of you for getting nine square inches of floor all for your very own self to sit on—2.2 sq. inches more than most of the inmates have. It was a glorious battle, and you deserve every inch of it. Now, if you will only clean the blood off and bind up your wounds with sheets from an old John Gunther or two, we can relax and look around us.

Please don't be overwhelmed by the sight of the seemingly dead bodies littering the room. You have only to roll the stiff frames onto the floor, or turn them face up if already there, to find out that they're really only Varsity reporters who have just been night-editing, are just about to night-edit, or . . . well, who are just Varsity reporters.

Rumour has it that a little gremlin, about the size and shape of a hall porter, tip-toes in every morning at 6:30 when the icy blasts are beginning to pummel the windows, and lets them in (the blasts—not the reporters). This is conveniently done by opening the otherwise inaccessible casements (12 feet from the floor) with a long pole, which the little gremlin then proceeds to smash into hundreds of thousands of splinters, so that no one will be able to close the windows. Then, howling with glee, he scurries around the place hiding all the latest fiction under carpets and behind dictionaries. What romps he does have!

And that's Hart House Library!

So there you have it!!

So what have you?

BLURP.

Tid-bits from the College Papers

"The students' Union Cafeteria at Queen's University has been closed due to 'an insufficient meat supply', it was announced recently.

The Chairman of the students' Union has written Ottawa, requesting army rations of meat, as it is deemed essential to keep the Cafeteria in operation. Another cause of the shut-down was an acute shortage of staff."

McGill Daily

"Of the 3,360 male students examined by the University Health Service until the end of January, 2,961 have been found fit for military training. Of the latter, 2,597 are fit for any type of service. In addition to those examined here, 111 men have been declared fit by the U.A.T.C., whose ratings are accepted by the Health Service.

'The health of the student body is not bad', said Colonel Urquhart, Director of the University Health Service."

Flyers Knock Out Blue Cagers In Last Minute Rally

Double Blue Hold Off U.C. Threat

By Phil Shackleton

Last Friday the leadership of hockey's first division was taken over by St. Mike's who scromabled to a last period 3-2 victory over the U.C. first team who had led the league to that point. Crew-cut Don Hector proved the chief source of grief for the Red and White puck-chasers as witnessed by bis two goals and one assist.

Penalties to both teams proved costly as one St. Mike's and both U.C. counters were registered while players were cooling in the arena's clink.

If a particular player is to be singled out to receive praise for his performance then that individual would be one, Ross Skinner, custodian of the U.C. goal-mouth. Ross had work galore on his hands as the Irish offence continually broke through the somewhat lax U.C. defence. Contrasting greatly to their opponents, the close checking of the "two shares of blue" kept the rubber from becoming overly familiar with their net.

Scoring opened at the two minute mark of the first period when Don Hector skated easily through half the U.C. sextet and sank an easy shot, while Dalt Nesbitt was serving two minutes for upsetting a blue Saint. Four minutes later U.C. balanced the ledger as Graham placed a backhand shot in the corner of the St. Mike's cage. Nesbitt was credited with an assist while Des Roches sat in the cooler for boarding a Redshirt. Both teams had many more scoring opportunities in the same period but the goalies turned out with a few Brimsek acts and the score remained knotted 1-I at half time.

After seven minutes of play in the second period a glancing puck caromed off the skate of a U.C. player to land in his own net. Hector received credit for the goal. At the 12 mark Gregoire was sent to the penalty box for St. Mike's and U.C. turned on the avenging heat. A minute later Red Nichol tied the score with a beautiful shot on a pass from Graham. Gregoire returned to the ice in time to shift the balance and play swung to the opposite end of the rink. St. Mike's swarmed all over the U.C. team and with three minutes to whistle time Morrison beat Skinner on a pass from Hector and Des Roches.

St. Mike's—Hector, Des Roches, Morrison, Spadoni, Gregoire, Boland, Hayden, Weber, Morrison, McDermott, Gregson.

U.C.—Nichol, Nichol, Phoenix, Wade, Kuryluk, Nesbitt, Warren, Skinner, Furry, Whitely, Graham.

Sportswoman

By Betsy Gowan

Now that our hockey schedule is rounding the last bend and going into the home stretch, let's have a looksee at the standings of our top teams which will clash in the finals come next week. St. Hilda's and Vic will inevitably be our top teams and they both have an admirable record chalked up already.

The Saints have won two gaimes, tied one, and had one (O.T.'s Friday) game defaulted to them—which gives them seven points to their credit in all. Their team is one of the smoothest passing and best organized that has blossomed forth in these hyar parts for quite some time, and since they just missed the finals last year, we can expect them to really stay in there and do a mite of stick-handling this season.

Vic has always produced a good hockey team—and this year is no exception. A last-minute goal by U.C. lost them the title last year—so they, too, will be after their laurels this year. They have three wins to their credit and play their final game with St. Mike's today at 6—weather permitting—oh. those wintry gales! With their outstanding teamwork and grim determination, they will likely produce some spectacular hockey for the finals.

We predict that these games will be even closer than last year, and unless those wicked wee gremlins take to skates and push pucks around in the centre of the rink, a lot of scoring will be done—despite the brave efforts of the goalies — beeause both of these teams have some good scorers in their ranks.

With that, we'll bid the girls in blue and grey and their forthcoming opponents in scarlet and gold adieu until the playoffs, and wish them happy practicing.

Speaking Of Sport

By Jim Paton

IT SHOULDN'T HAPPEN TO . . .

It isn't true! We didn't lose that ball game Saturday night! Why our boys had a four-point lead with two minutes to go! The crowd had even resumed breathing. Everyone knew that the Flyers were licked . . . with one notable exception . . . the Flyers. They played a steady game throughout and when the chips were down they had a little more than an ace high hand up their sleeve. On the other hand, the Varsity blew hot and cold all evening. At the beginning of each period they looked like winners but in the pinches they became a little rattled and committed some errors that bordered on the ridiculous. For example, on the last play of the game, when the checking should have been particularly close, there were two Flyers under the Varsity cage and only one man covering them. Perhaps the Varsity defence were bewildered by Zeaton's "freezing" act (and in all fairness we have to admit that we were also); at any rate, the winning basket was one of the softest scores of the game, aside from the fact that the pass was slightly perfect.

Oh, well, someone has to lose and it isn't the first time and it won't be the last that such a heartbreaker is lost. And of course we must make the obvious remark that it would be very nice to see a return game.

IN ONE ACT . . .

There wasn't a prize for the most disappointed man in Hort House after the game, but if there was we know who our choice would be. That's right. . . . Poor ole Coach Stevens. After the game the following little dialogue goes on before the eyes of a rather sheepish-looking Varsity Blue:

Coach Stevens: "Did you ever see a game like that?"

Reporter: "Nope. Anything to say for The Varsity?"

Coach: "You can't print things like that."

Then moving away dejectedly and muttering to himself.

"Jeepers, another game like that and they'll have to build a cage around me."

Knowing Steve and his on-the-bench tantrums, it's our bet that next Saturday he will have forgotten and forgiven all and will be figuring ways and means of hitting the win column again at the expense of Assumption College.

Blue Subs Trim All-Star Cagers

Those few early individuals who wended their way to Hart House before eight on Saturday evening were witnesses to a game as fast and furious as the feature show when they saw the Big Blue alternates trim an all-star School squad by some 35 to 15 points.

Money man, first class, for the Varsity team was Hank Goldstein at guard, who ran up a total of 10 points, eight of them in the first half. Verne Booth, at centre, accounted for seven Blue counters, Tom Waldon, at forward, for six, Joe Meschino, at forward, for five, Tommy Patterson, at guard, for four, and Brant, who played only in the second half, at forward, for two.

The School squad boasted twice the number of players as Varsity and substitues were frequent. R. Anderson sank six points, D. Pringle, four, R. Workman and W. Parchello, each two, and M. O'Laughlin, one.

The Varsity fivesome played wide-open in the first half and quickly piled up a lead. For the first five minutes School was held to one basket and at half time trailed 10-5. The Schoolers caught on to the Varsity offence in the second frame and scored I0 points, bringing the final count to 35-15.

Trenton Flyers Bow To Varsity Fish

By Hal Pohl

In Saturday's well attended Athletic Night tank show the Varsity natators heaped more laurels upon their so far undefeated record by sinking the visiting Trenton fighters with a 52-14 score. At the beginning of the session, however, Johnny Northwood believed that the Blue's chances for victory were very slim for only five of his boys were on the spot. Fortunately the remainder managed to straggle in just in time to take part in their individual contests.

The evening started with the 300-yd. Medley Race. Both teams were in there splashing neck to neck until the last stretch when the Flyers succumbed to the power stroke of Northwood. In the next event Peters for the Flyers and Porky Beanies for Varsity shared the first bunk in the diving honours; Sommerville of Varsity also collected. This was followed by the 50-yd free in which Varsity's Bill Moffat and T. Graham had no trouble to place first and second respectively while Fowler for Trentou came through for one point in the third position.

In the fourth heat, the 200-yd. free, the Varsity men were again able to tally eight points as Sansom and Martin inched out the strong finishing Davis of Trenton. Although Johnny Northwood had very little trouble in winning the I00-yd. back, the Flyers, under Mackenzie and Whan, combined to collect four points. And again in the 100-yd. free style Sansom and J. Crang swam a close race to down Lilley of R.C.A.F. as third best.

Now with only two heats left, the event was all in Varsity's favour, but to clinch this victory Balmer inched out Spencer of Trenton in the 100-yd. breast while Sturgess, also of Varsity, eame through to occupy the third bunk. The 200-yd. Relay was climaxed as the Varsity men collected seven points by finishing a full half-length ahead of the R.C.A.F.

Varsity Blues Lose 43-41 To Trenton In Close Game At Athletic Night

By Jim Paton

In the last ten seconds of a five-minute overtime period Trenton Flyers eame through with an all important basket to give them the nod over the Varsity Blues by the close score of 43-41. The feature attraction of Saturday's Athletic Night number four was certainly the most exciting cage encounter of the current season although at times the brand of basketball was considerably below par. In spots the game bore strong resemblance to a football scrimmage and as a result tricky passing plays were few and far between. But despite the lack of polish the game was a crowd-pleaser all the way.

Coach Stevens elected Tettmar Thompson, Wallace, Gibson and Scott to oppose the Flyers starting line-up of Richman, McCahill, Zeaton, Ingham and Kew. Play started off cautiously and three minutes dragged by before a score was made. Gordie Wallace struck pay dirt first and in the same minute Stew Scott and Don Gibson both tallied to give the Blues a 6-0 margin. Varsity hung on to their early lead and it took the airmen 10 minutes to tie it up at 13-I3. "Small Stuff" Joey Richman, who played a whale of a game for Tenton, bagged seven of his team's points in this period. Ken Bundy, Kewpie Kew and Zete Zeaton got a basket each. Gibson and Scott added to the Varsity total while Ken Tettmar made good a foul shot.

After the time-out and with five minutes of the first half left the Flyers took command when Howie May made it 15-13. Zeaton bumped it one on his favoured one-hand free shot. Gene Durocher, Tettmar and Zeaton netted in rapid succession and the Blues trailed by one point at half's end.

Trenton R.C.A.F. 18, Varsity 17.

As in the first half, Varsity eame out strong and grabbed off a slight lead. A tight zone defence thrown up by the Blues forced the Airmen to open up and they began rifling passes the length of the floor. In the meantime the Blues were getting a rough passage to the Flyers' hoop. Scott opened the last half scoring and Varsity again nursed a close lead until the 16-minute mark. when Zeaton popped one in to knot the count at 34 all. Scott, Wallace, Richman and Zeaton were the top hands in this nip and tuck battle for the lead.

With but two minutes to go, Joey Richman swished the net and the red and white were out in front by two points. Twenty seconds to go and Gordie Wallace pulled the crowd to its feet with the tying score. Just before full time the Varsity hoop but none would drop.

Regulation time: Trenton R.C.A.F. 36, Varsity 36.

After two minutes rest Stew Scott whipped in a quickie. Al Ingham halfed the margin when he "shot one." Gordie Wallace brought relief to an electrified crowd as he netted one and then added a free throw for good measure. Varsity 41, Trenton 37. At this point pesky Joe Richman ran through the Blues and sank a lovely from liis "off" side. Thirty seconds left and Bundy tied the score. Varsity time out with I0 to go. Varsity carried it to the Flyer's end but missed. Zeaton carried it back and "froze" at the center line, tben shot a bullet-like pass to McCalill who didn't miss.

Game over—Trenton 43, Varsity 4I.

Trenton — Richman (I5), McCahill (4), Zeaton (11), Ingham (1), Kew (2), Bundy (6), May (2), Bennett (2), McNeil.

Varsity — Wallace (10), Thompson, Tettmar (5), Gibson (8), Scott (10), Durocher (6), Goldstein, Meschino (2).

the world's pulse

By W. J. Bramah, Secretary
League of Nations Society
(Toronto Branch)

Hitler's recent declaration that he is conducting "a crusade against Bolshevism" is obviously timed to confuse the relationship between the United Nations.

Undoubtedly, such propaganda will have very litte effect upon those who are concerned with a total war effort. But there are still a few people, in many cases quite sincere, who seem to fear a Russian victory as much as the triumph of Nazism.

Actually, there is no necessity to fear a conflict between the Soviet system and the capitalistic system in the post-wor world. Just as the Western powers will have to exhibit the ability to equal Russia's military successes over Germany, so must they equal Russia's administration in times of peace. Since both systems believe in material progress and state the desire to further human welfare, it remains to be seen which method will be more adaptable to the peoples involved. Consequently, those who fear the rise of the Russian form of government have really nothing to fear if our own system can provide a similar degree of security and justice. Meanwhile, Hilter's declarations concerning our Soviet ally are to be ignored.

Of the 21 American republics, only one now permits enemy agents to operate, that is, Argentina. Since Chile's "German Ehbassy," the central control of Axis espionage, has been recently liquidated, it is supposed that German agents will now direct operations from the Argentine coast. It is to be hoped that complete Pan-Americanism will be accomplished before too long, but at the moment the possibility seems remote, since Argentina proposes to maintain a stubborn neutrality.

Russian and Allied victories are evidently producing tremendous demoralization in Germany, although well informed circles wisely refrain from predicting any rapid disintegration of the Reich. United Nations strategy, however, must include plans for dealing with a sudden breakdown of German power and the consequent difficulties in the Nazi-occupied countries. Even now the Swedish Foreign Minister Per Albin Manssonfi warns that Sweden may have to defend herself at any time, no doubt because of the conceivable Russian thrust against Finland in co-ordination with a British landing in Norway. Moreover, Hungarian and Rumanian troops, probably fighting reluctantly with the Germans have suffered heavy losses in Russia.

Out of the gradual co-ordination of military and political strategy such an organization as a United Nations Council will accordingly co-ordinate both war and peace aims.

University Women's Debate On Beveridge Report Merit Postponed Till Next Monday

Teams Represent Four Arts Colleges; Vic, St. Mike's Affirmative; U. C., Trinity Negative

TO AWARD SHIELD

The All-University debate on the Beveridge Report, which was scheduled for tonight in Cartwright Hall, has been postponed until next Monday at 8 p.m. because of the illness of one of the debaters.

Subject of the debate is "Resolved that the adoption of the Beveridge Report would provide an adequate system of social security."

The teams are made up of representatives from each of the four arts colleges with Vic and St. Mike's upholding the affirmative and U.C. and Trinity defending the negative.

The debate is being sponsored by the Women's Interfaculty Debating Union. In previous years the Union met once a month with an afternoon intercollegiate debate. This year, however, it has been impossible to arrange afternoon debates because of the large number of hours spent by the women in war work and war service training. Increasing travel difficulties made intercollegiate debate impossible.

Lillian Callaghan, III St. Mike's, president of the Union, said, "This all-University debate is a definite attempt to keep Interfaculty Debating alive so that next year if more time is found women students will have an organization already set up with which to work."

Parliamentary procedure will be followed in the debate and Lillian will be speaker of the House. A shield will be awarded the winning team.

Student Labour Called For at U.B.C.

Vancouver, Feb. 14 — (CUP) — The employment bureau at the University of British Columbia has been swamped with emergency calls for students to help clear streets and car-lines from snow. Forty boys volunteered, but because of a snarl at the Selective Board, many were turned away.

According to The Ubyssey, "additional calls came in for brawny boys to move wood piles, and one woman requested a well-mannered boy to move furniture."

Ask All Co-Eds To Be Examined

There are still some 400 co-eds on campus who have not reported to 44 Hoskins Ave. for their medical examination. These girls are requested to report for appointment as soon as possible.

This annual examination was originally given only to students in first year, to those taking part in athletics and to all students in courses such as Physiotherapy and Occupational Theraphy in which contact with hospital patients makes a yearly examination necessary. This year it was decided to examine all women in the University.

Another innovation of the women's health department is the infirmary at the Women's Union. This infirmary is now open to girls in residence at University College, to out-of-town students registered at U.C. and to students registered in courses not affiliated with any college.

Science Students' Regulations, 1942 Declaration Forms

Will those who have not done so attend to this matter without further delay.

Acta Editor Says Campus Buildings House Potential Fire, Panic Hazards

U. of T. SCHOLARSHIPS

Certificates of attendance in connection with the payment of the second instalment of University of Toronto Scholarships (not including College Scholarships) may be obtained at the Registrar's Office, Simcoe Hall.

Existence of potential fire dangers in several University buildings was claimed in an editorial in the January-February issue of Acta Victoriana, appearing Friday.

The editorial pointed out what the writer termed "panic traps and fire traps" on the campus. He named the Hart House gymnasium on nights of major dances, the Great Hall, Wymilwood on dance nights and Alumni Hall of Victoria College.

Regarding the Hart House gymnasium, the editorial says:

"They string a lovely crepe paper ceiling over the floor (where 1,000 people are dancing) and then allow people to smoke on the indoor track which is the same height as the ceiling. Sometimes (although not this year) they hang the walls with dry burlap.

"There are two narrow exists from this gymnasium, which are all a gym needs, of course, but a few more would make a dance floor safer."

Regarding the Great Hall, the editorial writer says, "Of course it probably won't catch fire, but people panic easily. You know how long it takes to get out after a Sunday Evening Concert."

A. D. LePan, University Superintendent, said he believed the University exercised "the best supervision possible" against fire. He pointed out that both insurance companies and the fire department made periodic inspections of the University buildings and said he believed they were in "fairly good shape."

"I think the point is well taken," said W. R. Cowan, Acting Comptroller of Hart House, referring to the danger of panic mentioned in the editorial.

Referring to Hart House conditions, Mr. Cowan said that doors leading to the quadrangle are left unlocked on dance nights and that ceiling draperies and burlap hangings have not been used as dance decorations in recent months.

Referring to the Great Hall, Mr. Cowan said the only part of the hall which was inflammable was the ceiling. Referring to the editorial mention of the length of time taken to clear the hall after Sunday Evening Concerts, he said the trouble was caused by groups blocking the passageway by pausing for conversation rather than by any congestion caused by the passageway itself.

The doors to the kitchen are unlocked on concert nights, Mr. Cowan added, and an additional fire exist would thus be provided.

Reconstruction Subject of Book

What is believed to be the first book to appear in Canada dealing with post-war reconstruction on a broad scale has recently been published by the University of Toronto Press. It is the product of a Committee representing the teaching staff of the University as a whole and consists of 10 lectures which were delivered during the fall term.

The lectures were planned under the organization of Professor C. A. Ashley who also edited the book, entitled, "Reconstruction in Canada." The lectures treat reconstruction from many points including economics, resources, and social conditions. Included in the book is a lecture on the Ideals of Reconstruction by H. J. Cody, President of the University.

The co-authors of this book, which is believed to be the first book published by the staff as a whole, are Professors C. A. Ashley, R. H. Coats, J. F. Parkinson, A. Brady, A. F. Conventry, G. G. Cosens, R. F. Leggett, C. R. Young, S. K. Jaffary, E. R. Arthur and President Cody.

The book is on sale throughout Canada, being aimed at both students and the general public. The price is low for a volume of this sort due to the co-operation of the Maurice Cody Fellowship and Scholarship Committee.

Economic Control Topic Of U.C. Parliament

There will be a session of the U.C. Parliament Friday at 4:00 p.m. in the U.C. common room. The subject is "Resolved that the present economic control in Canada should not be continued after the war."

There have been some cabinet changes. The Prime Minister is Herb Christie; the Attorney General and Deputy Prime Minister is Denis Wrong; Minister of Finance is Sol Litman; Betsy Mosbaugh is Minister of Moral, and Melina Metuska is Minister without portfolio. Leader of the Opposition is Geoff Johnson. The speaker is Briant Kassirer.

At this meeting the Prime Minister will resign his position but his government will continue.

Mr. Frye Will Lecture On English Satire

"English Satire" is the topic of a lecture to be given by Mr. H. N. Frye of the Department of English at Victoria College, on Wednesday afternoon, Feb. 17, at 5 p.m. in Alumni Hall. This lecture is the third in a series being presented under the auspices of the Victoria College Council.

Norwegian Officers, Men Will Visit Campus Tonight For Arts And Letters Club

Little Norway Personnel to Show Slides and Motion Pictures; "Captain Olsen" Will Discuss Country

FIRST OFFICIAL VISIT

The first official visit of the officers and men of Little Norway to the University of Toronto will take place tonight at the weekly meeting of the Arts and Letters Club at Wymilwood, where the visitors are providing the program.

Officers and men of the Royal Norwegian Army Air Force stationed at the Toronto Island camp will show slides and motion pictures of Norway, and the speaker, "Captain Olsen," whose real name is withheld for the protection of relatives in Norway, will talk on Norway, its culture and history, Norwegians in Canada and other countries, and the German invasion of Norway.

The R.N.A.A.F. in Canada is financed by the Royal Norwegian Government in London and its upkeep costs approximately $100,000 annually.

All training of Norwegian airmen is done here. They arrived in Canada in September, 1940, and built Little Norway across from the Island Airport, using airport space. They built a camp complete with bunkhouses, officers' quarters, kitchens, hospital, dental suite and recreation rooms, making it a completely self-contained unit.

The camp is frequently visited by Crown Prince Olav and Princess Martha of Norway.

The R.N.A.A.F. has sent trained men on active service overseas. Some of these airmen were in action at Dieppe.

The Norwegians now have three camps in Canada, through which have passed some thousands of flyers now on active duty. Besides Little Norway, there is Little Bergen, five miles from Gravenhurst, and the Muskoka airfield. They plan to move all their personnel to the Muskoka camps, leaving the Island site to the R.C.A.F. A permanent camp is being established in Muskoka and only advanced training is still being done at the Toronto camp. It is expected that the move to Muskoka will be completed by March.

Navy Recruiting Continues Today

A recruiting centre for the University Naval Training Division will remain open today in Room A, Hart House, it was announced yesterday.

It was also announced that medical examination of applicants originally scheduled to begin immediately, will take place later at a time and place to be announced.

Open Exhibit Of Banting Art

As a tribute to the memory of Sir Frederick Banting, a special committee in co-operation with the Art Committee of Hart House arranged the present exhibition in Hart House Art Gallery which opened last Saturday afternoon. The paintings, drawings and wood-carvings will be on exhibition until March 1. The second anniversary of the death of Sir Frederick, who was killed in an airplane crash while on active service, will be February 21.

Over 200 people were present at the special opening Saturday afternoon. This group was comprised of close friends of the late Sir Frederick, Lady Banting, Surgeon Commander C. H. Best, Banting's associate and co-discoverer of insulin, present owners of his pictures, the committee that arranged the exhibition, President and Mrs. Cody and Acting Warden J. R. Gilley.

In the foreword of the book, Banting as an Artist, written by Dr. A. J. Jackson, Mr. Gilley says: "Sir Frederick was a keen and interested friend of the House, and always contributed some of his work to the Senior Members' Show held in the art gallery in March each year. The exhibition is the result of a suggestion by Professor Barker Fairley, a former Chairman of the Art Committee, who had discussed the matter with Dr. C. H. Best. It contains all the paintings by Sir Frederick which are known to exist in Canada."

The exhibition is comprised of about 150 pictures—mostly oil paintings, with some sketches and wood-carvings. Many of the pictures were painted on sketching trips of Sir Frederick and Dr. Jackson, and display a wide range of travel—Quebec, the Arctic, the Rockies, the Russian steppes. Dr. Jackson will discuss these pictures in the Art Gallery in the near future.

R.C.I. Lecturer Speaks On Persian Architecture

The Saturday evening R.C.I. lecture was given last week by Mr. Myron B. Smith of Wasbington, who spoke on "Iran, the Country and the Architecture."

The lecture was illustrated with slides made from photographs which Mr. Smith had taken of many typical Persian scenes and buildings. From these the lecturer explained the nature of the country, which is a vast plateau, almost totally without water, and consequently with very little wood for building. He also outlined some of the technical and artistic aspects of Persian architecture. He explained the different structures of Persian and Gothic domes and arches, and showed some early examples of true Gothic architecture, which came to Persia from the East.

"The purpose of Persian architecture," Mr. Smith concluded, "was to capture a small part of the infinite, and bring it down to human scale for man's peace and enjoyment."

Victoria Dramatic Club To Feature Play Quiz

The Victoria College Dramatic Society will present a Theatre Night and party in Alumni Hall tonight at 7:30. Dancing to recorded music will make up a large part of the evening.

For the dramatic side there will be a radio workshop presentation of a drama-festival play directed by Charles Brown, and brief scenes from famous plays, both classical and from Broadway. No titles will be announced and there will be a competition to list the correct titles. These scenes will be directed by Jack Coleman.

Refreshments will be served. The evening is free to all members and there will be a small charge for non-members.

Dr. Joslin to Deliver Second Banting Lecture

The second Banting Memorial Lecture will be delivered by Dr. Elliott J. Joslin of Boston, who will speak on "Contrasts in the Treatment of Diabetes," in Convocation Hall at 4:30 p.m., Monday, Feb. 22.

Dr. Joslin is professor emeritus of clinical medicine at Harvard Medical School and the medical director of the Baker Clinic of the New England Deaconess Hospital in Boston.

C'est la guerre

The Watch on the Rhine

It is marvellous what a good actress can do for a play. Margaret Anglin makes The Watch on the Rhine worthwhile. Without her, the play would merely be one of those which must be written in wartime; with her dominating personality to carry the load of its improbabilities, it achieves an interest which otherwise would be impossible. The improbabilities are not sufficiently ghastly to make the play really imperative (the Gestapo actions are not horrible enough) and the play is marred (as everything else has been this year at the Royal Alec) by too much sentimentality. The handkerchiefs were out in full force, and the sobbing was intense in the audience that listened to the play last night.

But, with all that, The Watch on the Rhine is redeemed by the superb acting of Margaret Anglin. She steals the show with the only kind of acting such a vehicle could stand. Every time she comes on the stage she makes the other actors look silly, so great is her dominance of the scene. One remembers her, alive, moving in a setting of conventional actors.

The play, as you probably saw in Life, revolves about the awakening of two typical Americans, mother and son, to the horror of Nazi Germany. Perhaps Americans really were naive like this before Pearl Harbour, but no decent American should go around shouting about it.

Looking back over what I have written, I am afraid I have said too many nasty things about the play. That is what happens when one has not enough space to balance a review properly. If you want a war-time drama, in which the author has attempted to explain why we must fight, The Watch on the Rhine fills all your desires. NEIL MACDONALD

At Our Own Doorstep

Organ Recital

Dr. Willan's recital yesterday afternoon at Convocation Hall amply repaid the rather small audience for the inconvenience caused them by the cold weather.

The first number was a Bach Chorale followed by his Fantasia in C, pieces in which Dr. Willan showed his exceptional skill in bringing out the majesty and meaning of Bach. In comparison, the four Chorale-preludes by Karg-Elert which followed seemed to be a definite anti-climax, although the third of them was done so as to bring out perfectly an interesting theme.

The largest work on the program was the Rheinberger Sonata No. 4 in A minor which was played boldly and surely in spite of its technical difficulty.

The finale was a Choral Song and Fugue by Samuel Wesley. Performed clearly and with feeling, its modern harmonies were brought out to their best advantage.

Perhaps the weather was chiefly responsible for the small attendance, but those who did not take the slight trouble to come missed a fine opportunity.

Therefore, the concert on Saturday night was a good thing. It showed a very competent group of musicians, not

Credits On Service

At a recent meeting of the National Committee of Canadian Legion War Services, it was decided to set up a committee under the chairmanship of Dr. H. M. Tory, President of Carelton College, Ottawa, to consider the question of obtaining recognition by universities and other learning centres for proficiency attained in various types of school-work by members of the fighting forces. The committee's task will be to assess the value of studies and experience gained in the services, and then to obtain recognition for them by those who may have to determine returned men's status in civilian life.

As well as academic credits to be awarded so that the men returning may continue their education without repeating in universities and colleges work they have already done in uniform, there is another and perhaps even more important aspect of the question, from the practical point of view. Many employers set educational standards for men whom they are interviewing for prospective employment; some demand at least matriculation; others insist upon college degrees. And it may well be argued that many officers and men who did not hold such qualifications when they entered the services, have since gained their equivalence, both in theory and in practice.

Such a task will not be simple; for the fact that service courses are for the most part designed to produce men with specialized knowledge in the minimum time means that it is extremely difficult to evaluate such courses in terms of the more long-range, less condensed, more extensive courses which schools, colleges and universities offer. The universities may prove loath to admit that men trained outside their learned halls have gained an education which merits equal rank with the fully-rounded university training. Employers may also feel that men whose training has been for purely military purposes may have difficulty adjusting themselves to the techniques of civilian industry.

Perhaps the solution might be for the universities to set examinations for men changing back into civilian clothes to write. These tests could be graded to establish to what point in a university education the men have attained. Then, if they wish to continue, they can start at the logical point in the syllabus; or if they wish to seek employment they can be provided with some sort of certificate to show employers their educational status.

We do not put this suggestion forward very enthusiastically, for we believe the examination system—in which the student may pass with equally high marks by cramming or by studying faithfully all years and really learning his subject—has never proved very successful in actually testing the worth of a student. But we do believe that universities should take steps to recognize the sort of education that men in the services are receiving.

When our sailors, soldiers and airmen come back from the war, we owe to them, among many things, an equitable arrangement to give them academic credit for the knowledge they have obtained in the service of their country.

Correspondence

Editor,
The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

The Conference of University presidents with officials of the Selective Service Board in Ottawa on Jan. 9 and President Cody's speech at the recent meeting of the Student-Staff Conference asserted that the existing status of the Universities is entirely satisfactory for the present and that there is no further need to examine our position with regrad to the war. Varsity editorials have reflected this stand and the issue would appear to be settled. Actually, there is considerable disagreement with this point of view on the part of the press and other University campuses, notably McGill. Further, the positive results of the Student-Staff Council make it abundantly evident that we have as yet scarcely begun to make our maximum contribution to total war, that much remains to be done before we are playing our full role in bringing about the unconditional surrender of the Axis in the shortest possible time. If we lose the confidence of the public at this time by failing to do our share, we can scarcely expect that they will accept our leadership in reconstructing the post-war world.

We may confidently expect that the Casablanca Conference will shortly bear fruit and that our troops will be engaged in offensive operations on a gigantic scale. When this occurs the need for additional manpower in the armed forces and industry will become acute. President Cody stated that in such an exigency the Government would not hesitate to close down all Arts courses immediately. But this alternative is most undesirable, for it would find us unprepared to meet the critical situation. How could Arts students be of any immediate effective use without special military or industrial training? The disastrous effects of such a short-sighted policy indicate the urgent need for planning now for the coming offensive. Also, by waiting till the emergency arises we would dislocate the Arts Courses and seriously jeopardize the maintenance of culture.

How, then, can we best prepare to utilize to the fullest extent the specialized training which the University offers? The Student-Staff Conference approved certain resolutions regarding the establishment of a Selective Service Board which, if adopted, would integrate the University with the nation's war effort and at the same time preserve our cultural heritage. The Board would consist of representatives from the armed forces, the Government, and the University. Its function would be to place graduates where most needed and best suited, to adopt the number of students in each course to the requirements of industry and the armed services, to ensure that the best qualified students were admitted to the various courses, and to supply financial aid to students where necessary. No courses need be entirely closed down, for there will always be a certain number of able women and militarily unfit students who can maintain a link with the post-war world. This system would enable each student to find his place in the war effort. No one need feel ashamed of being at University during war time.

We must bear in mind that the nature of our conduct of the war will determine the nature of the peace to follow. If we are unwilling to fight for our culture on the battle-field and in industry we shall be unqualified to be the leaders in post-war reconstruction. If we fail to play our maximum role in the present crisis and continue to isolate ourselves from the public we shall so lose their confidence and antagonize them that we will forfeit all claim to materially influence the course of reconstruction. The report of the Conference provides a basis for gearing the University to total war. We must take the initiative to implement this report immediately. If the vast majority of students and staff realize, as we hope they will, that this step is necessary, then we feel sure that official circles will see the advisability of putting the report into effect.

Yours very truly,
The Executive, Student Labour Club.

We believe that the Labour Club has misinterpreted the President's remarks when they quote him indirectly to the affect that "the Government would not hesitate to close down all Arts courses immediately" if the present manpower shortage becomes more acute. Actually, Dr. Cody made the point plain that even if shortage of men in factories and fighting forces forced the calling-up of all male arts students within the brackets of eligibility, the Arts courses would in all probability be maintained to instruct these men who were under-age or medically unfit, as well as the women—who are, as yet, not liable to compulsory service—and the increasing class of returned men.

We cannot answer the well-posed question, "How could Arts students be of any immediate effective use without special military or industrial training?" We can only point out that all men eligible are already undergoing some form of military training, which—if it is perhaps not the best possible type—is at least that laid down by governmental authority. It seems unlikely that military officialdom will act upon suggestions the Student-Staff Conference may offer regarding revision of syllabi, regardless of how apt such suggestions might prove.

With regard to the suggested establishment of a U.S.S.B., Dr. Cody has already offered his advice to the Conference in connection with what he considered major obstacles in the path of such action. No doubt he and other University authorities would be amenable to reconsideration of the point if staff and students were sufficiently united in their plea for the ultimate establishment of such a Board. The Varsity questions, however, that such a united voice is likely to be raised, when we consider that only a few score students and a handful of staff members were concerned in the formulation of the Report, which has not, we believe, been met with complete approval on this campus, especially among certain of the Faculty.

It is not our intent, in replying thus to the Executive of the Labour Club, to throw cold water on their very worth-

Dnieperopetrotsky, Russia, Feb. 14—(Delayed) — In a Special Valentine's Day announcement tonight, Red Star, official organ of the Russian Army, revealed the immediate establishment of a Russian Aid to Canada Fund.

"They have sent us all their warm clothing, and now they are cold," Sergei Atkinsonsky, editor of the journal, explained to throngs of well-dressed peasants who were gathered about modelling some of the latest Canadian importations.

In addition to collecting such useful items of clothing as kropotkins, samovars and muzhiks, with which to clothe the winter-smitten Canadian allies of Russia, the Fund will also raise funds with which to supply munitions for the University of Toronto C.O.T.C.. It is rumoured that guns for these munitions may also be supplied.

In order to raise these funds, it will be necessary to stage numerous gala "Marches of Kopeks." Russians who contribute in this way will be provided with tiny fluttering ribbons cut from Hudson's Bay blankets recently received from Canada.

Medical supplies will also be send to Canada under the auspices of the Fund. Even though consumer-rationing of vodka is in effect here, it is believed that the Russians will not hesitate to supply their allies with extra ration-books.

In conjunction with this move to consolidate even greater Russo-Canadian brotherhood, it is understood here that Miss A. E. M. Parkes, Commandant of the University of Toronto Detachment, Canadian Red Cross Corps, will shortly pay a visit to Moscow to review the local Girl Guides and Snipers Unit.

Already the Fund has passed the seven-kopek mark on its march to its 1,000,000,000-kopek (approximately $10) objective. All cheques should be made payable to the Commissar, and all contributions should be mailed in to Fund Headquarters at 80 Czar St. West, Moscow.

S.P.S. Leads Race As Fordyce Stars In Track Meet

School pulled out to a lengthy lead in the spring indoor track race last night by copping a total of 15 points with two firsts, a second and two thirds.

Overture on last night's performance was the high jump which Art Jackes took with a leap of 5 ft. 8¾ ins., to give School their first five points. Engineers followed in second and third places in the persons of Bill Kerr and Carson respectively. In winning this event Art had vengeance over Bill Kerr, since Bill was top man in the outdoor jump event last fall. The field of entries was small but select and those few present were treated to some fancy jumping in the course of the fray.

The shot putt was a walk away for Cam Burgess, Trinity's mighty track and field pillar. Cam pushed the 12-lb. weight for a distance of 40 ft. 6 ins. on his third attempt. Bill Dewar was U.C.'s lone point snatcher in placing second in this event. Bill tossed the ball 33 ft. 4 ins. Frank Fordyce and Bill Kerr, both of School, followed in that order.

The track event on the list was the quarter mile, approximately three laps of the Hart House oval. Somewhat of an upset were the results which proclaimed engineer Frank Fordyce first placer with a burning 56-second performance. And for an indoor track that ain't to be sniffed at. Wesson, who won the novice half for Trinity only a few weeks ago, turned in the second best showing of 56.2 seconds and was even more of a surprise than Fordyce's win. George Lewis of Meds ran third in 56.3 and Philibuster of U.C. fourth in 56.6 seconds. The expected winner, Chuck MacDonald of School, wound up in fifth spot with a 57.4 race and Rog. Conant of U.C. followed with a 59.1.

A smaller entry than usual featured yesterday's events due perhaps to the large sick list which circumvents the whole campus.

Today may see a few more entries and some attempts at bettering the marks set yesterday but the favourites have competed and surprises are not anticipated. With only three more meets to be held competition is expected to be keen at next week's set-to.

We are not saying why there is no hockey report today—we know that our readers walked about yesterday too—'nuff said, except that the scheduled game between Vic and St. Mike's will take place on Wednesday providing the mercury rises.

Tonight sees the conclusion of practice swim meets with St. Mike's taking to the water—like ducks, we hope, and in goodly numbers. The other faculties have their teams picked and are raring to go. If there are any swimmers who would like to get into the swim of things and whose colleges are not entering teams, they can get in some practice up at Lillian Massey, if they go up and consult Freddie Baxter. The preliminary interfaculty meets begin on Wednesday, Feb. 24, and the finals will be a gala feature of the last Athletic Night of the season, which, for those who do not know, is Feb. 27.

The baby of campus sport, Florence Joy's protegee—volleyball—is venturing into a round-robin tournament next week. There are now four teams entered—U.C., Vic, St. Hilda's and P.H.E. The schedule is to be drawn up on Wednesday at 10:30 in Miss Forster's office in Lillian Massey. All college volleyball reps. are asked to be present it at all possible, as it would help considerably in drawing up the schedule. Remember the time, 10:30 a.m.

Speaking Of Sport

COMING UP!

As has become the custom the past few years, the Athletic Association, in conjunction with the Health Service, is again planning a course in Artificial Respiration and Resuscitation. According to the latest communique released from headquarters, the course will be run off all next week in the Debates Room. Two lectures will be given—the first, on Monday and Tuesday, will have demonstrations; the second, on Wednesday and Thursday, will give the students practical experience. The following Monday and Tuesday will complete the course with tests on practical application of artificial respiration along with some true and false tests of a general and varied nature. Time for the lectures each day is tentatively set for 4:45. Thus is outlined another chance for students to obtain knowledge and to become prepared for emergencies that may arise in war or in peacetime. And we strongly endorse the opportunity placed before the undergraduates by the Athletic Association. Because, especially with the very able instruction of Mr. Wills Maclachlan, the course, as exemplified by last fall's large enrolment of 150, is exceedingly good. As a sidelight, the aforementioned Mr. Maclachlan, in case you haven't heard, is almost a world authority on artificial respiration. He is employed by the Ontario Hydro Commission and instructs throughout the country. He has written many pamphlets and texts on the subject and is known throughout the world—in fact everywhere except in Ontario, it seems. But, did you know that our own Dr. Urquhart, head of our Health Service here on the campus, has done a considerable amount of research work on the subject and he is know all over the continent for his work. So with these authorities behind the series, which will teach the Shafer Method and the Standard Technique, which is official throughout the continent, we hope that a large number take advantage of the opportunity offered.

HOW ABOUT IT, EH!

It was somewhat of a surprise for us to learn that only a thousand had attended the Athletic Night last Saturday. In fact practically every night has shown a greatly lessened attedance from last year. But we strongly urge that the little red book be totted out immediate-like and next Saturday be checked off. For St. Mike's have laid the foundation for a bang-up party. Manning Depot is sending up a swim squad to test their fins against our so far undefeated Blue fish. Then the Ontario Agriculture College is sending a boxing team to battle the local champions. They are also sending their basketball team along to take on the Blue Reserves in the preliminary cage-ball scramble in the big gym. Then, as the featured item of the agenda, that age-long basketball centre, Assumption College, will give battle to the first-string Stevensmen. It may be a revamped outfit from last Saturday—by the looks of the reduced quantity of insulation on the Stevens noggin—however, suffice to say that not matter what combination is floored, Stevie will have a squad out there that will be gunning for a repeat performance over Assumption. And, oh yes, the list posted so far is only a starter for a full evening's entertainment. So set everything aside for next Saturday—it can't possibly get any colder, anyway.

AND WHILE ON THE SUBJECT . . .

We hear that Meds are getting a treat ready for us on the 27th. According to the rumours flitting about the locker-room, under the inspiration of Bob Delaney, a track and field meet will be held at half-time in the main attraction. Although the exhibition program is not yet completely drawn up, the events sure to appear are a high jump, relay and a sprint. The winners of the indoor interfaculty events will be selected to run in this show which is bound to create a little more interest in Varsity track. For, honest fellows, there are some pretty sweet runners pounding those planks every Monday. Such men as Shackleton, Foulis, Fordyce, Lewis, MacDonald and Burgess, to mention only a few, would make a Varsity intercollegiate team look mighty fine anywhere in this country—if intercollegiate days were back with us.

quite as smooth technically as either of the Toronto Quartets, but definitely enjoying itself. There were minor slips, mainly of intonation, and a few rhythmic hesitancies, but these were more than atoned for by the general interpretation of the music.

The pleasantest part of the program was that in which the assisting artist, Robert McBride, clarinetist, took part. The extreme sophistication of the Mozart quintet was well brought out and full appreciation of its subtle humours were shown. McBride himself is one of the best clarinetists I have heard.

Perhaps the most interesting selection of the recital was the work by Robert McBride, Wise Apple Five. Sophisticated in an entirely different way, it is an extravaganza for quartet and clarinet based on the complexities of modern dance music. I suppose it is sacriligious to hear a quartet used for such ends, but it is extremely amusing. One could not help smiling at its cleverness.

Flashing Finish Gives S.P.S. Edge In Hockey Tilt

In yesterday afternoon's hockey scramble between Senior School and Vic I the engineers trimmed the artsmen 6-2.

The score was fairly even right along until the last five minutes of play when, much to the grief of the scarlet and gold, the Grosskurth, Douglas, Kelly line clicked and came through with some classy plays which resulted in School piling up three extra counters.

After ten minutes of play the engineers started the scoring when Murray Douglas cleared a pass to Jim Dickie who drilled the rubber into the wide open net. The Vic sextet came to life and balanced the score sheet when a rush by Butch O'Malley ended up by Red Street sinking the disc on a pass from Bobby McLean. Seconds before the end of the the first half the Blue and White took the lead again when Al Seymour cleared from behind the nets to Douglas who banged the puck past the bewildered Vic tender to make the score at the end of the half 2-1.

The second half started off with a bang. The Scarlet and Red nullified the lead in the first minute of play on another McClean to Street set-up. The Blue and White put on the pressure and at the three-minute mark Douglas bulged the twine on a pass from Dickie.

The tempo increased as both teams struggled for supremacy but the Vic pucksters soon tired due to a shortage of man-power. At the 15-minute mark Ross Workman sank the rubber for the engineers on a pass from Don Grosskurth. Two minutes later Brian Kelly strengthened their lead by drilling a shot on an assist from Grosskurth, Seconds to go they scored again on a Douglas to Grosskurth rally.

Dents Hold Early Lead To Take Sr. U.C. 40-29

Headlining the basketball results in yesterday's encounters was the 40-29 victory of Dents A team over Senior U.C. Dents scampered away to a long lead early in the first half and piled up an 11-point lead by half time. The score at the end of the half stood Dents 25, U.C. 14. The Red and White tightened greatly in the second phase and held Dents from increasing their lead. Each sank 15 points in the second 15 minutes.

Responsible in no small way for the victory was Dentist-to-be Ryan who walked all over the U.C. fivesome, particularly in the opening half when he totalled 13 points. Three more in the second brought his total to 16. Teammate Hambly followed in line with 10 points, Turner, Saltzman and Tropea each made four, and Costaldi, two.

On the U.C. scoresheet the name Hoyle stood out the clearest. That individual accounted for 12 points, six in each half. Warren and Smith made six and Morton five.

Dents A — Ryan, Turner, Hambly, Saltzman, Tropea, McCall, Costaldi.

U.S. Sr. — Smith, Warren, Hoyle, Morton, Bailey.

Senior Assault Titles Scattered, School, Dents, U.C., St. Mike's Win

The annual senior assault, held in conjunction with last Saturday's Athletic Night, was rather a one-sided affair, since the entries for the boxing side of the picture were so few as to warrant only two interfaculty title bouts. Three exhibitions bouts were staged but the main intramural scuffling came in the wrestling which boasted seven matches.

Like the junior assault, the titles were well scattered about the campus after the fisticuffs were concluded. In the wrestling, four bouts went to School, two to Dents, one to St. Mike's, and one to U.C. One title went Schoolward because there was only one entry, that of Henry in the 175-pound field. Boxing titles went, one to Meds and one to St. Mike's.

St. Mike's took first blood in the wrestling when Bill Blum took Lamb of Trinity in two falls in the 118 class. Dents followed with a victory by McColeman over School's Heffernen in one fall. This was the 125-pound division.

Melvani, at 135 pounds, repeated his junior assualt triumpb by squelching Dents' Chapman, to give School another stack of T. A. Reed points. Yandell, of Meds, winner in the junior 154 tussle, gave Boland, of School, a close fight but the experienced Schoolman was given the decision at time.

Another junior winner went down in the 155 show when Johns of Dents was given the decision over McDonough, also of Dents. The same applies to the 165-pounders. Horowitz of U.C. got the nod over Arthurs of School. The 175 title belongs now to School's Henry who was the lone entrant in his field. The heavyweight title went to Gow of School over Farquharson of Meds in one fall.

The first boxing match was an exhibition affair in which Jim Lowe, at 125, took a three-round decision over Geary of School, at 135. Jim was the winner of his class in the junior assault. The 145 bout was an interfaculty affair in which George Lewis of Meds came out on top over Lind of Dents. George was clearly the better of the pair and Lind had often to clinch to save himself from inside blows. Incidentally, George won the junior wrestling title in his division.

The other interfaculty bout was the 155 encounter in which a tall Tucker from St. Mike's, who gained a technical k.o. over Mulholland of School, was the victor. It was a fast slug-fest and the shorter Mulholland often came under the St. Mike's offence to double up the pair in a pose that might have led one to believe that this was a hybrid sport made up boxing and wrestling.

Two exhibition bouts concluded the program. The first, which ended in a draw, featured Bucky Zierler of U.C. and Paul Olynyk of Grad. Studies, and the second was an all-School party in which Currie, a heavyweight, took the decision over Sharpe at 175 pounds.

Editor,
The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

Every time we pick up The Varsity, of late, we read of the urgent need for playground workers during the summer months. If the city really does need us, as your editorial stated, why do they not sweep away one of their very narrow roules which states, that a playground worker must be a resident, of at least one year, of this city. This means that although we may live a mere 10 minutes walk from the city, and that although our fathers pay a city business tax which has always enabled us to attend a city school, without charge, nevertheless we are not permitted to work in a city playground.

In former years when workers were comparatively easy to get, the city fathers could strictly enforce this rule and Mr. Armstrong, the administrator, and his colleagues could maintain independence even to the point of rudeness. Now, with help at a premium, there is no room for narrowness. Why don't they, or why can't they, sweep away the rule, and let us who live in greater Toronto and whose fathers pay city business taxes, work in the playgrounds this summer? Until they do this, I see no reason why the "city playgrounds" should complain of a worker shortage, nor why The Varsity should act almost as a "want ad medium" for them.

Sincerely,
Ruth M. Bentley,
III Vic.
Feb. 12, 1943.

The rule of residence invoked in the case of playground supervisors has a basic common sense in that a person who does not live in the city would not know it well enough to ovoid getting lost in the district in which his playground is located.

Certainly Miss Bentley will not deny that the need for playground supervisors is urgent and that university students are particularly well-fitted for this type of work. And since she apparently lives in the suburbs, we would point out that her own municipality most probably has a playground where help is needed. —EDITOR.

'SBLOOD DEPT.

Some time ago our partner in crime ran a 'lil number involving a blood donor who annoyed a Red Cross nurse while she was draining him by referring to her as a vampire. Well, we found the counter to that in the story of a 'lil co-ed who was invalided recently by the baccili that are currently floating around campus.

So we are feeling sorry for her, what with being in bed all this time and gosh but it must have been boring, but she is explaining as how her little brother is all the time reading to her, so things aren't too bad.

"The most interesting stories," she says reflecting. "There was one about these people who have a vampire ' ' ' they fed it canned blood . . ."

AH, THE CONVENIENCES OF MODERN SCIENCE!

PEOPLE CAN, AND DO, GET INVOLVED IN THE DARNDEST SITUATIONS DEPT.

Consider, for a moment, the sad, sad story of one of our fairer co-eds. For reasons that will soon be obvious, we will have to give her a name, so let's make it Mary, which is a very nice name and won't cause fingers to be pointed at anyone in particular. There are two young gentlemen with whom she is wont to make merry, and both of whom would like very much to make Mary. For the purposes of clarity we shall call them Tom and Joe.

Now Mary is quite impartial, dividing her time about equally between Tom and Joe, both of whom know of the other, and by a plotting fate, it seems that about every time she is out with Tom she runs into a girl friend, name of Sally.

Comes then a rather important campus function to which Mary goes, squired by the proud and beaming Joe. In the course of the evening the plotting fate arranges for them to happen suddenly upon Sally—but suddenly, mind you, so the startled gal greets them with a hearty, "Hello Mary; Hello Tom!"

Following the same line of thought, there is the sad, sad tale of the guy who is going around with two women back in his home town. Not that there is anything wrong with that, lotsa guys go out with lotsa women. Well, this chap up and asks one of them up to Toronna for the big dance of his school. So they have a wunnerful time and then she goes back and he is still thinking that he is going around with two women back home, only what should happen but he gets a card from the other gal congratulating him on his engogement with the first one!

WOMEN ARE STRANGE LITTLE BEASTS.

VALENTINE'S DAY hath came and went, but it hath left memories behind. Like, for instance, the case of the lads who chanced upon a chum of theirs in a stationery store with about a dozen of lacy sentiments in his hand.

"Whatcha got there?" they chorused.

"Valentines," confessed the chum without even blushing.

"Who for?" they shouted, pouncing on the pasteboards and reading them aloud with glee.

"My mother."

"But," they objected, "you've got a dozen."

"I love my mother very much," was his cool reply.

* * *

WHICH BRINGS UP ANOTHER point. Or maybe your stomach isn't turned by the sight of a counterful of gooey cards all vowing deep and eternal love to the one girl of your life, some vowing even deeper and more eternal love than others to the O and O, with a large sign over them—10c each—three for a quarter???

O TEMPORES, O MORALS!

let's go places

Although this week's bill at the Imperial is a double feature, by far the most vital of the two films is "The Seige of Leningrad." Photographed by 23 Soviet cameramen under conditions of widely varying difficulty, the clarity of the scenes sometimes leaves much to be desired. The record, however, is one which will interest all of us. It is the story of an urban community with a vicious aggressor on its front doorstep. It deals but briefly with the fighting troops in the city's front lines and concentrates for the most part on the ordinary citizen under fire. In case you are worried, the editors of the film have shown good taste where the more horrible is concerned, although there are some excellent views of dead Nazis.

IMPERIAL "LENINGRAD"

"Life Begins at 8:30" fills in the other part of the bill with Monty Wooley stranded half-way between Sheridan Whiteside and the type of drunken actor part that was amply exhausted a few years ago by Adolphe Menjou. Although the picture is somewhat on the sentimental side it fills the time adequately.—R. W.

VIC THEATRE PARTY

Vic Dramatic Society presents an evening of plays and contests in Alumni Hall beginning at 7:30. Dancing to best records. Refreshments. Non-members admitted for small charge; members free.

"The Affairs of Martha" is a delightful comedy starring Richard Carlson, Martha Hunt, Marjorie Main and Virginia Weidler. Somewhat risque, the plot centres in a swanky Long Island suburb. The wealthy inhabitants learn through a gossip column that one of their maids is writing a book about her employer. Since they all have a few skeletons in their closet, they are naturally much perturbed.

MIDTOWN DOUBLE BILL

The story is crammed with light humour, and is very a pleasant way of spending an afternoon. The jokes are especially recommended to Schoolmen.

"North to the Klondike" is the story of Alaska during the gold-rush days and the trouble which ensued between the prospectors and the settlers who came to farm the land. There is plenty of shootin', figtin', and killin' for those who like their gore. There is one fight scene which commences in the saloon and winds up in a creek 50 yards from the building. Exit is made through a window (closed).

The film co-stars Andy Devine and Brad Crawfordfi with Evelyn Ankers supplying the feminine touch.—J. D. W.

The Varsity Reviews

Acta Victoriana

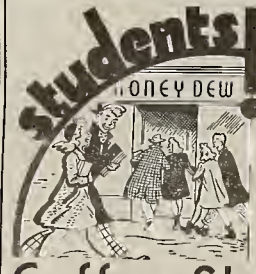
January-February, 1943

For the first time in many issues, the current Acta looks just a tiny bit tired.

The remarkable thing about this is that it hasn't happened earlier. The times do not encourage student literary endeavour and Acta's production so far this year has been of an amazingly high standard. But it was inevitable that the magazine would have to crack just a little bit.

It starts with a couple of fine, fighting editorials—and a somewhat regrettable leader on Shakespeare, capitalizing unnecessarily and in no overwhelmingly original manner on a chance remark by Mr. Granville-Barker.

The fiction includes Rigmore Christopherson's To Be or Not to Be, her poorest in this writer's ken, but still plenty good enough for any college publication; Soloist for Tonight, by Jack R. Coleman, a capable treatment of a familiar theme; The Scar, a facile piece by a newcomer, Ron Bates; and Mr. Cabell—Mr. Chancer, a pleasant little prose exercise by Margaret Gould.



The poetry is a little better, thanks to Consumotion by John Edward Speers, to this writer's taste, the smoothest piece of writing in the issue. But from there on the issue suffers from parodists—whose existence can only be justified by a remarkably successful job. Neither "M.T.'s" job on The Raven nor Rigmore Christopherson's on Cargoes can be considered remarkably successful.

Even Rex Wilson's current Idol Gossip, this time about Professor Sissons, falls far short of his earlier efforts in the series. And We Like Professors, author unspecified, carries on a rather artificial and well worn argument which was started in the last issue.

Labour in Wartime, a scholarly and apparently sound economist's-eye-view of the manpower situation by Bill Dymond, lends dignity to the magazine. The notable feature of The Free Austrion Movement, "guest" contribution of the month, is its ability to go on talking about Austria's future for a page and a half without touching the eminently touchy subject of Archduke Otto.

Finally, a word of regretful congratulation to the editor for including an excellent selection of wartime jokes which this writer has unfortunately read before.

Mozart's Symphony No. 40 in G Minor will be the major work on the program of the University of Toronto Symphony Orchestra at its annual concert in Convocation Hall on Thursday, Feb. 25.

Under the baton of 18-year-old Victor Feldbrill, it will present a program including works varying from Bach to Strauss.

Evelyn Pasen, mezzo-soprano, will be the featured artist and will sing the Habanera from Bizet's opera, "Carmen," accompanied by the orchestra, and a group of songs accompanied by Geraldine Shuster at the piano.

Feldbrill, associated with Harbord Collegiate operatic productions for several years, served as concert master of the collegiate orchestra for three years and conducted last year's production of Gilbert and Sullivan's "Pirates of Penzance." He has been studying conducting under Ettore Mazzoleni, associate conductor of the Toronto Symphony Orchestra and conductor of

Norway's Merchant Marine Lauded By Air Officer At Arts And Letters Club

Few Norwegian Ships Captured by Germans; Describes Life in Norway Before Invasion; Country Unprepared

SPEAKER NORWEGIAN

"It is the Norwegian merchant marine on the Atlantic which is making it possible for the Norwegians to continue their training in Canada," said Captain Olsen of the Royal Norwegian Army Air Force, speaking to the Arts and Letters Club last night. "The only way the Norwegians could compete with the large nations was to build up a fleet of the latest and fastest ships.

"At the outbreak of the war the Norwegian ships were scattered all over the world; they reported to neutral or allied ports, and consequently the Germans got very few. Far fewer ships have been lost in this war than in the last, when Norway, although neutral, lost 50 per cent of her fleet."

Capt. Olsen went on to describe life in Norway before the invasion of the Nazis, and now as a conquered people. Women have exactly the same rights as men, even being obliged to support their husbands in some cases. The Norwegian educational system was similar to that of Canada. Medicine students, however, were forced to take two years off during their course to wait until they can be placed in hospitals.

When the Germans invaded, the Norwegians were totally unprepared, said Capt. Olsen. Civilians volunteered one day, and the next day were sent to the front. It took the Germans 62 days to conquer the country, and they lost 60,000 men.

"The Norwegians today are fighting

Varied War Work Given at Queen's

Montreal, Feb. 16—(CUP)—Queen's women students in the Faculty of Arts, Science and Commerce are to start their second term war training course, to include Psychology of Emergencies, Surgical Shock, Wounds and their Treatment, Haemorrhage and its Treatment, Burns, Fractures, Sprains and Dislocations, Resuscitation from Drowning, Electric Shocks and Gas Poisoning, Air Raid Precautions.

Record Concerts Are Resumed

Temporarily suspended when the converter used in its programs developed mechanical difficulties, the University Record Club has resumed operations in the Women's Common Room of University College.

Repairs to the converter were carried out under the supervision of A. D. LePan, University Buildings and Grounds Superintendent. Extraneous noises in the machine, formerly a source of annoyance to some listeners, have been greatly reduced, but cannot be entirely eliminated due to the lack of rubber parts.

A request record program is played every afternoon Monday through Friday from 3:45 to 5 o'clock. The extensive library of records and equipment were presented to the University last year by the Carnegie Foundation.

"ARSENIC AND OLD LACE" PRESENTED AT QUEEN'S

Kingston, Feb. 16— (CUP) — The Queen's Drama Guild presented its final performance of "Arsenic and Old Lace" on Feb. 13. Previously this play had been presented on the campus for three nights to sell-out crowds and for the personnel of the Norman Rogers Airport. This final performance was sponsored by the Kingston War Services Commission as one of its projects for financing its Service Canteens and other charitable works.

S.C.M. to Observe World Prayer Day

The annual World Day of Prayer for Students, observed by the Student Christian Movement on the third Sunday in February for the past 40 years, will be marked on this campus by a special service at Bloor Street United Church at 11 o'clock next Sunday morning.

Luther Tucker, Secretary of the Christian Association at Yale University, will deliver the sermon at this service and will address a student luncheon at Diana Sweets following the service.

Mr. Tucker will be assisted in the service by Jim Norquay, I Emmanuel, President of the Toronto S.C.M., and Surgit Singh, formerly S.C.M. secretary at the University of the Punjab, and now a student at Emmanuel.

At the luncheon following the service Mr. Tucker will speak on the effect of recent developments in student life in the United States. All students will be welcomed at this luncheon, but the S.C.M. requests that they notify its office on or before Friday of this week of their intention to attend.

Mr. Tucker is a graduate of Yale University, and both as a student and since his graduation he has served as a delegate to various conferences of the World's Student Christian Federation and in 1937 he became a member of the Federation's staff.

His first position on the staff was a Far Eastern Secretary in which position he was instrumental in organizing the Far Eastern Fund for war-stricken students in China. While in Japan in 1939 he was arrested for "spreading groundless rumours" and "distributing literature" describing the situation in China. He was convicted, given a suspended sentence and permitted to leave the country.

"Transit Through Fire", Opera By Healey Willan, To Be Presented Tomorrow

To Be Featured in Conservatory Symphony Program at Convocation Hall; First Performance on C.B.C. Last March

ADMISSION FREE

Dr. Healey Willan, Professor of Music in the University, will have his latest work, the opera "Transit Through Fire," featured in the program of the Conservatory Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Ettore Mazzoleni, which is to be held in Convocation Hall, Thursday evening at 8:10 p.m. Admission to the concert is free.

Last March 8, the C.B.C. presented the first performance of this opera, libretto by John Coulter and music by Dr. Willan. Sir Ernest MacMillan conducted the radio version and the Art, Music and Drama Department of The Varsity hailed the work as one of the most significant landmarks in the history of Canadian music.

The opera concerns the disillusionment of a young Varsity student in the years before the war and how he eventually finds the peace of mind he has been seeking in making himself of use to his country in the war. The whole opera has a basic university angle.

For Thursday evening, an all-university performance has been arranged. Ettore Mazzoleni, the conductor, is a lecturer in the music department at the University as well as Assistant Conductor of the Toronto Symphony.

The principal singers are Lillian Smith and Howard Scott, with George Lambert, Amy Fleming, and Charles Jordan also in the cast. The chorus will be the Conservatory Choir, which has close connections with the University.

The orchestra will also play Beethoven's Symphony No. 8 in A Major, following the opera.

U.N.T.D. Recruits Total 60, to Date

About 60 students have signed their names to the U.N.T.D. lists. Three-quarters of them are from the Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering. Some took their medical examinations yesterday and the remainder will have theirs today.

Sub-Lieutenant J. S. Ronson has been in charge of recruiting in Room A, Hart House, and naval officials will return to the University to attest the ratings after the results of the X-ray tests have been ascertained.

Sub. Lieut. Ronson will be in Hart House to answer questions and to arrange for medical tests until four o'clock this afternoon.

Victoria Plans Gala Formal

Termed "the best formal on the campus" by its sponsors, the Victoria College At-Home, traditional Vic dance of the year, will take place as planned Friday night, Feb. 26, despite wartime difficulties.

Reduction in price, formation of a car pool and corsages and boutonniers "on the house" are among the features of the dance, to be held at Eaton Auditorium from 9 p.m. to 2 a.m. Norm Harris and his orchestra, headliners at the Prom Ball, have been selected to supply the music.

A date bureau has been organized by the Victoria College Union and has undertaken to seek out a congenial companion for customers in "a quiet, confidential manner." Requests for this service should be made at the V.C.U. office and dates arranged in this manner will be 'Dutch."

The initial price of the tricket covers all expenses including checking, parking and a buffet supper to be served in the foyer.

A feature attraction at the At-Home will be the Bob Quartet, re-appearing by popular demand to lampoon their contemporaries and to render selections from "My Gal Sal" in the approved barber-shop manner.

COEDS DESCRIBE RECREATIONAL FIELDWORK

By Betsy Mosbaugh

Those who took a course in recreational leadership last term as a part of their war work have the opportunity to practice their knowledge in Settlement Houses throughout the city this term. Each Tuesday and Thursday some 50 co-eds set out to put in their required two hours a week at the particular jobs in which they are interested, be it a nursery school or Y.M.C.A.

In U.C. 15 girls have signified their desire to put last term's training into practice. Co-ed opinion is favourable to this field work especially in the consideration of its social service aspect.

Eva Maguire, a second year student, described to The Varsity her work in the Negro Settlement House. "Of course the girls are quite young," she said, "but they certainly show eagerness in asking all sorts of questions." She went on to say that they were very friendly and called her "that funny white girl!" "You get an insight into social conditions, too," she continued. "The children tell me tales of having to sleep together because of the cold. But the work has its amusing side. Just the other day one youngster was describing the proverbial boy-friend. When asked if he looked like Moe, the girl disdainfully replied, 'Oh, no, he's much darker.' I love the work," she concluded, "and think it good not only for myself but also for the girls."

At St. Michael's there are four girls enrolled in the course. Adrienne Black, a third year student, explained that her work in the Catholic Settlement House brought her into contact with all nationalities. "Their ages run from two to five years," she said. "When I arrive there in the afternoon they have just finished rest period and collation. We supervise their games and tell them stories and between five and six they are called for by their families."

Eileen McNally, third year, said that she looked after a girls' club in which the ages varied from eight to 10. "The first hour that I'm there they have free play over which we keep a watchful eye. Then they have a very business-like meeting run on a parliamentary basis. This is followed by a games program which is also supervised by us. It's a wonderful opportunity for them," she ended, "especially this parliament that they run, and I like the work very well."

At Vic 20 girls work in various parts of the city each week. Marg Dillon is stationed at the University Settlement School which takes care of children while their mothers sew. But, according to one field worker, it's quite a discouraging job at present because of the irregular attendance. Out of 40 children only eight or nine are present. This may be due to the fact that their parents work in factories now and can't be there to see that they come. Consequently no long range projects can be started.

St. Hilda's has eight workers in the course. Fran Powell suggested that a little more heat and equipment might be in order. She looks after the children of the Home Service Association where the people are mostly coloured. "The whole outfit is terribly friendly and take all their games or whatever they do quite seriously," she told The Varsity. "There are various occupations such as soap carving or airplane modelling in which they participate. Once you have anything to do with them you realize that this work should definitely be done as it will be the most important work of the future."

"Transit Through Fire"

Everyone connected with the University of Toronto should feel more than usually proud this week. Right here, we have as Professor of Music in the University, the composer of one of the most important pieces of music recently composed. Dr. Healey Willan, who is the composer of the opera "Transit Through Fire," has added to the artistic stature of Canada in writing it and professors and students alike should crowd Convocation Hall on Thursday night to hear the first public performance of this work.

Thursday's performance, by the Conservatory Orchestra and Choir under Ettore Mazzoleni, is peculiarly fitting. The libretto of "Transit Through Fire" was written about a university student by John Coulter, the music by a professor, and the performance will be conducted by a lecturer in music in the University. The connection between the University and the Conservatory are very close, and the orchestra and chorus are peculiarly appropriate.

Last March 8, when "Transit Through Fire" was heard first, on the C.B.C., the music critic of this paper said ,"I can only characterize it as one of the truly great works in modern music, through which Canada has proved that she has attained artistic maturity."

The performance on Thursday evening is free to the public. That there are music lovers on this campus, no one can doubt; the mere notice of such an event taking place should be enough to send them crowding to hear it.

Russian Education

The subject has been discussed already in these columns and to many of our readers even further elaboration on it may not constitute startling news; but there are still probably many who are not as fully informed as they might want to be on the subject of Russian education in wartime; and for their benefit, as well as for the always estimable purpose of keeping these columns filled unto bursting, we turn today to some of the highlights of a recent article from the pen of Sergei Koftanov, Chairman of the Committe for Higher Education of the Council of People's Commissars of the U.S.S.R.

A widespread network of higher educational establishments has been organized in the U.S.S.R. to train cadres of professional workers for all branches of the national economy. Before the war there were upward of 700,000 students enrolled in the country's 800 institutes. These institutes have graduated 600,000 engineers, doctors, teachers, etc., among whom are leading scientists, artists, architects, designing engineers, famous Red Army commanders and leading experts in industry and transport.

The war of the Soviet peoples against German imperialism has brought with it great changes in the work of the higher schools in the Soviet Union. Higher education establishments are playing an active part in the defense of the country against the German invaders and in the preparation of reserves of both men and material for the extermination of the enemy.

Wartime demands for qualified engineers, doctors, agronomists and others are greater than those of peacetime. New cadets have to be trained to meet the needs of the newly organized industrial enterprises working for defense and for the new network of medical institutions, as well as to replace those specialists at the front. The higher educational establishments are meeting this demand by decreasing the period required to train experts for the needs of the defense and war industry and the whole national economy.

At the beginning of the school year 1941-1942, the college curricula were rearranged. By increasing the number of academic hours in the week and shortening the holiday periods, we succeeded in speeding up the graduation of students. The result was that in the year 1941-42, the higher schools provided the country with 170,000 trained specialists, almost double the normal number. At the same time many institutes enlarged their departments for the training of specialists for the war industries, while in other institutes, such departments were organized for the first time.

All higher educational establishments have introduced new subjects in their curricula, linking up the specialty of the student with the war needs. Examples of this are the field surgery course in medical colleges; transport of war materials, repair of railroad bridges, etc., in transport institutes; fortifications, defense installations and their camouflage and strengthening of existing building to prevent destruction, in architectural institutes.

In some colleges, entirely new courses have been introduced, such as the chemistry of explosives.

Those institutes and colleges which have been evacuated to the remote rear from territory temporarily occupied by the enemy, continue to work normally. Upon arrival in the new town, professors and faculty rapidly establish their laboratories and classrooms and begin functioning. Odessa and Kharkov Universities are working well in their new homes and the Kiev Industrial Institute, now in Tashkent, has already graduated 200 engineers.

The war has brought many changes in the conditions and nature of the students' work in colleges. In many cases practical work is done in factories working for defense. Many students are working regularly in industry, where they take the places of those at the front, while others fulfill war orders in work shops, laboratories and clinics of their own institutes.

Many institutes have assisted and are still assisting industrial commissariats in re-establishing and running industrial concerns which have been evacuated to the rear. The faculty and students of the Tomsk Industrial Institute erected the workshops of an evacuated factory. The Novosibirsk Railway Transport Institute and the Urals Industrial Institute have also assisted in setting up a number of evacuated plants.

This year a majority of students have been spending the summer vacation in the country, helping to gather the harvest.

The higher schools are also successfully coping with the task of equipping students with a thorough knowledge of army training, which is necessary for all, irrespective of trade or profession. Special attention is paid to practical training in the use of rifle, machine gun and tommy-gun, and to physical training in the use of skis, etc. Military training circles teaching special subjects, such as anti-tank warfare, have been organized in colleges.

ART and MUSIC

Proof

Toronto Symphony Orchesto

Raya Garbousova, the Russian cellist, was the soloist with the Toronto Symphony in the Haydn Concerto last night. Miss Garbousova is a real musician with a wonderful technique. The only criticism that could be made is that her tone, because of its very smoothness and feminity, did not have enough body to fill Massey Hall. The orchestra did not acquit itself quite so well in the concerto, but showed signs of lack of rehearsal by their late entrances and general dragging.

The program began with a Handel Ballet Suite arranged by Beecham. Here the orchestra did a fine job, getting into the spirit of the dances.

It was relieving to see that the order of the Liszt and the Brahms had been reversed, placing the Brahms at the end of the program, but even hiding the "Lament and Triumph" of Tasso in the middle could not quite remove the memory of its meaningless climaxes. However, it is doubtful whether a better screen could have been found than Brahms' Fourth especially the way Sir Ernest and the orchestra played it last night. They showed no signs of the strain they had just been through in the fortissimos of Liszt's Tasso, as might have been feared, but played with fresh energy. The juxtaposition of these two works should leave no doubts in anyone's mind about the relative stature of Liszt and Brahms as composers.

French Club to Present "Altitude 3200" Sat.

The University College French Club will present "Altitude 3,200" by Julien Luchaire as their annual full-length dramatic production Saturday evening at 8:30 p.m. in the Women's Union.

The play, written six years ago, concerns a group of 13 young people isolated from the world by an Alpine landslide, and their differences of ideals, morals, politics and religion.

"Altitude 3,200" is under the direction of R. D. C. Finch and Miss I. G. Balthazard of the University College French Department. Seats for the performance have been entirely sold out.

S.P.S. Continue In Track Lead

U. C. and Meds, Runners - up, But Engineers, with Powerful Team, Are Confident of Easy Victory

The only changes in standing after the results of the second night of this week's indoor track events is the jump of S.P.S. men into second and third spots in the shot put. Cam Burgess' toss of some 40 ft. 6 ins. still stands as the best performance, but both Henry and Gow of School bested the previous mark of second place held by Bill Dewar of U.C.

Will Henry on bis third try came up with a mighty heave of 36 ft. 10 ins. and Ken Gow followed with another of 34 ft. 3½ ins. Three others entered the second day's trials but failed to come up to Monday's standards.

Several more also tried the high jump but did not qualify with the former marks.

In the quarter mile, Mouse Fielding of Meds came through with a fourth place tying run of 56.6 seconds, while Wilford of Meds did 57.6 and Ken Brown of Vic did 58.5.

School's total pointage stands at some 20-odd points ahead of their nearest rivals, U.C., who have about 23. Meds will be only a few odd points behind U.C. and Trinity about the same distance behind them. All of which means that School will have to fail to place in any more events of the season if one of these three faculties are to overtake them. And one look at their team will show you how impossible that is. Even if such befell the Engineers one of these runner-up opponents would have to take about five firsts to turn the trick.

a civilian war," he continued. "They say that the Norwegians are living under Nazi yokes, but the Germans are living under Norwegian jokes. The situation is difficult in Norway, especially with regard to food, but the people are not giving up their jobs."

Today the Norwegians are no longer the happy, peaceful people they were before the Nazi invasion. Norwegian pilots trained at Little Norway have been fighting in Europe for a year and a half. They were at Dieppe, and recently they have been bombing German cities. When, through forbidden channels, the Norwegians hear of the success of their men, there is a great reaction.

Following his talk, Capt. Olsen showed moving pictures of Norwegians training in Canada, including pictures of a visit of Crown Prince Olav and Crown Princess Martha to Little Norway.

AGAIN MR. JENNINGS . . .

Well in between begging you to come to Athletic Nites on Fridays, and telling why you shouldn't have on Mondays, we seem to have a little space to glance over the Jennings Cup race. Our chief reason in doing so is that quite a while ago we speculated that Junior School would be the chief contenders for the trophy and that their chief opposition would come from St. Mike's, with Trinity given a half chance to cause minor irritations but no sevcre damage. And at this time, as we glance over the standings of the different loops we find that Junior School, still undefeated and untied, is leading its group, St. Mike's is occupying number one position in Group One, and Trinity is also managing to edge out its rivals for the front position in its brilliant loop. That these teams should even be still in the league after receiving our "kiss af death" is notable enough;that they should be leading their respective leagues is practically miraculous! We would still like to endorse the chances of Junior School, and to a lesser degree, St. Mike's, despite the fact that in doing so we are exposing them to the fate of having the gremlins get them before the season is over.

We still maintain that Junior School is the best interfaculty squad we have ever seen (and of course we've seen just hundreds!) They are far above any other team in the loop and haven't even been extended in any engagement so far this season, nor does there look to be any squad likely to extend them. The most outstanding feature of their play in the last few games has been the improvement of the second line. This second string operates with Pat McDonough at centre, Jim Boa at right wing, and George Carrol and Fuzz Foulds alternating on the port side. They have not yet achieved the smoothness and perfection of team play displayed by the first line, but they are approaching it. Another pleasan surprise has been Herbie Stricker's style of play. Stricker was none too impressive in the first couple of games, but has come along quite well recently, starring in the last two encounters.

The Irish have quite a formidable aggregation also. Not as potent as our dearly beloved Junior School perhaps, but good. They have not run up any high scores to date but they have had a clear margin of superiority in most of their games (this margin of superiority of course was strangely absent in the games they lost.) So far their pay-off man has been Don Hector, the rest of the team seeming to suffer from an inability to deposit the puck in the opponents net. The St. Mike's defence is quite efficient, being difficult to get through, and in addition supplying a great deal of the team's rushing power. Both forward lines have good passing combination and backcheck aggresively.

VARSITY SWIMMERS PLEASE NOTE

Officials at last Saturday's swim meet were quite annoyed at the lack of punctuality on the part of the Varsity Swimming Team. Apparently the boys wandered in at any time convenient to themselves, with no thought to the starting time. When the meet was supposed to start only three swimmers had showed up. This is a very poor showing indeed in the opinion of the officials concerned. And they warn that this week the meet will start at the scheduled time whether any members of the Varsity team are present or not. And despite the excellence of our swim team we doubt if they could win a meet in which the opponents had the undoubted advantage of using the pool while they were performing somewhere on a Bloor car!

» The Sportswoman «

By Maureen Murphy

"Hush, hush, whisper who dares," we recite, as a far cry from the days when we were very young—and as we pull our little blue hood over our little gold curls, we say our prayers extra 'specially well tonight—

Because our troubles are oh so many, and oh so bothersome, and just tonight it happens to be Badminton. If we remember correctly, it was not so long ago that an optimistic co-sportswoman regaled us in this column with a story that went to the tune of:

"If you got 50 cents, you get birds too,
If you ain't got 50 cents, then God bless you."

Well, God bless us, we aren't saying we have 50 cents, but we know that we have no birds. No, it is not that we have not got around to getting them. No, there is no actual shortage, but we understand the Government has frozen them, and where the ban should have been lifted in February, it has now been extended to March, which leaves things rather flat. But we lift up our fallen faces, or whatever else falls at a time like this, and consider that it is for the benefit of the men in the services, who are getting such tremendous fun and vigorous exercise out of playing Badminton, and for whom the Government reserved 90 per cent of sales of birds previously, anyway.

So, the Badminton Club has launched a bird-salvage, to gather up all brand-new, used or even somewhat tattered birds, which they ask for wholesale, retail, by fair means or foul (oh, please!) as soon as possible, and from any quarter. Those particularly, who may have new birds, and who do not intend to play this season, are asked to bequath, loan, or donate, on a monetary compensation system, to the cause. Unless the Badminton Club can secure an adequate number, there can be no tournament, which will prove a disappointment to all enthusiasts—and all who play are enthusiasts. In a previous Sportswoman, we suggested the birds might be left in the registrar's office, or given to your college Badminton representative, who will be most grateful to receive any and all contributions.

Peeping through our fingers, then, after that anxious prayer, we relax with a look-in on the St. Michael's Swim Meet, held last night at O.C.E. pool, when icicles hung by the wall. It was, unfortunately, and pardon us, a paltry show . . . to judge quantitatively. But in measures of quality, Aileen McDonough and Kay O'Connor exchanged steady first places in all events, from free-style to diving. However, we urge all other swimmers in St. Michael's who are interested, to report at Lillian Massey Pool today at the latest, to be timed, so that results may be turned in and checked over by tonight.

And now that we have opened our fingers very wide, and feel very attentive, we leave with a parting prod to all hockey representatives — your meeting is at five o'clock this afternoon, in Loretto College.

Sr. School Cops Water Polo Tilt

Engineers Build Up Lead in First Half; Hold Firm Against Junior Meds Rally in Second Half

Sr. School water polo squad achieved one of their rare victories yesterday, staving off a last period rally to turn back Jr. Meds 4-2.

The Engineers had much the better of the going in the first half and managed to build up a two goal lead. Johnny Northwood fired one counter for the winners and near the end of the half Payne added another while Meds were held scoreless.

School continued in the same vein at the start of the second frame. Hill made it three to zero with a lovely toss. Northwood got a free throw and counted his second goal of the game to give the Engineers a four goal lead. Meds then came to life and outplayed the School team for the rest of the game but were not able to catch up. Rubenstein got a free throw but his shot hit the goal post. A minute later, however, he got the ball again and this time made no mistake as he blasted home Meds' initial counter. Shortly afterwards Rubenstein again hit the scoring column to bring the final count to 4-2.

Sr. S.P.S.—Northwood, Payne, Eastwood, Iglesias, Brennan, Nylin, Dempster.

Jr. Meds — Sidenberg, Rubenstein, Bell-Irving, Little, Brereton, Eccles, Rae, Allen.

Tuck Shop Busy But Rations Cut

Food rationing has hit the Hart House Tuck Shop, but by keeping their fingers crossed waiters there hope to satisfy the noon-time hunger of students with what provisions are available.

"Most recent addition to the march of food casualties is chewing gum," Don Caton, Tuck Shop attendant, told The Varsity yesterday. "And any time now we expect eskimo pies to be placed on the ration lists."

Pies have recently been discontinued, he said, because of difficulties in obtaining fruit fillings and because of shortages on bakery staffs, while chocolate bars are rationed to 60 per cent of last year's supply. Although 70 per cent of 1942's soft drink quota is available, there has been sufficent to satisfy the wants of thirsty students.

Despite shortages of food and staff here, attendants say students accept the situation good-humouredly and are more apt to wisecrack rather than complain—this despite the fact that the Tuck Shop is enjoying one of its busiest years.

SPEAKING of SWING

By Barry Townley

A couple of years ago a new band roared out of the West and created a sensation; Stan Kenton was the new threat in the business, and last night Toronto was privileged to hear him for the first time in person. His personality, the drive and enthusiasm of his young combo (most of the boys are either under 18 or in 4F) made a great impression on the crowd at the Masonic Auditorium (and on a night like that).

In an interview, we elicited these interesting viewpoints: Stan, who is an earnest student of jazz, thinks that swing is here to stay! He believes it is an art, an American art, and the only art of which America can yet boast! In three or four generations it migbt even become the dominant form of music. Though it is groping through its first crude stages as yet, he feels that swing will justify all the best things said about it because "it is a bigger thing than we think."

Kenton's leading is dynamic, and his piano playing is tops; he says "the piano is my first love." The band satisfies all tastes by rendering ballads in the best fashion, then jumping like mad. Each section is a well-integrated unit, despite the difficulties of practicing while on the road, while collectively they are the answer to the prayer for tasteful music.

There are no outstanding showmen in the combo, outside of Kenton himself, but the spirit of intimacy that prevails within the band takes hold of the audience and makes them feel as if they are all personal friends of the boys. Just that spirit is what all bands strive for, and it is that good-will, combined with the best in modern music, that will carry Stan Kenton and his band to the top of the heap.

H. Johnston Speaks At Economy Club

Most soft drinks now cost six or seven cents and consumption has consequently dropped to some extent. However, if the price should drop to four cents, consumption would still drop as consumers would believe that the quality of the product had deteriorated.

This, in terms suitable to the layman, was the gist of the discussion of supply and demand curves at the meeting of the Political Economy Club in Wymilwood last night.

Harry Johnson, IV Pol. Sci., who presented the paper and led the discussion, explained his remarks in a press release as follows:

"Economic theory needs to be revised to take account of inter-relations between commodities. The development of modern industry has invalidated the assumption of the equilibrium of demand and supply."

Johnson also emphasized that modern conditions of advertising and competition between firms make the old analysis in terms of competition inapplicable.

Spanish, its is rumoured, is an easy language to learn. The following little episode seems to bear out the current belief.

There was a little babe in first year Pass who hadn't been to a Spanish class for just ages. So she decided maybe she'd better go once, and see what was going on. Only the day she took to return to classes she ran slap into an exam. There was no retreat, so she had to write it.

The joke was that it wan't her class at all, but a Second Year Honour Spanish class. This she discovered when the marks were posted and there stood her name with a respectable 55 per cent after it.

"Women," as some recent Hollywood publicity announced, "are strange little beasts." And we say "beasts" advisedly, for they do not give much evidence of that rational faculty which is supposed to distinguish humans. Witness the following:

A certain women's Greek letter society was throwing a party recently and one sympathetic sister remarked, "Poor Ermyntrude, she hasn't anybody to go with."

"Why don't she ask somebody?" queried a sympathetic bystander of limited cultural attainments.

"Oh, she's engaged and her fiance's in the Maritimes."

"Yes, but so's Emmaline, and she's asked somebody."

"Yeah, I know, but her fiance's down in the States."

Oh, yes, OF COURSE!

A co-ed who recently caught up on her correspondence was just going to post two letters—one to a man and one to a girl friend. Both letters were sealed and then she remembered she had left something with her girl friend and, not wishing to reopen the envelope, she printed on the outside of one of the missives. Imagine the surprise of the man to find on the corner of his letter: PLEASE BRING BRIGHT NAIL POLISH.

RUMOUR CLINIC—

There is nothing, no nothing, quite as appalling as a man up to a woman's tricks. There is one of these wretches in a men's residence hereabouts whose particular trick is to listen to all the derogatory things you have to say about someone else and then go and tell that person gratuitously all the infamy you have heaped upon him. He may not have noticed of late how intensely nasty everyone has become concerning everyone else, but the lads over there are using him as a sort of laboratory animal in their little rumour clinic. All tales told to him, or before him are now agreed on in advance by a caucus of the house members and are carefully traced in their course. LET THAT BE A LESSON TO YOU.

Frantic Efforts by Dietitians Prevent Meatless Days on Campus

By Bet Jennings

Campus dieticians are doing a great deal of teeth-gnashing, hair-tearing and frenzied food-ordering, but as yet there appears to be no danger that any of the campus cateries will be forced to follow the example of Queen's cafeteria and suspend operations.

Various campus snack houses are not as well stocked as formerly—chocolate bars and soft drinks have suffered the heaviest casualties. The staples of life are still to be bad for the asking, but there won't be any frills.

University residences and dining halls catering exclusively to students admit they are having difficulties, but announce they have the situation well in hand. At Hart House there is considerable difficulty in getting the large supplies of meat necessary for the hordes who eat there, but by revising menus from day to day dieticians manage to make what supplies they can get that day fit into the meals. St. Hilda's have meat only once a day and seem to have no difficulty at all. It is nearly always beef for dinner; lamb and veal rarely appear on the tables.

At Wymilwood the girls go in for salads, and consequently the meat problem is not serious. Often, however, they have to display a sign reading "No Ice Cream Today."

Getting meat for the army boys at Burwash is no problem, but it isn't quite as easy for the students. Meat is scarce, and although the boys like pork and veal best they rarely get it. Whitney Hall reports that beef is their mainstay, and they are lucky to get that. It's much harder for the meal planners, and the quality may not be quite as good as in former years, but co-eds at Whitney are not starving by any means.

Shortages Hinder Locksmith In Subterranean Campus Office

Fifteen hundred keys annually are produced in the subterranean workshop of Harry Taylor, University locksmith for the past 23 years. Taylor patterns every key used in the University buildings, cuts locks and door parts and does general metal repairs.

At one time he had an office on the top floor of University College, but when the University's administrative offices were moved, he took his art from his ivory tower in U.C. to his present basement location in Simcoe Hall.

Taylor's best customers are S.P.S. students who swamp him with orders for locker keys, but professors also ask to have many keys ground. But he claims he would have little trouble keeping up with his orders if sufficient materials were available.

In case you're interested, the five notches of the average key may be cut in eight depths, making it possible to produce 32,768 different keys (any M. and P. man is free to check that).

The mechanism cutting notches to the required depth is called a milling machine and the one Taylor has in his office looks like a cross between the inside of a Bren gun and a Rube Goldberg invention gone haywire. Taylor, who learned how to manage the machine as a hobby in England, maintains it is an art that requires years of experience.

Next to keymaking, Tayor's chief interest is in bowling. Prominently tacked to the wall of his key-lined shop is the official crest of his neighbourhood bowling organization, "The Friday Nighters." Taylor's score hovers near 700. His team, The Rolyats (the family name spelt backwards) includes his son, Jimmy, who is The Varsity's compositor, his daughter and his wife.

C.O.T.C. Ball Cancelled To Avoid Expenditure; Undesirable Says Madill

One-time Social Highlight of Year Is Dropped; Expense and Untimeliness Are Given as Reasons by O.C.

STAFF, STUDENTS TOO BUSY

There will be no C.O.T.C. ball this year, Lt-Col. H. H. Madill, Officer Commanding the First Battalion of the C.O.T.C., announced yesterday.

The ball, a major social event of previous years, is not being held because it was felt that the expenditure involved would not be in keeping with the times for a military organization.

"There is no scarcity of undergraduate affairs," Col. Madill stated, "and to add to these would be undesirable under the circumstances. To have a ball would place a great deal of work on the shoulders of only a few of the faculty and some undergraduates, who are already overworked."

Victoria Debaters Go to Montreal

Jack Coleman, IV Poli. Sci., and Margaret Albright, II Mod. Hist., both members of the Victoria College Debating Parliament, are travelling to Montreal today to compete with a McGill University debating team on the subject, "Resolved that Canada should effect political union with the United States after the war."

The two Vic debaters are returning a visit made by a McGill team last year. Victoria College won the debate last year.

Scholarship Winners Announced Yesterday

The Robert Bruce Scholarship (Undergraduate) was won by A. W. Gowans, II U.C., it was announced yesterday. Also announced was the All Souls Historical Essay Prize which was won by A. P. Stinson, Vic, with honourable mention going to D. C. Rowat, IV U.V. The prize will be divided between them.

Frye Discusses English Satire

"English Satire," third in a series of lectures on satire sponsored by Victoria College, was given yesterday by Mr. H. N. Frye, of the Department of English.

"All throughout English satire," said Mr. Frye, "it is impossible to tell where foreign influence stops and where natural satire begins. Today, in England, satire as a literary form is a dying fire, with men such as Belloc and Roy Campbell blowing at it it with antique bellows."

English satire may be said to have started in 1597 when Hall published a series of "toothless satires," soon followed by a book of "biting satires," Mr. Frye said.

"The two essentials of satire are humour, and an object to satirize," he said. "Too much hatred and too little gaiety will upset the balance. Dryden takes pleasure in his victims, transforming them into huge, brainless dinosaurs. Consequently his victim feels that no one could laugh with such relish unless he were sincerely amused."

"The less sure society is of its assumptions," said Mr. Frye, "the more likely is satire to take the form of irony, a kind of intellectual tear gas that attacks and paralyzes healthy as well as decayed tissue."

Mr. Frye explained the value of satire. The use any age makes of satire will vary with its immediate needs. In our modern world, preoccupied with hasty changes of values, satire can be put to revolutionary uses. The influence of certain satires, such as much of Dicken's "Pickwick Papers," presents a completely radical influence today, even though the satire may have been powerful in its own age.

WARTIME BUREAU of TECHNICAL PERSONNEL

Information regarding declaration forms to be filled out by Arts men enrolled in Honour Courses in Groups C and D.

As a result of the visit to the University of Mr. H. W. Lea, Director of the Wartime Bureau of Technical Personnel, and his colleague, Col. G. W. Beecroft, the University authorities are now able to announce the procedure which will be followed by the Bureau in dealing with the declartion forms now being filled out by Science students to be forwarded to Ottawa by the Registrar.

These forms will be classified by the Bureau in groups according to first preferences, and a list will be forwarded to the proper authorities in each service. These authorities will select from the lists numbers sufficient to meet their present requirements. Students, particularly of the higher years, may expect, therefore, to receive notification from Ottawa at an early date with regard to their declaration forms.

It is most important, therefore, that these forms be completed at the Registrar's Office, Simcoe Hall, and forwarded to Ottawa before the end of the present week. The University authorities are required by the Bureau to forward the names of those students who neglect or refuse, to fill out these forms.

It is understood that the Bureau will deal with the Fourth Year students first, then the Third Year, and then the Second and First Years in that order. Any student who is not chosen for the service of his first preference will be considered immediately for the services of his second and third preferences respectively.

After completing the declaration forms, students should await further instructions from Ottawa.

Questionnaire to be filled out by men and women enrolled in the Fourth Year of the Honour Courses in groups C and D.

Under instructions received from the Wartime Bureau of Technical Personnel, these students are required to fill out questionnaires, which may be obtained at the Registrar's Office, Simcoe Hall. These are entirely separate from, and in addition to, the declaration forms referred to above.

Secretary, Faculty of Arts.

ALCAN ROUTE R.C.I. LECTURE

"The Alaska Highway—Engineering and Surveying Problems" will be the subject of the Royal Canadian Institute's Saturday Evening Lecture in Convocation Hall on Feb. 20. Mr. R. A. N. Johnston, Forester in charge of Aerial Surveys, Department of Lands and Forests of the Province of Ontario, will be the speaker.

Mr. Johnston, who graduated in Forestry from the U. of T., has been mainly concerned with aerial photography and aerial sketching in forestry work and highway location, becoming one of the foremost authorities in Canada. He has had considerably highway location experience, having selected the preliminary route for long sections of the provincial highways and the Trans-Canada Highway. He also assisted in the location of all the aerodromes in Ontario used in the Commonwealth Air Training Plan.

The construction work on the Alcan Highway progressed so rapidly that the construction crews were virtually on the heels of the location parties—at times they followed by a distance of only five miles. Mr. Johnston was called on to help the situation, and by the application of the same principles used here in Ontario he was able to assist very materially in locating routes well in advance of construction. In recognition of his services he was offered a high rank in the U.S. Army—an exceptional honour for a foreigner.

Mr. Johnston will talk on the Alaska Highway from actual experience. He will tell of some of the engineering and surveying problems met with and how they were solved. He will show some lantern slides and also a sound motion picture on the Alaska Highway. The lecture is open to the public.

ATHLETIC NIGHT

No admission tickets will be sold after 9:30 p.m. for the remainder of the Saturday night Athletic Nights.

SPAIN'S MUSIC IS CLUB'S TOPIC

The Varsity Spanish Club meets tonight to hear Mrs. E. H. Craigie speak on Spanish music and its development. The meeting will take place at 8:00 p.m. in the Women's Union.

Mrs. Craigie first began her study of Spanish music while visiting Madrid in 1927. She attributes its originality to Spain's geographical position which has kept the country in constant touch with Asiatic and Moorish culture.

"Spanish music has a very national flavour," said Mrs. Craigie. For the club she intends to trace its development from the 15th to the 20th century.

Mrs. Craigie will illustrate her talk with representative songs. She will be accompanied at the piano by Mrs. W. B. Woods.

U.S. Colleges Subsidized To Provide Manpower

A War Manpower Commission plan to subsidize college education for 100,000 to 150,000 civilians in order to build up a "stockpile of trained manpower" was presented to the House Military Affairs Committee of the American Congress last week by Dr. Edward C. Elliot, President of Purdue University.

The program, a civilian counterpart of the Army-Navy Specialized Training Programs, is being planned an a five year basis, Elliot told the Committee, but the actual length and effect would depend on the war. Women and deferred men would be trained to do necessary civilian work now and in the post-war period under this plan, Elliot explained.

Dean Young, Government Clarify Science Men's Status For Personnel Placement

Army, School of Science and W.B.T.D. Confer; Dean to Explain Regulations Tuesday; Over 2,000 Jobs Available

NO WASTE OF MANPOWER

By J. D. Wray

H. W. Lea of the Wartime Bureau of Technical Personnel and Col G. W. Beecroft, liason officer between the W.B.T.P. and the Army, conferred Monday with Dean C. R. Young of the Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering, some members of his faculty and members of the Executive of the Engineering Society.

Dean Young will speak to the student body of School next Tuesday at the Engineering Society's nomination meeting, to explain points in connection with present Science Student Regulations. Yesterday he told The Varsity some of the salient facts arising out of the conference with Mr. Lea and Col. Beecroft.

He said that about 2,800 jobs are at present open in Canadian industry for science students. Details of the jobs will be provided soon. This, he said, is only the "first batch" and it is believed that the number of available openings will shortly increase.

Undergraduates, that is, those not in the graduating year, will be provided with permits to seek employment. These permits are to be made up in Ottawa from rolls which were sent there by the University last November.

In the case of graduating students, the W.B.T.P. will judge as to whether they will be placed in industry or the armed forces. A balance must be maintained between the two. The declarations which have been recently signed by all Science students stating whether they wish to volunteer for active service or not, will be carefully analyzed at Ottawa and sent to the appropriate military authorities, depending upon which Arm the student perfers.

In the case of undergraduates, a definite stand will be taken by the Bureau to retain promising men at the University until their course is completed. The Bureau will not stop a student from going active. To do so, however, he must have a certificate from the faculty allowing him to do so. This certificate will be granted provided an interview with the Dean and the Officer Commanding of the C.O.T.C. fails to convince the student that his services would be more valuable as a technician in industry.

"It was a very profitable meeting," said Dean Young, "and the attitude of the Bureau seems to be to conserve technical personnel so that they will not be a waste to their country."

Vic Soph-Frosh Guests of U.C.

The annual U. C. Soph-Frosh party will take on a new form this year with U.C. playing host to the first and second years of Victoria College. The party will take place Wednesday, Feb. 24, at the U.C. Women's Union.

"This is the first function of its kind," commented U.C. Second Year President Frank Watson, "the idea being, of course, to foster an even better spirit between the two arts colleges."

A full program of entertainment for the evening is being planned by Bill Salter and Alex Dixon, both I U.C. Charlie Baxter, secretary of second year U.C., said all tickets not sold by class representatives would go on sale in the Rotunda on Monday.

"As an added attraction," Baxer said, "come single—go home double."

Aid to Russia Nears $650 Mark

Total of the University contributions to the Canadian Aid to Russia Fund yesterday swelled to $637.57 as cheques for $20.00 from the Campus Co-operative Residence, $30.00 from the Faculty of Dentistry, $140.00 from Victoria College Union, and $16.80 from the School of Social Work were submitted to campaign headquarters at the Students' Administrative Council office.

Of the 15 student organizations which have already contributed to the campaign, Victoria College Union, and the faculties of Medicine and Engineering top the list with totals of $140.00, $117.76 and $115.00 respectively. Other contributions are still expected by the S.A.C. office.

Conserving Technicians

There are 2,800 jobs open now in Canadian industry for science students in training at the Universities, Dean C. R. Young of School said in an interview with a Varsity staff writer yesterday, and there will be more openings available shortly.

As a result of this widespread necessity for technicians, every effort will be made to dissuade science students in pre-graduation years from enlisting in the armed forces, where their valuable training might not be used to its greatest advantage. And graduating men will be placed either in some branch of the services or in war industry, at the discretion of the Wartime Bureau of Technical Personnel.

The policy outlined by Mr. Lea on his recent visit here, as Dean Young has pointed out, seems to aim chiefly at the conservation of skilled manpower, in order that training in the vital techniques shall not go unemployed.

We understand that the Head of School will speak to the Engineering Society when it gathers to nominate candidates for its new Executive. Then he will doubtless elaborate and clarify many of the points in connection with present status of science students.

But one thing is already manifestly clear: that the Government fully realizes the vital part which trained young men of science can play in this war.

Casualty

Ironic is the news that a wartime casualty this year is the annual Canadian Officers' Training Corps Ball. Social highlight of other University years, this Ball is, we believe, the first major campus dance to disappear from the regular schedule because of pressure of wartime duties.

Many will regret the step, for the dance was always a popular one, especially, we understand, among the Army-minded co-eds who were given an opportunity at it to compete for dashing young subalterns with their shiny buttons and budding mustaches. The advent of war naturally made the uniforms more drab and took much of the actual colour out of the affair. But what it lost in gaiety it probably more than made up with a sort of Byronesque flavour of "pre-Waterloo" gallantry.

Many, on the other hand—and we are among them—will agree with Col. Madill that there are already enough undergraduate affairs on the campus without maintaining the expensive—and perhaps over-showy—C.O.T.C. Ball. The Corps has more pressing duties.

Suggested Reading

William L. Shirer, author of "Berlin Diary" and former CBS newsman in the Nazi capital, spoke over a Columbia hookup Sunday in one of his regular commentary periods. He mentioned then the recent Office of War Information release, "Tale of a City," which sets forth German methods of subjecting a conquered people, as exemplified by the story of the days following the fall of Warsaw.

Mr. Shirer pointed out that such propaganda—brutal and unpleasant reading though it is—serves a valuable purpose on this continent, far removed as yet from the actual zones of battle. It is hard to realize, even in the fourth year of this titanic war, the ruthlessness and viciousness of our enemy. The Varsity is not a hate-monger. But neither is it particularly noted for glossing over unpleasant facts. And to keep the record straight, we advise perusal of this authetic record of "The Tale of a City."

Beveridge Developments

In British and Canadian Houses of Commons, discussion continues relative to the Beveridge Report.

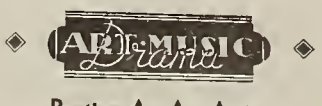
In Ottawa yesterday Mr. King gave notice of a motion for appointment of a 41-member select committee of the House of Commons "to examine and report on a national plan of social insurance which will constitute a charter of social security for the whole of Canada."

While at Westminster, Sir Kingsley Wood, Chancellor of the Exchequer, delivered a speech on the subject which—The Canadian Press report from London says—observers said "did nothing to mollify a strong Labour group which has expressed disappointment that the Government did not announce immediately its full approval of the Report." Sir Kingsley said that no promise of enactments of legislation based on the Report could be made until Britain's financial condition has been considered.

Labour Leader Arthur Greenwood described these remarks as "very grave" from the point of view of his party, and the labourite London Star reported that the revolt in the Labour party against this Government attitude threatened "a serious blow to national unity." Lord Beaverbrook's London Standard gave its belief that Labour members of the Cabinet—Clement Attlee, Ernest Bevin and Herbert Morrison—might be forced to withdraw from support of the Government, although it emphasized that Mr. Churchill's position as Prime Minister was not in jeopardy.

Before yesterday's House session, the Labour party met in caucus, but delayed action on a motion of censure of the Government until today.

If that motion comes, it may bring with it a Cabinet shakeup; and it any case it cannot improve interparty relations in the House. That legislation based on the Beveridge Plan is desirable is generally agreed; but it cannot be passed hastily—nor, apparently, without considerable furore.



The Last Mile

Here's a nasty thought on which to close today's quota of editorial comment. Applications to write Arts Examinations must be filled out by March 1. And those Examinations start April 24.

Which means that the season of close sequestration in the Library is not far away. In two short months we'll be hard at it—with each moment stolen for a life-giving cigarette on the Library steps taken only after swimming eyes can no longer distinguish the printed page.

To all who view the oncoming weeks of agony with undue alarm, we offer a brief word of counsel. Don't panic.

We were privileged once to hear the Principal of one of the Arts Colleges tell us that examinations were nothing more than a "battle of wits" between student and examining officer. It's not a slaughter—it's a form of game. And if the stakes are high, the game is that much more interesting.

Banting As An Artist

Hart House Art Gallery

As a tribute to the memory of one of Canada's greatest men, Sir Frederick Banting, a special committee in co-operation with the Art Committee of Hart House, has arranged the exhibition of his paintings, drawings and wood-carvings in the Art Gallery.

Sir Frederick first tried his hand at painting with no more serious purpose than to pass the time, Dr. A. Y. Jackson says in his recent book, Banting as an Artist. Most of the work was done between 1927 and 1937 when Sir Frederick was on his travels, hence the pictures have a unique variety in subject matter. Outside of his contributions to the annual Senior Member's show in Hart House, he sent few pictures to public exhibitions, for his pleasure was in making them, in mixing up a lot of colours in a sketch box and all the

STUDENT ROBS BANK

Heart Bleeds for the Armed Forces, Student States, Defending Actions on Sherbourne Street

A BLOODY MESS

Amazement and disgust were expressed by officials of the International Red Cross Society late yesterday, when it was announced that a student, said to be Gore E. Plasma, II Pass Arts, had robbed the blood bank on Sherbourne St. Plasma, it was alleged, entered the blood bank by disguising himself as a storage flask. 'It was horrible, swallowing all that sodium citrate," he commented afterwards. 'It was enough to make your blood congeal."

The alleged criminal was trailed to a secret hideout in the University Library stacks by bloodhounds borrowed from the Belmont Group Theatre's production of Uncle Tom's Cabin.*

When apprehended, Plasma was attempting to give himself a transfusion, but with little success. 'I've tried everything else," he explained, "even some wood aclohol my room-mate swiped from the S.P.S. Chemistry Lab."

Defending the action, I. M. X. Sanguinated, lab partner and close friend of the criminal, commented: "I was born that way, but Plasma became anemic working for The Varsity, and we've tried everything. You can't get blood out of a stone—we've tried it. Besides, our exams are coming up, and how will Gore E.'s blood pressure be able to go up if he hasn't any blood?"

"The arrest is further proof of the corrupt state of our banking system," said a Western Gentleman (not one of Mart Kenney's—Ed.) named Aberhart. "If people make deposits in a bank, there's no reason why there shouldn't be withdrawals."

"The whole procedure sounds highly undemocratic," said a usually anonymous newspaper called the Mop and Pail. "Besides, the Red Cross calls itself International and we hate all internationals—especially Red ones."

Speaking of Sport

By Michael O'Mara

WE TURN BACK THE CLOCK...

Comes time for our Annual Guest S.O.S., and galloping over from our regular stand on Page 2 we come, clad in a roll-top sweater and a pair of badly-battered biceps, all set to wax athletic. And our treatise on this occasion concerns one of the nobler institutions of this University, the very existence of which is now in jeopardy. We refer to The Varsity A.C.

...AND RECALL WITH NOSTALGIA...

Time was, in the dim dead days beyond recall, when the Athletic Club was a bustling little concern whose activities were a constant cause of barked shins in The Varsity Office nestling high up in the eaves of Hart House, and more than once provided incidents which found their way into the pungent paragraphs of Hither and Yon. That was the halcyon era when impromptu basketball games were all the rage among members of The Varsity's coterie of newsharks, with a pot of glue for the spheroid and wastebaskets dangling from coat-hooks serving as backets. How well we remember the speed and grace of George Forster—former sports reporter, now overseas with the R.C.A.F.—as he circled under the wastebasket to lob in an unerring pot of glue! That was poetry in motion, if you like.

...THE GOLDEN AGE...

And those viciously-contested volley-ball struggles which took place in the Night Office. It was here that mild-mannered Owen Prichard—Head Boy of Wycliffe College, Sports Editor of The Varsity and pool-shark extraordinary, Owen was aptly yclept The Man of a Thousand Disguises—shone as an athletic luminary beside whose feats those of Babe Ruth, Jack Dempsey and Invisible Scarlet O'Neil pale into insignificance. We recall with glee how deadly were his spike-shots performed upon a pink balloon, ably set up by Rex Wilson, in those days a promising cub reporter who couldn't spell.

...OF ATHLETIC GREATNESS

Greatest perhaps of all the glory-stained members of the A.C. in its heyday was Larry N. Smith, Editor-in-Chief of The Varsity in its Jubilee Year. Larry could have had a regular berth as goal-keeper of the U.C. interfaculty soccer squad—but he preferred to compete in the A.C. ping-soccer louse-league. Ping-soccer is soccer played with a table-tennis ball in the corridor which runs past the Hart House Pool room. But Nemesis stalked the great Smith's career, and he retired from active competition following an unfortunate accident when he Ruined Himself in attempting to stop a drive from the educated toe of then-Managing Editor Edgar Simon.

TIMES SURE HAVE CHANGED

The great days of the A.C. are over now. Occasionally we play a little Cowboys and Indians in the Office, and sometimes reporter George Elliott chases Men's News Editor Rex Wilson, who still can't spell, around with an eight-foot quarter-staff of trusty yew, which somehow found its way up there. But it ain't the same.

DIRTY OLD YOUNGER GENERATION

And the reason for this falling-off is evident. Unheeding the precept of the saintly Smith to whom we have referred above, present Varsity staffers with athletic ability prefer to operate in the minor leagues of which Mr. McCutcheon is czar. Assistants Sports Editor Jim Paton plays soccer and hockey for Vic. Reporters Hal Pohl and Phil Shackleton were members of U.C.'s runner-up rugby squad, and Shackleton is also a Red-and-White trackman of note, as indeed also is Sports Editor Roger Conant. Critic Brock Brace is an Emmanuel College water polo adept.

WE WASH OUR HANDS OF THEM

This is rank ingratitude. To The Varsity that nurtures them and keeps them from getting to their lectures on time, the present crop doesn't even demonstrate the common decency of wearing the A.C.'s colours—blue, white and grime—when they compete. It's a shameful state of affairs, and we'll be glad when our active membership in the A.C. is at an end. For never now can we recapture the fine careless rapture of Prichard swooping high on a broken chair to drive home the winning point—of Smith sailing gracefully through the air and landing trousers foremost on the cold marble floor—of Forster getting covered in the contents of a broken gluepot. C'est la fin de siecle.

U.C. HEADS FOR PLAYOFFS

In the last game of the schedule, the league-leading U.C. water polo squad chalked up another mark on its long string of victories, when it beat Trinity yesterday.

Lack of a well organized passing attack by both teams kept the scoring at a minimum. In the first period scramble, Sturgess of U.C. opened the scoring by receiving a pass from Salter and blasting it into the corner of the net, leaving the goalie helpless.

The first of the second half showed signs of becoming a high-tallied, wide open game. Mermen of Trinity got off to a smooth start by working down the tank and Baillie deposited the ball skilfully through the bars to tie the Red and White at 1-1.

From then on the play was in control of an aggressive U.C. squad. Scott bagged two more to put U.C. in the lead. When the boys climbed from the pool the score was still 3-1 for the Red and White.

The water polo team of U.C. now moves into the play-offs.

Trinity — Rawlinson, Baillie, Riley, Gage, Thompson, Jones, Thwaites, Fraser, Shephard.

U.C. — Sturgess, Warren, Smith, Scott, Salter, Walden.

VICTORIA vs. JR. S.P.S.

Yesterday witnessed the conflict of two veteran water polo teams, when Vic fought to a 3-1 win over Jr. S.P.S.

With both teams displaying plenty of fight, fast swimming and accurate passing, dull moments were rare. It is surprising that the scores were not higher.

After many inspired tries when both squads heaved the ball everywhere except through the goal posts, Quentin, of S.P.S., backed by well-timed passes, marked up the first point. Near the close of the first half the Vic team, led by Nixon, came back to score, making it 1-1 at half time.

The second half was a repeat of the first, with many vicious throws being stopped by the goalies. In three tries on the Vic net, the S.P.S. squad bounced the ball off the top once and twice off the sides; the Vic team, with more accurate aim, put away two shots which were lovely to witness. Crang of Vic blazed away and sent the ball dead through the middle of the goal, while Tom Nixon fired point blank to run the score to 3-1 for the Victorians.

Jr. S.P.S.—Sansom, Quentin, Moffat, Spence, Boa, Bruce.

Vic I — Bryce, Beharrell, Taylor, Nixon, Tillston, Crang, Jones, Brace.

Close Cage Win For Musclemen

In one of the best games of the season, P.H.E. yesterday noon scraped out a 34-33 win over Senior S.P.S. The tussle was nip and tuck all the way—first a basket by the muscle men—then a Engineer tally. Back and forth for 30 minutes, it provided a really watchable show for the fair-sized crowd.

P.H.E. held a one-point margin at half-time with the score 17-16. The second half worked out exactly even with 17 points apiece.

Whitey Clayton was P.H.E.'s top marksman with 13 points. He proved poison to the School team with his long shots for he sank three alone in the opening 15 minutes. Parchello tallied 13 points for School and Pringle played good ball to net 12. "Big" Pringle was the most noticeable man on the floor, bouncing into and around P.H.E. players alternately.

Sammy Stellman and Doug Whittle were each good for six points on the P.H.E. board. Ross Sturgess chalked five for the same cause, while Frank Watson and Paul Volpe made two each.

Workman sank four and Brooks and Van Wyck two each for School.

The S.P.S. men were close checking and broke up much of the P.H.E.'s hard working and fancy passing, although if a small fraction of the P.H.E. shots had found the true mark instead of trickling around the rim and then out, the score would not have been so fearsomely close.

School were on the point of tying the game in the closing minutes when a foul shot brought them up to within one point of their rivals. Crowding the P.H.E. team, however, they were unprepared for the break-away and consequent score by Ross Sturgess.

With only seconds left, Brooks made an eleventh hour basket but was brought back and given a foul shot which left School one lone point deficient at whistle time.

STANDING COMMITTEE MEETING RE PLAYOFFS IN WATER POLO FRIDAY AT 1.00

Cosy Caps Worn In Cold Spell

By Betsy Mosbaugh

Of course there's the good old Biblical saying that "Many are called but few are chosen." A modern re-vamping of this quotation, quoted from a Champus Cat of recent years and eminently suited to the spirit of these last few days, is, "Many are cold but few are frozen."

Sensitive co-eds have substituted practicability for prettiness and hot coffee for cokes, as subtle predictions in the almanacs ring crisply true. Glamorous heads of hair now assume the shapes of everything from Little Red Riding Hood to Old Mother Hubbard when those damsels who are adventurous and courageous don warm shawls. The eds, however, modify their appearance in contrast to their counterparts by bringing forth cosy but simple car muffs. A few unwary souls do penance for their lack of foresight by wearing their ears in rabbit-like tufts of gauze bandage.

We mentioned that only the brave ventured forth and that according to some professors there is a marked decrease in attendance at lectures. On the other hand several students claim that they have made courageous trips to the halls of learning only to find that the lecture-hall was empty. In Baldwin House cancellation of lectures was due to the fact that pipes were frozen.

Many students seem to grasp the opportunity offered by the inclemency of the times by gathering around the library radiators and catching up on back reading. The girls of Hutton House, on the other hand, think those white window panes a wonderful chance to sit in front of the fire and play gin rummy.

adventures that led up to it. That may account for the elementary simplicity of most of the canvasses, for the prolific numbers of them, and for the speed in which most of them were done — as many as three scenes in one day!

As many of the sketches were done out-of-doors in cold weather — Ste. Irenee and the Arctic, for example—he learned to mix the colours as simply as possible. Thus he was able to present the scene, sometimes a physical rather than artistic achievement. Yellowknife River indicates that he saw something—a lake at sundown, and attempted to show it to others also. This goes to show his art meant something more than personal satisfaction. As time went along he became more interested in this hobby. One of the last things he said to Dr. Jackson was, "Won't it be great when the war is over to get back to the country and paint again."

In St. Tite des Caps, Sir Frederick produced one of his best landscapes (he almost always painted landscapes) with a strong composition of barns and farmhouses leading back by ribboned lanes of trees into the snow-covered hills. It was nature he sought to portray, and not its modern modifications.

One of the friendliest little scenes is entitled Gloucester Harbour, painted in Massachusetts. Small, oddly coloured fishing smacks are presented rubbing shoulders in the harbour, which reflect the genial fishing tale atmosphere of such a place.

As another branch of his artistic efforts, Sir Frederick tried wood-carving. The chests of wood are cut strongly and with vigour, as are other objects. This can probably be traced to the influence of Frances Loring, who modelled an heroic bead of Banting, as if he were deep in the contemplation of some great problem.

The sketches, which are sometimes done on the back of menus and often take the form of caricatures of his friends, provide a humourous and human approach to his work. Arthur Lismer has a sketch which he calls Dr. Bantering. Sir Frederick did a quick pen profile of Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe.

Icefield, which is one of six Arctic sketches, is done with india ink and illustrates his fascination for triangular forms. On his sketching trips to Georgian Bay in the early spring and autumn, he studied the forms and colours of rocks, the wind-blown pines and the play of light on water. But apart from that and the necessary fundamentals of technique, Banting was concerned with the pleasure of his hobby, and not with the theory and philosophy of art.

Practical Studies Only In German Universities

Only what the Nazis call "practical subjects" will be taught in German universities for the duration of the war, according to an article by the Berlin correspondent of the Swenska Dagbladet, a Swedish newspaper.

Technical high schools will rank above universities where "scientific differences, theories and hypothesis must cease." the Swedish newspaper stated.

The paper went on to say that "all students are to utilize vacations for armament work and those unwilling to comply will be excluded from further studies."

T.S.O. Singer is Guest Of German Study Club

Leopoldine Pichler, who sang this season with the Toronto Symphony Orchestra, was guest artist at a meeting of the German Study Club on Tuesday night.

Miss Pichler sang several Strauss waltzes, including "The Blue Danube Waltz" and selections from "Die Fledermaus."

Dr. R. K. Arnold of Victoria College gave an address on the lives of Johann Strauss, the elder and the younger, and traced the development of the waltz from a simple country dance to the graceful accomplishments of Viennese society.

Miss Pichler, a vivacious brunette, was born in Vienna. She came to this country nine years ago, and studied singing in New York. She will leave Toronto soon to go on tour.

Comfort And Schaeffer Receive Commissions In Army And Air Force

University Artists to Make Pictorial Record of Canadian Armed Forces; Atkins to Replace Them

TO GO OVERSEAS

Professor C. F. Comfort of the University Fine Art Department and Carl Shaeffer, instructor of the Hart House Art Classes, are among the group of Canadian artists being commissioned to make a record of the Canadian Armed Forces.

Prof. Comfort has been appointed a Lieutenant (specialist) in the army for this purpose. He is now in Ottawa and expects to go overseas shortly. He left for Ottawa early this week and has since been struck off strength of the C.O.T.C.

Mr. Carl Schaeffer has been appointed a Flying Officer in the Royal Canadian Air Force and is to leave for Ottawa Tuesday night.

Mr. Caven Atkins is taking over the work of both Comfort and Schaeffer. Prof. Comfort has been giving art classes to the first, third and fourth years of the Honour Course in Fine Art at the University, and to the College of Art. Mr. Atkins took over the Hart House Art Classes once before when Mr. Schaeffer was away on a Guggenheim Fellowship.

HART HOUSE GLEE CLUB

Members of the Club are advised that the rehearsal tentatively called for Monday evening after dinner has been cancelled, to be replaced by two rehearsals, on Tuesday and Wednesday between 5 and 6 p.m. in the Music Room. It is urgent that as many members as can possibly attend should do so, in preparation for the forthcoming Sunday Evening Concert. These rehearsals are in addition to the regular rehearsal which will take place on Monday next between 5 and 6 p.m.

Secretarial assistance for distribution of 2,500 ration books to students not residing with parents in Toronto and to University academic staff and employees today, Saturday and Monday, has been provided through the co-operation of T. A. Reid, financial secretary of the Athletic Association ,and acting Hart House officials, it was learned yesterday from the Students' Administrative Council office, distribution centre for the new food ration books at the University.

Students who do not live in Toronto will obtain the new books in the foyer of Hart House Theatre today from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m., tomorrow from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Monday from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Members of the University academic staff and administrative staff and employees will receive ration books at distribution offices in Simcoe Hall, University College, the Faculty of Medicine, the Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering, Simcoe Hall and Hart House. Distribution will take place today from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., Saturday from 9 a.m. to 11:30 p.m. and Monday from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

University employees have voluntarily donated of their time Saturday afternoon in order that C.O.T.C. personnel may more conveniently obtain ration books before and after parades. It is requested that students and staff come for ration books at earliest period to avert crowding distribution centres on Monday.

To obtain a new ration book, the present ration book must be presented along with the postcard at the back, correctly filled in and signed by each individual.

"This system of distribution at the University is offered as a service to the student body to avoid lining up in local ration book centres," said Miss A. E. M. Parkes, Acting General Secretary of the Students' Administrative Council.

Dr. Joslin to Give Banting Lecture

Second of the annual lectures on some aspect of scientific research, which were instituted last year to commemorate the death of Sir Frederick Banting, will be delivered by Dr. Elliott P. Joslin, Professor Emeritus of Medicine at Harvard University, on Monday at 4:30 p.m. in Convocation Hall. Subject of Dr. Joslin's address is "Contrasts in the Treatment of Diabetes."

Instituted as a memorial to a man who was recognized the world over as an outstanding scientist especially for his work on the insulin cure for diabetes, the annual lecture is given each year on, or close to, the anniversary of Sir Frederick's sudden death when the plane which was carrying him to England on active service crashed in the wilds of Newfoundland on Feb. 21, 1941.

The first lecture of the series was delivered last year by Dean C. J. Mackenzie, dean of the Faculty of Science at the University of Saskatchewan and acting president of the National Research Council, who spoke on the life and accomplishments of Sir Frederick. This year Dr. Joslin has chosen as his subject, "Contrasts in the Treatment of Diabetes," a subject connected with the work of the man whom the lecture commemorates.

Willan's Opera Draws Large Crowd

Last night in Convocation Hall, the Toronto Conservatory of Music's symphony orchestra played Dr. Healey Willan's opera "Transit Through Fire" to an almost full house. The orchestra was under the direction of Ettore Mazzoleni, and L.A.C. Howard Scott and Miss Lillian Smith sang the leading roles in John Coulter's libretto. The orchestra and singers were supported by a male and female chorus from the Conservatory.

Briefly, the story of the opera deals with two bewildered young people from University who graduate in the "futile nineteen-thirties." It is the story of their struggle to find the clue to a good life.

Opening in a ski-lodge in the mountians with Sergeant Thomson on leave, the opera is a series of flash-backs to University life, to graduation, the search for a job and the final fulfillment of their desire during the "fighting nineteen-forties."

Prior to the presentation of Willan's work, the orchestra played Beethoven's Symphony No. 8.

Nominations Open At Hart House

Nominations open at 9 a.m. today for the annual Hart House elections, which will take place this year on Wednesday, March 3. Closing date for nominations will be 6 p.m., Wednesday, Feb. 24. Nomination forms can be obtained at the Warden's office. The committees to be elected are the House, Library, Music, Art, Camera, and Squash.

Every undergraduate member of the House is eligible to be a candidate for the committees, except that candidates for the Camera Committee are required to be members of the Camera Club. Also, candidates for the Squash Committee must have played squash at least six times during the present academic year, and must have had their name on one of the ranking lists for at least three weeks directly preceding the elections.

The Board of Stewards, in conjunction with the House Committee, has made some regulations regarding electioneering. Candidates are limited to an expenditure of five dollars for election expenses, such as hand bills and blotters. Posters, of a maximum size of 24 ins. by 36 ins, may be hung in the main corridor of Hart House on or after Thursday, Feb. 25.

The following is an explanation of the 300-Vote Rule which applies only to the House, Library, Music, Art, and Squash Committees:

1. There are eight (Squash, six) candidates to be elected to each of the committees at the general election.

2. Two men are re-elected by the outgoing committee (Squash, one), provided that there are this many eligible for the following year.

3. The candidates having the highest vote in each of eight colleges or faculties provided they poll at least 300 votes, is elected.

4. The two colleges or faculties represented by the two committeemen elected by the out-going committee cannot have a second representative on the committee until the highest candidate from each of the other faculties or colleges has been elected as outlined in (3).

5. Where there are not sufficient colleges represented by candidates to make up the committee, by taking the men as outlined in (3), the men having the highest votes for that committee are then selected (up to a maximum of three from any one college) until the total number of the committee is obtained.

The election of the Glee Club Committee will take place after the regular rehearsal on Monday, Feb. 22. Nominations closed at 6 p.m. last night.

The only candidates proposed were C. S. Morgan, II S.P.S., and A.M. Manson, III Victoria.

Segsworth Debate To be Held Today

Winners of the debate will oppose a Fourth Year team which defeated the Third Year in the other semi-final bracket.

Kingston, Feb. 18 — (CUP) — The Gilbert and Sullivan operetta, Princess Ida, was presented at Queen's University yesterday by the Queen's Glee Club, under the musical direction of Dr. Harrison and the dramatic direction of Dr. Angus.

BANTING EXHIBITION

Special arrangements have been made whereby the women of the University (staff and students) are invited to visit the art gallery of Hart House today, between the hours of 1 and 5 p.m. to see the exhibition of work by the late Sir Frederick Banting.

The general public will be admitted to the gallery next Sunday, Feb. 21, from 1 to 5 p.m.

Respiration Course To Start Monday

The University Health Service in conjunction with the Athletic Association has completed final arrangements for the semi-yearly course in Artificial Respiration and Resuscitation Starting Monday at 4:45 lectures and demonstrations will be given in the Debates Room of Hart House.

After completing the two-lecture course, the candidates will try a series of practical tests and a true and false test in the following week. The successful candidates (in the fall session approximately 75 per cent of the 150 applicants passed) may receive A.R.P. badges of the Royal Life Saving Society.

The Standard Technique and the Schafer method of Artificial Respiration will be taught. This will be under the supervision of Mr. Wills Maclachlan, the outstanding authority on this subject on the continent.

Among the first lessons taught the candidates will be that of the necessity of continuous and never-ceasing resuscitation in case of an accident. It is popularly believed that if there is no sign of life after an hour of work, there is no hope. This has been proven a fallacy on numerous occasions; in fact in 1927 a man was revived after eight hours of resuscitation. It has also been proven that most cases of shock or drowning are curable if artificial respiration is begun within a few minutes, but after five minutes the chances are very slim. Disproven are many of the formerly regarded infallible mechanical devices. Pull-motors especially are discouraged along with the older-fashioned barrel roll method. By far the best method is still the Schafer method and it is regarded as such throughout the world.

More About Beveridge

Yesterday we brought readers up to date with a brief and factual account of the progress of the Beveridge debate in the British House of Commons. Today we continue the practice.

In yesterday's House session, the Government's policy of dealing slowly with legislation projected along the line Sir William Beveridge has suggested was upheld by 335 to 119 as a Labour motion of disapproval was defeated. But the vote was the heaviest ever recorded against the Churchill administration. And now 22 Labour ministers of all ranks —inculding three members of the War Cabinet—are scheduled to confer immediately on whether or not they should withdraw their support from the present Government.

The whole flareup is regrettable in the extreme, and may become more regrettable yet if the existing coalition is vitiated by the withdrawal of Labour support. We approve the vigorous Labour stand in demanding progressive action along the lines the Report has laid down; but we believe the Government stand of proceeding cautiously is on the whole justified in the present uncertain times. After all, if the proposed legislation is to be stable, it cannot be passed without proper foundation.

In yesterday's session, Home Secretary Herbert Morrison made a last-minute appeal to his party colleagues not to "precipitate serious political difficulties." We hope, to borrow a phrase from The Globe and Mail, that the Members of Parliament will heed his warning and demonstrate once more "the British genius for compromise." National unity was never more important.

Students Walk Out

Of interest to students throughout the city is news of the student strike at Runnymede Collegiate in protest against dismissal of the principal by the York Tonwship school board. More than 800 of the 830 students walked out at the beginning of the week and only 150 answered roll-call yesterday.

Inevitably, issues of the strike are thoroughly beclouded by charges and counter-charges of the rival factions. The principal, Bruce Clarke, became embroiled with the school board over the question of an honour system which he introduced to the school, whereby students were not required to write examinations and classes are conducted on a basis similar to that of universities. On orders from the board, Mr. Clarke had agreed under protest to abolish this system and a series of examinations had been scheduled for this week. These examinations were cancelled because of the strike.

Mr. Clarke's dismissal followed a concerted drive on the part of a group of citizens of York Township, backing a small group of teachers who claimed the principal was incompetent. A split vote of the board was in favour of the dismissal and the students walked out.

It is not the purpose of The Varsity either to evaluate the honour system or to thrash out the malodorous political charges which have been aired by both sides. Student interest is rather concerned with the role played by the students of Runnymede Collegiate in a controversy which is of vital concern to them.

From all accounts, the students have carried out their strike in an orderly and level-headed manner. They have made their issue perfectly clear: they resent outside interference with the affairs of their school and they entirely support the policy of their principal. There has been no picketing or disorderly behaviour of any sort on the part of the students and they are apparently presenting their case ably at public meetings in the district.

On the other hand, the wisdom of a strike of students is, of course, decidedly questionable. The chief sufferers are the students themselves, and it is regrettable that they are forced to take such a drastic step in order to make their wishes known. One of the few beneficial by-products which is to be hoped for from the deplorable affair is the setting up of some kind of machinery by which high school students will have a voice in matters which concern them.

. . . Is Oft Interred . . .

On Sunday falls the second anniversary of the untimely and tragic death of Sir Frederick Banting. The greatest of Canadian scientists was killed on active service Feb. 21, 1941, when his aeroplane crashed in a desolate Newfoundland area.

The man who freed the world from the scourge of diabetes was one of the most illustrious of the graduates of this University, and many will remember the widespread grief on his passing. But memories are sometimes short-lived, and for the purpose of helping to keep that of Sir Frederick alive, a series of Banting Memorial Lectures was instituted last year. Annually some noted authority comes here to speak on some aspect of scientific research.

Last year Dean C. J. Mackenzie, acting president of the National Research Council spoke in Convocation Hall on the life and accomplishments of Sir Frederick. On Monday, Dr. Elliott P. Joslin will deliver the second Banting Memorial Lecture at 4:30 p.m. when he speaks on "Contrasts in the Treatment of Diabetes." Dr. Joslin is Emeritus Clinical Professor of Harvard Medical School.

There is another current campus event connected with the life of the great doctor. Now on display in Hart House Art Gallery is a collection of his oil-paintings, cartoons and wood-carvings. He was not primarily an artist, and his work is that of a man practicing a hobby, rather than that of a creative worker. But technically his work is good. And, as a museum piece, it is well worth a visit.

Today the women of the University are invited to visit the Gallery between the hours of 1 p.m. and 5 p.m. The Gallery will be open to the public between the same hours Sunday. Members of the House, of course, can see the exhibit during any of the Gallery's regular "open" hours.

It is good to see that the University is carefully guarding the memory of its great scientist.

ART-MUSIC-Drama

An Old Friend

Conservatory Symphony

I shall get the unimportant part of the program over with before I forget about it. Last night Beethoven's Eighth Symphony sounded like Beethoven imitating himself, rather badly. Perhaps this was because the orchestra did not get together properly on the work. The first violin section did not develop a tone which at any time was adequate, and the rest of the strings were little better. The resultant Beethoven sounded redundant.

But now I can say a whole lot of complimentary things. Willan's Transit Through Fire is a charming work whose maturity is evident in every phrase. I heard it last night for the second time, and found that I enjoyed it even more than I did last year. The audience obviously thought it excellent. One point which popped up before me which I had not heard before was the accompaniment by the men of the chorus for the president in the first scene. The trouble with the opera is that it is so full of individual excellences that one cannot mention them all, and, if one mentions any, it puts a false emphasis upon them. The orchestration is far beyond most modern works I have heard, with a subtlety that one begins to realize only on repeated hearings.

In the actual performance, almost everything was satisfactory. The violins sounded all right, along with the rest of the orchestra. Ettore Mazzoleni's conducting was sympathetic; the chorus work was especially good. The soloists with the exception of Sergeant Thomson were excellent. He was too weak, and the orchestra consistently drowned him out. The orchestra level could have been reduced only at the expense of Willan's orchestration, and I am glad Mr. Mazzoleni did not do that.

The libretto is rather naive, but one forgets about that in its better passages which comes often, and always if one listens to Willan's music.

NEIL MACDONALD.

In Triumph

Dorothy Maynor

Miss Dorothy Maynor, negro lyric soprano, sang at Eaton Auditorium last night to a large and appreciative audience. Let me say, item, she has the loveliest voice these ears have heard. From first to last there was scarcely a tremor in the flow of purest melody which issued from her disciplined lips.

In Schubert's Ave Maria, for example, the ethereal theme simply evanesced, seeming without human motivation. The Queen of the Lieder, Gretchen am Spinnrade, was done with restrained fervour, eliciting all the Schubertian ardor, with the magical spinning-wheel hum ever probingly in the background. Piano art was gloriously allied with voeal perfection.

Two Debussy songs, Beau Soir of shimmering gossamer, and Verlaine's Fantoches, piquant memorabilia, were highlights of the French group. For encore, the tintinnabulation of Guitares et Mandolines by Grovlez was an impressionistic fragment superb in execution.

Miss Maynor has done considerable research in the folk music of her race. She sang a funeral son, Take this Feeble Body, which she discovered last summer in a South Carolina village. It proved an emotional climax of singular power. But quite the most impressive episode of the evening was her presentation of Samuel Barber's setting of the James Joyce poem I Hear an Army with its clangorous intervals, and lines like: "They come shaking in triumph their long green hair. . . ."

It is a rare and wonderful thing to have such masterly co-operation as was provided by Ernest Victor Wolff, at the piano.

Speaking Of Sport

By Roger Conant

AND NOW ST. MIKE'S . . .

Well, here we are, just two more Athletic Nights and two more weeks of publication before the season's frivolities give way to some solid weeks of mark hunting. However, as aforementioned, there are two more Athletic Nights. And the Medicos have been preparing, under the impetus of Bob "Dynamo" Delaney, for quite a while for their promised big show to write "thirty" for the 1943 Athletic Nights one week hence.

However, we note, with endorsement, that the Artsmen from over Bay Street way have been hard a work putting together a little show worthy of entertaining their confreres down Windsor way. For it seems that one, Thomas P.D.Q. Jacob athletic cosmopolite extraordinaire, has been pumping the accelerator in the organizing of the "A" Night to "topple all," unquote.

AND WHAT'S WHAT . . .

The program seems to offer the usual assortment of spectating events. No, we shouldn't use the word "usual," for this date has three different schooling establishments sending representatives to challenge Varsity colour-wearers. For Assumption College, Ontario Agriculture College and Manning Depot are all sending visitors. But let's start at the beginning. . . . The swim room will see, if everything goes well, the Blue "fish" battling Air Force Blue in a meet consisting of all the standard events. This should be easy meat for the well-conditioned Varsity swim team. Water polo and diving will also be on tap.

Then, for the early birds, the Varsity Reserves cage squad will give battle to the O.A.C. team that has journeyed dwon from the hinterlands. This should be Varsity's game because all the players are eager for the chance to distinguish themselves to get in the game against Assumption. And if thay play like they did against the all-stars last week it should should be duck soup. For intermission in the main gym arrangements are in the making for a high class ping-pong tournament amongst local champions.

Up the stairs and at the other end of the track will be held the assault-at-arms with the husky representatives of O.A.C. If you could break away from the cage-ball attraction for a little while you will probably see some high-class bouts. For the Martin and Glionna proteges have come through a strenuous season of tournaments are in tip-top condition to take on the usually strong challenge from O.A.C. Of course the caller-offers will be busy again in the upper gym after the fights are disposed of.

One of the new things added by the Irish is a full evening of movies—no, not Crosby, Lamour or Duck—but genuine, authentic movies of intercollegiate rugby that (they tell me) used to occupy our Saturday afternoons away back when. As this is about the closest we'll be coming to intercollegiate stuff for the duration of the war it might be a good idea to pay a visit.

Another Irish innovation will be a genuine orchestra—yes in the flesh—for the dancing after tea. And what is more this will be the first appearance of an entirely new group—as yet unnamed—of course that will probably take place as soon as the music is heard—which is composed by a man from this campus. A couple of Varsity musicians have been working on the idea of a campus swing band for quite some time and this is the product of their endeavours so far. This can be nothing but an improvement from other Nights—with their canned music.

AND NOW FOR ASSUMPTION . . .

It was a super game last year and with the old Axon-Roberts-Lavarnway combination it was a win. But this season there are no Axons, Roberts or Lavarnways, as anyone reading previous scoreboards can see. And it seems that Assumption, under coach Stanley "Red Nantais" Laning, is having one of its best seasons, although there are only three regulars back. They beat U. of Western by only three points, but have been strengthened considerably since. They have defeated some strong American teams and hope to contend for the Dominion Championship in March. From Gene Durocher — ex-Assumption man and now on the Steven's first string—we gather threads of information. Hank Lally is the visiting captain who averages at least seven points per night. Mort Bunnell was the high scorer against Varsity last year and was one of the two A.C. men to make the Michigan-Ontario all-star team. Hank Biasatti is another regular from last season who specializes in "hook" shots. Gino Sovran is the 6 ft. 2 in. freshman centre and high scorer who was the highest point getter in the Windsor High School League last year. Ludger Beauvais another veteran and plays on the rearguard.

Thus one might prognosticate some classy ball for tomorrow. For, no matter how good the opponents are, Stevie has taught his men a few things this past week. The remark from the back room that "he needs to from last week's showing" goes unanswered. But, at any rate, the boys have an ace or two up their sleeves. And with Gibson, Wallace, Thomson, Durocher, Tettmar and Scott in there punching and with plenty of good reinforcements handy, the Blues might surprise us by repeating last year's great win.

S.P.S. Pucksters Edge Dents 1-0

Last night after a scoreless first period, Don Grosskurth led his plucky Junior School puck-chasers in a 1-0 triumph over the ever-threatening Dents. This game, because of the Molarmen's tardiness in arriving, saw only 10 minutes of action in the last canto.

The play, from the beginning developed into a tug-of-war, with neither team wishing to give ground. However, this practice led both teams, in their most heated moments, to play a better game of shinny than hockey.

The second canto started with the Dents taking control of the disk and trying to push it goalwards. Their attempt was thwarted at the School blue line where B. Hamilton intercepted the puck and rifled it across to Don Grosskurth who, from centre ice, took a long shot at the enemy goal mouth. Bill Quigley easily brushed the rubber aside, but in the ensuing scramble, Don Grosskurth was able to bulge the twine for the lone counter.

The Dents, after this setback, consolidated their forces and continually threatened. Crouch was presented with a golden opportunity to even things up when he found himself in front of the School net and not a defending player within hailing distance. But he was denied his chance for glory when Workman made a daring dive to save the situation.

Jr. School Cagers Topple Vic 26-23

After leading a rather vitamin deficient Junior School basket squad for three quarters of the game, Junior Vic weakened during the last five minutes and at length crawled off the floor at the wrong side of a 26-23 score board.

Vic ran proverbial circles about the Engineers and looked like a squad of first rate champs until the School five-some turned over a leaf in their diary and transformed the champs to chumps.

Heavyweight Guthrie led the Scarlet and Gold attirees in the first half with six of their 17 points to his credit.

Leading basket binker for School was Brant who ran up a 10-point score. Ciglin was good for six points, all in Steinberg and O'Laughlin each three.

Guthrie did all his scoring in the opener with six points; Hamilton, Neale and Groover each scored four, Spry, three, and McHenry, two.

A glance at comparative half-time scoring will illustrate the shift in the powerhouse balance of the game. Vic scored 17 points to School's 10 in the first half, but only six to School's 16 in the fioal 15 minutes.

All good things must come to an end sometime—and this week-end will see the finish of our preliminary hockey schedule. Two great games (stop us, someone) will do the honours. The first one will be this afternoon at 4:15 at ye old Varsity Stadium between U.C. and St. Mike's brave teams. Even though they are both cooked as far as the proverbial goose goes, yet anything is liable to happen. U.C. walked away with all the honours last year and still have a very good team.

The other part of the double-header will see St. Mike's and Vic battle it out on the Little Vic rink around 12 come Saturday morning. So come along with us and see your last bit of preliminary puck-chasing.

Next week, it's away to the finals between St. Hilda's and Vic. The Varsity Stadium will see a lot of hockey action—or we miss our bet. Meanwhile, let's not forget Athletic Night in Hart House and on Monday we'll have a skiing treat from our travelling correspondent.

CANADIAN NICKEL

SERVING TODAY...

CARRYING A 45-TON TANK ON ITS BACK, this great transport lurches over shell-pocked roads. Think of the terrific strain on its axles. Think of the strain on the gears of the truck which drags it. These and other highly stressed parts are made of tough, strong Nickel Steel.

The great mines, smelters and refineries of the Canadian Nickel industry which were built up in time of peace were ready to serve an Empire at war. When peace comes again, they will be ready to play a greater part than ever in the industrial life of the future, for Nickel alloys, strong, tough, hard, corrosion-resistant, will serve in countless ways in the World of Tomorrow.

World Day of Prayer Celebrated by S.C.M. In Toronto Churches

Special Sunday Observed in 27 Countries; Is Annual Day of Intercession to Express Feeling of Student Unity

Rev. Luther Tucker of Yale Addresses Bloor St. Service; Tells Luncheon of American S.C.M. Problems

EMPHASIZE FELLOWSHIP

Yesterday was the day of prayer for students throughout the world. This is an annual day of intercession—the third Sunday in February. Many of the churches throughout this city invited representatives of the student body and the Student Christian Movement to speak on the meaning of this world-wide observance to the members of the University of Toronto.

One of the largest services was held at Bloor Street United Church yesterday morning when Rev. Luther Tucker, Secretary of the Student Y.M.C.A. of Yale University, spoke on the World Student Christian Fellowship. Rev. Tucker was for a number of year the active representative of the Fellowship in China and Japan and spoke of the supranational, non-racial bases of this group.

The Federation was begun by John R. Mott, and has two representatives on the Central Council from each of 28 countries. International Student Service is one of the organizations which grew from the W.S.C.F. and its aims are the active assistance of students, prisoners of war, in war-torn and conquered countries.

At an evening service held at Victoria Presbyterian Church, Sungit Singh, post-graduate student at Emmanuel College, and graduate from the University of Madras, spoke on the reality rather than the abstract nature of this day of prayer. This sermon was based on the discussion of the S.C.M. and the work of the W.S.C.F. in India. Broadly speaking, he pointed out the similarities of the system and work of organization in India, to that carried out in Canada and the United States, and showed how the basis on which students could feel their brotherhood has been actively reducted through the war to their common belief in Christianity.

The whole purpose of the day of intersession was to stimulate and express the feeling of the unity of students all over the world.

EFFECTS OF WAR POLICIES

Speaking on the S.C.M. in the United States to a large group of representatives of the Movement in Toronto at a luncheon at Diana Sweets yesterday afternoon, Rev. Luther Tucker showed how the S.C.M. was trying to preserve liberal values in the completely changed American University set-up.

"The result of having colleges moved to a war footing was a complete turmoil since the men students did not know how long they would be there. The new draft scheme announced in December called up over 40 per cent of the men students in Yale. As an actual fact, they were called up more quickly than had they not been in attendance," Rev. Tucker said.

"By June, the liberal arts will be largely retained by women students. Some universities are using their capital funds to retain those faculties, which shows that the universities will undertake a considerable financial sacrifice to carry on. Two of the most important reasons for this exodus have been the army's need for men, and the feeling against deferring the draft calls of what at least appears to be a privileged group.

"The S.C.M. has to adapt rapidly in the States," Rev. Tucker declared, "because there will be actually more men on the campus training or renting the buildings — the technically-trained airmen at Yale, for example. Furthermore, there will be a constant six-weeks turnover, requiring a forward thrust in personnel.

"The War Emergency Council has been recently constituted and has expressed the confidence of the army and navy authorities in the resident religious bodies—the S.C.M., Newan Club and the Jewish groups."

When dealing with the new inner feeling of U.S. students, Rev. Tucker said there was a growing religious concern, which does not imply a growing effectiveness of the work of these groups.

Princetonian Discontinued For Duration

Princeton, N. J., Feb. 20—The Daily Princetonian published its final issue for the duration last week. Second Ivy League newspaper to discontinue publicaation, the Princetonian follows the example of the Brown University Herald, which stopped publishing in January.

Editors of the Princetonian reported that their decision was entirely due to the drain on the staff caused by the sweeping effects of the draft on the student body. It was decided that a skeleton staff would be unable to continue adequate news coverage and maintain financial solvency under the pressure of increased academic responsibilities.

The Princetonian also suspended operations during the war years of 1917-18. Then, as now, provision was made for the reorganization of the paper after the war on its pre-war basis.

A new publication, the Princeton Bulletin, will publish official notices and war statements three times a week until the Princetonian is re-established.

McGill Suspends Publication Of "Offensive" McGill Daily; Student Council Is Investigating

Special University Committee Halts Newspaper's Operations Following 'Blatantly Smutty' Special Commerce Issue; Students' Council to Report to Senate Naming Those Responsible and Recommending Appropriate Action

EDITOR AND SPECIAL MASTHEAD ON 'CONDUCT PROBATION'

Montreal, Feb. 21 — (CUP) — Publication of the McGill Daily has been suspended by a special University Committee pending investigation into Friday's "blatantly smutty" special commerce issue of the newspaper, Raymond Ayoub, editor-in-chief, announced.

The committee, which met after University authorities said the Commerce Daily contained pictures, cartoons and feature articles giving offence to McGill officials, has instructed the Students' Council to present a report satisfactory to the Senate, naming the individuals personally responsible for today's issue of the paper, recommending appropriate disciplinary action and "demonstrating that it intends in the future to exercise that control over the Daily which is its responsibility."

Although Ayoub is theoretically responsible for the issue, it was believed tonight that he would be exonerated as he did not see it before it went to press. The members of the special masthead, however, are liable to some form of punishment or disciplinary action. There was not indication tonigbt what form this punishment might take.

Dr. F. Cyril James, principal and vice-chancellor of the university, said the committee's decision was reached "bearing mind that this is not the first occasion in recent months when complaints of this kind have been received regarding the Daily."

He added that Ayoub and all whose names appeared on the masthead of today's issue were on "conduct probation" pending the Students' Council report.

(According to Daily tradition, names appearing on the masthead of special faculty issues are those of students of the faculty who are responsible for the issue. Consequently, none of the regular masthead members of the Daily other than the edior-in-chief are under "conduct probation." Names of 22 Commerce students appear on the masthead of the issue, headed by Mike Rossy, who acted as editor-in-chief of the Commerce Daily.)

The Students' Council held a five-hour session today but released no information as to its deliberations. It was believed that its investigation had not yet been completed.

Harvard Crimson Has Army Paper

Cambridge, Mass., Feb. 21—A weekly newspaper catering exclusively to the 4,000 service men stationed at Harvard's eight training schools will be published by the Harvard Crimson, the editorial board of the paper announced last week.

The new paper, as yet unnamed, will be distributed free of charge and will contain news of the activities of the various schools on the Harvard campus.

A $25 war bond has been offered by the Crimson as a prize to the person submitting the best name for the paper. Contributions to its columns are expected from members of the Army Air Force, Marines, WAVES, Army Chaplains and other military personnel stationed at Harvard.

LAST CALL ISSUED TODAY FOR U. OF T. RATION BOOKS

Today is the last day on which students whose homes are out of Toronto and members of the staff of the university may obtain their No. 2 Consumer Ration Books at the distribution centres established on the University campus, as announced in The Varsity Thursday and Friday.

The new books contain six different sets of coupons. There are 13 coupons for tea or coffee, 13 for sugar, and 26 for butter. In addition there are 52 Spare "A," 13 Spare "B," and 26 Spare "C."

In Hart House where books are being issued to Hart House employees, about 75 of the staff of 100 had obtained their books by Friday night.

In the theatre, where out-of-town students obtain books, only about 200 had by then turned in their old books. Most of these were from resident students at Knox and Wycliffe, whose books were turned in as a group. Very few students had applied individually for new books.

In the Registrar's office at U.C., 27 books of the staff and their families were claimed on Friday.

In Simcoe Hall, about 50 books had been issued by Friday night. There was no rush and those distributing the books had not been at all busy.

At S.P.S. and in the Medical building about 100 books were called for. In neither place were they at all busy. Many more had been expected.

A very few application cards were incorrectly filled out and had to be returned. One young volunteer distributor, when questioned if any amusing incidents bad occurred, remarked, "Amusing? Oh, no; everyone seems so grim about ration books."

S.P.S. HAS DESIGNS ON OSHAWA

By Margaret Anderson

The Canadian Architectural Students from the four schools in Canada which give official diplomas in the architectural profession, namely McGill University, University of Toronto, University of Manitoba, and L'Ecole de Beaux Arts, displayed their work in the McGill Union Ballroom Thursday, Friday and Saturday. The Royal Architectural Institute of Canada sponsors the annual exhibition, which was held in Hart House in 1941, and they have arranged that the display will travel to all the schools involved to give the students an opportunity to study the work of other schools.

The project entered by the University of Toronto is the work of the Fifth Year S.P.S. students under the supervision of Professor E. R. Arthur who is representing Toronto at the Institute meeting. This year the project consists of a series of three maps of the city of Oshawa; these maps show respectively the existing plan of Oshawa, the suggestions for the future growth and improvement, and lastly, the development of recreational facilities in and about the city.

J. A. Murray, a fifth year student who did a great deal of work on the blueprints, explained that Oshawa was chosen because it has a very poor layout and many structural problems, although it has compensations in its picturesque location. Oshawa is a typical city with many problems similar to those of neighbouring towns. The C.N.R. runs through the middde of it almost along the main street; the Queen Elizabeth Highway completely passes by the city, and there must be access to the highway from Oshawa; the students suggested that the ravine, with its small stream which cuts through the city and is being used as a city dump, be cleaned and made into a park spine leading to the lake; the new plan zones the industries and places the public buildings and schools more conveniently, improving the present jumbled layout; the streets need widening; and the small air-field and harbour which may become very important because of the extensive air-travel and the dredging of the St. Lawrence, must be given space for expansion. The concept of the "green belt" has been used in the plans for the improved Oshawa.

The town-planners do not want their models to become a straggling city with innumerable suburbs, so the town has been limited to 50,000 people and surrounded by a periphery road beyond which may be found green fields and farming lands; so Oshawa forms a nucleus in an area of country fields. All these ideas are incorporated in the large maps of the city.

Several Toronto students whose hometown is Oshawa have already inspected the maps with a great deal of interest, and an invitation has been extended to all those who are interested to come and see them as soon as they return from their travels with the other displays from the Institute Exhibition. Any one of the obliging Fifth Year students will be glad to explain the project which is located on the third floor in the north-west corner of S.P.S. In their fifth year these students are taught nothing but town-planning, in anticipation of the reconstruction period which is bound to come after the war. Canada has very few town-planners and the present students are confident that their training will enable them to help give Canada more beatiful, and more conveniently arranged cities and towns in the post-war period.

The Daily Suspended

Jarring news from Montreal reached The Varsity Friday night when we learned that publication of The McGill Daily had been suspended pending investigation of circumstances surrounding the appearance Friday of a special "Commerce Issue" of that newspaper.

When a copy of Friday's issue of The Daily arrived the following day, it did not require minute examination to decide that McGill University authorities had exercised excellent judgment in taking rapid and vigorous steps to halt publication. The "Commerce Issue" is undoubtedly in extremely poor taste. Its fake news stories are in some cases suggestive; very few are in the least amusing. It was a very bad joke indeed.

But it is worse than a mere bad joke. It is a damaging blow to the reputation for integrity of every college newspaper in Canada. Our publications serve in large measure as a liaison between the universities, and the metropolitan press and general public. They are read by parents and advertisers; they are frequently quoted by the major newspapers. At any time—but especially in days when general sentiment is certainly not unanimously friendly towards universities—the collegiate press should be viligant to uphold its journalistic honour. And also, surely, in common decency to their regular readers, collegiate newspapers should refrain from the dessemination of filth.

The Varsity learned its bitter lesson in this connection in the "Jazz Issue" era which closed with few regrets following Caput action in March, 1937. Other Canadian college newspapers have, to a greater or less extent, been careful to avoid the pitfall into which The Daily has fallen. Particularly in the recent war years have the newspapers of Canadian universities exercised caution in their duty of self-censorship.

And now The Daily—one of the most illustrious of the coterie of newspapers published by Canadian university students—has fallen victim to rightfully-indignant officialdom. We do not wish to appear unduly callous to the fate of a fallen comrade in our condemnation of The Daily. Formerly a great organ of student opinion, the Daily—we are confident—will win again for itself its old reputation of sound journalism. But we do want to make our present stand with regard to The Daily's plight abundantly clear: it is our hope that careless thinkers will realize that The Varsity—and in all probability, other members of the Canadian University Press—will neither endorse nor condone such a lack of journalistic ethics as The Daily has manifested.

The Princetonian Retires

Another suspension casualty in the field of college daily journalism, and this a regrettable but unavoidable one, is The Daily Princetonian, which published its final issue for the duration of the war on February 6, forced to stop publication temporarily as a direct result of the call to service of a large number of the present active board members of the paper. The Princetonian chairman and managing editors reported their decision after long consultation with University officers and members of the news and business Board of the paper, when it was decided that a skeleton staff would be unable to continue either adequate news coverage or maintain solvency of finances under the pressure of increased academic responsibilities.

War emergency has once before brought the temporary suspension of the "Prince" when in 1917-18 the depleted staff could not undertake to continue the paper according to its usual high standards. And now, as then, provisions are being made for organizing the "Prince" on its pre-war basis as soon as Princeton University returns to its regular peacetime schedule.

The loss of Princeton's daily newspaper will not mean the complete loss of day-to-day news, since a new publication, to be known as The Princeton Bulletin, is already being issued three times a week by the University. The new news sheet will carry official notices and war statements until such time as The Daily Princetonian resumes publication.

The "Prince" is not the first of the United States collegiate newspapers to be swept aside momentarily by the tide of war. The Herald, publication of Brown University, printed its last issue in January. The Harvard Crimson no longer publishes a Saturday issue, and, because of the manpower shortage and reduction in advertising, twice a week publishes only a two-page paper. However, The Crimson is more than making up for the loss of its Saturday issue by publishing a free weekly paper exclusively by and for the 4,000 service men stationed at the University's eight training schools. No name has at yet been given to the paper, a new venture in college journalism, and a $25 war bond is being offered as a prize to the person submitting the best title for it.

While we cannot but feel sympathetic regret at the end, at least for the time being, of our confrere across the border, in the light of events it would seem that The Princetonian editors have taken the only course open to them, and have dispensed with the unessentials, however pleasant, in order to devote all their energies to the rigorous war-time program the United States government has laid down for them.

Artificial Respiration

The University of Toronto Athletic Association is currently offering to the men of the University—both students and staff—a three-period course on artificial respiration. The three periods—each of which will be repeated on successive days in order to fit into already crowded timetables of those who enrol—will be devoted to a lecture on resuscitation, a practice-session, and a practical and true-false test.

Time of the 45-minute periods is 4:45 p.m. and place is the Debates Room of Hart House. Today and tomorrow Mr. Wills MacLachlan, Ontario Hydro Commission expert on bringing life back through artificial respiration, will speak. Wednesday and Thursday will be practice periods and on Monday and Tuesday of next week examinations will be conducted, success in which will entitle candidates to the Royal Life Saving Society's Resuscitation Service Badge.

The course is compulsory for men enrolled in Life-Saving Courses. In addition, it will prove of extreme value to personnel of any of the three training groups on the campus. Proper application of artificial respiration methods is a skill in which every man in the fighting forces should be proficient.

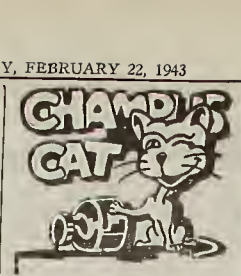
Unto The Hills

U.C. French Play

The University College French Club's production of Altitude 3,200 was, all things considered, definitely a success. The cast was generally stronger on its French than is usual in such productions; there were a few excellent individual performances, and most of the play was both understandable and entertaining.



Of course, in plays of this kind knowledge of the language comes before acting ability and several of the members of the cast were inevitably hampered in their acting by the struggle to keep command of their lines. Only a performer who is both experienced in acting and fluent in the language can improvise with any degree of success, so lapses in the lines are more noticeable than in an ordinary amateur production.

The play itself was completely satisfactory as long as it stuck to comedy although its serious aim is perhaps a trifle over-pretentious and out of the author's reach. It is the familiar character-play, in which the stage is crowded with as many contrasting types as the author can think of at the moment. The resulting action when they are all cooped up, 13 strong, on a lonely mountain peak is not hard to foreseast. The intellectual runs foul of the man of action, the timid souls are brought together, the hyper-romantic commits suicide, the coquette goes to work on every male in sight and the mocker mocks everyone and everything.

Outstanding performances were those of Klaus Goldschlag as the mocker—easily the most actable part of the lot—and of Barbara Chandler in the more difficult role of the hyper-romantic. Goldschlag, bubbling over with temperament and the most natural French speaker of the cast, held the audience whenever he was on the stage. Miss Chandler, graceful and restrained, gave a beautiful performance in the only serious female part of the play.

The stage-setting was amazingly good for the small Women's Union stage, and the pace was well maintained except for a slight but noticeable drag near the beginning and near the end of the play.

A Fable

Once there was an Editor of a college paper who was such a conscientious editor that he spent all his time editing and never went to lectures, and meanwhile a lot of nasty professors kept giving him nasty term marks while he wasn't looking and made him very unhappy.

Once there was an Editor of a college paper who was such a conscientious student that he spent all his time studying and attending lectures and meanwhile a lot of nasty students sneaked up while he wasn't looking and put a lot of nasty articles in his paper and made him very unhappy.

So in February they were both expelled and called up.

Toronto Art Gallery

The pictures displayed at the galleries just now are of unusual variety, and of a certain fascination. Featured are paintings by Australian artists of the last half-century. It is a veritable slice of Down Under. Recognizable are the torrid austerities of the Cordillera, the heat haze over the Great Plain, and the balding trunks of the eucalyptus groves. Lina has a jolly little jungle landscape, done in palette knife. A. C. Treeton's Prospector's Camp in the Woods is documentary art with a flair. Surrealism by Sainthill has sage humour. The Aborigine Arts is fun; look for Alice, the Goon.

Quite the big thing of the season is the exhibition of the art of Emily Carr, which nobly fills three galleries. The word is rhythm. The swirling cones and movement of her forest scenes outdoes Disney for grotesquerie. There is a savage strength and beauty about them that does little more than justice to the towering timber of British Columbia. The skyscapes in the rotunda, such as Upward Trend, have the quality of Northern Lights by day, if you can visualize that.

One whole gallery is devoted to the great totem pictures. This should prove good huting for the amateur anthropologist. Miss Carr, a gifted author in her own right (Klee Wyck and The Book of Small), has here recorded with masterly realism the sculptured dieties of the coastal tribes. Potlach Welcome and Indian House Interior are two examples of this gnre. They are all, however, worth more than passing scrutiny.

In the sketch room upstairs may be seen the work of the two French artists, Margaret Fainel, whose work reeks of Renoir, and Henry Eveleigh, who shows more than a tendency

Tid-bits from the College Papers

"There was a deathly silence as they waited for the provisional lieutenant to say something. He stood there, licking his lips, striving in vain to remember the number of the platoon. Finally he took the fatal plunge.

My platoon, he quavered, halt."

McGill Daily

"Music lovers were treated to a new type of concert last night in Hart House, and a singularly beautiful one it was, at that, as Madame Lubka Kolessa carried on despite the inconveniences of a blackout.

The music, literally, came out of the darkness, and the audience sat entranced.

'I will always remember this concert', she said afterwards. 'It was the strangest that I have ever played.'"

ASSUMPTION OUTPLAYS BLUE CAGERS 62-46

Local Boxers, OAC Holds, Win Saturday

By Phil Shackleton

Fans of Joan L. Sullivan and her like had the opportunity Saturday night to see some interesting assault games as O.A.C. edged Varsity in the wrestling, four matches to three and the Arbor Aevo boys got revenge in the boxing by taking three of the four bouts.

O.A.C. took the opening show in the wrestling division when Harley took the decision over Toronto's Bill Blum at 118 pounds. The second bout went the same way with a win by Conover over McColeman. Blondie Conover pulled a beautiful piece of outsquirming to put the prospective dentist on his back late in the bout and turn what might have been a split decision to a win for Guelph.

The 135-pound title was never in doubt from the out-set. Melvani of Varsity had Bob Merritt on the run throughout the contest and was awarded the win by decision. The tide ebbed back to the Guelph sands in the 145 weight division as Jack Nazir pinned Terry McDonough to the mat in short order and won by one fall.

Aaron Horowitz brought home Toronto's second win in the 155-pound fracas. Opponent Don McLean was handicapped by Aaron's greater height and Horwitz won by a decision. Arthurs won the 165 squirm for Toronto, vanquishing Lacy of Guelph.

The most entertaining of the wrestling frays was the nightcap for 175 pounders. Steve Shiuvas of O.A.C. won the bout with two falls over Henry. Steve proved the type of cauliflower connoiseur that the fans are praying for (and often prey on). Definitely the finest wrestler on the card, he was the master of the feint. While Henry made an attempt to protect a lunge at his ankles the O.A.C. hero would wind up with an affectionate grip about his neck.

Varsity supporters found considerably more to shout about during the boxing. First up was the 125 encounter in which Jimmy Lowe won over Moses by a knockout. Lowe came up with a crouch he hasn't used in his former bouts here and consistently came in under the guard of the taller Moses. Both men were content to stand back and box in rounds one and two but Lowe mixed it up in the third and Moses was thinking seriously of hitting the road to dreamland when he left the ring.

Paul Olynyk, former McGill boxer, took the 135-pound bout over Harry Burns. Paul was all over the O.A.C. man in the first round but Harry came back in the second seemingly refreshed and gave out as good as he took. Olynyk won by decision.

Since Varsity had no man to accept the 145 challenge two Guelph boxers staged an exhibition bout.

The third win for Toronto came in the 155-pound division when El Champo Tucker took a three-round decision over Foreman Lawrence. Tucker had the height and reach advantage over Lawrence and proceeded to use it. Lawrence went down once in the first and in the second but each time he was on his way up at the bell.

The one split-decision of the evening came in the 165 show with Mulholland of Varsity and Crossland of O.A.C. Mulholland semed able to absorb all the punishment that Crossland could dish out and still come out of the clinches looking untouched. Crossland had his innings in the first and second while Mulholland began landing his blows in the third. A half dozen long rights which landed mostly on Crossland's paw, balanced the points in the third and the bout was called a draw.

Blues Eke Win Over OAC Cagers

By a narrow three-point margin the Blues eked out a 38-35 triumph over the Red and White hoopsters from O.A.C. in the first half of last Saturday's basketball doubleheader. Vern Ladouceur was the game's top scorer with seven field goals, five of them in the last half. Tommy Waldon topped the Varsity point-getters with 12 well-earned and badly needed counter, but was closely followed by fellow-snipers Hank Goldstein, nine, and Tom Patterson with eight.

O.A.C. — Purnett (9), Eccles (2), Ladouceur (14) Long, Gilbart (4), Pazur, Storey, Hunt (4), Currie, Gow.

Varsity — Meschino (6), Goldstein (9), Patterson (8), Waldon (12), Booth (3).

The game was loosely played and at times reminiscent of better-class inter-faculty contests. The Red and White visitors, like Assumption in the second game, leaped to an early lead with a 10-2 margin over the home club. The Blues fought back with baskets by Joe Meschino, Tommy Waldon (2), and Hank Goldstein to tie it up.

Vern Ladouceur, who had opened the game's scoring in the first half, repeated with a vengeance as he sank three consecutive field goals for the Guelph squad to reopen play.

With two minutes to go, Varsity held a comfortable 36-27 margin, but Jack Purnett and Vern Ladouceur each tallied twice to a single reply from Hank Goldstein that brought the game to a close 38-35 finish.

Speaking of Sport

By Bud Smith

SHED A TEAR...

Well, as is our weekly habit at this time, we have to announce the sad fact that the Blues lost. We doubt if we are able to offer the usual consolation that they lost to a better team. Of course this is only partly true. Varsity's first-half team was certainly superior to the Assumption squad as may be demonstrated by the midway score of 28-19. But it seemed as if the Blues had an entirely different aggregation out there in the second half. Their physical appearance was the only point of similarity. We doubt that they were a coach's dream in the first half, but they were certainly a coach's nightmare in the second frame.

Individually the Blues were fairly good. The long shots they sank in the first few minutes were a joy to behold. when they tightened up later on and their long shots didn't click it was no longer a sight for anyone but an Assumption supporter to behold. Stu Scott finally came through with the type of ball he is capable of playing. His energetic rushes and sensational shooting formed one of the few bright spots in the second frame. Gord Wallace came up with another one of those performances which, in our opinion, makes him the outstanding player on the Blues.

The Assumption team showed quite a competent ball-hawk in the person of Mort Bunnell, who was high scorer for the evening with a total of 19 points. Aside from his scoring ability, Bunnell played a remarkably good game on the defensive and handled the ball quite well throughout. Assumption's real two-way player, however, was Hank Biassetti, a dynamic young man with a yearning for possesion of the ball—a yearning which he satisfied to a great extent.

The Assumption team obviously had a great deal more experience as a squad than had the Blues. They take their basketball quite seriously down in Windsor where most of the younsters cut their fangs on a basketball. And this constant practice, especially in team play, shows up. With more time for practice and more application we doubt if the Blues would falter as they have done in the past few contests.

ON THE OTHER HAND...

And now we come to the more plesant side of the Athletic picture. The Varsity Seconds managed to edge out O.A.C. in a rough and tumble contest. We were rather surprised that O.A.C. came so close frankly; guess the Aggies must have more on the ball than we thought. And the swimming team (thank gawd for the swimming team) came through in their usual fine style, disposing quite handily of the Air Force swim team. Also the assault came out quite favourably for the wearers of the Blue and White, due chiefly to Varsity's superiority in the boxing ring. O.A.C. had a slight margin in the wrestling but failed to take a single verdict in the boxing division.

A SMALL HAND FOR THE BAND...

And we must congratulate St. Mike's on staging a really successful Athletic Night, possibly the best of the current season. The Irish managed to bolster the dwindling attendance (right back to the point of inability to dance, in fact) and had a fine evening of entertainment lined up for those in attedance. Charlie Zwygard and his cohorts put on a truly amazing half-time exhibition of gymnastics. And the real live band added considerably to the enjoyment. The members of the band are to be commended for devoting their time (for free!) and we're sure that their efforts were appreciated.

Last Friday afternoon saw what will probably be the last of our preliminary hockey — unless the old weatherman turns around around and gets chilly-minded again. Varsity Stadium literally hummed with action as U.C. and St. Mike's battled to and fro until the gals in Red and White finished with a 6-0 victory over the Double Blue team.

Speaking of spring, it's really the ideal time to play the famous indoor sport of volleyball! So all you gals who was interested in it please notice these times when volleyball games are scheduled to be played this week up at the Lillian Massey gym.

Visiting Squad, Behind At Half Time, Beats Varsity In Last-Half Come-Back

By Roger Conant

Staging a come-back in the last half the visiting Assumption cage quintet walked all over the Blues at last Saturday's Athletic Night to take revenge for the defeat of last year by running up a 62-46 score. With practically the same team that fell before the 1942 edition of the Blues to the tune of 43-27, the Assumption squad, behind at half time, pulled out into the lead and ran away with the game with some terrific play-making that had the large St. Mike's crowd raising the rafters.

One of the side-shows of the contest was the play-making of Gene Durocher. The first-string Blues' man played for Assumption against Varsty last year, and indeed scored a point, so when his old team mates came to town they played for him all night and kept a very close watch over every movement. Consequently Durocher was hounded so much that he was able to sink only one field goal.

Visitors Start Fast

From the initial tip-off the visitors gave in indication of their ability. Gino Sovran scored within a few seconds on a lovely opening play. Mort Bunnell sank a free throw, then Sovran split the defence to hook another basket. Bunnell made the score seven as he capitalized on a lovely play. But then the Blues got into action and their long hours of Stevie's shooting practice paid off. Gordie Wallace, one of the best on the floor, broke the goose-egg, then Tettmar, Gibson and Wallace followed in succession. Wade collected a free point and Wallace and Biasettie returned scores. Thus at the quarter mark the count was knotted 10-10.

The Blues Get Going

Until the half the game was controlled by Varsity and it looked like it was in the bag. Captain Tettmar netted a long toss and Stu Scott jumped one in. Biassetti loped a long one but Gordie Wallace returned it. Bunnell netted a free point and Tettmar reciprocated. Joe Mechino joined the Blue line-up and netted a long looping toss. Wallace got wto out of two free throws. Bunnell jumped a score then long Don Gibson worked up the floor all by himself and netted a push-up. Bunnell scored a jump and Mechino and Scott netted a couple of long ones to end the half, 19-28.

On Comes the Steam

It was tight ball with no score for a good two minutes. Bunnell's score was returned by Tettmar and soon afterwards the Varsity captain was evicted for a surfeit of fouls. Then Lally, Wade and Biassetti garnered five points to make it 26-30 with 16 minutes to play. Sovran and Bunnell played the corner and tied the game up and in another minute surged past the faltering Blues with some shooting by Hank Lally and Hank Biassetti. The Blues got in the groove again and collected eight straight points at the hands of Scott, Thomson, Durocher and Scott. Biassetti notched a counter to make the score 38139 with a quarter to go.

Poor Blues

From there in it was plain massacre —Assumption chucked in 24 points while the Blue could ony get seven. Varsity was outplayed, outrun, outlucked, but not outfought for the last 10 minutes. In quick succession Bunnell, Lally, Bunnell, Lally and Wade collected points before Stu Scott broke the ice for the homsters. Then they got going again and Lally, Sovran, Sovran, Bunnell, Lally and Scorgie baskets were racked up. With two minutes left it was a little better ball and Murray Thomson got a jump shot, Stu Scott a free throw and Hank Goldstein a corner before the final horn.

Game ended with Assumption shooting to add to the 62-46 total.

Assumption — Bunnell (19), Sovran (10), Kirchoss, Wade (5), Kavanaugh, Lally (13), McDonald, Biassetti (12), Scorgie (3).

Varsity — Wallace (10), Goldstein (2), Durocher (2), Booth, Gibson (4), Meschino (5), Tettmar (7), Waldon, Scott (11), Patterson, Thomson (5).

Appallinger and appallinger, that's what women are getting to be. Not only are they perverse creatures generally, but we have learned recently that in particular they are no longer susceptible to the blandishments of old-school diplomacy.
Here is a case in point. A chum of ours is at present on very sad terms with one of his little cupcake friends on account she recently remarks in some despair, "Golly, I sure gotta wash my hair tomorrow!" To which he replies with utmost suavity, "Oh, no, you don't really. Why, it looks as though it had just been washed." And she got mad. Goodness me!

The situation down at Yale, it is said, leaves much to be desired, and we recently heard of one private situation down there which is very sad indeed. The private concerned is one in the Army Air Force who is stationed at Yale. So this lad does his duty, walking his post in a soldierly if somewhat glum manner. A kindly Yale man noticed the down-in-the-mouth aspect of the trainee and asked him why so sad? "Oh," replied the soldier, "I volunteered to fight for my country, to do something worth-while on active duty. I had four years in college," he added, "at Harvard, and here I am guarding the Yale campus!" THIS IS WORTH FIGHTING FOR?

Tomorrow there'll be a hither with Elizabeth Serson, Assistant Women's News Editor. Liz is not only a wide-awake newspaper man, a solid citizen and one of the least appalling of women. She is also the babe, who, when we were both cub-reporters, taugh us the Conga. We know you'll get a kick out of Liz.

Here's a couple of items we've been itching to get off for some time. The First concerns a prof down around S.P.S. who paused in the middle of a lecture to complain of the cold weather and observe, "You know, I always thought I was a he-man, but I find that I have to wear long red underwear this year. Excuse me a moment," and with that he goes into an ecstatic routine of scratching.

The other item is an equally ticklish on concerning that old problem of eating crackers in bed. Now, experience has shown that some people like it and don't mind the inevitable consequence which is crumbs. But some people don't like these consequences and the indulgence in such sleepytime suppers has landed many a marriage and such like on its uppers. But now the crowning point in the perpetration of such social offences has been reached. An organization on this campus make it possible to EAT CRACKERS IN SOMEONE ELSE'S BED BY REMOTE CONTROL.
This organization is known as The University of Toronto Library and is located in a building on the east side of the campus. We discovered this new service the other evening when sleep seemed afar off and we decided to read ourself into the arms of Morpheus. So we cracked a book over which someone had recently cracked a cracker, and crumbs! Whaddaya know—CRUMBS. By the millions they tumbled out of the well-conned tome and scattered into hiding in the for corners of the bed. Well, there's the bright side to every picture. Sleep, of course, became impossible, but at least we finished the book. Nevertheless, THIS SORT OF THING MUST STOP.

towards surrealism. His portraits, such as that of Dr. Kershman, demonstrate a welcome freedom from the restraining shackles of conventional colour and design. The Beach, with the dismembered bather in the foreground and the tightrope walker to the rear has the nightmarish quality the surrealists seem to strive for.
As I said, there is something here for everyone. You're bound to find one that'll interest you.

Harvard Professor Speaks On Insulin Treatment In Second Banting Lecture

Dr. E. J. Joslin Tells of Pre-Insulin Treatment of Diabetics; Once Used Arsenic and Cod Liver Oil

PRAISES DR. BEST'S WORK

The second Banting lecture was delivered yesterday afternoon in Convocation Hall by Dr. E. P. Joslin, Professor Emeritus of Clinical Medicine at Harvard. The lecture was preceded by a memorial prayer and tribute to Sir Frederick Banting read by President Cody.

Dr. Joslin began his address by stating that today a real diabetic patient is seldom seen, but that these are now "transformed." He told the histories of several of his early patients back in 1893, when 27 per cent of the diabetics entering hospitals died. Doctors at that time treated the disease with every type of drug known, including a mixture of arsenic and cod lived oil.

Dr. Joslin said he was dissastified with the lack of scientific treatment being used so that he was compelled to find and set up a standard treatment for prolonging the life of diabetics. He discovered that the use of alkalis for coma would have to be given up and that morphine and ether were fatal to diabetics. Then he and a colleague realized the use of "fasting" as a treatment. "We literally starved people to make them live," Dr. Joslin declared.

The speaker then told of the grim years leading up to 1922 and asserted that no words but those of the Bible could describe the wonder of Banting's discovery. Sir Frederick Banting and his work could only be described in the words of Ezekiel, "Come from the four winds, O breath, and breathe upon the dead that they may live.'

After visiting Toronto in 1922, Dr. Joslin gave the limited supply of insulin to his severest cases, who are still alive today. He praised the work of Dr. Best, who, he charged, had changed the position of the medical students from student to investigator. Dr. Joslin also refuted the erroneous report that royalties from the discovery of insulin had been received by this university or by any individual connected with it.

Dr. Joslin spoke briefly of the future of diabetics saying, "I wish to see diabetics die healthy." He considers that diabetics are more intelligent than the average and more aware than other patients of their responsibility in their treatment. He hopes to see treatment and diabetic educative clinics established in large centres. Dr. Joslin ended by stressing the responsibility which finally rests with the doctors whose "army of 108,000 are defeated if their leadership fails."

May Cancel Hart House Elections

Concern Felt Over Slowness of Nominations; Only Five Made So Far; Deadline Is Wednesday at 6 p.m.

OLD MEMBERS MAY SERVE

There have been only five nominations to date for the Hart House elections which will take place this year on Wednesday, March 3. Closing date for nominations is 6 p.m. on Wednesday, Feb. 24.

Concern over the slowness of the nominations was expressed yesterday by E. A. Wilkinson, assistant secretary of Hart House. He said it would be a pity if there were insufficient nominees to hold an election. Should this be the case it would be necessary to appoint men to carry on the work along with the former members who will be carried over as a nucleus from last year's committee, he said.

On the other hand, if there were just enuogh nominees to fill a committees, probably all of these would be accepted, so that if most of them were from the same faculty or college, it would result in an extremely unfair representation, he said.

Socialism Subject Of Vic Debate

"Resolved, that this house regrets the intrustion of a socialist party into Canadian politics," will be the topic of the fifth session this year of the Victoria College Debating Parliament when it assembles in Alumni Hall tomorrow night at 8 p.m.

Commenting on the debate, Prime Minister John Dales explained, "It has been our intention to have a straight, political debate for some time now. And we hope that this topic will provide the opportunity for a real, old-fashioned policital wrangle. I'd like to invite especially all members of the Liberal, Conservative and C.C.F. parties to be present."

Upholding the affirmative, Glen Tennant and Marg White will try to prove that the house has reason to fear the penetration of a socialist party into Canadian politics.

"I might even say," stated Tennant, "that the government views such a movement with alarm."

Speaking for the negative, Sylvia Boorman and Paul Fox will attempt to justify the entrance of socialism as a salutary movement.

"We view socialism as progressive, and as inevitable too, for that matter. The trend in recent times has certainly been away from the old-line parties," explained Fox.

Parliament will assemble at 8:00 p.m. in Alumni Hall.

● let's go places

In "Cat People" we have the old routine of a person who is apparently normal but who insists on turning into an evil animal on the slightest provocation. In this case it is Simone Simon who, mind you, is not a bad little kitten. But personally we can't work up much enthusiasm for this type of picture unless Bob Hope is in it and he isn't. To enjoy this picture take your own kitten with you.

MIDTOWN HORROR SHOW

In the other epic we find Boris Karloff and Peter Lorre trying to emulate the performance of those two "dear old ladies" from Arsenic and Old Lace and at the same time dragging in some of the most moronic routines you ever saw. Slapsie Maxie Rosenbloom restored our good nature.

NEWSFRONTS

Wallaceburg — Police used tear-gas bombs and riot sticks on striking employees of Dominion Glass Company yesterday. Action prompted by the pickets' alleged refusal to leave premises.

London—British submarines sank two axis supply ships, damaged three others in the Mediterranean.

Algiers — German infantry stabbing heavily at American base of Tebessa through Kasserine Pass.

Ration Books Supplied To Staff, Many Residents

Although lengthy lines were observed in front of ration book distributing centres throughout the city, there was no noticeable last minute rush in those centres that had been set up in the University for the convenience of out-of-town, non-faculty students, and the staff, yesterday, the last day on which the books could be obtained here.

Figures now available indicate that many of the resident students obtained their books through their families at home. A total of approximately 1,100 books were issued to the students and staff in Hart House Theatre where the main University centre had been set up. It had been estimated that a possible maximum of 2,500 books might have been drawn.

"There was no noticeable rush today," said Miss A. E. M. Parkes, Acting General-Secretary of the Students' Administrative Council, who was in charge of the centre. "We were pleased to see that the vast majority of the students had complied with instructions and had their cards properly filled out before coming in. It helped to simplify matters greatly."

Not quite 100 books were issued by the registrar of University College. Things were a little rushed there yesterday, the last day, for many of the staff were sick and unable to work, and students were also filling out examination applications at the same time. The books were distributed to staff members and resident students at 73 St. George St.

"Many of the students had gotten their books through their families," stated Mr. McAndrew, the Registrar. Books were also issue to the resident co-eds, but complete returns are not yet available.

Two hundred and fifty ration books were distributed to staff members at the Registrar's office in Simcoe Hall, and about 100 at the Medicine Building. Books were also distributed in the Engineering Building.

At the University Press, about 200 were given out to employees and their families.

Resident students in all the other colleges are getting their books from their college registrar. Figures on this are not yet available.

These centres were set up in the University as a convenience for students and staff to enable them to obtain their ration books with a minimum of time wasted. The centre in Hart House was designed for out-of-town students for whom no provisions had been made in their own faculties. The other centres were for staff only. All students living in residence were cared for by their own registrars.

Irish Take First Setback As School Wins 6-5

Despite a four-goal effort by Morrison, St. Mike's hard skating outfit came out on the wrong end of a 6-5 score in their first meeting with Sr. School. Morrison bagged the first two Irish goals early in the first period. Don Hector assisted on the first and Audy Des Roches on the second. Douglas started things off for the Engineers on a pass from Maugham and within five minutes the score read 4-2 for S.P.S. Don Grosskurth and Hamilton rang up quick goals assisted by Workman and Maugham. From the face-off after the third School goal Jim Dickie lopped a lazy shot towards the St. Mike's goal Gregroise, who had a rough afternoon, fanned on it completely. Before half time, however, the across campus boys had tied it up at 4-4. Morrison got his third on a pass from Des Roches and Hector helped Des Roches to a score.

More misfortune was camping on Gregoire's doorstep as the second period opened. Don Grosskurth centred out from the corner of the rink and when trying to clear the St. Mike's tender deflected into his own net. Jim Dickie added further gloom to the picture as he put S.P.S. two in front on a solo effort. St. Mike's got within one goal of tying it up when Morrison slipped through for his fourth goal of the game but that was as far as they got. St. Mike's now share the first rung of the standings with U.C. who defeated Dents in the first game.

St. Mike's—Gregroise, Egan, Haydon, Pacobs, Des Roches, Hector, McKenzie, Gregson, Boland.

Sr. S.P.S. — Kellam, Grosskurth, Workman, Kelly, Douglas, Dickie, Maugham, Hamilton, Quittenton.

Mass Meeting Planned For Vic

The Victoria College Union executive yesterday announced a mass meeting of all Vic students to be held this coming Wednesday at 3:45 in the Victoria college chapel.

"Due to increased demands on the time of the students," Tom Nixon, president of the V.C.U., explained, "this is the first mass meeting of the year, so we expect a full turnout from the college. In other years we have had lots of action in these meetings and we are hoping the students will be just as enthusiastic this year."

The treasurer's report for the current year will be given, followed by a discussion of what to do with a $300 surplus at present on the books.

Several amendments to the constitution have been proposed with regard to the constitution of the Bob, the men's athletic union, the debating parliament and reserve fund regulations. These are to be discussed and decided upon by the students who are urged to bring their ideas along.

Meds to Hold Second At-Home

The second Medical At-Home of the academic year will be held tomorrow night, to keep pace with the accelerated graduation of medical students, dance committee members announced yesterday. The At-Home will take place in the Crystal Ballroom of the Royal York Hotel with Mart Kenney and his Western Gentlemen supplying the music. Dress will be informal, with the Fifth and Sixth Year medical students attending in uniform.

"We're particularly anxious that First Year Meds come to the dance," said Henry Barnett, V Meds, a committee member. "They've shown themselves to be diligent enough students, but their turnout at the fall At-Home was disappointing to say the least."

A feature of the dance will be the presentation of gifts at the door for a nominal fee.

Former Professor On Speaking Tour

Squadron Leader Gregory Vlastos, former Professor of Philosophy at Queen's University, will speak on Canada's fighting airmen overseas on Thursday afternoon at 4:45 in Room 43 of the Physics Building. Students and staff of the University are invited to attend the address.

Squadron Leader Vlastos is now on a speaking tour throughout Canada, having just returned from England where he spent three months on a special mission observing the men of the R.C.A.F. in action overseas.

Born in Constantinople of Greek-Scottish parentage, Vlastos' chief memories of the last war are of British planes raiding German battleships in dry-dock a scant three miles from his home. He attended an American college in Constantinople and later went to United States where he was ordained in the Congregational Church after graduating from Chicago Theological Seminary. From there he proceeded to Harvard, completing his Doctor of Philosophy degree in 1931. He was immediately taken in the staff of Queen's University as a lecturer. By 1940 he was Head of the Department of Philosophy.

After being selected by the Air Force for the special mission, Squadron Leader Vlastos' first assignment was to follow the airman in Canada through all phases of his training. His travels took him the length and breadth of the country; at each station he remained long enough to get a good inside view of the daily life of airmen and airwomen.

After this survey, Vlastos spent three months overseas visiting every type of station where Canadian airmen and officers serve. He saw Bomber and Fighting squadrons in action as well as R.C.A.F. personnel flying in Coastal Command, reconnaissance, and intruder squadrons. In addition he visited Radiolocator stations where hundreds of Canadian men are now serving.

New U.C. Premier Installed Friday

At a stormy session of the University College Parliament held in the Junior Common Room last Friday, business arising out of the reading of the minutes of the previous session on Feb. 5, took up the whole afternoon, and introduction of the resolution to continue after the war eeonomic control as it exists in Canada at the present time, was postponed until next Friday's session.

A motion introduced by the Leader of the Opposition, of non-confidence in the government in power, headed by Prime Minister Dennis Wrong, on the grounds of internal corruption and general incompetence was passed by a elose majority.

The Official Opposition, formerly known as the Independent Surrealist Party, then came into power, adopting the name of the National Democratic Socialist party. The Prime Minister and Chancellor of the Exchequer is the Rt. Hon. Geoff Johnson.

Hon. Don Rowat was acclaimed the new leader of the Official Opposition,

Alaskan Highway Is R.C.I. Topic

The "Alaska Highway" was the topic discussed at the weekly meeting of the Royal Canadian Institute on Saturday night by Mr. R. A. N. Johnston, Forester in charge of Aerial Surveys, Department of Lands and Forests of the Province of Ontario.

With the aid of lantern slides Mr. Johston began his talk by giving a brief sketch of the location of the road, with its base at Fort St. John, B.C., and extending for 1,600 miles through northern British Columbia and Yukon to Fairbanks, Alaska, its temporary destination. It runs east of the Rocky Mountains for considerable distance, and parallels the Canadian-Alaska airway.

The great Alcan Route, as its is sometimes called, was built and is controlled by the United States army, and at the present time is open only to military traffic. At first, work on the project moved slowly, but after Pearl Harbour the pace was quickened. In early March of 1942, operations began in earnest; the route was divided into four sections, and plans were set down for the building of a temporary army road as an access road to be constructed by civilian contractors. This plan was abandoned in August, however, and it was decided that the temporary military road would be the permanent Alaska Highway.

In June, R. M. Smith, the Deputy-Minister of the Department of Highways of Ontario and the speaker, R. A. N. Johnson, offered their services in this great undertaking and were assigned the task of the surveying and location of the southern sector of the road, from Fort St. John to Watson Lake, which sector was again divided into two working units with Fort Nelson the dividing point.

As a side-light on the effeiency of those in charge of the Alcan Project, Mr. Johnston related that he arrived at Fort St. John at 4:30 in the afternoon, and had been put to work in less than two hours.

The Right To Vote

Nominations for the various Hart House Committees close at 6 p.m. tomorrow, with the annual Elections slated for the following Wednesday. These Elections used to be gala House affairs with excitement running high as candidates and their backers fought for votes. Nowadays interest seems to be lagging—last year only 27 per cent of the men of the University voted, and only 56 candidates went to the polls. The Varsity hopes that interest may return to some extent this year, for the Hart House Elections give members a chance to assure themselves that the government of their House is representative as well as efficient. Thus we print below the regular annual editorial outlining duties encumbent upon members of the Committees. In past years this editorial was regularly written by Warden J. B. Bickersteth, who is now overseas serving as Director of Education for the Imperial Army. Today's editorial is based upon the one he wrote in 1940, brought up-to-date by Hart House officials.

The House Committee—

The House Committee are concerned with the general management and social activities of Hart House, including the annual All-University Fall Dance. They are responsible to the Board for seeing that the structure itself and all equipment are maintained in good repair. They deal with all matters that make for the comfort and convenience of members. The tuck shop, billiard room, barber shop and guest rooms come under their supervision. This committee is also directly concerned with the operation of the Great Hall, both as regards the daily meals served to members and the large number of special functions and dinners. The House Committee is represented on the Board of Directors of the University Settlement, and members of the Committee visit the Settlement regularly. They are also responsible for the management of the annual committee elections in March.

The Library Committee—

The Library Committee controls the library, being responsible for the purchase of all books, which include biography, novels, history and general literature. Its object is to build up and maintain what is rapidly becoming a first-rate collection of books chosen for leisure reading. This committee is making a valuable collection of private press books which are shown in a display cases. This committee also select the periodicals for the reading room.

The Music Committee—

The Music Committee supervises all the musical activities of the House, the chief of which are the series of eight Sunday Evening Concerts. The musicians of this city most generously make themselves responsible for these programs as friends of Hart House. The Committee arranged mid-day Sing Songs each Friday, which are a popular feature, and informal piano recitals by members are held from time to time.

The Art Committee—

The Art Committee arranges fortnightly exhibitions in the Art Gallery and monthly exhibitions in the Print Room. It organizes weekly art classes and informal discussions on art in the gallery. The arts and crafts room come under the supervision of this Committee, as do the purchase of prints and art books, and in conjunction with an Advisory Committee of Artists the purchase of pictures for Hart House.

The Camera Committee—

The Camera Committee is in general concerned with the encouragement of photography among members of Hart House. It controls the use of the camera quarters, the valuable equipment in these quarters, and the arrangement of exhibitions.

Squash Racquets Committee—

This committee controls the use of the squash courts, arranges individual tournaments, and is in touch with the intramural Squash Racquets Committee regarding the tournament arranged by that body. This committee also arranges matches between other clubs and Hart House.

Glee Club Committee—

This committee supervises the activities of the Glee Club, which includes the Christmas broadcast of carol singing in the Great Hall and the Sunday Evening Concert at the end of February. The club holds weekly and at times bi-weekly rehearsals.

The Graduate Committee—

The Graduate Committee is responsible for the social and athletic activities of senior members of Hart House (both faculty and graduate). The graduate dining-room and north common room come under their supervision. From time to time dinners are arranged, and in general the committee seeks to provide for the comfort of senior members. As regards athletics, it arranges gymnasium classes, revolver tournaments, and other activities.

The Hart House Ideal—

The ideal which should inspire the committees and all members of Hart House cannot be more nobly expressed than in the Founders' Prayer of Hart House, which is as follows:

"That Hart House, under the guidance of its Warden, may serve, in the generations to come, the highest interest of this University by drawing into a common fellowship the members of the several faculties, and by gathering into a true society the teacher and the student, the graduate and the undergraduate; further, that the members of Hart House may discover within its walls the true education that is to be found in good fellowship, in friendly disputation and debate, in the conversation of wise and earnest men, in music, pictures and the play, in the casual book, in sports and games and the mastery of the body; and lastly, that, just as in the days of war this House was devoted to the training in arms of the young soldier, so in the time of peace its halls may be dedicated to the task of arming youth with strength and suppleness of limb, with clarity of mind, and with a spirit of true religion and high endeavour."

Liturgical Recital

Dr. Healey Willan

The choir of the Church of St. Mary Magdalene presented last night, under the direction of Dr. Healey Willan, one of those splendid recitals for which that excellently-trained choir is noted. Throughout the whole recital, Dr. Willan was successful in obtaining, with a choir of 18 carefully-chosen singers, the effect of a mere quartet of voices in harmony. And it is impossible to describe the purity of tone with which they sing.

Lack of space prevents a more lengthy review. Highlights of the program were, for me, the Rachmaninoff Ave Maria, and the Gretchaninoff Cherubic Hymn, both of which were sung exquisitely. An interesting fact to note was that the two beautiful Willan compositions, a Missa Brevis, and the motet Very Bread, Good Shepherd, Tend Us, were completely in the form and spirit of the Gyrd, Bach, and other centuries-old music presented. A lovely Karg-Elert Chorale Prelude, and several Bach numbers, including an impressive dirge-like Chorat Prelude, rounded out the program.

These recitals (there are about four a year) are rare presentations of unusually pure music. It was gratifying to note that at least a smattering of university students in the crowd had been interested enough to attend this fine recital by such a magnificently-trained choir.

Varsity Reporter Eludes Warrant

In a pursuit that lasted over 10 minutes yesterday a process server wearing an unidentified Blue and Gold sweater chased one of The Varsity's most prolific sports writers, Bill Shacklebuster, for two miles before losing contact.

Several times the pursuer, in some quarters thought to be Ray Foolus, an ex-Blue harrier man, almost clapped the speedster on the shoulder. But Shacklebuster eluded the man for the whole two miles and finally lost the perspiring pursuer in the thick mists of a local shower-room.

"The law must take its course," Foolus declared after the chase. "I'll catch him next year."

The Young Idea

Canadian Chamber Music

Six young Canadian composers were represented at a Concert of Chamber Music at the Art Gallery last night. It was an exhilarating array of music, and speaks well for the training they have received at the Toronto Conservatory. The lively arts are no laggards.

The evening opened with a Suite for String Trio by Phyllis Gummer. Berul Sugarman, violinist, Robert Warburton, violist, and Joyce Sands, 'cellist, did fairly by this engaging essay in the chamber music idiom. The Andante achieved occasional coherence; the Scherzo was that only in tempo, being more lugubrious than vivace; the Prologue drew together the thematic material into a fairly convincing conclusion. The whole thing, however, was more smyphonic in concept than one would expect in a work of this genre.

Albert Steinberg, another violinist, joined the group, and we heard an Andante: Allegro Moderato by Robert Spergel, who is himself a talented young 'cellist. His interest in that instrument was apparent in that he gave Miss Sands the opening phrases. Of course, they were enunciated to perfection. The whole work showed a mature comprehension of quartet form, and gave promise of great things to come.

Godfrey Ridout's Moderato was the melodious finely-woven catity we have come to expect from his pen. Ever allergic to influences, I thought I detected a whiff or so of Delius. He couldn't do better.

The Paco adagio movement from a string quartet by John Weinzweig was performed with finesse, bringing out the rich texture of the harmonies and defining with clarity the original melodic line, while Louis Applebaum's Recitanda con sentimento belied its label with the

Good Indoor Track Conditions Foster Close Competition in One-Lap Relay Won By Six-Man S.P.S. Team

FAST JUNIOR EVENT

University College further clinched its position as the leading distance track college of this season as Phil Shackleton, winner previously of the half and the mile event, and Chuck Baxter swept to victories in the two mile Senior and Junior events yesterday. S.P.S. walked off with the six-man, one-lap relay to further its hold on the Toronto Cricket Club Cup.

With one of the best fields in the history of indoor track in Hart House, Shackleton had to fight all the way against practically every entrant. For the race was a see-saw affair with hardly six yards separating the pack for the first 18 laps of the gruelling event. Roy Foullis of School got the jump at the start, followed by Tom Barnet and Phil Shackleton.

By the half mark Roy Lorrimer had moved up into second place. The pace was terrific despite the distance and Barnett went out in front for a few laps. Then at the three-quarter mark Roy Foulis edged out of the pack and set an even more torrid pace. Barnett faded slightly but Lorrimer and Delaney started to move up and Shackleton sprinted the 18th lap to get first place. From then in the positions held and Shackleton, Foulis, Dorrimer, Delaney, Fordyce and Barnett crossed the tape in that order to make the two miles in 10 minutes and 13 seconds.

The Junior two-mile event was more wide-open. Of the 12 starters only five actually completed the long course. Seaborn of Trinity shot out into the lead from the gun. Immediately the pack began to spread out as the lack of condition began to take effect. Trinity's Kirkwood took over after a half dozen laps. Lawler of St. Mike's moved up into threatening position and Chuck Baxter began to creep up on the leaders. The winner kept this up and moved out in front with about six laps to go. To the end Wesson and Kirkwood gave the winner a struggle but Baxter had a lot left for the final sprint and broke the tape a good 50 yards in front with the time of 11.3.9. Kirkwood (Trin.), Rundle (Trin.), Johnston (U.C.), and Jackson (Trin.) were the finishers in that order.

The relay feet saw 10 teams of six men each. But the meet was cinched by School's fast showing of 1.51.5. The team consisted of Barson, Wally Brown, Frank Fordyce, Chuck McDonald, Verne Booth and Gord. Lorrimer. Trinity A with 1.56.2 made the next best showing with Wesson, Wakely, Aitcheson, Riley, Cudlip and Nash flying the Red and Black colours. St. Mike's got a third with 1.59 and U.C. came only one-tenth of a second behind.

St. Mike's, Vic Submerge Trinity, Jr. Med Mermen

In the St. Mike's v. Trinity water polo clash yesterday the Double Blue natators obtained a 2-0 victory. Manchini appeared to be the chief trouble-maker for the Anglicans and scored both goals of the rally.

The brand of polo was not what might be called classy, but both teams made up for it in enthusiasm. The first half was a close checking session in which both teams were held at bay. However, with less than a minute to play, Manchini broke loose, received a long pass from his defenceman, O'Connor, and fired a shot into the upper corner of the cage making the score 1-0 for the Bay Street boys at the end of the first half.

The Trinity squad came back into the last period with increased vigour in their strokes and managed to get many shots on the Gael cage but were denied any goals by the good playing of Savelli, the Irish tender. At the three-minute mark Manchini received a pass from O'Brien at centre and fired a long shot which increased the Geals' lead to two points.

St. Mike's—Savelli (Goal), Thompson, Agro, Manchini (2), O'Brien, Devlin, Bender, Wickes, O'Connor.

Trinity — Brookes (Goal), Fraser, Higgins, Mitchell, Gage, Thompson, Jeffery, Thwaites, Baillie.

Yesterday afternoon's water polo encounter between Vic I and Junior Meds resulted in a 3-0 victory in favour of the artsmen. This defeat lessens the Junior Medicos' chances of entering the close-at-hand finals and puts Vic in a position such that they can just get into the play-offs if they win their remaining matches, and if today's display is any criteria it looks as if they have a fighting chance.

The play started off with a bang, both teams fighting hard. The medical tankmen were forced to play cautiously against the ever-rushing Vic armada but were always on the alert for scoring chances. Crang opened the scoring after three minutes of play, by intercepting a pass in enemy waters, and then firing the ball past the bewildered Meds tender to put the Victorians in the lead.

After a rest and a switch of players the Red and Black entered the last half with more gusto, but just couldn't stem the tide of Crimson and Gold. A combination play on the part of the Victorians left Crang free to shoot again—and shoot he did—a fast shot into the wide open spaces of the confronting cage putting his team two in the lead. Seconds later the Vic team rushed again and scored. Morewood was credited for the goal, making the final score 3-0.

U.C. Bests Dentists 2-1

Following their usual tactics, U.C.'s first hockey team grabbed a 2-0 lead over Dents in the first period of their game yesterday afternoon and then settled down to outlast the dentists, 2-1. Kuryluk notched the first Red and White counter on passes from Dalt Nesbitt and Bill Wade. Jack Amell put the Royal Collegers two up on a pass from Jimmy Graham.

Half way through the second period Channell got one back for Dents on a solo effort. Dents had a few good chances to tie it up but fell short each time. U.C. had some royal opportunities to score but Bill Quigley in the Dents' net had horseshoes draped around him. As a result of the win and a subsequent loss by St. Mike's, U.C. are now tied for first place with the Double Blue, each having 10 points.

U.C.—Phoenix, Wade, Kuryluk, Nesbitt, Warren, Skinner, Furry, Whitely, Graham.

Dents — Quigley, Ferguson, Hambly, Schwartz, Castaldi, Channell, Sibbold, Blue, Leudi, Hart.

Speaking Of Sport

By Roger Conant

NOT NECESSARILY CABLE STITCH

Remember way back when we used to have inches and inches of S.O.S.—Gee—those were the days when there weren't big track and hockey stories to fill up page three and of course our friends the advertisers. So we may as well get into the topic under discussion at this meeting—and today we will talk about Sweaters. And who doesn't. But this instance is in regards to next Saturday's Athletic Night (and the final one it is). Well, anyway the committee—Meds in this case—are going to lay down the law that everybody shall wear sweaters at said Athletic Night. The orders of the day are that if you have a Varsity "T" don't be modest in flashing it before the admiring throng. If you aren't among the chosen few, wear your college letter. If you haven't had time to win this athletic trophy the next best thing is to sport the letter of the last school you attended. Then if you haven't won any athletic letter in your long career, the bare minimum is to wear a sweater with an emblazoned U. of T. crest (obtainable at your nearest Tuck Shop in six delicious flavours—unplug). If you're a co-ed, any old sweater will do.

The whole scheme is to make the event as colourful as possible and give the closing "A" Night an air of complete athletic informality. And this, in our humble opinion, is what should have been done at the start of the season and we hope that future Night committees will bear this idea in mind when they begin to organize their program.

let's go places

Student opinion will probably agree that Gene Tierney looks very luscious indeed in technicolour, and for this reason, and for the sake of several outstanding aerial shots, "Thunderbirds" is worth a visit. Preston Foster and John Sutton contest in a painfully gallant manner for the favours of the superdeluxe Miss Tierney throughout a completely corny plot, but it's not the story but the photography that counts in this little opus of war-pilots in training.

IMPERIAL "THUNDERBIRDS"

Added to the feature is an excellent short — "Little Isles of Freedom"—which, written by Dorothy Thompson and narrated by Charles Boyer, tells the story of the liberation of St. Pierre last winter by a de Gaullist naval force.—M.O'M.

The Sportswoman

By Betsy Gowan

The volleyball schedule got off to a good start yesterday afternoon up at Lillian Massey. Vic emerged victorious with the final score of 37-27 over U.C. to start the ball rolling. The service on both sides was quite good, all the more since in College Volleyball it is unassisted. At no time was there any large gap in the score—which shows that the services were handled quite well on the other side of the net and that the teams were fairly evenly matched.

Bryce and Chantler were outstanding for Vic—to name only two of the good players on the floor. Although, on the whole, the technique was such as will be greatly improved with practice, yet there were occasions when it was unusually effective for so early in the season. All this looks very promising indeed and we feel that now Volleyball and its energetic squads of eight has come into its own in an active and organized way.

In this game anything can happen—and yesterday there were tricky plays galore which were a lot of fun for both teams.

Two sets of finals—Swimming and Hockey—are being engaged in this week to top off the season.

Since the Swimming finals are to grace the coming Athletic Night, we are having the preliminaries in Hart House on Wednesday evening. All the contestants are requested to meet at the Hall Porter's Desk at 7:00 o'clock. The preliminary events will be ornamental and style swimming and diving. The races will be run off only on Saturday night.

Today at noon hour from 12-1, St. Hilda's and Vic will play their first final game at Varsity Stadium. This promises to be a very interesting and entertaining game, since both teams are good and are pretty evenly matched. It will be Vic's home game and Tom Jacob from St. Mike's will referee the tilt. Now all we need is a goodly number of spectators and we'll bet our Easter bonnet you will go away happy. Even if your team loses, there is still another game on Thursday and, obviously enough, both of these good squads will be out to carry away the laurels for their alma mater.

BUY the way . . .

Buy the way these type-lines say. Something useful, something gay! Something every co-ed may charge to Devoted Daddy . . who said women pay?

THERE WAS NO future in Fascist Italy for Canada's own opera star, James Rosselino. After the outbreak of war Rosselino's return was hailed by music critics as "One of the good things to have come to us as a result of the war." Rosselino's unique method of teaching voice is attracting an ever-growing circle of artists, inexperienced as well as of concert renown. Interesting theory is that anyone can sing, just a matter of swinging along on the right breathing technique. Super health build-up those breathing exercises; uncanny but true, can turn an ordinary speaking voice into something that sings. The studios are at 234 MacPherson Ave., MI 2598.

ECONOMY, and not an eyebrow lifted! When Creeds talk economy they mean economy, not pinch-pennying, but honest-to-goodness using your sense to save your dollars. Creeds have colossal respect for a good fur coat; they understand the selectivity, the craftsmanship and the price that go with one. Mr. Creed being a recognized connoisseur on fine furs cannot understand how anyone could be so wanton as to leave a good fur coat neglected through the heat and moth months. A pick-up call to Creeds Storage will take care of many a good fur coat till winter comes again. Creeds Storage Plant, you should know, is said to be the most efficient thing of its kind on the continent.

ANGELS WITH DIRTY FACES . . . you see 'm wherever you go. Those lovelies who think a dash of water in the morning is enough to keep complexions clean and bright. The skin breathes too, remember? And it inhales a goodly load of soft coal-smoke along with dust and dirt, especially around the mouth and nose where there is more circulation of air. It's a co-ed wise beyond the look in her eyes, who stays with her Du Barry Cleansing Cream . . . (sometimes when there's no time for a thorough going-over a dab here and there and a cleansing tissue rub does a quick clean-up between lectures, just to pinch-hit for the regular cleansing job at night.)

NEXT TIME YOU head south, chart a course for Vander Voorts . . . where there's a gay and gala collection of new Spring prints and pastels telling the story of Spring as brightly as anything at prices from 7.95 to 18.95 in tiny sizes as well as for the larger ones. Little "dressmaker" prints "date" dresses with an honest intention to flatter you, conservative navys and darks . . . Also you'll like the bit of dash in the new Spring coats, tailored velvet collars, the good home-spun look to the tweeds, dressy imported fabrics as well. Vander Voorts are at 93 Yonge, between King and Adelaide, first floor up. (If you're quick enough you may catch something on the sole rack of dresses at 5.00 to 8.88, better dresses reduced for a walk-away.)

FROM A SHOPPING ANGLE the U of T's original board of governors, though they may not have known it, did pretty well for its feminines by placing the campus close to what was to become one of the Dominion's finest shopping districts. The Seigncur Knitwear Shop, about five minutes' walk, is Canada's largest specialty shop devoted entirely to knitwear and sportswear . . . crowded this season with a grand assortment of the sportswear, knitwear and tweeds a college girl goes for in an emphatic way . . . those good British

FATE IS IRONICAL AND JUSTICE POETIC. One of the women's staff has recently been suffering from tender health, and it serves her right. What should happen after her writing a lengthy feature on the subject of colds rife on the campus, but down (—or up) she comes with a blue-ribbon one of her own. This might have been explained as coincidence had she not on recovering tempted the Fates by volunteering to perform the part of an "air-raid casualty" suffering from a broken jaw . . . for the next day she drops in on the way to the dentist with the whole left side of her face swollen up.

Our favourite nurses' aid story is about a little old lady in the Queen Elizabeth Hospital. She had a maxim she confidently applies on every possible occasion, expressing undying faith in the doctrine of Newton. It goes:

Bounce a baby in the air,
He will land anywhere.

This inevitably settles the problem.

One of our nurses' aid friends was taking care of another little old lady who was at least 80 years old. Thinking that her patient had reached the stage when people like you to ask about the number of years they have, and meaning nothing but well, our friend sweetly asked her how old she was. "That's a pretty nervy question!" the old lady snapped, eyes flashing.

Our friend has decided from now on to be very, very careful.

SHADES OF THE LAST BLACK-OUT. When you are assisting a sector warden during a blackout, one of the things you do is to phone the post wardens in the different buildings in your section to see that everyone is on duty. The formula you use goes, "This is Elena R. Doe, your sector warden, calling. Is your post manned?"

When rapidly repeated, this is a little odd-sounding, and reactions have been various. One gentleman, becoming irate after begging his interlocutor's pardon several times, finally exploded, "Madam, I don't know what on earth you mean, but either one or the other of us is CRAZY!"

Prompt reply of a fraternity house: "Is our post manned? It sure is, lady!"

The Community Needs course was visiting a day nursery and was given a chance to get practical experience by helping some three-year-olds take off and put away their out-door clothes. The technique is that by asking leading questions like, "Now where do you put your mitts?" you Guide the Child to Do Things for Himself.

The young man we are superintending appears minus one cubber, remarking phlegmatically that it is lost. Well, let's go and look for it, is our constructive suggestion, hoping that this is an approach to teaching Responsibility. "I lost it on the dinkdar," be explains explicitly.

Where did you say, we ask, not thinking we had heard right. "On the dinkdar," he insists.

We at least appeal to the superviser. Oh, he must mean the street-car, she says. Gee, it must be wonderful to know languages.

For those who like to speculate on the implied drama in over-heard remarks, here is one caught from the lips of a sweet young thing. "Of course, love is so ephemeral—" she remarked.

We told this to a friend of ours. "Oh, people make me more mad than anybody," she snorted.

An occupant of a women's residence was lately visited in the dead of night by a small, gray, bright-eyed, sharp-cared, long-tailed creature which ran out of the bed-covers when she snapped on the light. Her scream awoke her next-door neighbour who, running in, sleepily demanded, "What's the matter? Is it a man?"

"No, it's only a mouse," tearfully gasped the screamer.

We are a strong believer in the story with a Moral Application and cannot elose without one.

A young gentleman was attending a faculty reception given by a certain university for a visiting football team of which he was a member. Engaged in carefully splashing tea out of his cup into his saueer, he was happily startled by something delectable and feminine crossing his line of vision. In his verging-on-desperate frame of mind, he —we turn scarlet to type it—he softly whistled. (No, it wasn't a howl—this was a year ago.) She must have heard him too, because she glaneed a scornfull glance as she went past as quickly as the milling of the crowd allowed.

A few minutes later, re-resigned to doleful dumps, he was lined up with his mates "to meet the staff." Suddenly he stopped, paralyzed with horror. There, in the midst of the black-gowned dignitaries stood something DELECTABLE AND FEMININE. We draw a veil . . .

After intermission, the trio which started the program was augmented by Reginald Godden at the piano, and the group gave a triumphant reading of Barbara Pentland's Quartet. In the Andantino they educed the requisite suavity of tone, and gathering their forces with fine unity of purpose, brought the evening to a climax in the spirited Finale.

It must have been an inspiring experience for the composers, many of whom were among the audience. Mr. Ridouts is to be congratulated for his arrangement and presentation of such a program. I hope there will be more.

Volunteering Engineers In Graduating Classes To Receive Early Medicals

Dean Young, at Engineering Nominations, Outlined Imminent Activities of Selective Service Re Civil Employment

28 SCHOOLMEN NOMINATED

As a result of the declaration forms recently filled out by Science students, army medical examinations for graduating Engineering students will begin almost immediately for those who wish to volunteer as technical officers, Dean Young announced yesterday at the election meeting of the Engineering Society in Convocation Hall.

This in categories below "B" will be given permits to seek work in industry. A Selective Service officer will come to Toronto within the next week to issue permits to look for employment to students in the lower years as well as to the "below B" category men. After obtaining a permit, a student may look for work at one of the 2,800 opportunities listed on the sheets now posted in the Engineering Building, or any other firm. Students are strongly urged to find a job with a direct bearing on the prosecution of the war and preferably near their own city. After obtaining a job, he must take a letter of acceptance to the Selective Service Bureau to get permission to start work.

Regarding the declaration forms, the Dean stated that their purpose was to give the Wartime Bureau of Technical Personnel an idea how many trained technical men they could count on for the armed forces, and how many would be available for industry. There is little likelihood that the first, second and third years will be affected by their declarations since the aim of Selective Service is to build up a body af technically trained men to fill the needs of industry and the armed forces. Courses will not be interrupted unless national emergency demands.

If a student should wish to change his declaration form, he may do so by expressing his intentions in writing. Of course, if the Government sponsors any course taken during the summer, he will be expected to stay with it.

After the Dean's speech, candidates in the forthcoming School elections spoke to the gathering. The elections will be held on Thursday. The ballot-casting is traditionally preceded by sundry loud noises and a parade to dinner in Hart

A special rehearsal of the Glee Club will be held in the Music Room at 4:45 tonight in preparation for the Sunday Evening Concert. All members are required to attend.

Banting Exhibit Attracts Crowds

The Exhibition of the art of Sir Frederick Banting is well on its way to rival the public popularity of the Canadian Armed Forces Exhibition held last November, according to the Art Committee of Hart House.

Last fall the Committee recommended the special afternoon for women undergraduates to view the Armed Forces show—this was a new departure for the House. Last Friday afternoon the coeds were again invited to visit the gallery, and the response was again most gratifying.

Sunday afternoon was the second in the three Sundays when the public have been invited to view the Banting Exhibition. Due to the extreme temperature of the previous Sunday only about 250 people braved the weather. But last Sunday, there was a constant stream of people going through the Gallery—men and women of the armed forces, undergraduates, business people, friends of the late Sir Frederick. Lady Banting was present for most of the afternoon.

There will be one more open Sunday, Feb. 28. There are over 150 pictures in the Exhibition, which represents all the paintings, wood-carvings, and sketches which could be obtained in Canada.

A special book, printed at the Ryerson Press, which is one of the Canadian Artists series, has been written by Dr. A. Y. Jackson, on Banting the Artist. This book is well-illustrated, and contains a memoir written by Dr. F. W. W. Hipwell, a cousin of the artist.

Science Men To Be Given Army Courses

Kingston, Feb. 23—(CUP)—Training programs for ordnance, engineers, signals, artillery, navy and air force will be opened to all third year engineers at Queen's University, it was announced yesterday following a meeting of the University science staff with J. M. Dymond of the Wartime Bureau of Technical Personnel.

Mr. Dymond also informed the science staff that no science undergraduate may obtain summer work without the consent of the Minister of Labour; that the undergraduate must obtain a permit before looking for a position and that he must get another permit before he may accept the job.

(Similar regulations in regard to summer employment were made public at Varsity yesterday when Dean Young addressed the Engineering Society regarding the declaration forms recently filled out by science students.)

University To Honour Public Men

Field Marshal Sir John Dill, head of the British Military Mission to Washington and former chief of the British General Staff; Sumner Welles, United States Under-Secretary of State; Hon. J. L. Ralston, Federal Minister of National Defence, and Harold B. Butler, Minister of the British Embassy in Washington, will receive the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws at a special Convocation Friday afternoon, Feb. 26, at 3:00 p.m.

Field Marshal Dill, educated at R.M.C., Sandhurst, entered the army in 1901 and has served in three wars. During the war of 1914-18, his awards included the D.S.O., Croix de Guerre, Croix de Couronne, and the Belgian Croix de Guerre. He was Army Instructor at the Imperial Defence College from 1926-28, Director of Military Operations and Intelligence in the War Office from 1934-36, and Commanded the British Forces in Palestine in 1936 and 1937. From 1937-39 Field Marshal Dill was G.O.C.-in-C. Aldershot Command, and was the Commander of the 1st Army Corps in France, 1939-40. In 1940 he was appointed A.D.C. Gen. to the King and chief of the Imperial General Staff.

Sumner Welles, Under-Secretary of State of the United States of America since 1937, attended Harvard, and entered the diplomatic service as Secretary of the Embassy at Tokyo from 1915-17. He was a personal representative of the President to offer mediation in the Honduras revolution in 1924, and in the same year, was a delegate to the Central American Conference.

MASTHEAD MEETING

Victoria Holds Debate Tonight

In its second last session of the current year, the Victoria College Debating Parliament will tonight debate the pros and cons of "Resolved, that this house regrets the intrusion of a Socialist party into Canadian politics."

Prime Minister John Dales, whose government was returned to power at the most recent session of the Parliament, expressed enthusiasm with the choice of the topic. "I believe there's going to plenty of action," he stated, "I understand that the campus C.C.F. Club has cancelled its meeting scheduled for tonight and will attend our debate in full force. That bodes ill for my government, but well for the debate."

Leading the present administration's cohorts into battle, Glen Tennant and Marg Wbite expressed confidence in the victory of their side. "We're betting that the house will sustain the government in passing such a motion as this," they explained.

Supporting the negative, the Leader of the Opposition, Marg Dillon, and her two cabinet ministers, Sylvia Boorman and Paul Fox, all went on record as condemning the government for such a reactionary motion.

"It's very significant that the Leader of the Affirmative is the Minister of Finance in the present regime," said Miss Boorman.

An open invitation has been extended to all members of the university to attend this debate. The Prime Minister invited all "to come and bring their opinions."

McGill Students' Council Condemns Senate Action In Suspending The Daily

Ban Termed "Arbitrary" in Circular; Council Has Not Yet Named Those Responsible For Commerce Issue

OPEN MEETING THURSDAY

Montreal, Feb. 23 — (CUP) — The Students' Council of McGill University today released a circular condemning "arbitrary" action by the Senate of the University in ordering The McGill Daily to suspend publication following the appearance Friday of a special Commerce Issue.

Engineering, Arts, Commerce and Science undergraduate societies have passed resolutions to the same effect.

It is understood that there will be an open meeting of students here Thursday, which may be attended by Principal Cyril James, at which the Council viewpoint will be clarified.

The Students' Council has not yet named those personally responsible for the Friday issue of The Daily, contents of which were admitted by Editor-in-Chief Raymond Ayoub to have been "blatantly smutty." Also, the Council has not made recommendations regarding disciplinary action to be taken toward those who were responsible.

"The students are not quibbling over the quality of the Commerce Issue of The Daily," a student spokesman told the Canadian University Press tonight. "They admit it was sbady and that the editors are punishable. But they resent what they consider to be usurpation of the powers of the Students' Council by Principal James and the Senate. The whole system of student government at this University hinges on the outcome of what promises to be a bitter controversy."

Another student said that in his opinion Principal James' action in suspending The Daily had caused the University unnecessarily b a d publicity throughout the city of Montreal.

Since Friday, The Daily has not appeared. Today two small undergraduate papers were circulated on the campus, and it is believed that more will be printed tomorrow.

ARTS EXAMINATIONS

Arts students are reminded that applications for examination must be handed in before March 1. Forms are now available at the offices of the University and College Registrars.

Staff-Students Meet at Queen's

Kingston, Feb. 23—(CUP)—First in a series of Staff-Student gatherings, reported to have been widely praised by those who attended, was held recently at Queen's University.

Based on a program which, as outlined by the committee, aims to bring together in a spirit of old-fashioned informality, as large a proportion as possible of the members of the Arts Society, the discussion-groups, stimulated by the active presence of certain members of the Staff, are scheduled to cover faculty and society problems, with a view to promoting closer and more cordial Student-Staff relations.

Judging by the results of a recent campus-wide poll, it was ascertained by the committee in charge that 75 per cent of students interviews were cager to encourage relations between professor and students. It is further believed that inclusion of such topics as the position of the Arts Course in war-time, and freshman orientation, would be highly beneficial to all concerned, and might lead to important results.

Several more meetings, in which the predominant atmosphere is to be one of social relaxation, have been planned, before the last, which will be held about March 15, and it is hoped that individual invitations may be extended to every male Arts student.

Yale to Begin New Subjects

New Haven, Conn.—On the theory that the "diploma follows the flag," Yale University is embarking on a program of "Forcign Area Studies" to train experts in various fields in the language, history and customs of those parts of the world which may be occupied by the United Nations' forces as the war unfolds.

The courses will be open to economists, engineers, public health officers, social workers, government officials, business men and any others with a college degree whose precise talents would be valuable in re-building shattered nations after the war.

As tentatively outlined by Edgar S. Furniss, dean of the Graduate School, the training will be intensive and limited to those who may be assigned abroad during the war or afterward. Students will study a given section of the world for 12 weeks, although this period might be cut to six weeks in the case of those who had a fair grasp of the language.

A typical program of instruction would include one language course, one or more courses in history, customs, society, government and economics and collateral courses in international law and administration, economic and social reconstruction. If called on, the University is prepared to throw light on such diverse countries as Japan, Malaya, Arabia and the Middle East, China, Russia, Germany, France, Italy, Spain and Portugal.

Marg. Stock Elected As U.C. Moss Nominee

The graduating classes of U.C. yesterday elected Margaret Stock, IV General, as their candidate for the Moss Scholarship.

The 4T3 permanent executive was also elected with Don Rowat, President, Marg. Ham, Vice-President, Anna-Mirette Campbell, Secretary, and Gray Cowan as Treasurer.

Vic Theatre Competition To be Presented Mar. 17

The Victoria College Dramatic Society, undaunted by cancellation of the annual University Drama Festival after the closing of Hart House Theatre, will present an all-Vic competition on March 17, in the Alumni Hall Workshop Theatre.

Three plays will be entered to compete for awards to be given the winning director, the best actor and the best actress. Casting for all three plays will take place today in Alumni Hall from 1:00 to 3:00 p.m.

Dorothy Ley plans to present Anton Tchekov's "The Marriage Proposal." Ralph Hicklin and Jack Coleman will both do scenes from Shakespeare, Hicklin doing "Hamlet" and Coleman doing "Macbeth."

Tickets for non-members will go on sale next week.

Toronto Varsity Students Entertain Airmen During Week-End Leaves

Many of the Empire's airmen-in-training have spent week-end leaves this year at the homes of Varsity students who, in co-operation with the S.C.M., last fall agreed to entertain members of the R.A.F., R.A.A.F. and the R.C.A.F. now stationed at Camp Borden.

Flight Lt. Wilfred Butchard, chaplain of Camp Borden, asked students to make their homes a "home away from home" for his airmen. "I will send you the finest type of boy we have," he said.

Most of the airmen who have participated in this scheme this ycar are English, Australian or American but a few Canadians from distant provinces were also included. They are all in pilot training at Camp Borden and have no place to spend their week-ends as they have neither friends nor relatives in Toronto.

The S.C.M. committee in charge of the scheme declare the campaign a success but they still request more students to have an airman home for the week-end.

Phyllis Brisley, IV Household Economics, president of the committee, said. "Everyone is thrilled with the boys; they seem to be such a fine bunch and so easy to entertain. We had a boy who made himself very much at home. He just sat down in an easy chair with his pipe and listened to the opera."

The S.C.M. committee has a character sketch of each airman on the list and they try to send each one to people with similar interests. An unusual example is: "Interested in poetry (lyrical); an agnostic but interested in Christianity from a philosophical point of view; also likes studying human nature and psychoanalysis."

Ruth Audrew, IV Vic, who entertained an English airman at Christmas, says "You couldn't find a nicer boy. He was a university student and was very interested in our college activities and the co-educational system which is ratlier uncommon in England."

Marion Duncan remarked, "We had a model guest who fitted right into the family. He's been down twice now, and is crazy about our hockey games."

Students interested in entertaining an airman for a week-end are asked to sign the lists which are posted on bulletin boards of all the colleges.

Childish

More sorry news came out of McGill University last night when the CUP reported that the Students' Council had issued a circular "condemning 'arbitrary' action of the University in ordering The McGill Daily to suspend publication following the appearance Friday of a special Commerce Issue." It seems that certain of the students—and apparently among them must be controlling members of the Council—feel that Principal James and the Senate have usurped Council rights in ordering cessation of the activity of a Council publication pending certain investigations.

While The Varsity is not sufficiently acqainted with the McGill Students' Council's prerogatives to argue the constitutional merits of the case, one point in connection with it seems clear enough. The Commerce Issue was crude in the extreme; it was obviously necessary to ban it; and, since the Council was so inept as not to take this action itself, University authorities virtually had no other course but to take the step themselves. We will probably have more to say on this matter later in the week, when Council findings are published and students hold their "open meeting" Thursday; in the meantime we cannot help feeling that the students who are conducting the present agitation at McGill are acting in the best interests neither of themselves, the University nor The McGill Daily.

Who's Unhealthy

An editorial in a recent issue of The Manitoban hurls down a gauntlet of sorts to universities across Canada. Written by "one of the most dynamic individuals" in the University of Manitoba, it is given cautious and partial support by the editor. Under the heading, "Thank God We're Healthy," the writer makes sweeping charges of "sickness" among his colleagues across Canada, whom he says he has observed at first-hand.

Speaking of the alledgedly infirm students, the article says, "some were polished, cultured lions of society, some were in fraternities that were so interested in campus politics they completely looked after everything from the choice of prexy to every assistant business manager."

All About Toronto

Of the University of Toronto in particular, the writer says the following:

"The most striking part of the whole Toronto campus was the throngs of students crowding around the pool tables in their student union. They also had crowds of students in their beautiful dining halls, swimming pools and indoor tennis court. Toronto has more student spirit than we; it is strongly built around their 'million dollar monument to the sweat and blood of our Western farmer,' Massey's Hart House. We haven't the same type of mass product student spirit but even if we have to trade our type of student for theirs witb Hart House thrown in, I wouldn't take it."

Continuing along more general lines, the editorial points out that at the University of Manitoba a man does not need a tuxedo to debate and that ability rather than social background is the requirement of a Manitoba campus leader.

And finally: "What the University of Manitoba has tried to do is make itself of vital social significance to the community. Our campus has tried to integrate itself into the community and has not remained insular or isolated. The other campuses we have exist as in a vacuum, they are not vital, they are parasites upon the people."

Perhaps there is some danger of losing the significance of the writer's general argument in the welter of largely insupportable charges his article contains. The charges are possibly due largely to over-hasty and superficial examination of the colleges attacked, perhaps even partly to wishful thinking. There is no eastern Canadian university to our knowledge which is fraternity-ridden nor has there been any in the last four or five years over which our personal acquaintance with these universities extends. Campus leaders we have known at these universities have perhaps not always been the most able men for the job (and we doubt that even Manitoba's leaders are invariably their best men) but they were elected in a reasonably democratic manner and were not representative of any single social class.

Incomplete Picture

The writer's picture of the Toronto campus is also somewhat out of focus. Certainly the scenes described are all authentic (except that to our knowledge there is no tennis court, indoor or outdoor, available to most Toronto students) but we feel that the writer should have been given a more complete view of the campus. He should have gone to a meeting of the Arts and Letetrs Club, where a hundred-odd students gather weekly to discuss worth-while topics with visiting speakers; he might have taken in a debate in the informal surroundings of the Victoria Parliament or the Newman Club, or the even rowdier but frequently serious-minded atmosphere of the U.C. Parliament. He should have dropped in at the University Press in the early morning to hear conscientious editors discuss the handling of nationally important news stories. He should have watched the University gathering funds for the I.S.S. Drive and the Aid to Russia Fund with colourful campus activities. And if he found "mass product student spirit" on the campus, he found something that despairing student executives have been trying to drum up for years.

But aside from these relatively minor points, there is definitely one issue which divides a section of the University of Manitoba student body from the majority of students elsewhere in Canada and that is their relation with the outside. The Manitoba viewpoint seems to be that enrolment in a university automatically makes a student capable of contributing to the enlightenment of his fellow-men. In pursuit of this policy, The Manitoban recently sought to align U. of M. students behind a political party in a recent by-election and has generally taken considerable interest in local and national political problems, frequently printing opinions of a decidely controversial nature.

Two Schools of Thought

The opposing school of thought has the "unhealthy" belief that students' main purpose in coming to university is to learn—that they should be seen rather than heard during their university career and that they should refrain from expressing any opinions publicly until they have attained a certain maturity of thinking which is presumed to be the main product of university training.

We have purposely inserted a tinge of extremism into our interpretation of both theories, but on the whole, Eastern universities would tend to lean toward the latter. Certainly there is no place for complete isolationism of thought or expression on the campus, especially if the expression is that of individuals and does not seek to represent a general student viewpoint. There is no question that a large percentage of students could profitably broaden their interest in extracurricular affairs. But we believe there is also no place, in war or peacetime, for a group of students who attempt to educate their fellow-students and the general public before the dust has settled on their high-school diplomas. These students are missing a great deal of what their university has to offer them by proclaiming their opinions too soon; and the public does not tend to be grateful for their gratuitous advice. They would do better to resign themselves to a somewhat sequestered existence for three or four years which will pay dividens both to themselves and to the people whom they would benefit.

Doughty battlers for Great Britain,

L'ENVOI

After this discourse on history
We feel quite sure it's still a mystery.
We trust that though you're unenlightened
At any rate, your woes are brightened.

We wrote this stuff just to amuse you
And, incidentally, to confuse you,
And so, to each of you who read it,
We say we know we have succeeded.

If perchance we may have libelled
Public men in accents ribald
All we say is: grin and bear it—
And also: if the shoe fits, wear it.

Meds Relay Team Take First Place

In the second night of this week's track events, Meds turned up with a six-man relay team which knocked four-tenths of a second off the fastest time turned in at Monday's get-together. Meds were out for School blood and were satisfied when their team of Ford, Virtue, Fyfe, Lewis, Wilford and Fielding burned the six laps in 1:51.1, nosing out the Engineers' sextet which set a mark of 1:51.5 on the opening night.

Trinity, which seems to have an inexhaustible supply of track material, produced another team which ran as their G squad but it failed to meet the marks set previously. This team brought the relay team total to 12, which means that 72 men have run this event in the last two nights. According to Hec, this is just about the biggest turn-out in or out of the books.

There were no further entrants for the two mile events so yesterday's results still stand.

The standing score of the indoor track show finds S.P.S. so far ahead as to be untouchable. The Engineers have 54¼ points, quite a lead on their closest rivals from U.C. who have 32½. Trinity follows closely with 25, Meds next with 21¾, while Wycliffe runs fifth with 7¼ and St. Mike's sixth with 3¼.

Three events remain on the card for this year. Next week brings up the feature mile relay, four men to run a quarter each, and the following week has the 50-yard low hurdles and the standing broad jump.

Jr. S.P.S. Splashers Trim Big Brothers

In yesterday's water polo conflict the cellar-dwelling Sr. S.P.S. squad mournfully submitted to a 3-0 white-washing from the close checking Junior School sextet, while Vic II presented S.P.S. III with a win by defaulting their scheduled struggle.

The Junior squad left no room for doubt as to the final outcome of the issue, despite the heroic attempts of J. Northwood, J. Dempster and J. Iglesias. The incessive bombardment of unerring shots from F. Sansom and J. Brace kept the Senior goal tender, Eastwood, anxiously alert at all times. Although Sansom, on an assist from Brace, was the only man to bulge the twine in the first canto, the ball was most consistently kept on the Seniors' door step.

In the second period the Seniors seemed to come forth with renewed vigour by dangerously threatening to regain an even standing, only to be frustrated by W. Brandt's miraculous save. After this the Juniors regained their usual form and began to systematically swamp the Seniors' net. J. Brace, with the aid of H. Kohl, was able to outguess Eastwood for the second tally of the game. Shortly before the final whistle, H. Spence, unassisted, bent the ropes on a long shot from centre to end the scoring session.

Jr. S.P.S.—F. Sansom (1), J. Brace (1), H. Kohl, Cornell, H. Spence (1), W. Brandt (goal), S. Parking.

Sr. S.P.S.—J. Iglesias, J. Northwood, J. Dempster, C. Eastwood (goal), B. Payne, E. Hill.

Speaking Of Sport

By Bill Nicholls

PLUCK FOR PUCK...

Naturalists say that a great number of ducks have remained north this winter and have survived. By the same token, the survival of the fittest, practically every faculty has backed a team into the spring play-offs which will be toppling over the ears of contestants in the short span of a week.

Beginning next Wednesday, March 3, the Jennings Cup play-offs will be rapped off, with a winner decided by March 12. The biggest tangle comes in Group I, where U.C. I and St. Mike's are tied with 10 points each in seven games, while Sr. S.P.S. have eight points for six games. All three teams will play-off in this group as in Group II (these were recognized by the standing committee as the strongest groups, and incidentally the largest). Groups III, IV and V, on the other hand, will declare one final play-off team. With five wins and no losses, Trinity will represent Group 3, and Wycliffe, with six points, has won Group V. Group IV is still a toss-up because S.P.S. V and Knox have each registered two wins and a loss.

The Engineers still have their five teams in the running. Jr. S.P.S. ran away with Group II with 10 points—S.P.S. II will decide the second or third place in that Group with Sr. Meds. Thus it all adds up that for the nine play-off spots available there are only 10 teams who can qualify.

DROOL FROM POOL...

Down by the blue aurora of Hart House Pool, the statisticians and compilers of figures have a much less complicated play-off promise to present. Sr. Meds has paced Group I with six wins in the same number of starts. The second spot will go to Vic I or Jr. Meds, depending on how the final games of the schedule turn out. U.C. has clinched Group II with four wins. In the home stretch it looks like S.P.S. III will take the leadership, but on paper Jr. Meds B team are only trailing by two points.

THE VARSITY A.C. AGAIN...

With the completion of the regular interfaculty sports league, it's coming to appear that students will not be satisfied with the lapse in their activity. That's probably the reason for the formation of a number of new leagues, with physical or non-physical decisions, in the offing.

The first one that merits attention is the basketball game projected for the laurels of The Varsity A.C. Although the sports and news staff have been raked by grape, and various members are strewn all over the office, or have been forced to retire, the surviving physical wrecks are planning a fierce tussle for this honour. All advance reports indicate that the newsmen's attack will be gingered by Editor-in-Chief Shamus O'Malley, tall streak and centre pivot man. It is reported that the Editor turned down an offer to play with the Varsity Blues, due to the pressure of academic work. Sportsed Rog Conant is mustering his team from the worn-out ranks of his staff, but promises a fine showing. A special blackboard drill, and otherwise sedentary and secret practice have been mooted for The Varsity office Friday noon-hour.

"Everybody Has Won . . . . . So All Must Have Prizes"

By Phil Shackleton

Did you ever pause half way up the west stairs in Hart House and steal a moment to gape at the show case crammed with trophies and such that are awarded to our fine athletes?

If you haven't noticed (or even if you have) herein lies the dope on the case in question.

More than 30 cups and trophies of sundry shapes and sizes may be seen in this male animal's sanctuary, awards ranging from a world's championship hockey trophy to photographic and chess club prizes. The hockey trophy mentioned is the Alympic Cup inscribed "Championnat due Fonde de Hockey sur Glace" and was brought to Toronto by the Varsity Alumni team who won the award at the Olympics of 1928 held at St. Moritz, Switzerland.

This, however, is not the only international cup snaffled by Varsity puckmen of golden athletic era. In the same case is the Governor's Trophy presented by Governor Smith of New York State for international intercollegiate hockey which was won by Varsity in 1926.

More hockey plunder is boasted of in the form of the Weston Trophy presented to the Big Four Junior Hockey Champions in 1927 by George Weston. And while still on the hockey subject, there's a women's trophy awarded for ladies' intercollegiate hockey and known as the Beattie Ramsay Cup. It was presented by the undergrads of S.P.S. of the 1921-22 season and won by Varsity in 1933-34.

The Jimmy Douglas Memorial Trophy, emblematic of intercollegiate junior rugby championship, was last won by Varsity in 1934 and presented by the grads and undergrads of Toronto in 1929.

The last vestige of intercollegiate golf is a tall trophy known as the Ruttan Cup. It was presented by Dr. R. F. Ruttan of McGill in 1923, to be awarded to the top team in Canadian university golf.

BASEBALL Standing Committee Meeting Today at 1.00

Women Pucksters In Torrid Tie Game

In the opening game of the women's hockey finals yesterday Vic and St. Hilda's battled to a scoreless tie. This was the first of a two-game series, total points to decide the winning team. The second game will be on Thursday at 4.

The first period was very slow—in fact it was only in the last five minutes of play that either team showed the form which they have displayed on former occasions. Shortly after the face-off Shirley Pearce of Vic made a rush, but it was stopped by the Saints' defence. This was followed by a return rush by Marg. Fletcher, taking one of the five shots on Stewart, the Vic goalie, which she safely stopped. Play continued at the same even clip. Eunson of Vic and Fellowes of St. Hilda's both missing chances at scoring.

Things were a little faster in the second frame, but it was still up and back with little scrambling in the corners. A shot by Mary Allen of Vic just missed the corner. The period ended with a pile-up in the Vic net.

Both teams came back with terrific force in the last period. Hungerford of the Saints and Billie Bain of Vic both sailed up the ice alone in close succession, but failed to break the tie. Judging by the pace at the end, if time had been longer there would have been some score. Eunson, Pearse and Bain all played well for Vic, while Helen Patrick, on the defence line, played a bang-up game. The Fletcher twins and Connie Fellowes were the best for the Saints. Stewart in the Vic net and Stark in the Saints turned in brilliant performances.

The good news for the lasses who have been batting the little bird around this term (when they could get them) is that there will be a Badminton tournament. The President of the club has been able to scare up a few birds, thanks to those who heeded our plea a few days back. Plans are that the tournament will get under way on Friday at 3:30 down Margaret Eaton way. A team will consist of two singles' players and a doubles' pair. So far there have been entries from Vic, U.C., St. Mike's, St. Hilda's, Physics., and the School of Nursing. The draw will be in Friday's paper—So keep your eyes open. Meanmile anyone in U.C. interested in playing is asked to drop in at Margaret Eaton this afternoon at 2:30 to try out for the team. We are very fortunate to be having a tournament at all, what with restrictions and all, so let's have a good response so the competition will be really keen. Happy hitting, gals!

Scanning the rest of the sports, we remind you that the swimming preliminaries are tonight at 7:00 in Hart House. Everyone on time, please. Two Volleyball games are also on the sport card. At 4:00 Vic plays St. Hilda's at Lillian Massey and at 5:00 U.C. will meet P.H.E.

Hockey is coming into its own elsewhere on this page, but if yesterday's game is any sign, when Vic and St. Hilda's meet tomorrow the sticks should be really flying. They meet at 4:00 in the Arena, so why not drop around?

group made a stodgy beginning in Elgar's Pomp and Circumstance No. 4. There were fine passages in Vaughan-Williams' Lark Ascending which the orchestra made the most of, but the arabesques were too drawn out. The three movements from The Planets of Gustav Holst shone with a tinsel rather than a planetary lustre.

The American group was definitely more interesting. Sir Ernest MacMillan's Sketches on French Canadian Airs possessed unpretentious charm. He caught the French-Canadian atmosphere remarkably, not only in form, but also in mood. The orchestral texture was quite satisfying, in contrast to the thinness of most of the rest of the program.

Miss Edith Pengilley received a well-earned ovation upon her performance of the Variations in Donce Form for Piano and Orchestra, by Gerstenberger. The Toronto-born pianist displayed a faultless technique in the fiorituri passages and performed each phrase with a maximum of power and clarity. She imparted to the audience the sense of rhythmic intensity which was the point of the work. It is doubtful if Gerstenberger's work will find permanent recognition beyond the easy demands of a secondary school audience. The twisting of one theme into eleven rhythms is more novel than artistic, especially in such order as :Indion Dance, Cortege, One-Step.

Copland's El Salon Mexico was not even Mexican. It was a succession of trite American ditties, orchestrated rather ingeniously. Altogether, the program might be considered rather poor stuff, but the orchestra played it as well as usual and appeared to enjoy themselves.

There we were, giving an anaesthetic while one of our pals was delivering a baby, and, just to pass the time of day we told the nurse the story about the little moron who . . . but you know that one. Anyway, after we had finished the story, the patient, in her semi-conscious state, muttered: "That's terrible, doctor, I heard it three years ago."

Another one of our associates told of the time he was conducted through one of the better-known war-industries. "Hank," he commented, "I've never seen so many women all in one place in my life. And talk about wolves! There was a sailor with us, and as soon as we'd enter a new corridor the girls would start whistling at him, and singing 'Every nice gal loves a sailor.' It was wonderful."

Ah, monsieur, c'est lo guerre!

There was a headline in The Varsity some time ago that informed us that: "ENEMY STRAFING MISSES WARDEN." It pleased us greatly to learn that the Warden had escaped—but somehow that headline sounds disappointed about the whole thing.

The Baylor Lariat, whence we have gleaned many a weird item, had this one: CHINNING CONTEST RESULTS ANNOUNCED. And as if that wasn't enough, they explained that the winner had 22 chins and the runner-up had 21 chins.

Obviously they couldn't have been eating in the Great Hall.

This business of salvage campaigns seems to be going to some people's heads—for example, we find the following amazing news in the Purdue Exponent: "SENIORS TO RECEIVE DEBRIS FIRST — OTHER STUDENTS LATER."

And in the Minnesota Daily:

Wrop us a pound of jiu-jitsu, please.

And finally, with a Varsity Party coming up, we are reminded of the time when we served on a party committee and were vainly trying to find a locus for said party. Abandoned theatres were the order of the day, but none could be located that was suitable—finally one F.J.S. piped up: "Why not use Hart House Theatre, eh fellas?"

"Aw," came the answer, "who'd pay to watch us have a party?"

Debaters Uphold Socialist System

In the Victoria College Debating Parliament last night the resolution "that this house regrets the intrusion of a Socialist party into Canadian politics" was defeated by a large majority.

The affirmative stand was upheld first by Glen Tennant, who made the point first that he and his colleague were attacking not all socialism, but principally its system of planned economy. He stated also that the state should work for the individual, not the individual for the state; that the government, if intervening in economy would be taking away a peoples' responsibility and there would no longer be self-government in the country. And lastly "the member from Tennant" affirmed that the socialist system was perhaps suitable for Russia (identifying socialism with communism) but was far too idealistic for Canada.

The first speaker for the opposition was Sylvia Boorman. She began with "a small plea for socialism as a system to be given a chance—at least a sporting chance." And she continued, "Besides, it is the good thing for Canada at this point. As Lenin said, 'There is no other salvation from war and hunger.' War is a direct outcome of capitalism," she asserted, "and as for hunger—the production end of it—if socialism can look after it in the pressure of wartime, how much better can she manage it in peacetime." And the speaker then went on to say that one has much more faith and interest in one's proprietorship than in working for others—as in the capitalistic system—which only means an internal collapse, for a country as well as an individual.

Marg White spoke next for the opposition. She pointed out that there could be no partial economic control, and in the socialistic system of planned

Canadian Universities Hold Drives To Raise $20,000 For I.S.S. This Year

By Canadian University Press

The tremendous task taken upon itself by the International Student Service is being continually furthered in the efforts put forward by University "drives." In Canada the quota set by the universities as a whole is $20,000, and several of the campuses have already staged this year, or are about to stage, eampaigns for the raising of funds towards this goal.

The University of Toronto started the ball rolling last Dec. 12, when she put on a tag day and other entertainment culminating in a "typical co-ed contest" to promote enthusiasm for the effort. The sale of ribbon-tags, and the donations from various University organizations and private individuals gave a total far beyond her objective of $1,000.

McGill was the next Canadian University to respond to the I.S.S. appeal for aid to fellow students. About the end of January the faculties eaeh set themselves quotas, whieh they obtained by various means—notably through canvassing, and a march of dimes.

The University of Manitoba War Services Committee this term is making a project of I.S.S. The University of Alberta is also credited with the raising of $300, as their share of the $20,000 goal. The University of Saskatchewan held a tag day on Feb. 12, nainly with the idea of providing educational supplies for men in prison camps—whieh is a principal feature of the Student Service work now for prisoners of botli sides.

Plans are underway at the University of Western Ontario for a campaign in the very near future. And at Queens a tag day will be eonducted on Feb. 26. Girl taggers will be selected by the engineers of the campus, and also from this will come the winner of their "Queen of Queen's" contest. There will be a novel addition of men taggers chosen by the women undergraduates. A mile of pennies and a night of plays will also contribute to the I.S.S. cause at Queen's.

And all this week, McMaster University is "digging for the dollars" that will help students all over the world to live. Girls are canvassing to get at least a dollar per student.

Cano Explains Spanish Satire

"Spain shares with England the honour of having given the world its greatest humourists," said Mr. J. Cano, Professor of Spanish at University College, in the last of the series of satire lectures at Vietoria College.

"Spanish satire is not as heavily philosophic as that of some other lands. Very seldom does it attaek the serious vices of mankind; this it leaves to the moralists. Humour is the dominant note."

Prof. Cano went on to discuss the general trend of Spanish satire. Parody has been an essential part throughout the ages; this parody, however, has been directed against popular erazes, not against institutions. Cervantes' "Don Quixote" is the best known of this type of satire, the only satire on the romantic novel which did not pass away with the institution it satirized. Satires on women are more apt to run to ridicule than to sarcasm. The proud nobleman who preferred to starve rather than reveal his poverty was the target for many satires.

"In the 19th century satire was produced by writers of manners and customs," stated Mr. Cano. "It was light but realistic and discerning. Its humour was dry and caustic, more likely to call forth a pained grin from a Spaniard than to cause him to break into uncontrollable laughter."

"Modern satire is found mainly in drama or in the novel. It has become more purposeful, more didactic, more serious minded, although it still contains elements of Castillian humour."

V.C.U. Changes Constitution

Various changes in the constitution of the Victoria College Union were decided upon yesterday at the Vic mass meeting. The nominations to the Bob committee from the four years were changed. Instead of one from third year and five from seeond year, there will now be three from each. The fourth year representation remains the same. A suggestion that those who show themselves as deserving by their work on the Bob, should be added to the committee was rejected for finaneial reasons.

The constitution of the men's athletie union was changed so that a secretary from third year honour replaces the fourth year representative, thus leaving experienced men when the senior members graduate.

A proposed amendment that a third year man or woman be eligible respectively for president or associate president of the debating parliament was defeated.

A discussion as to what was to be done with a $300 surplus lasted too long for a decision to be arrived at. The men, who bad a decided majority, were in favour of constructing a men's commonroom in the basement.

All these resolutions have to be constitutionally ratified by a seeond mass meeting next Monday at the same time.

Nearly 1,000 Canadian Students Now Affected By Regulations; Some Women Asked to Leave

100 REPORTED IN JANUARY

Names of 56 artsmen of the University of Toronto have been reported to the local National War Services Board and to the District Officer Commanding under government regulations, A. B. Fennell, University Registrar, announced last night.

Approximately 100 students of other faculties were reported to the authorities in January as a result of failure in term examinations or unsatisfactory work during the fall term.

Nearly 1,000 Canadian students have thus far been affected by the regulations which were first put into effect last month. About half of these students were asked to leave their courses and place themselves at the disposal of their local War Serviee Board. In some cases these included women and E-category men considered unsatisfactory students by the staff of the universities concerned.

About 500 others, including the Toronto men, were also reported but were allowed to eontinue in their courses until called up.

All of these men are eligible for military service, but will not necessarily be called up immediately, depending on the diseretion of their local board.

Purchase and Equipment of Canteen Is Goal in U. of Manitoba Campaign

Winnipeg, Feb. 24— (CUP) — Ultimate goal set by participants in a recently inaugurated war-services campaign on the University of Manitoba campus is $2,000, and proceeds will be directed towards the purchase and equipment of a mobile canteen for the war effort.

A plea was made to all students taking military training, that they donate one day's pay to the War Services Committee. This met with unanimous approval, resulting in the immediate realization of $700.00. The drive entered its last lap on Sunday, Feb. 21, to insure the remainder of the objectives, and is scheduled to follow through to the end of this week.

Last ycar the students at Manitoba topped off the $5,000 mark in donations to war charities and for investment in Victory bonds. The combination of a variety of methods ensured this achievement on the part of a university with an enrolment of no more than 1,300, among them a Christmas Cheer Fund for poor children, a drive to purchase an ambulance, donated by the students to the Army authorities, a contest between the faculties of Engineering and Medicine to complete a mile of pennies, and the investment of approximately $2,500.00 of Student Union funds in Victory Bonds.

Anxious to maintain all previous records, the students have this year continued their efforts through the Christmas Fund, and the I.S.S.

Arrangements are reported to be well under way in the matter of the $2,000 objective, and it is expected that the students will rally whole-heartedly in a spirit of warm co-operation.

Of Things To Come

The CBC recently announced plans for a series of broadcasts starting this Sunday on reconstruction in Canada and throughout the world after the war, entitled "Of Things to Come—Inquiry on the Post-War World." Time of the broadcast is 5.03-5.30 p.m. over the national network. A similar series is being prepared for the French network. Morley Callaghan, noted Canadian author, who will appear on each of the broadcasts, plans the series as a sort of open forum in which "champions of particular points of view will have a chance for full expression." But, says Mr. Callaghan, "the structure of the inquiry makes it possible for every protagonist for a favourable world dream to be sharply questioned, for I am to be a kind of agent provocateur doing the questioning, who will try to act as counsel for the people."

First program of the series will originate in Winnipeg, and will feature John W. Dafoe, Editor-in-Chief of the Winnipeg Free Press—and, incidentally, honorary president of the Canadian University Press—who will outline the hopes of his generation for a successful post-Versailles peace. Also on the program will be a young man from Vancouver, whose generation may have different ideals that those of Mr. Dafoe's.

The committee in charge of the series is well stocked with important Canadian academic figures—chairman is Dr. Robert Newton, President of the University of Alberta; and other members include Dr. Norman MacKenzie, President of the University of New Brunswick; Rev. George H. Levesque, director of economic and political science, Laval University; and Robert T. McKenzie, of the extension department of the University of British Columbia.

The CBC deserves at least a condescending pat on the hand from The Varsity in recognition of the value of this new series. If it is carried out along the lines suggested in its glowing advance publicity, it will produce a weekly broadcast well worth hearing. We are keenly interested in this Sunday's initiation of the series: "Of Things to Come."

Letters To The Editor

We publish below one of the most stimulating bits of reader-criticism of editorial policy we have received all year. Without attempting to sidestep too many of the telling things that Mr. Pearlman has said, we would like to offer a word or two of explanation regarding what he has termed our "bad journalistic practice."

The Varsity is a four-page daily paper with an average type content of between 13 and 14 galleys—including editorial and the Speaking of Sport columns, both of which are set in slightly oversize type. With news to handle nightly of the bulk and importance with which we deal, space is axiomatically at a premium. The editorial page has a standardized format which includes the Champus Cat and the Art, Music and Drama section as well as two columns of advertising. And thus, traditionally, letters to the Editor are crowded into the editorials.

The Varsity in its last 90-odd issues has been printing more reader comment than in the past several years. The reason is that there have, perhaps, been more controversial subjects arousing student discussion than in recent years, and our subscribers have taken advantage to a greater extent of our pages to air their views. We welcome their letters. But we have felt that it would be journalistic practice as bad as that which Mr. Pearlman deplores to print their letters immediately beneath the flag which flies at the top-left corner of this page without making plain whether or not The Varsity endorses the views expressed therin. Careless readers are too prone, we believe, despite the fact that only signed letters are printed, to confuse letters with editorials, because of the similarity of placement and distinctive type.

Actually, more letters which we have printed this year have expressed sound common sense than those with which we have found ourselves in complete disagreement. Hence we have, almost unconsciously, been falling into the error Mr. Pearlman has mentioned: that of contradicting readers on secondary questions while apparently disregarding the major import of the letter. We assure Mr. Pearlman that this is in most cases because we have endorsed the views expressed with which we have not taken issue.

Our correspondent takes us to task for appending "lengthy comments" to published letters. We admit the practice is unusual. But again we plead stringency of space restrictions. Most reader-letters are of sufficient interest to merit editorial comment in these columns. But to write a properly-rounded editorial on any subject it is first necessary to outline the thesis to be upheld or broken down. When such a thesis has already been clearly stated by its sponsor in a printed letter, it would seem undue prodigality of limited lead and paper to rehearse it again in a commenting article above. Hence we have taken to the useful and space-saving habit of italicizing the remarks we consider relevant and placing them immediately beneath the letter in question, to be read, we hope, with the points with which they deal still clearly in the readers minds.

We hope that this perhaps verbose exposition of editorial technique as practised by that bad-tempered and reactionary old man, the Editor-in-Chief of The Varsity, has not been too boring to those gallant readers who have traced it this far. It is intended chiefly for the edification of Mr. Pearlman, but perhaps its explanations may prove of some interest also to our other correspondents.

Correspondence

Editor,
The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

The Varsity is, admittedly, entitled to an editorial policy of its own. Also, it is the editor's privilege to attach some relevant remarks to correspondence published in his newspaper. But it is bad journalistic practice to abuse this privilege by writing lengthy comments upon practically every letter he prints, especially when such comments are composed of detailed contradictions of points which for the most part do not bave a direct bearing on the primary issues involved. In this method of replying to correspondence, the editor's arguments are made to assume a negative character, of a destructive critical nature.

In view of the fact that the editor has shown in the past that he is admirably capable of presenting solid positive arguments in his editorial columns, it is disappointing to find him squelching and side-tracking matters of importance in the unorthodox and unfair manner referred to above.

The letter signed by the Executive of the Student Labour Club and published in the issue of Feb. 16, was particularly ineptly treated, and, indeed, the fact of its maltreatment precipitated this letter of criticism. Doubtless, the S.L.C. letter contained minor, and probably unintentional, inaccuracies, but on the whole it was well-written, and presented very clearly several points which needed to be recognized and emphasized because of their extreme importance to every student.

The writers pointed out that since we have been told that the invasion of Europe—prerequisite for a complete victory over Fascism—is to occur in a few months, and since such an offensive will make enormous demands upon Canada's manpower in particular, it is imperative that we meet those demands in advance, by preparing for the coming crisis now. The universities must take immediate steps to provide trained civilian personnel as well as military personnel who will be able to adapt themselves with the least possible delay to their respective positions when the need arises.

The report of the Student-Staff Conference contained a suggested program whose implementation would provide one solution to the problem. The idea of establishing a Universtiy Selective Service Board is of especial importance, in that such a Board is the only practieal means yet proposed

ADVICE FOR FRESHMEN

1) FINAL EXAMINATIONS

Final examinations are held once a year (except in the Faculty of Medicine) beginning approximately four to six weeks after the final issue of The Varsity, or eight weeks too soon. At this time the Senior Masthead begins to consult its Lares and Penates and gets the sage advice:

Write an essay a day
From now until May
Or the draft board will get you
And take you away.

In the Faculty of Medicine examinations are conducted on a slightly different basis. By eliminating 12 weeks from the year the Council of the Faculty has succeeded in cutting down the teaching time by only two weeks in the regular 30 and thus is able to complete a course of six didactic years in slightly over four and one half years, during which time, however, only about eight weeks' actual time is cut off the time-table.

This enables the Medical Students to know just about as much about not much less than was formerly required, and therefore examinations are conducted approximately every six weeks, except leap year. On this account the annual Medical-at-Home occurs bi- or tri-ennially.

Toward the end of the course of instruction, the professors, who have been paying little attention to the curriculum, make such statements as :"I think I'd better give you a lecture on . . . I've been wondering whether or not you might be having a question on this." This is very encouraging, as it makes you feel that at least the professor doesn't know any more about the course than you do.

Usually it is arranged that there will be a week or so during which there are no lectures before the examinations commence. However, the men who built our University were far seeing and arranged pitfalls to prevent too many students from passing. They built what is facetiously ealled a "library," wherein is kept a stock of books, and also several hundred co-eds. By special arrangement with the weather bureau, the balmiest weather prevails during this time, and the co-eds, who receive special credit for doing this, lounge on the grass or on the library steps, and fill unsuspecting male students' minds with other things than thoughts of books.

In the past, it has also proved feasible to have some other distracting influence, such as the Nazi invasion of Holland, occur during this period.

The examinations themselves are conducted in ramshackle buildings known as "School," "Examination Hall" and "C.O.T.C. Drill Hall." These buildings contain inverted match boxes rigged up as writing desks, and rocking chairs perched on narrow pedestals. There are usually between four and eight people who circulate around these rooms. These persons are known as "presiders," and they are chosen for their ability to wear hard-heeled boots, rustle papers, and make meaningless announcements in loud voices.

The results of the examinations are published from 10 to 14 weeks following the completion of the examinations, in the daily newspapers. Here they are grouped into: "FIRST CLASS HONOURS," "SECOND CLASS HONOURS" and "ALSO RAN." This list is usually posted in a prominent portion of the newspaper, along with other sporting news. This year, it is announced, arrangements have been made to send the results by mail to all Army Basic Training Centres.

Speaking of Sport

By Jim Paton

HARP SOLO...

We notice that there are a few defaulted games creeping into the scoreboards again. As the group winners emerge it becomes obvious to certain teams that their play-off chances are dim if not completely extinguished and to a certain extent interest falls off. Fortunately this situation hasn't become general, but it wouldn't do any harm to try and forestall it. From a well worn cuff the following significant figures are faintly discernable. In '39-'40, the first year of the war, there were but three defaulted games in the whole interfaculty schedule. The following season saw this figure jump to 16. Figures for the present year are not yet available but the indications are that last year's figure will be almost doubled. If this rate of increase is allowed to continue we can see Varsity's super deluxe athletic program in a near-by dog pound.

CALLING TURNER AND MATURE...

Word has reached this corner that Meds, who are hosts at the sixth and final athletic night next Saturday, do not intend to refuse admittance to any citizen not appearing in multi-coloured sweaters, as might have been understood from an S.O.S. of a few days ago. However, the doctors request that every person who has a sweater wear it. We find it hard to believe that there are any co-eds on campus who do not own a sweater, but realize that Canadian "Joe Colleges" don't go in for sweaters to the extent that Hollywood would have us believe.

'''And after taking a quick look at the advertisements hemming us in from all sides, we silently drift into the night.

Last night Hart House Pool was the scene of the Preliminary Swimming Meet in preparation for the grand finale on Saturday's Athletic Night. Those of you who stayed away missed a very good show indeed—but we can now guarantee you all a marvellous display of aquatics come Saturday at 8:00 p.m.

Now for a preview of the style and ornamental swimming and diving you will see in ye olde pool. The finals in the style contest were completed and the top three exponents will put on an exhibition of their art on Saturday night. Halliday, a Junior of P.H.E., displayed the best form in the tests last night, winning over Victoria College's Shaw in the last event—the side stroke. Lyons of U.C. showed enough talent to gain third place. In the exhibition on Saturday night you will note the precise, smooth and graceful style of the champion—Halliday.

Hincheliffe of Vic, Lyons of U.C., Bell of U.C., Cohen of O.T. & P., and Williams of Nurses finished in that order in the ornamental swimming and qualified for the finals. Hincheliffe and Lyons will bear watching on Saturday because last night's display showed that they were the stars of the event.

The diving event will probably be the most interesting to watch on Saturday night. The preliminaries produced many contestants, six of whom were chosen to compete for the championship Saturday night. Lloyd of Vic got the highest score and her specialty was the front Jack. U.C.'s Graham showed enough versatility to rate recond laurels. In third place was St. Hilda's Fletcher, who performed the difficult half twist. Lyons of U.C., Paterson of St. Hilda's, and Whiting of Vic finished fourth, fifth and sixth respectively.

All in all this was a very successful meet with more contestants than ever before. O'Connor, McDonough and Keenaghan, were the first entries for St. Mike's in several years. Nurses and O.T. & P. were also well represented in this meet and added new life to it.

We'll hear more about the other events on the program tomorrow—so don't go away. And don't forget to drop around to Varsity Arena at 4:00 today to see the final hockey game between St. Hilda's and Victoria. Anyone is liable to win and the tie must be broken.

Trinity Retains Top Position in Group By 6-2 Victory; All Winner's Goals Scored in First Period

MITCHELL SCORES FOR VIC

The Trinity hockey squad took a firmer grip on the top rung of their group yesterday by applying the calsomine treatment to an ailing aggregation running under the nom de plume of Victoria II. Trinity scooped up a total of six goals, all in the first period, strangely enough, while the Vicsters had to wend their feeble homeward way with but two barkers stacked to their dubious credit.

Vic opened the scoring with a Mitchell from Groover shot a few minutes after the start of the game, but did not again break into the credit column until the dying moments of the final frame. Shortly after Vic's goal Trinity found themselves with a six to five man advantage while a Vic offender dwelled upon his sins in the arena's detention room, and became literally mid-Victorian as they thrice mounced the rubber into the Searlet and Gold net. Leake, assisted by Ingles, came first on the scoring parade, closely followed by Johnny Aird who drove home a shot from Pringle. Just as Vic were about to be reinstated as a full six-man club, Spence came through with the third Trinity goal unassisted.

The remaining three Trinity credits were scattered through what was left of the period. Knight slipped in number four, Pringle the fifth and Laidlaw the sixth and final goal.

The second period was as miserly in goal-dishing as the first was the opposite. Trinity, held scoreless, was quite put out by the sudden reverse of fortune. With brief minutes left on the time clock at the northern extremity of ye ice palace, Mitchell deposited the second Vic puck in Trinity's vital spot on an assist by Ogilvie. Mitchell was the only player on the ice to score more than once.

ART of MUSIC

Amateurs

University Symphony Orchestra

After missing a year, the University Symphony Orchestra returns to give a concert this evening at Convocation Hall. The organization of amateur musicians playing together for the entertainment and instruction they receive, is under the direction this year of Victor Feldbrill.

Such an amateur organization is a great thing to have on our campus. One of the pleasantest recreations this world can afford is music, and playing is the most enjoyable way of learning to appreciate music. Every musician must listen of course, but he will have no appreciation of what must go into a performance if he himself has never done anything besides listening.

An amateur group, a small orchestra, playing together for the sheer fun of co-operating in making music a part of their lives, is surely a worthwhile organization. Anyone who has ever played in such a group, who has tried to get passages which are technically difficult, who has attempted to put across the emotional content of some musical classic—he knows just how much can be received from such an association. Its results are incalculable.

JACKSON DISCUSSES BANTING'S PAINTINGS

Discussing the art of Sir Frederick Banting now on exhibition in Hart House in a talk yesterday at 1 p.m. in the Art Gallery, Dr. A. Y. Jackson, outstanding Canadian painter, and writer of the recent book, Banting as an Artist, said the artist's work was notable for its "fine healthy outlook," and displays "the fight and courage in everything he did."

Dr. Jackson illustrated the earlier influences on Sir Frederick's art from the work of Maurice Culhan, the first painter who was preoccupied with painting Canada out-of-doors. This artist, according to the speaker, had his own convictions, but found that people wouldn't buy his type of picture—the product of long hours of working with frozen paint and frozen hands. Later, when he painted with less fire and more conventionally, his pictures started to sell.

In 1913, A. Y. Jackson came to Toronto, and in that year, the Group of Seven began. Dr. Jackson referred to Lawren Harris as the visionary with too many ideas. "Inflamed with a new scheme he would get half-way through a picture, then stop and start another." John Macdonald, with his steadiness and remarkable knowledge of nature, kept the Group on an even keel. Tom Thompson was thoroughly inarticulate through spoken and written work but was a master of expressing himself in colour. Arthur Lismer gave the varied approach of the painter and writer.

"By 1925, Banting was just beginning to show an interest in art, and by that time the traditions of the Group had been firmly established. Two years later, he asked me to down to the North Shore in Quebec with him, on a sketching trip." Of Banting's early work Dr. Jackson said, "almost everyone has an aunt that paints like that." Preferring to go incognito, where he was not known as a doctor, Banting called himself Frederick Grant, and was quite pleased that no one knew him.

"Banting's art was a pastime with him. We would search for barns and landseapes to paint. One day, when we were just about frozen over a sketch, he said to me, 'and I thougbt this was a sissy game'."

On the trip up to the Arctic, Banting was permitted to go to investigate the health conditions of the Eskimos. "That didn't worry his painting very much." Jackson said. "We found one of the most amusing habits of these people was to shake hands with white men—a village of them at a time!"

In estimating Banting's place in Canadian art, Dr. Jackson pointed out that the modern trends put this kind of art in the discard. The more recent suggestions are for figure work and the life about us. In the speaker's opinion this led to "sour social comment," such as was seen in a recent 1,000 picture, American exhibition—"Imagine a fat horse leaning over a fence, watching a beggar dig in a refuse ean!" He asserted that the job of the Canadian painter was to paint his own country everywhere. Of the exhibition, Dr. Jackson concluded by saying: "It's good; it's all he would have wanted me to say."

Plastics in War Is Lecture Topic

The speaker at the meeting of the Arts and Letters Club held Monday night in Wymilwood was M. J. C. Lazier, Assisant Professor of Applied Mechanies, who is on leave of absence for the duration, and is working on construction problems of the new Mosquito bombers, wood-and-glue miracles of modern warfare.

The speaker's announced subject was wood, and his talk was related largely to its use in the developing field of plastic construction, and also as it stands in relation to man's needs and convenience.

He pointed out that the source of energy and power is the sun, and that the closer the relation between this force and our raw materials, the better. The use of oil, coal and other materials of ancient origin in industry, for fuel and in making synthetic rubber, he regards as so many million years wasted. In the ease of the synthetic rubber industry, he believes that alcohol, a much more direct product, should be used to replace crude oil.

Professor Lazier sketched economic and social changes that might be brought about by the opening up of the new field of plastics. Farming would become a highly scientific business, in its capacity of supplying raw materials, and on the other hand, labour-saving devices would become so ingenious, and natural resources would be used so well, that men would live in a "psychologieally sterile atmosphere," idly watching their well-nourished gardens grow.

Things are tough all over, we know, but the saddest darned old story we've heard in a long time is about a couple of newlyweds in an East Coast Canadian port. It is, basieally, the old story of the fiance in the forces who is unable to get leave in which he can come home to get married. So the lady in the ease packs herself off to the local Y.W.C.A. and they make arrangements with the preacher. Well, the big day pops up in a minimum of time and the happy couple are duly nupted.

So what do the bride and groom do? They spend the rest of the day looking for a place to stay. Comes a wee small hour of the morning and only one solution remains. They say good night and he goes to his barracks and she goes back to the Y.W.C.A.

Some female blowhard was trying to impress the less wordly of her co-ed chums at one of the residences recently. Her topic was what she liked to drink in the line of high-class alcohol. One little Freshie couldn't stand it any more and, drawing herself up to the maximum height permitted by her saddle shoes, she remarked, "Oh, you make me sick! I suppose you even drink caviar just beeause its expensive!"

Tomorrow there will be a hither by one Beatrice Dobie, who means more to this paper than is always apparent in the matter of by-lines. She is the Assistant Managing Editor of the paper, the first woman to hold this position in many, many years, if not in its history. It is she who oft-times stays late at the press when things go cockeyed and sees that you do get your Varsities on time. Many a harassed night editor is thoroughly convinced that she's the same babe Dante was so enthusiastic about. So tomorrow we have a hither by a character—a literary one, Beata Beatrice.

U.C. Parliament Meets Tomorrow

At this Friday's session of U.C. Parliament, the debate before the house will be, "Resolved that the present economic control in Canada should be continued after the war."

The supporters for the government will be the Hon. Geoff Johnson, the Prime Minister and Chancellor of the Exchequer, and the Hon. Robert Bell, Attorney-General. The leader of the opposition will be the Hon. Don Rowat, assisted by the member from Gray Cowan.

When consulted about this week's debate, the Prime Minister said, "The National Democratic Socialist Government will put in a strong plea for the retention of government supervision of economie life. Undoubtedly the Conservative opposition will produce a case for the big financier.

The Prime Minister extends an invitation to everyone to attend this week's session of the U.C. Parliament from 4 to 6 on Friday afternoon.

economy, an individual's initiative was definitely killed.

Speaking seeondly for the negative, Paul Fox stated that "Socialism was inevitable," offering both an appeal to historieal trends and identifieation of Socialism and democracy as his proof. Fox went on to differentiate between Communism and Socialism, and ended with a plea for all intelligent Canadians to reject their "miserly, money-grubbing self-interest in favour of something greater—a new social consciousness."

Prime Minister John Dales, Leader of tbe Opposition, Marg Albright and Senator H. N. Frye also spoke in the debate, which ended in the defeat of the government by a vote of 56 to 11.

of accomplishing the necessary adjustments to a maximum student participation in the war effort. The Student-Staff Conference Report should be discussed by all students in the light of the urgenry of the situation, with a view to dealing expediently with obstacles in our way—and there are difficulties to be overcome.

The Varsity, instead of clarifying the main features of the S.L.C. letter, singled out secondary items for attack, thereby confusing the principal issues involved. Furthermore, instead of deploring the fact that only a score or two of students were sufficiently interested to take an active part in the Student-Staff Conference, The Varsity used this fact to throw cold water on the Conference itself, by creating a feeling that not enough people are really taking it seriously.

This approach is not encouraging interest in the Report, nor in discussion of the Report in its proper perspective. The Varsity can do so much to help. It is to be hoped that more constructive co-operation is forthcoming.

750 McGill Students Meet; Agree Daily Issue 'Smutty' But Protest Senate Ban

Senate Rejects Student Proposal that The Daily Resume Publication Monday; Students Reopen Investigation

HOLD BLAME "COLLECTIVE"

Montreal, Feb. 25 — (CUP)—Disapproval of the "smuttiness" of last Friday's special Commerce issue of The McGill Daily, coupled with condemnation of "arbitrary" Senate action in suspending The Daily following appearance of the issue, was expressed here today at an open meeting of the Students' Society of McGill University.

More than 750 students jammed into the Union Ballroom here to attend today's meeting, which lasted for two and a half hours. The meeting also passed motions recommending that The Daily resume publication Monday and that the Senate should refrain, in future, from "usurping" student government prerogatives.

Meanwhile, the Senate has rejected recent student recommendations that responsibility for the issue—which was under the direction of a special Commerce masthead and for which regular Editor-in-Chief Raymond Ayoub is also technically responsible—was "collective" and could not be placed upon a small group of students, and that The Daily's suspension should last one week.

It is understood that the Students' Society is now reopening its investigation into the matter, and it is thought likely in some quarters here that individuals will be named as responsible for the issue, and that a longer suspension of publication will be recommended.

(A special Committee of University authorities instructed the Students' Society to investigate circumstances surrouding appearance of last Friday's Commerce issue and make a report satisfactory to the Senate, naming individuals personally responsible for the paper, recommending appropriate disciplinary action, and "demonstrating that it intends in the future to exercise that control over The Daily which is its responsibility.")

Today's student meeting also considered expressions of editorial opinion on the matter which have appeared recently in The Varsity and The Queen's Journal.

Votes of confidence were passed in both the regular staff of The Daily as a body capable of resuming uncensored publication, and in the Executive Council of the Society.

Flying Cagers Here Saturday

With such features as a sweater night, a track meet, and a women's swim meet, Meds play host tomorrow evening at the last Athletic Night of the season.

The main attraction of the evening, apart from the sweaters—compulsory for all—is a return engagement with the Manning Depot cagers who, with a reportedly greatly strengthened quintet, will attempt to avenge their first defeat at the hands of the Blues and to further the string of Varsity defeats. At 7:30 the Reserve Blues will take on an all-starr Meds squad. Between the games there will be an exhibition of high jumping in the main gym, and at intermission, several events run off on the indoor track.

The swimming pool will be the scene of the finals of the women's interfaculty splash meet, of which the preliminaries were held on Wednesday. Diving and ornamental swimming will also be presented.

In the three downstairs rooms, one of the features will be a demonstration of Youth Hostel Work. Embryo doctors and nurses will put on a display featuring a blood clinic in which experiments will be performed.

All in all the Meds have prepared a big show—a fitting climax to a fine season of Athletic Nights.

Vic 'Destroyed' By Bomb Bursts

In yesterday's daylight campus air raid practice Student Air Raid Wardens were posted in all the buildings of the University. Each warden, after receiving a report, had to phone it into headquarters.

A supposed high explosive bomb landed close to the Victoria College library, breaking windows and extinguishing lights. An appeal for help was sent out to the Public Utilities Department. Despite this damage and loss of light, a few brave students manfully struggled through the darkened hallways, and continued writing their essays by the light of the setting sun.

Victoria College itself was supposedly partially demolished by several high explosive bombs; the sewers were damaged; the water mains burst, giving greater trouble to the wardens who were frantically calling headquarters for assistance. Their greatest worry was that the line was busy, and it was impossible to get any help.

ATHLETIC NIGHT

No admission tickets will be sold after 9:30 p.m. for the remainder of the Saturday night Athletic Nights.

Vlastos Outlines Qualities Of Canada's Fighting Fliers

In a lecture at the Physics Building yesterday, Squadron Leader Gregory Vlastos, formerly Professor of Philosophy at Queen's University, outlined some of the predominant qualities of Canada's fighting airmen overseas.

He has come back from his experiences in the war arena with a profound respect for the ability of the average man to respond intelligently to critical situations where he can have no recourse to advice from superior officers. "The average man in the ranks does not prescribe to the famous Tennysonian admonition in the poem 'Charge of the Light Brigade'," he said. Their's is to reason why and the men are continually thinking and asking questions about their work, and do not hesitate to point out possible corrections.

"There is no atrophy of the intellect here," he commented. Before an important show pilots may be heard discussing the technique of their jobs—intent shop-talk from men who before 1939 had never been near a plane.

Another quality that struck him, Squadron Leader Vlastos said, was the pervasive sense of comradeship between the men engaged in dangerous work, in which each must depend on the other to behave co-operatively for the sake of all. Cases of men refusing to be promoted because they would have to leave the personnel of which they felt themselves a part, are legion.

The men doing the fighting are in addition supremely natural and easy, never put on airs. It is only when probing the limits of human gullibility that the pilots desert their unwritten code of refraining from "big talk." In contradistinction to the hierarchical pattern of civilian life, the men maintain free, comradely, human relations, and are keenly aware of the differences in the cilivian community. There is an element of disillusion, a loss of faith in certain things which were once important and in which the civilian community still believes, that Squadron Vlastos considers a healthy symptom.

The background and motivation of the men in service has been individualistic and acquisitive. Now they have been working together under conditions which have brought out qualities of dignity, humour, comradeship and intelligence, and the question they all ask is whether they will be given the opportunity to express themselves as significantly in the post-war world.

Early Vic Goal Spells 1-0 Victory Over St. Hilda's Puck-Chasers

A first period goal by Victoria's Billy Bain, before the crowd had time to unlimber their yells, was the margin of victory over St. Hilda' College's fighting sextet in yesterday's hockey finale. The Scarlet and Gold carried the play from the opening whistle and Billy's counter came in the opening three minutes. Another Vic breakaway a moment later was only turned aside by Elizabeth Stark between the Blue and Gray pipes. As the play progressed, the girls from Devonshire Place got their teamwork clicking and toward the end of the period had taken the initiative from the Victoria team, and it was Helen Stewart's turn to star in the nets.

Lolly Fletcher led the St. Hilda's ganging attack which carried the play consistently into Vic territory at the start of the second period, but their efforts bogged down before the close-checking defence twosome of Betty Gordon and Helen Patrick. Billy Bain broke away from a St. Hilda mass attack and swooped in on goalie Betty Stark alone, but her hard shot to the lower left corner was deflected to the side. Later in the same period Shirley Pearse had a clear path to the St. Hilda goal but was checked from behind by Anne Garthwaite, and a return breakaway by Marty Fletcher was skated into the corner by the hard-working Helen Patrick.

The last period was a repetition of the second with Vic perhaps a little stronger than in the previous period. Their defence was too much for the Gray and Blue attack, and they threatened the St. Hilda's citadel constantly with Helen Patrick instigated breakaways.

For the new champions, Helen Patrick played the entire game and was the outstanding player on the ice. Offensively the honours are share between Billy Bain and St. Hilda's fighting Fletcher twins. Defensively, Betty Gordon teamed well with Helen Patrick and Isabelle Gemmell backchecking on the second line broke up many St. Hilda's plays outside the blue line.

Vic—Stewart, Gordon, Dillon, Patrick, Bain, Allen, Eunson, Gemmill, Prease, Jean Brandon.

St. Hilda's — Fellowes, M. Fletcher, L. Fletcher, Alexander, Hungerford, Hastie, Storie, Stewart, Stark, Dymond.

EIGHTEEN-YEAR-OLD LEADER TO ENTER AIR FORCE SHORTLY

By Maureen Murphy

"The University Symphony Orchestra is a combination of University and Conservatory members," stated Mr. Victor Feldbrill, 18-year-old conductor of the University Symphony Orchestra, which gave its annual performance at Convocation Hall last night.

Before the intermission lights were dimmed, Mr. Feldbrill laid down his baton for a moment, to tell a Varsity reporter of his work. "Last fall I was asked by the Students' Administrative Council to take over the University Orchestra, to organize and re-organize it. So I got to work, and I have been working ever since. We started off last October with about 25 students, gradually enlarging to the 50-piece orchestra you hear tonight. Eventually it might have become a 100-piece Symphony. We have practised once every week since then—16 rehearsals in all.

"Were I to have been asked, I should gladly have taken it over again next year, but I am afraid that before another season comes around, I shall be in the Air Force."

Explaining that, of course, he comes under the age-group for the call, Mr. Feldbrill however emphasized that he would continue his orchestral work with the Air Force.

Sir Ernest MacMillan, questioned as to his opinion of the young conductor, spoke of his having "tremendous enthusiasm' marvellous talent, and a great future ahead."

Asked about his big ambition, Mr. Feldbrill answered: "Just this! Just like tonight—with a huge orchestra."

University Convenes Today To Confer Honorary Degrees On United Nations Leaders

Dill, Welles, Ralston Butler Are Dignitaries to Be Honoured at Special Ceremony in Convocation Hall

CONANT TO ATTEND

Honourary LL.D. degrees will be presented to government officials of Britain, the United States and Canada at a special convocation at 3 p.m. this afternoon.

Those to be honoured are Field Marshal Sir John D. Dill, former Chief of the British General Staff and present head of the British military mission in the United States; Sumner Welles, United States Under-Secretary of State; Hon. James Layton Ralston, Canadian Minister of National Defence; and Harold B. Butler, Minister at the British Embassy in Washington.

Cabinet ministers of the provincial legislature, headed by Premier Conant, civil officials of the City of Toronto, including Mayor Conboy, officers from District Headquarters, and University officials will be present at the ceremony. Several companies of the University of Toronto Contingent, C.O.T.C. will attend in a body and a guard of honour drawn from the corps will be inspected by Field Marshal Dill before the convocation.

Field Marshall Dill was present at the Casablanca Conference last month and conferred with Chinese government officials at Chungking before returning to Washington.

Mr. Welles, noted for his work in connection with Latin-American relations with the United States, completed a dimplomatie tour of Europe shortly before the outbreak of the war.

Col. Ralston, a cabinet minister in two wars, was scheduled to receive his degree at an earlier convocation but was unable to attend due to injuries received in an automibile accident.

Dr. Butler, who is Warden of Nuffield College, Oxford, delivered a public lecture here yesterday on the economy of the war.

Ward Wins School Vote

The record number of votes tabulated in the S.P.S. elections yesterday showed Jack Ward elected president of the Engineering Society, and the plebiscite conducted on the desirability of a political science course in S.P.S. supported the proposal by an 85 per cent yes vote.

Hot records, free cigarrettes, bales of blotters, Toike Oikes and cancalled lectures were the order of the day. All that was lacking from the usual election day program was the annual downtown snake dance. An excellent turnout swelled the audience of a famous downtown theatre, and they were not a whit disappointed when the star of the show, in a temperamental mood, refused to perform.

Following is the new executive:

President, Jack Ward; 1st Vice-President, Art Gorman; 2nd Vice-President—Pete Ayckroyd; Secretary, Murray McCulloch; Treaseure, Bob Moore; Pres. of Athletic Association, D. Pringle.

Year Presidents—4T4, A. P. Crosby; 4T5, J. Stuart; 4T6, A. Klassen.

Permanent Executives—President, M. J. Ackroyd, 1st Vice-President, J. T. Cawley; 2nd Vice-President, W. A. Moeser; Sec-Treasurer, J. M. Dyke.

Lighting Expert To Address R.C.I.

Mr. Samuel G. Hibben, lighting expert of the Westinghouse Company, Bloomfield, N. Y., will demonstrate and lecture on flourescent lighting Saturday at 8:15 p.m. in Convocation Hall at an open joint meeting of the Royal Canadian Institute and the American Institute of Electrical Engineers.

Such forms of ligbting can be used in blackouts or under other special circumstances when glare and long listance shine must be eliminated.

Mr. Hibben is Director of Applied Lighting of the Westingbouse Lamp Division

FROSTY FROZEN FLYING FISH GROUNDED FOR DURATION

Professor J. Satterly's traditional annual liquid air lecture can now be listed as another wartime casualty on the campus, The Varsity was informed yesterday.

Reason given for the cancellation were the inereased price of the liquid air, and war-time demands for it at the Research Enterprises.

In past years the lecture has been recognized as the most spectacular on the campus, and many upper year men retain vivid memories of Professor Satterly liberally spilling seven gallons of liquid air about the room. Professor Satterly expects that he will give a much simpler lecture on the subject to his own class but it will be shorn of its prewar grandeur.

Pictured above is the prestidigitatory Dr. Satterly flanked by his aide-de-camp, "Percy," in action at last year's liquid-air lecture.

More From McGill

Down at McGill yesterday 750 students attended an open meeting of the student governing body of the University to consider questions arising out of recent Senate action in banning last Friday's Commerce Issue of The McGill Daily. Their deliberations seem to have been along two not very co-related lines — that the issue in question was indubitably "smutty" and that the Senate action in banning it was unduly "arbitrary."

It strikes us that these two statements of opinion do not jibe very well. If the issue was "smutty"—we are getting a bit tired of repetition of the word—then it was the duty of the student body which sponsors the publication of The Daily to take immediate action to ban the issue and mete out speedy judgment upon the editors who perpetrated the issue.

If it took no such action—this conditional clause is inserted bearing in mind that we have heard no news of any student action with regard to the issue prior to the Senate's step—then surely it fell short of fulfilling its duties to the student population which elected it.

The University Committee which was placed in charge of the investigation of circumstances in connection with the publication of the offending issue of The Daily instructed the student government to present a report of its own findings in the matter which would be satisfactory to the Senate. It was further instructed that this report should name individuals responsible for the contents of the issue, recommend "appropriate disciplinary action," and demonstrate "that it intends in the future to exercise that control over The Daily which is its responsibility."

With these instructions the student executive has not complied. Instead it reported "collective responsibility" for the issue and recommended a one-week suspension for The Daily. The Senate has rejected these results of the students' investigation, and the investigation is being reopened.

We fail to see that the students' governmental body of McGill has the right to sit tight over the issue of responsibility for the disreputable Commerce Daily, and fill the air meanwhile with sad cries that the Senate was "arbitrary" and "usurped" student prerogatives in banning The Daily.

We feel very little sympathy for such plaintive remarks until the students clean their own house. That the Senate action was swift, that Principal James may have precipitated unnecessary adverse publicity for McGill throughout Montreal and to some extent at other universities we do not contest. But we maintain that action—and quick and not unduly soft-hearted action—was justified in the case of Friday's issue of The Daily. It was in unspeakably poor taste, and its instigators deserve very little support from any students who are decently averse to pornography.

Our chief concern in the matter is that The Daily—first of Canada's university papers to attain daily status and long one of the mainstays of the nation's college press—should be established once more as a respectable journal. If this necessitates sharp action on the part of the Students' Society, and perhaps severe disciplinary action towards those responsible for its present plight, it is regrettable. But it is more important than that a few students whose action has brought disgrace upon one of the finest of McGill's institutions should be sheltered behind a smokescreen of complaints against fully justifiable—if perhaps high-handed—official action.

Unbuilt Houses

Education in the field of housing in Canada is at last getting underway. We refer to the Housing Conference which is being held by the Ontario Association of Architects this week-end.

The purpose of this meeting is purely educational. It is merely an exchange of views of all concerned with housing in the building industry in the sphere of capital investment or social welfare, architecture or town-planning, and among all those in elected positions in all parties. No resolutions will be passed, nor will any recommendations be made to anybody. However, we feels that such a meeting will serve to bring about an understanding among all those connected with the building industry which should serve as a basis for constructive planning in the future.

It is a sad reflection on Canadian society that it takes a war to awaken the people to the need for adequate housing, but unfortunately that is the case. For in war-time, the emergency housing of workers demands government action. But in peace-time, too many people simply ignore the problem which is just as real then as now, and the few who do give the problem some thought have not got the gumption to do anything about it.

To be thoroughly convinced of these facts, one has only to hear lectures such as those given this week by Dr. Faludi, a report of which appears elsewhere in this issue. Dr. Faludi is a brilliant Hungarian town-planner and architect and the students are most fortunate to be able to hear bim as a part of the lectures contained in this war-work course.

Even if these students never do anything professional with knowledge thus gained, they will learn of the advantages of a well-planned community life, and will prepare the way for the introduction of these housing schemes into the life of the people after the war. For in order to have an adequate housing policy come into effect, existing objections must be overcome, and the only way to do this is by creating a public demand strong enough effectively to overthrow such opposition. The only way in which this demand can be created is by educating the public to the possibilities of modern low-cost housing schemes.

With the interest which has been created on the campus this week by Dr. Faludi's lectures, and by the information released concerning the plans of the 5th Year architects' projects for the replanning of Oshawa, a promising beginning has been made on the campus. Also the Conference should bring about an understanding which should bear fruit in the near future.

Our only regret is that the Association was not able to arrange for a larger hall so that the meeting might be thrown open to all interested students.

ART & MUSIC Drama

Youth Takes Over

University Symphony Orchestra

A sense of polished musicianship was the most striking feature of the annual performance of the University Symphony Orchestra last night. All the performers played with a confidence which was surprising in such a young group of musicians. Yet in conjunction with this assurance the numbers were played precisely and carefully, so that there was no slurring of the difficult passages. On the whole, it was as good a program as is to be heard at any average Toronto symphony, and its high spots were equal to anything that I have recently heard.

Victor Feldbrill is an exceptionally fine conductor. At all times he kept a facile control over the orchestra, never striving unduly for extreme effects, and leading with an easy self-assurance which was imparted to the orchestra. He commenced with an interesting Rossini overture, La Gazza Laddra (The Thieving Magpie) ,which he did slowly and carefully to bring out the wealth of melody typical of Rossini.

Then came a group of vocal solos by Evelyn Pasen, accompanied by Geraldine Shuster on the piano. From the sweet sadness of Rimsky-Korsakoff to the gay and sparkling Spanish rhythm of Valverde she demonstrated her ability and personality; her voice is clear and bell-like in tone, and her enunciation excellent. A perfect synthesis with the orchestra was achieved when she sang the Habanera from Carmen, her first performance with an orchestra.

The major work of the evening followed, the Smyphony No. 40 in G. Minor of Mozart. It is a masterpiece scarcely ever attempted by amateur orchestras, a work which prompted the following comment from the English critic A. H. Sidgwick:

"The G minor Symphony of Mozart is not to be criticized; it stands secure above all criticism. Anyone frames a definition of good music, the only question is, 'Does the definition cover the G Minor?' If it does not, you need not worry further."

The spirit of this supreme music was present last night; the interpretation was slightly on the immature side, but generous credit is owing for a plucky attempt and a good rendering as well.

The orchestra then romped through the Schubert Ballet Music from "Rossamunde" with all the vigour of youth, yet retaining the delicate, clear tones excellently. The familiar Air from Suite No. 3 in D for strings by Bach was perfection itself, the highlight of the whole program. Flawless in performance as well as in content, it easly ranks as one of the best numbers that I have ever listened to.

Artist's Life by Strauss was a fitting close for a truly worthwhile program, which was selected and arranged in the order of playing with a good judgement which is often noticeably absent from other symphonic programs heard in this city.

Skullduggery At the Crossroads

Rumours reaching the University Press at a late hour last night indicated that some jokes were told to admiring audiences in the little red schoolhouse. It is not yet known whether or not the McGill Senate intends to take any action in the matter, but the newly elected president of the schoolchildren is known to have removed all visible evidence of the dastardly proceedings and taken them down to a certain city dump on Queen St. where the said Senate is unlikely to carry their investigation.

An intelligent company of the C.O.T.C. entered the building shortly after the evidence had been evacuated, but it was thrown off the scent by a large sign declaiming the virtues of one Laski along with countless peculiarly marked hunks of paper bearing the legend: "Do you or do you not want to have a course in Political Science?"

Ostensibly, therefore, there seems to be no possible means by which the culprits ean be brought to order. However, the Assistant Night Editor of The Varsity has uncarthed a clue which may yet run them to earth—he found the proofs of some jokes which were to be inserted in a certain hybrid magazine called the Turkey-Duck which is spasmodically published by schoolchildren. Devising a fiendish plan of entrapment, he proceeded to replace the said proofs with his prof's proofs of certain other jokes originally intended to go into said prof's latest lectures.

Then he bribed the nightwatchman witb a black market coke to sneak a copy of the thus revised Turkey-Duck onto the Registrar's desk, whence it would automatically be mailed out to the McGill Senate.

He went home bappy—the cad.

Speaking Of Sport

By Roger Conant

IT BETTER BE A SWEATER!

Yes—it's going to be sweater night tomorrow when Meds put on the last show of this Athletic Night season. For sweaters are compulsory—all must flaunt their school colours. If you haven't a "T" or your college letter, your last school's letter will do, whether it be Runnymede, Lisgar or Little Rock Creek C.I. A a bare minimum a N. of T. crest must be sported. Tbese are the orders issued by the Meds "A" Night G.H.Q., which augurs for a rather colourful and interesting, if you know what we mean, evening.

THE LAST OF THE SIX...

Yes, with a sigh of disappointment, we note that tomorrow is the last of the Athletic Nights. For, apart from giving us something to write about every Friday, they have become, through several seasons of expansion, a part of this wartime campus. They have meant six Saturday nights of inexpensive entertainment and relaxation for a large number of U. of T. students and their friends. And in the last three years the popularity, as shown through rising attendance levels, has increased considerably. In 1941 the six nights garnered a total of 5,274 visitors. Then in 1942 the total rose 1,700 to 6,991 admissions. Of course these are paid admission figures and when the number of committee and participants passes that are usually issued is added, it reacher quite a sum total. In comparison—this year promises to top the mark, for 6,068 have clicked the turnstiles so far. So, if 923 two-bit pieces click the cash register before 9:30 tomorrow night a new record will be established and we are quite certain that that will take place.

AND WHAT'S ON TAP...

Well, the Meds have put some new ideas into their line-up. For instance, the Women's Interfaculty Swim Meet will grace the portals of the swimming pool when the champions in all swim events of the University will mix it up for campus supremacy. All sorts of diving and ornamental swimming will entertain the eager multitudes between the events. Then in the upper gym the Interfaculty Gymnastic Meet will give the throng that didn't go to the basketball game a few minutes of entertainment as the participants give the numerous assortment of bars and horses a workout. Then down in the big gym between games the noble art of high-jumping will be displayed by three top performers of the University. Bill Orr, V Meds, and Art Jackes, II S.P.S., who took the outdoor meet, and Bill Kerr, I S.P.S., who copped the indoor meet, will compete. Then at half-time, Hec Phillips' proteges will have a workout in a little track meet that should result in some keen action and spectacular spectating. Phil Shackleton, Tom Barnett, Roy Foulis, Bob Delaney, Gord Lorrimer and Frank Fordyce, the six best distance men of the University, will run a mile that in all possibility will be one of the fastest run on the indoor track. Shackleton won the event in record time a few weeks ago and the other five are just rounding into condition and out to pin back the U.C. freshmen's ears. A three-lap grudge relay will also be run off as a Meds and a School squad meet. Bob Virtue, George Lewis and Johnny Wilford will challenge the Schoolsome of Pat McDonnough, Chuck MacDonald and Verne Booth. A lot of interest should be stirred up by these events—but a word of warning to bystanders—if you're upstairs when the track events are slated, please aid, not hinder, the Medsmen who will attempt to clear and keep clear the track.

Faludi Attacks Toronto Slums

"Canada and Japan art the only two countries in the world which have no public housing," stated Dr. Faludi in his second lecture to the women of the University taking the Community Needs and Resources course as their war work.

"It is amazing that such slums as exist in Toronto should be extant in the age of the radio, aeroplane, and television" he continued. The causes, he attributed to the fact that Canadian wages are not in proportion with the cost of building and rent, and that the cost of building is so high, that lower income people are unable to pay rent demanded for decent living conditions.

In Europe and the United States, housing schemes have been put into effect through the medium of government loans paid back through rent, whereby all classes of people can be housed in up-to-date modern houses. This costs them only one-fifth of their income while the average Canadian pays considerably more for much less.

"As the war continues, the situation gets worse, for old houses are wearing out, and more are not being built," the speaker explained. "The number of houses needed yearly to supply the population of Canada is 65,000 houses and we are already 200,000 behind."

Dr. Faludi described the possibilities presented in Canada and the objections which must be overcome before an adequate housing policy can be put into effect here. He also stressed the necessity of educating the public to the possibilities of modern housing so that a demand will be created great enough to overcome the existing opposition.

Vic Debate Team Defeats McGill

Journeying to Montreal last Friday to engage a McGill team in an intercollegiate debate, Jack Coleman and Marg Albright, representing the Victoria College Debating Parliament, supported the affirmative of the subject, "Resolved, that the United States and Canada should effect a political union after the war, providing that no larger union is possible."

Defeating the McGill team of Winston Mahbir and Joan Macfarlane, the Vic duo achieved their second victory over McGill in two years, having defeated them in a debate on this campus last year.

With a crowd of 40 present in the Students' Union, the judges gave the decision to the visiting debaters, basing half their points on expression and deportment and half on material.

War Forces U.S. Coeds To Leave Some Colleges

Washington, Feb. 25—According to a statement given recently by Mr. Paul McNutt, the chairman of the War Manpower Commission, it is likely that educational opportunity for women in the U.S.A. will be destroyed in co-educational colleges taken over for the military specialized training program.

Mr. McNutt said that the colleges, while maintaining their standards and the quality of their students, at the same time must accommodate themselves to the pressure of total war.

AND FOR THE BIG GAME...

We won't say very much. We can only echo that, despite the Blues' string of losses, it should be a good game. For didn't the Stevensmen beat Manning Depot before by almost 20 points? Yes, comes the reply, but the airmen have a much stronger team now. Well, suffice it to say Captain Tettmar will lead his following of Stu Scott, Don Gibson, Gord Wallace, Gene Durocher and Murray Thomson in an attempt to end the season as they started—with a victory. However, gloom still rests in the Blues' camp—as a matter of fact—when coach Stevens was asked for his starting line-up tomorrow he simply answered, "Does it matter?"

At last our hockey victors have been crowned — and Vic's girls who were beaten last year by one lonely point, have redeemed themselves in grand fashion by winning by a single goal. We prophecied that this would be a fight to the finish and an interesting set of games to watch—So now everybody, and especially us, are very happy indeed about the brand of hockey our finals produced. St. Hilda's deserve a lot of praise for their noble efforts—they're a grand team.

This afternoon the Badminton tournament will get under way down at Margaret Eaton with a substantial entry of singles' contestants. The first singles' players from the various Colleges are requested to appear from 3:30 to 5:00 for their games and if there is any doubt as to the classification, please get in touch with your respective reps before the deadline. The second singles' players will continue the tournament on Saturday morning at 11:15 and the doubles will be played off on Tuesday. By Thursday, the finals should appear if all goes well and everyone comes along to play off her games on time. This afternoon also there will be a volleyball game at 4:30 between Trinity and P.H.E.

Swimming circles are really buzzing 'round about now and all is in readiness for the grand finale tomorrow night. But there are jaust a few final words from Freddie Baxter for the contestants. She would like them all to gather around the Hall Porter's Desk in Hart House at 7:30 promptly—because the Meet is scheduled to start at 8:00. If the divers want to change their optional dive or if the ornamental swimmers feel inclined to change their tricks, they may do so if they just will remember to let Freddie know about it as soon as they arrive at the pool. So now, it's off to the races—and don't forget to drop around to the pool on Saturday 'round about 8:00 to see all the mermaids compete for laurels.

Butler Traces Price Control

period known as the 'phony war'," said Mr. Butler. "At tbat time a great many plans for expanding war industries and cutting down peace-time industries were put into effeet. The whole scheme was accelerated after May, 1940, when an act of Parliament gave the government complete power over all persons and property in tbe country.

"The present war economy has produced something in the nature of an economic revolution," said Mr. Butler, "and I feel that considerable effort will be made to maintain this during peace time. During this war people in Britain have been thrown together as never before, and this has had a social effect which I am optimistic enough to think will remain."

Reduction of civil consumption has made possible to produce a very extraordinary quantity of war materials, said Mr. Butler. Last year the shipyards produced more vessels than were produced at the peak of the last war, and with 100,000 fewer men. Britain's total production of aircraft, he said, was last year certainly larger than that of Germany and it will be this year too, be believed.

Mr. Butler described the government control of prices, wages and rents. This has been rigorously controlled to such an extent that black market activity has been stamped out almost completely.

The payment of subsidies by the government in order to maintain really low prices for four or five essential commodities has kept them within everyone's reach and has helped to maintain morale in the country.

Varsity reporters often regard the managing staff as heartless critics who sit all nigbt with pencil poised ready to cut every spark of originality from their carefully prepared stories and then relegate them to the most inconspicuous corner of the last page. Witness one semi-resigned scribe who rushed into the Press the other night and offered a neatly folded manuscript with the entreaty: "I don't care what you do to it. You can cut it down to nothing, but give it a big play, eh!"

In these days of bot news and fast coverage, it's all to easy for long-eared reporters to jump to the wrong conclusion. At the Press one night a campus couple of long standing were found huddled over an elaborate blueprint excitedly discussing the arrangement of varions pieces of furniture. Fellow newsmen were offering congratulations and all but throwing rice when the conferring couple came to and protested: "Honest, fellas, it's just an architecture assignment."

* * *

These "come single, go home double" affairs may have their advantages but the silliest things can happen. Picture a recent event: Boys meets Girl on dimly-lit dance floor just before curfew and asks if he can take ber home. Girl is willing and goes off to get her coat. Girl returns just in time to see Boy rush up to another girl of same general appearance and say, "Come on, let's go." New girl stares and Boy says, "Well? I asked to take you home, didn't I?" New girl blinks and he hustles her out the door.

Fadeout.

Women are granted the privilege of changing their minds but what about the ones who just can't make them up? We spied a friend striding lectureward across the campus the other day and the Spirit of Spring prompted us to be sociable and ask her destination. "Oh," she said gravely, still keeping determinedly on her way, "I haven't decided."

* * *

Reporters are bound to type mistakes but once in a while they still manage to convey sense wbether it's the original idea or not. For example, a recent story appeared on the managing desk urging students to hand in applications for scholarships "financed by the Reuben Wells Leonard Request Fund."

Ask and you shall receive!

Embarrassing moments come to everyone but few people have the recuperative powers of one Varsity co-eds. She was walking home from a lecture in broad daylight on a well-populated street when her skirt fell off. Stepping gracefully out of the hobbling folds she picked it up, folded it neatly over her arm and continued on her way.

Frailty, thy name is zipper!

miittedly the voice has not been well trained and is threadbare from constant use, but it has potentialities which Mr. Kiepura may be able to develop in the future beyond their present state. These inherent qualities of vigor and effectiveness were not realized last night because of insufficient control and a tendency to turn each song into a series of high notes with vague connecting links in between. Stll, controlled or uncontrolled, the vigor was definitely there and was appreciated by the large audience at Massey Hall.

I don't remember having heard Deems Taylor's May Day Carol before. Characterless and diluted but with a superficial veneer of urbanity, its general atmosphere will be familiar to anyone who recalls Mr. Taylor's criticism. The Russian folk-songs had a decided gypsy flavour, and were particularly suited to Mr. Kiepura's talents, which were not content with expressing themselves vocally but overflowed into gestures of a strongly rhyhtmic nature.

let's go places

Last night your reporter was privileged to see one of the finest offerings of its kind that Hollywood has turned out in a long time. "Commandos Strike at Dawn," at the Imperial, contained some very fine action of the commando type, exhibiting in realistic fashion just what happens when these hardened shock-troops decide to play Indian a la world war II. However, the acting honours go to Paul Muni for his usual polished performance.

IMPERIAL
"COMMANDOS STRIKE AT DAWN"

The story is inclined to be sensational rather than realistic, but the general tenor of the reel is pleasing because it contains many light touches.

The program is rounded out by a fairly comical cartoon and a selection of the first movement of Shostokovitch's Seventh (Leningrad) Symphony.

Honour United Nations Leaders At Friday Convocation; Each Of Four Gives Address On Different Aspect Of Present World Crisis And Post-War Prospects

Mulock Confers Degrees; Ralston Praises Universities' War Effort; Butler Stresses Permanence of Allies Work

BURTON LAUDED

Friday afternoon in a ceremony the spirit of which was typified in the C.O.T.C. Band's renditions of our national anthem and that of our neighbouring republic to the south, Sir William Mulock, Chancellor of the University, conferred the degree of Doctor of Laws, honoris causa, on Harold B. Butler, Minister at the British Embassy in Washington, Hon. J. L. Ralston, Canadian Minister of National Defence, Field Marshal Sir John Dill, former Chief of the British General Staff and present head of the British military mission in the United States, and Sumner Welles, United States Under-Secretary of State.

Ralston on Universities

Col. Ralston expressed the appreciation felt by the "people, government, and Department of National Defence" for the "practical and effective measures put into effect by the universities of which this university is the centre." He spoke with gratification of the "unceasing, indefatigable effort to make the universities tell in this war."

Referring to methods adopted by the university to do this—by the institution of new courses and the acceleration of others, Col. Ralston congratulated the university in particular on the success of the No. 1 Army Course.

Speaking of the special training for women which is now under way, Col. Ralston looked forward to the time when it might be possible for the university and military officials to work out a system for the institution of an Officers' Training Corps for women.

He also recognized two other aspects of the universities' war effort: the work of their staff in giving counsel and advice to the men going out from the universities, who are uncertain as to just where their duty lies; and the contribution of those members of the faculty who remained and whose work has been considerably increased as a result of the enlistment of a large number of their colleagues.

"To those, engaged as much as the armed forces to rid the world of the terror of the despots and the fear of slavery, in the name of the Navy, Army and Air Force, I salute my newly acquired alma mater, and say 'Carry On!'" Col. Ralston concluded.

United Nations Co-operation

Mr. Butler stressed the co-operation being displayed by the United Nations. When one sees the day to day co-operation between the naval, military, and air staffs and in the joint boards which have been set up, one cannot fail to be deeply impressed by the reality of the alliance of the United Nations against the Axis, he said.

He pointed out that toil, anguish, and sacrifice will be necessary before victory is achieved, but that the end is not doubted.

"Then," he continued, "we shall have to shoulder another great task together. The task of peace will be as formidable

One of University's Functions to Supply Leaders, Potentially and Urgently Needed, Dill Says

TO SET RIGHT STANDARDS

The function of universities as sources of potential and urgently needed leaders was stressed by Sir John Dill, head of the British Military Mission in the United States, addressing Convocation Friday.

From this great university as in the past, leaders must come—men af character, energy, ability and singleness of purpose who will devote their lives to service of one kind or another for the common good, he said.

"Leadership is all," Sir John continued. "There never was a bad military unit where the leadership was good. So in every community, happy and sound living in the last analysis depends on good leaders—wise men who will set the right standards, influence opinion in the right direction and give of their knowledge and skill for the betterment of their fellows."

The old world is dying, he continued, and the new leaders must step fearlessly into the light of the new opportunities which await them, he said.

Referring to Prime Minister Mackenzie King and the late Sir Frederick Banting, Sir John said "Toronto University has given great leaders to your nation and to the Great Commonwealth of Nations to which we both belong."

He paid tribute to the men in the Armed Forces—especially those already overseas, who have endured long periods of inactivity far from home. Of the attack on Dieppe, he said, to attack—aye and to break—the defences of a strongly and scietifieally defended coast line, is a feat which has no parallel in modern war. Many lessons were learned, the most outstanding of which is the confidence the men showed in their officers and scientifically defended coast line, is augers well for the future of the Canadian Army, he said.

"In the days of battle which lie ahead, Canada's fighting men will have a part to play—and I believe a great part. They will not fail you," he concluded.

Welles Recommends Machinery for Studying "Freedom from Want"; Cites Canadian-American Example

STRESSES UNDERSTANDING

Machinery to promote better world-wide economic relations was indicated as desirable by Sumner Welles, Under-secretary of State of the United States, after receiving an honourary degree from the University.

"I believe that if the United Nations were to set up machinery for the purpose of assembling and studying all international aspects of problems under the general heading of freedom from want, and for assembling all the pertinent facts and considerations relating thereto, and for jointly analyzing all facts and considerations relating to measures or policies proposed for furthering the end in view, the controversies and conflicts of policy which have so long embittered relations in the international economic field, and therefore generally, might largely disappear," he stated.

Mr. Welles explained that on Nov. 20 last our two Governments, in an exchange of notes, expressed their intention to do something concrete about their declaration of aims—as embodied in the Atlantic Charter—by discussing soon with other United Nations how we two and other like-minded nations can agree upon a program to carry out these aims.

Speaking of the advantages of such a United Nations' study, he said that the plans of one government or group of governments may seem sound enough in the light of their own interests, but may contain flaws which are visible only from the viewpoint of other governments or countries. If the study to which I have referred did no more than prevent the crystallization in one country or group of countries of ideas which are objectionable from the viewpoint of others, it would serve a highly useful purpose, be said.

"If at the conclusion of this war the Governments of the United Nations are not afforded by their peoples the opportunity of collaborating together in effective policies of recovery, or of assuming a joint responsibility for making completely sure that the peace of the world is not again violated, there can be no result other that utter disaster.

"We have evolved here in the New World a system of international relationsbips which constitutes perhaps the highest achievement in the sphere of practical international living which ciliized man has so far created.

"The creation of that same kind of decent international relationship by all peoples is the objective today on the United Nations. I am confident that after the unconditional surrender of our common enemies that objective will be attained."

Army Course Inspected by Ralston And Complimented on Fine Showing

The No. 1 Canadian Army Course was reviewed by National Defense Minister, James L. Ralston, Friday noon in front of the Royal Ontario Museum. During the inspection he showed an interest in many of the men, inquiring where they were from and their future military ambitions. Following inspection the men broke ranks and Mr. Ralston complimented Major C. M. Howarth, Commanding Officer of the unit, on its fine showing.

In addressing the men he said, "I thank you all for your part in this experiment. Your instructors and the University have done their part, but without your co-operation and hard work and perseverance in a hard course, the experiment would have failed. . . . What you have done has resulted in the decision of other universities to start similar courses."

During Mr. Ralston's informal talk, Field Marshal Sir John Dill quietly arrived and although he did not review the 150 men, he added his approval to that of the Defense Minister.

George Williams, Mt. A. Students Are Reported

Montreal, Feb. 28—(CUP)—In accordance with National War Services Regulations the names of 24 first-year male undergraduates in the day division of Sir George Williams College were reported last week to the Momibilaztion Section, National Selective Service, as having failed or been absent from the mid-term examination.

Students in the second, third and fourth years in the degree courses who failed the mid-term examination will be reported in a supplementary list within a few days.

The list of 24 students reported to Selective Service includes six who were absent from the examination because of enlistment for active service, and five whose failure or absence, in the opinion of the college authorities, was for reasons beyond the students' control. In these five cases it is being recommended, as the regulations allow, that the students concerned be permitted to continue their studies.

18 From Mt. Allison

Sackville, N.B., Feb. 28— (CUP) — Due to failures in mid-term exams, 18 students of Mount Allison University have been reported to the Selective Service Board.

Chien to Speak on China At Labour Club Tonight

Doctor Chien, of the department of Applied Mathematics, will address a meeting of the Student Labour Club tonight at 8:15 p.m. at Wymilwood. Dr. Chien was sent here on a Boxer Fellowship from China and will talk about his country.

Since graduating from the University of Peking, where he was very active in student affairs, Dr. Chien has written many original scientific papers. His wife, and a child whom he has never seen, are still in China and Dr. Chien hopes to rejoin them in a year to continue his work in China.

The Labour Club wishes to invite all those who are interested to attend this meeting, especially those who will be at the Arts and Lettes Club meeting

Meds Club to Hear Routley Tonight On The Future of Medical Practice

"The Future of Medical Practice in Canada" will be the topic under discussion at tonight's meeting of the University Arts and Letters Club at 6:30 p.m. in Wymilwood. "Although this is the first topic in medicine we have had since we started aiming at a University rather than a purely Medical club," Gordon Millar, IV Meds, chairman of the club, told The Varsity, "we feel that it is a subject of vital iuterest to both Medical and Arts students. Our speaker, Dr. T. C. Routley, is Canada's leading authority on state medicine, and we feel very fortunate in being able to get him to speak to us."

Dr. Routley is the Permanent Secretary of the Canadian Medical Association and is at present working in Ottawa with government officials on a scheme of national health insurance. A business trip to Toronto made Dr. Routley available as a speaker for the Arts and Letters Club, and the meeting, regularly held on Tuesday evening, was changed to Monday to coincide with his visit.

Dr. Routley is a graduate in Medicine of this University and a member of Alpha Omega Alpha honourary medical fraternity in the class of 1915. During the last war he served for two years with the Royal Army Medical Corps, and then transferred to the Royal Canadian Army Medical Corps. In 1918 he became the secretary of the Ontario Medical Association, a position from which he has only recently retired to devote his whole energy to his duties as Permanent Secretary of the Canadian Medical Association. He has held this last post since 1923.

In 1930 he was made a Fellow of the Royal College of Physicians. He is now a member of the college. In 1931 Queen's University conferred an honourary LL.D. on him.

His present work on health insurance is expected to result in the first great social change in this country after the present war. The effect of the scheme is a topic of extreme interest among doctors today, and members of the Medical Society point out that its effects will be strongly felt by everyone in the country and urge with special emphasis that students from all faculties attend the meeting. As usual there well be a half-hour of discussion following the main speech by Dr. Routley.

CONVOCATION

Friday's special Convocation of the University of Toronto was an impressive academic spectacle. The colourful scene as principals, deans and professors clad in their many-hued robes provided a backdrop for the visiting dignitaries receiving their honorary degrees while a packed Convocation Hall applauded is a bit of university life that will live in the memories of those who attended. Symbolically and actually it was a great event.

There was material contained in the speeches delivered there for a score of editorials. Unfortunately the year is drawing to a rapid close as far as activity on the part of The Varsity is concerned; we have little space now at our disposal except for the drawing-together of the threads of editorial policy we have maintained this year in a final effort to inculcate some few of our ideas into the minds of our readers.

But for this purpose, there was an abundance of material placed at our disposal Friday. All four of the men who received degrees, and also the President as he presented them to the Chancellor, voiced sentiments in direct line with many of the things we have said more than once in these columns. Particularly were stressed the present magniture of the war effort of Canadian universitiies, and the necessity—now—of constructive thought relative to post-war planning.

On the latter theme, Mr. Welles struck the key-note when he observed: "If we do not make a start now, there is danger that we shall be brought together to make the peace with as many (post-war) plans as there are governments." Along the same line, Dr. Butler said, "For peace we need the same resolution, unity of purpose, energy and faith as for war. . . . We must make of the United Nations a permanent reality." Speaking of the post-war role of universities, Mr. Welles urged that they "endeavour to insure that young men and women discharged from the armed forces shall have ample opportunity for education and useful employment."

Regarding the universities' current war effort, most significant remarks were those of Dr. Cody in his presentation of Col. Ralston for his degree: "Every Faculty — including Arts (with emphasis, and evoking spontaneous applause)—is playing its part." and again: "I would assure the Minister that the universities of Canada are not havens of refuse for shirkers; but rather are centres of learning where men may be better trained to serve King and Country." To which Col. Ralston replied that, "The universities of Canada have been trying to tie in in every possible way with the war effort. . . . The universities are engaged just as much as are the armed forces in the struggle to rid the world of despotism and fear of slavery." Col. Ralston also expressed appreciation of the "practical and effective measures put into effect by the universities of Canada, of which this University is the centre," with special reference to the value of the No. 1 Army Course. In similar vein of praise for the work the universities are carrying on, Sir John Dill said, "From this University—as in the past—leaders must come; men and women fitted to serve the community in a variety of ways."

Indeed, as we sat in the press-box of Convocation Hall Friday afternoon we wondered—if the reader will forgive such gross whimsy — whether perhaps the gentlemen who were receiving their degrees before us had not been filching some of their better ideas through hasty perusal of our back files. But we discarded the unworthy suspicion with the self-laudatory thought that all great men, reputedly, think alike.

A final, serious word about another remark by Col. Ralston. Prefacing his prediction with the stipulation that "This is not a Government announcement," he suggested that sometime shortly officers' training corps for women undergraduates intending to enter the armed forces might be estblished throughout Canadian universities. Though his remark was not specific on this point, we gather that he meant three such corps might be established—one for candidates for each of the fighting forces auxiliary arms. Such a step, we believe, would be welcomed by many of the women on this campus, as another of the compulsory forms of war-training they are now undergoing. We have a slight supplementary suggestion to offer. If an insufficient number of women volunteer for such training courses to render establishment of three corps difficult, perhaps the alternative measure of establishing one common course as a sort of evolutionary step might be employed. Such a move has already been unofficially rumoured in some campus circles, and it would be one that The Varsity would support, as a further contribution to the part that university students and graduates are playing to win the war.

Madhouse!

The Twentieth Century is undoubteldly a remarkable era in which to live. We were thinking this the other evening as we turned on our bedside radio and swung the dial. As the needle moved from one end of the lighted oblong to the other, pausing for a few seconds at each of the available stations, it sounded—according to our hasty jottings— like this:

"Mild; and for downrright goodness, when you order beer, be sure to say 'Make Mine Manrell's' " . . . "news from here." Long pause. Piano music and thunderous applause . . . "Before he could reach Turkey, the announcement was made that another man would go there instead. Another neutral country, Spain . . . " . . . Hawaian band playing lugubrious melodies. . . . "Already three such bills, all sponsored by Texas senators, are seething in the lobby. I'll have more news in a minute, but now a word from Grove's Cold Tablets." . . . Rhumba band with castenets front and centre. . . . "The divisions defending the eastern sector. Tanks . . ." Loud burst of static . . . "McArthur reported. Washington —The House today considered . . ." . . . Heavy Oxford accent remarking: "Up there, heavy shelling is still going on between our forward units and the enemy, while the enemy is still in possession of a good many positions high up in the hills." . . . "American Flying Fortresses paid a visit to Brest on the French Catst. Our flyers this evening called it an uneventful raid." . . . Synthetic hill-billy telling his listeners: "There are 25 lessons in all, yet it costs you less than six cents a lesson. Never before has Dave Miner been able to offer such a simplified method of learning to play the piano by ear." . . . Orchestra with a xylophone in the foreground playing "Ain't Misbehavin'." . . . ". . . felling in Congress. He said it was a temporary feeling which would work itself out in the end." . . . "And on this page too, a full-length biography of Claire Booth Luce, the glamour girl of Congress." . . . Drum solo engaged in by a man who we judged was under the influence of marijuana. . . . Trumpet solo by a man apparently attempting unsuccessfuly to blow his lungs out. . . . ". . . police headquarters, but one passed through and didn't stop. The vending machine is still at headquarters but not the money and chewing gum it contained." . . . "What is it? Well, Esso engineers describe it as a new, solid-flow, catalytic gas ingredient." . . . "Came down on Romfel's right." . . . "Little was known of Japanese air strength before Pearl Harbour." . . . Impassioned tenor with adenoids: "A heart that's true; there are such things." . . . Band with its brass section gone stark mad. . . . "Of course playing for time. That's the German game in Africa, because as long as the Allies are fighting in Africa they aren't in Europe." . . . "I'll tell you all how to send for your weather-house later. . . ." . . . "Boys will feature on their program of recorded music." . . . "These are important messages of importance to every Philadelphian." . . . "that the Red Cross is asking for blood. They want a pint of blood . . . " . . . "Not only the glory trail that they hope for them, but may even end in the Coliseum in Indianapolis March 20." . . . Feminine vocalist with minimum of personal reserve, chirping: "You can beat me, you can treat me bad—I only love you." . . . Laconic voice of police operator: "Three dollars and 323. Go ahead." Bee-eep . . . Bee-eep . . . "Stolen Washington 9:30 p.m. date. That is all."

We clicked off the radio and went to sleep, reflecting again how remarkable is the era in which we are priviliged to live.

L'ENVOI

When the ycar's last Cat has been written, and the Catitor's twisted and dried,
When the oldest art critic has quitted, the season's last symphony fried,
Then shall we rest, and faith, we shall need it, — lie down for an issue or two
Till the master of all good newsmen shall rope us all in anew.

And those that were cubs shall be happy —they shall sit in a mastheader's chair
And write both the Cat and the Hither, till they get in the Editor's hair.
They will have no deadline to haunt them, they will always have lots on the ball,
They will night edit daily and love it, and never be tired at all.

They will never have too little copy, and ne'er will the issue be tight,
They will ne'er be misled by relcases 'bout people named L. Austin Wright.
And all will get "A's" in their essays, and throughout the year they will cram,
And ne'er shall the Senate report them to draft boards for failing exams.

Singing For Fun

Hart House Glee Club

If the Sunday Evening Concert of the Hart House Glee Club had offered nothing but the sheer enthusiasm of the club's personnel, the concert would have been well worth while. It offered a good deal more—Dr. Peaker and his ambitious cohorts saw to that—but it was the enthusiasm that won the audience most decisively.

A group of people who sing because it gives them pleasure is a rarity among the English-speaking nations. We are apparently a people who do almost nothing for pure pleasure, especially in so-called recreational activities. The value of the Glee Club as a purely pleasure-giving organization cannot be over-estimated.

There were certainly occasions during the program when members of the audience felt that the performance could be improved upon. But there were very few members of the audience who didn't enjoy themselves.

EDGAR SIMON.

A Certain Sameness

Helmut Blume

The piano recital of Mr. Helmut Blume on Friday night had several distinct merits, but as an integrated program it was not what it should have been. There was too much similarity of content in the numbers (except the first two by Bach, which were transcribed from the organ). Mr. Blume shows an easy mastery of even the most difficult technique, and a wide range of expression, but this same expression does not always appear to convey a true felling of emotion.

He commenced with a Bach-Busoni Organ Choral Prelude, the slow and pensive melodies of which were impaired by a bareness of tone in the piano version.

The second number was the Bach-Liszt version of the Organ Prelude and Fugue in A Minor, a work which sounded just as good on the piano as on the organ. Easly the outstanding part of the program, the Fugue with its fluent melody and clear tones was executed with a truly brilliant technique.

The Chopin Fantasy in F. Minor was played to bring out its themes in an interesting and clear manner. The Hungarian Peasant Songs by Bartok which followed are very modern in character; Mr. Blume brought out the rather weird phrases and unorthodox harmonies very well. The finale was the stirring Polonaise in E Major by Liszt, played with boldness and assurance, but slurred by overuse of the pedal in the climaxes.

Varsity Cagers Down Manning Pool Squad 68-33

Wallace Gets 23 Points For Blues In Easy Victory

Stevens' Squad Maintains Comfortable Lead Throughout Game as Air-tight Zone Defence Blocks Air Force

DEPOT TEAMWORK WEAK

By Jim Paton

Paced by Gord Wallace, who amassed a total of 23 scoring points, a third of his team's total, Coach Stevens' big Blue team waltzed to an easy victory over the R.C.A.F. from Manning Depot Saturday evening. Varsity led 32-14 at the half-way mark and at full time the final score read Varsity 68, Manning Depot 33.

The outstanding feature of the game was the air-tight zone defence thrown up by the Varsity quintet and also the heady basket work of Gord Wallace and Stew Scott. Gord was top scorer with 23 points and Stew followed with 14. Murray Thomson was good for nine points, in addition to turning in a splendid defensive game.

Cec Lowry was the top marksman for the visitors, accounting for five baskets, all of them in the last half when the Airmen were finding it hard to get in close.

Johnny Kew, who appeared here two weeks ago in the Trenton-Varsity thriller, also turned in a good game for the Depot.

Like most sporting outfits from the Depot, Saturday night's crew couldn't seem to get together on their passing and small wonder—most of the boys hadn't even been introduced to each other.

In the first two minutes of play Varsity took a 7-2 lead on baskets by Thomson, Wallace and Scott and from there in the Airmen didn't have a chance as the Blues steadily applied the pressure. Shooting a trifle erratically in the early part of the game, the Blues settled down considerably in the last half and proceeded to jump farther into the lead. At one point they rattled in 26 points with but one reply from the Green team.

Johnny Wilson, a former Varsity and SPS basketeer of note, played for the visitors and showed well despite some very rough luck around the basket.

Manning Depot—Wilson (4), Waxman (5), Holden (3), Lowry (10), Douglas (2), Brownell (2), Kew (5), Carrigan (2).

Varsity — Gibson (8), Scott (14), Wallace (23), Thomson (9), Tettmar (4), Meschino (4), Booth (2), Waldon (2), Goldstein (2).

The characters of Hamlet and Polonius, taken by J. E. Armesto and J. Gaffney, respectively, being the only permanent cast. Speaking Of Sport

By Bud Smith

WAY TO HOP!

Well the Blues couldn't have chosen a better game with which to end their season. The sight of the Varsity boys in full victory stride was almost enough to make one forget the last few unlucky contests. Mind you we're not implying that the competition Varsity faced was anything sensational. Only two members of the Manning Depot squad that played here last month were present on this occasion. In fact, so fast do team members change, two of the green-clad boys met for the first time down in the dressing room before the game, having been just posted to Toronto Friday.

But notwithstanding the weak opposition, we think that Warren Steven's boys played their best game of the year, far above the standard of some of their previous performances. And it was good to see Gord Wallace, who has played standout ball all season, close out in such a grand fashion. No man on the team this year has played as consistently or as well as Wallace, who hung up a neat twenty-three points during the evening. We may have the opportunity of seeing him in action next year with one of the numerous Air Force teams which visit the Massey Mansion.

Stu Scott was another of the Blue boys who stood out in Saturday's struggle. We wish Stu had sprung into action sooner in the season as his last two performances have been excellent indeed, providing a great deal of drive behind the Blues. Scott scored fourteen points altogether and all of them were clever shots. In addition to this offensive power Scott proved an able partner for Captain Ken Tettmar on the defense. Murray Thomson strikes us as a very effective player who is as consistent as they come. And Don Gibson seemed to be rounding back into form on Saturday. His shots, which were off somewhat in the preceeding contests began to click and he fashioned several masterpieces during the evening.

GOOD GOOD . . .

At this time we would like to toss a small bundle of orchids towards the Meds committee in charge of the final Athletic Night. It was a good show all round and the track meet was quite a welcome innovation. The high jump was very well contested and a high quality of jumping was diplayed. And the mile run was one of the most thrilling features of the whole evening. Foulis and Shackleton really put on an exciting finish which brought the crowd to it feet—literally and figuratively as the case may be! It might also be noted that once again the attendance figures have jumped this year, gaining about five hundred over last years figurs. This has been a very successful series of "Nites" and all who devoted their efforts to make them a success are to be commended.

DON'T THINK IT AIN'T BEEN CHARMING!

And while the "A" nights are silently folding their tents and slipping away, we are also going to try on a couple of those canvas creations for size, and run—not walk—to the nearest exit, meaning this is our final Speaking of Sport (Boo! Rah!) Working on the "Varsity" has been fun, more fun than going to lectures would have been we guess, and we shed the odd silent tear at the thought of stopping. But issue "100" will soon be dropping in the frames, warning one and all of the approaching ogre—EXAMINATIONS, so it is perhaps just as well.

U.C. MERMAIDS VICTORIOUS IN FINAL SWIM TOURNEY

The galleries of Hart House around the good green pool were packed for almost the entirety of the women's swimming feature on Saturday, as U.C.'s red and white team swam to victory in the University finals, gaining 24 points in all. It was a fight to the finish and the spectators' applause grew as the evening waned on and the final relay started.

Vic was so close a second in this meet that it was only after the swimming had been over for five minutes that the officials scored up 20 definite points for her mermaids. The P.H.E. Juniors were a very close third with 19 points and their Seniors were next with seven points to their credit.

In the first event, the 50-yard free style, Connie O'Connor of the P.H.E. Juniors, swam beautifully and finished a good first. Mae McKinney and Barb Elliot came in second and third for U.C., starting the ball rolling for them. The diving, event number two, was gracefully won by Graham of U.C. Her compulsory head and back dives and her optional one-and-a-half flip were all beautifully executed with few ripples disturbing the water. Second in this event was Lyons, also of U.C. Her front jack was exceptionally well done and gained much applause from the gallery. There was only a margin of 2.1 between these two contestants and Lloyd of Vic and Patterson and Fletcher of St. Hilda's weren't far behind in their display of this aquatic art.

The Medley Relay of 150 yards was won by P.H.E. and in it the back stroke, butterfly stroke and crawl were used respectively. The next event on the program was the 50-yard breast stoke which Lloyd of Vic won, but in which Hinchcliffe showed good style as well. In the ornamental swimming finals, it was Hinchcliffe who came out the winner by a wide wargin. Her backward somersault with tuck won her high points. U.C.'s Lyons was second and with a good pendulum trick to her credit. O.T. and P.'s Riddell obtained third place thereby winning a point for her faculty.

In the 50-yard backstroke, Martin won for P.H.E. Juniors whilst Mae McKinney of U.C. came in second and Wallace of P.H.E. Seniors third. The style and diving exhibitions added interest to the feature and the latter, given by Beames, Northwood and Somerville, was tricky and entertaining.

The grand finale was the 100-yard free style relay which caused a great deal of splashing, a few hight cheers and reems of excitement. P. H. E. Junior, U.C. and St. Hilda's finished in that order and it was here that the Saints gained their point.

The Sportswoman

By Bill Nicholls

It was with the greatest degree of success that the mermaids invaded Hart House last Saturday evening, clad in last summer's sarongs, to stage the first athletic events held in the Athletic Night series.

Another new departure was the inclusion of the smaller faculties in the swim meet. In other years, unless a faculty could muster up at least six swimmers they could not enter. As a result, O.T., the Nurses and St. Mike's entered one or two outstanding performers to liven up the competition.

P. H. and E. decided to divide their ranks to add further to the entry list; the surprise was that the Juniors showed up best, running up 19 points, just five points short of the Red and White winners. The Seniors placed fourth, but could only snag seven points.

The Lillian Massey Building will witness volleyball games today and Wednesday. Today's game brings together Vic and P. and H. E. at 4:30. The first game on Wednesday: Vic v. Trinity at 4:00; the second: P. & H.E. v. U.C. Watch for further developments soon.

Games played on Friday and Saturday have cleared the air for the badminton finals at the Granite Club on Tuesday afternoon. The doubles finals have been changed so that they will be held on Thursday at 2:30, at Margaret Eaton.

Week-End Housing Conference Brings Together Varied Views About Architectural Planning

Toronto Architecture Professor Opens Series of Discussions of Various Aspects of Planned Housing

MET SATURDAY

"It would take three years to replan Toronto, but one year would give a basis on which to work, and the cost of the present scheme is estimated at 15 cents per capita for annum." stated Professors E. R. Arthur at the Housing Conference held this wee-end by the Ontario Association of Architects.

A round table discussion took place in Croft Chapter House, University College Saturday afternoon; this was followed by a dinner at the Toronto Club. Dinner speaker was Miss Catherine Bauer, American housing expert and author of "Modern Housing."

Those present at the Conference represented the many interests in the Housing problem—architectural, social, political, economic and technical. Six speakers had been asked to prepare speeches on these various viewpoints and after these had been delivered, the house was thrown open for discussion at the end of which Miss Bauer summed up and the meeting adjourned.

The Town Planning Need

Professor Arthur opened the series of speeches with a statement of the need of town-planning, and set the stage for subsequent speakers on specific aspects of the problem. He stressed the lack of planning already, and the even greater need which will exist after the war than now when we shall have to convert industries, construct public buildings and houses. He explained the new approach to the problem, considering it in terms of city blocks where great groups of people will live, shop, play and work. "Where streets were formerly the masters of the planner, they will now become the servants," he stated.

"If people realized the mess we would be in in respect to housing if the war were to end in six months time, they would demand immediate action," he continued. He then quoted figures from the 1941 census showing that 29 per cent of the population in 27 cities are overcrowded, thus requiring 110,000 new low cost dwelling houses.

In order to deal with the situation Professor Arthur would advocate the establishment of a Town-Planning Board composed of an architect, a traffic expert, a real estate expert, an economist and two aldermen (thus establishing contact with the municipal government on which it would depend for finances only). Working with the Board he would have a Housing Authority established. He then described the impetus which would be given to the building industry by a Public Housing movement and how the small builder might profit.

The Social Welfare Need

Rev. John Frank spoke on the Social Welfare need for housing. He stressed the need in rural communities which is sometimes greater than in the urban centres. He described the overcrowding and resulting evils in areas such as Moss Park, and stated that we should get at the removal of the causes of these evils rather than spend our time treating them in asylums, juvenile courts and police forces. He refuted the often expressed statement that these people "utterly lack intelligence," saying that their intelligence was not given a chance, but was beaten by the surroundings.

Alderman Frank's suggestions were for the increase in child and adult education in respect to housing through civics courses given in the schools and movies, stating that the lead in this education rested with the architects.

The Public Authorities Problem

The point of view of the public authorities was given by Mr. A. J. B. Gray, Deputy Minister of Municipal Affairs, who stressed the necessity of immediately getting the three governments together and deciding definitely who should initiate the scheme and what the financial situation is. "Until these aspects are clearly stated, and some government authority given, we shall just muddle along," he continued. In discussing the steps which would have to be taken, he explained that "much must be done to bring about just taxation on land."

The Construction Problem

"Housing will be the only hope for the construction industry after the war," stated Mr. A. S. Mathers, president of the National Construction Souncil, "for commercial and industrial building will be limited."

"To make large scale housing schemes possible, there must be large working capital, and to obtain this capital, the scepticism existing now must be removed. The problem of low cost housing will never be solved by private enterprise," he stated.

The Labour Problem

The attitude of labour toward housing was presented by Mr. Alfred Ward, past president of the Toronto Trades and Labour Council. He stated that labour is in favour of large scale public housing, for they conceive of it as their only hope of procuring decent living conditions at a low cost. They also view such projects as providing employment. Mr. Ward also stated his belief in the need for three types of building to go on simultaneously—garden suburbs, new towns, and the tearing down and rebuilding of existing cities.

The Political Problem

The last of the prepared speeches was given by Rodney Adamson, M.P., chairman of the Rehabilitation Committee of the Progressive Conservative Party, who gave the political point of view. He expressed the desire on the part of the politicians to co-operate, but that the citizens must realize the need and demand action. He also stated that the finances must come from Federal authorities as the tendency is for governments to become more and more centralized financially. He also stressed the need for presenting the ideas to the public in such a way that they will realize their importance and need. The need will then be for the municipalities to control the town-planning going on and prevent plans being carried out which will lead to more slum areas in the near future.

The Minutes of the Conference and Miss Bauer's address will be published by the Canadian Institute of International Affairs.

Women to Debate Beveridge Plan

An all-university debate to be held this evening at 8 p.m. in the Women's Union is the climax and final meeting of the year for the Women's Interfaculty Debating Union.

Speaking on the subject, "Resolved that the adoption of the Beveridge Plan would provide an adequate means of social security," Ruth Johnson, III Pass at Vic, and Marion Sirdevan, IV Mod. Lang. at St. Michael's, will uphold the affirmative. Their opponents, speaking for the negative, will be Betsy Mosbough, II Philosophy at U.C., and Catherine Bliss, 1 Honour Science at Trinity.

Because of complications due to compulsory war work and military training, the Union has had to resort to evening meetings, stated Marg. Dillon, treasurer, and so has had time difficulties which make longer activity impossible.

As usual admission is free and refreshments will be served.

Miss Catherine Bauer Gives Delegates Detailed Analysis of American Attempts at Public Housing Policies

SUMS UP DISCUSSION

Speaking at the dinner Saturday night which followed the afternoon session of the Housing Conference, Miss Catherine Bauer described the development of public housing in the United States. Miss Bauer has twice gone to Europe on Guggenheim Fellowships to study housing, and has also made studies for Fortune Magazine.

"A clear line cannot be drawn between public and private housing, for they are inextricably bound together," Miss Bauer stated. Land for public housing is bought from private owners; the architects working on the projects are the same, and the jobs are let out to private contractors. It also represents a brand new market for the private investors to find an opportunity for sound, long-term investments. Actually the only public aspect of the whole thing is the initiation and the ownership. More than 2 per cent of the population of the United States are now provided with public housing, or the number of people in a combination of Los Angeles and Detroit, which Miss Bauer said, is a fair and substantial start.

"Two basic factors were realized from the beginning in the United States," Miss Bauer said. The first of these was the necessity of housing as a national policy, and the second was the necessity of government subsidy.

The two main principles of the U.S. Housing Act are first, to rehouse slum dwellers in low rent housing (all these people must come from substandard houses); and second, decentralization. To this end, the Local Housing Authorities were set up to deal with the particular problems of each area. There are some 600 of these now in the United States. Their members are appointed usually by the mayor of the city and represent the various aspects of the problem.

The costs are shared by the Federal and Municipal governments. The Federal government makes loans covering up to 90 per cent of the cost and the Local Authority issues its own bonds.

Through the principle of "equivalent elimination," the Local Authority guarantees to destroy one dwelling for each new one put up. even when building in new areas.

The basic impulse of public housing is social. Most of the people living in slum areas are decent people who have been subject to recent misfortune. We must try to avoid a too parentalistic attitude in slum clearance. In speaking of the connection of health to housing, Miss Bauer quoted Dr. Wood, "Health means more than just staying alive."

In discussing the civic point of view, Miss Bauer said that there is no evidence yet to prove to what extent civic conditions have been improved by housing, but in improved areas juvenile delinquency has been reduced.

From the economic aspect, "We must have a healthy building industry to have prosperity," the speaker said. To this end the possible market must be extended in order to insure post-war prosperity. Public housing should be extended up to the lowest level of private enterprise, so that housing would be within the reach of everyone.

Much has been said about prefabrication with a view to reducing the cost of production, but actually little is gained thus as far as saving cost is concerned, although there are advantages to be gained in specific instances.

Operation Saves Czech Gunner

Montreal, Feb. 28 — (CUP) — The American Journal of Surgery describes an operation on a ruptured diaphragm by Dr. Fraser B. Burd, Professor of Surgery in the Medical Faculty of McGill University.

A Czech R.A.F. gunner, ruptured during a dive had several organs disrupted and about three quarters of the diaphragm destroyed. Dr. Gurd said that after returning the organs to their right place he was faced with the problem of closing this enormous opening between the abdomen and the thorax. He loosened a layer of the lining of the chest and spread it over the opening. The flyer will be able to fly again.

as the task of war."

He stressed the necessity of keeping the same "resolution, unity of purpose, energy and faith we are now applying in the war—the necessity of making the United Nations a 'permanent reality'."

"What we do as nations depends on what we think as individuals," Mr. Butler stated. "If we turn our eyes to the gods of money and material things—if our main aim is comfort and luxury—we shan't succeed in securing a good and lasting peace. However, if we cling to truth, justice, human kindness, tolerance, hard work and common sense—then we shall not fail," he said in conclusion.

Tid-bits from the College Papers

"Dr. Joslin began his address by stating that to-day a real diabetic patient is seldom seen, but that these are now 'transformed.' He told the histories of several of his early patients back in 1893, when 27 per cent of the diabetics entering hospitals died. Doctors at that time treated the disease with every type of drug known, including a mixture of arsenic and cod liver oil."

'Not Adequate' Is Verdict Of Interfaculty Debaters On Beveridge Report

U. C. and Trinity Defeat Motion of Victoria and St. Michael's, in Final Women's Debate of Season

HOUSE MAKES DECISION

In the final Women's Interfaculty Debate for the current year held last night in the Women's Union, Catherine Bliss of Trinity and Besty Mosbaugh of University College were successful in defeating the resolution that "the Beveridge Report provides an adequate means of social security." The members of the defeated government were Marion Sirdevan of St. Michael's and Ruth Johnstone of Victoria. The decision was reached by a majority vote of the House.

The first speaker for the government Marion Sirdevan, after making clear that the adequacy of the plan was to be determined by its suitability to present-day conditions, pointed out some of the weaknesses in our system, referring to unemployment, insurance and pension laws. The Prime Minister showed where the Beveridge plan overcame these weaknesses. "By doing much to remedy conditions that lead to lack of social security," she maintained, "the plan is adequate."

The Honourable Leader of the Opposition, Catherine Bliss, based her argument on the fact that the plan overlooks economic upheavals. In the Beveridge plan, "the assumption is made that there will be no unemployment to speak of. But there will always be unemployment." To prove this statement she quoted figures from the Canada Year Book. "The plan does not even attempt to deal with economic cycles, and until there is a way of regulating these business cycles no one will ever have social security."

Challenging the negative ,the second speaker for the government affirmed that Beveridge as an eminent economist had a well-planned scheme. "The fact that the cost of the plan is divided between the insured person, the employer and the National Exchequer, and that each of these should be able to pay their share without great difficulty makes it really cheaper for the insured person than the present hap-hazard system."

The final speaker of the evening, the Honourable Member from Mosbaugh, stated that in her opinion "the plan goes either too far or not far enough. It is intended to be enacted in a capitalistic form of government and in as much as it does not provide for government control of industry it is inadequate."

TRINITY ELECTIONS

Second election for Trinity's Moss Scholarship candidate will be held Wednesday, March 3 at Trinity and St. Hilda's from 10:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m., as previous election resulted in a tie.

Labour Relations To be Discussed

Mr. Andrew Brewin, second vice-president of the Ontario C.C.F. Party, will address the fourth meeting of the C.C.F. Club of the University on "Labour in Wartime" tonight at 8 o'clock in Wymilwood.

Mr. Brewin is one of the youngest of the provincial leaders of the C.C.F. He has been associated with the C.C.F. for five years and was elected second vice-president of the Ontario party last year. He was instrumental in the re-organization of the Civil Liberties Association, which provided for the formation of a new executive body, the Civil Liberties Council, of which Mr. Brewin is at present the secretary. Mr. Brewin prepared a brief for the Civil Liberties Association which was presented at Ottawa last year.

Mr. Brewin will discuss the position of labour in wartime and its relation to C.C.F. policy on Tuesday night. The meeting will commence at 8:00 o'clock and all interested are cordially invited to attend.

Lighting Expert Speaks at R.C.I.

The importance of new types of fluorescent lighting for war and post-war needs was demonstrated in the Saturday night R.C.I. lectures by Mr. Samuel G. Hibben, lighting expert of the Westinghouse Company.

Mr. Hibben spoke of recent research and development in the fields of fluorescent and phosphorescent light,

Fluorescent paint has been used very successfully in combating some of the difficulties of night flying. The paint is applied to the instrument board of the plane, and when exposed to "black light," long wave ultra violet rays invisible to the human eye, it glows, enabling the pilot to read the instruments without the glare of brighter lighting.

Mr. Hibben predicts that phosphorescent materials will soon be used widely in building and interior decorating, and that in the future we will be conveniently supplied with luminous wall-paper, chair legs and door knobs.

Pamphlets Sprout on McGill Campus As Students Object to Daily Ban

Montreal, March 1 — (CUP) — The embattled McGill campus has taken on something of the atmosphere of pre-revolutionary France with the blossoming of unofficial pamphlets protesting the suspension of The McGill Daily and presenting the students' side of the controversy with the Senate over the banned Commerce Issue of Feb. 19.

A poster hung on one of the college noticeboards depicts the McGill University crest with jesters' caps substituted for crows, its open book closed and padlocked and its three marlets drawn with their wings covering their eyes, mouth and ears.

A poster on display near Roddick Gates shows a phoenix engulfed in the flames of a burning Daily. Another, more cryptic, poster pictures a horse being led to a trough labelled "pure water."

One of the publications is a bulletin posted near a large "scaffold" on the campus where the Students' Council is conducting a charity campaign to "hang Hitler." It is entitled a "special edition" of The Daily, and carries notices of student events and meetings. Money obtained through sale of space to students is contributed to the "Hang Hitler" campaign.

Another of the unofficial publications to appear recently is The Plumbers' Free Press, a single mimeographed sheet containing notices of campus events and editorials dealing with the banning of The Daily.

Another student pamphlet, Free McGill, admitted that the Commerce Daily was "on the raw side" but found it no more offensive than the Engineering Issue of last year or the Law Issue of the year before.

Nash Stresses Fiscal Basis At Service

"God, Man and Society" was the topic of the sermon preached by the Rev. Arnold Nash at the service held last night by the S.C.M. in Trinity College Chapel.

"The economic foundation is basic in any society," stated Mr. Nash, in announcing his intention to restrict himself to this aspect of his subject. "It is impossible to exaggerate the debt we owe to Karl Marx, simply because, as Max Weber has pointed out, where Karl Marx is wrong is more important than where almost everybody else is right," he continued.

The economist can regard money as that which gives us the right to command goods and services. The specific contribution which Christianity makes to an understanding of money is that which takes its origin in an understanding of the Incarnation of God's vindication of the material as the vehicle of the spiritual. Applied to money this means that we must see money as the incarnation of the blood and toil of miners, sailors, tea-pickers, cotton-spinners, and all whose work is dangerous.

Prof. Fielding of Trinity College led a Fireside Hour after the service to discuss the points brought out in the sermon. The question of the justification for using money from disreputable sources to fight the evils which enable people to come into possession of this so-called "tainted" money was discussed. It was generally considered that, human nature being what it is, dependence on this money will inevitably hinder action against those evils.

Chancellor Walter T. Brown of Victoria College conducted the service. A choir composed of members from the Trinity College Choir and the Victoria College Chapel Choir sang the Halleluja Chorus of Handel and Ave Verum of Mozart.

Annual Elections Held Tomorrow

The following are the voting regulations for the annual elections at Hart House taking place Wednesday:

Members of the House are warned that they must show their University registration cards, and that no voting permits will be issued to those who have forgotten them.

Members of the following groups must bring their Hart House membership cards if they wish to vote: Graduate Students, Occasional Students, Ontario College of Art, Emmanuel College, Teachers' Course, Trinity College (Theology), Social Science and Music.

The hours of voting Wednesday are as follows: 11 a.m. to 2:30 p.m., and 4 p.m. to 6:30 p.m., with the exception that the Camera Committee polling hours will be from 11:45 a.m. to 1:30 p.m., and 4:45 p.m. to 5:30 p.m. (this latter being restricted to members of the Camera Club).

It is hoped that this year more of the students will exercise their franchise. Last year only 979 members voted out of a possible total of approximately 3,600, or just over 27 per cent of the total number.

Special Issue Will Survey War Campus

The Varsity will publish a special eight-page issue next Wednesday, containing articles dealing with the University of Toronto's activities during the first four years of the present war, Michael O'Mara, Editor-in-Chief, announced last night.

"The issue will contain stories and features on all the important phases of the University's war effort," he said, "and will also deal with the changes which campus life has undergone since September, 1939."

The special issue will be under the supervision of graduating members of this year's masthead, and will be dedicated to the Class of 4T3—first large group of "war-babies" to be graduated by the University whose entire careers have been spent in wartime atmosphere.

The Varsity will continue to publish on a daily basis for the balance of this week and will also publish a regular four-page issue Monday. The special issue will appear Wednesday, and another eight-page issue Friday will complete publication for the year.

Combined Bands To Give Concert

Tomorrow afternoon will see an aggregation of 80 young bandsmen on the concert platform in Convocation Hall to give a massed band concert. Members of the University of Toronto Contingent, C.O.T.C., Band and of the University of Toronto Schools Boys' Band will present an hour's concert of band music beginning at 4:40 p.m. Each of the bands will play separate numbers and there will also be several massed numbers on the program.

The University Schools Band, which numbers about 35 players, is in its second year, having taken the place of the former U.T.S. Orchestra. It is under the leadership of Mr. Leslie R. Bell, M.A., of the Music Department of the Ontario College of Education and the University Schools. The C.O.T.C. Band was re-organized last fall with Lieut. J. L. MacDowell as Officer Commanding; Mr. Bell has also taken charge of one rehearsal weekly during the training season. This close affiliation between the two bands makes it possible for a U.T.S. student to continue his musical training in the senior band when he graduates to Varsity.

Members of both battalions of the C.O.T.C. who are training on the campus will be attending the concert.

Nominations Close Today For Vic Elections Friday

Victoria College elections for certain positions are to be held Friday, Chief Returning Officer Ralph Hicklin, announced last week. Nominations for these positions are now being made, nomination blanks being obtainable at the V.C.U. office in Vic. Nominations close at 5 p.m. today.

A campaign will be held Wednesday afternoon at which the candidates will make their pleas for support.

M'Gill Council Recommends Stricter Daily Supervision By Regular Managing Board

Resolution Declares Student Apathy Partly to Blame for Appearance of Banned Commerce Issue Feb. 19

CAMPUS DANCE CANCELLED

Montreal, March 1—(CUP)—Recommendation that responsibility for special faculty issues of The McGill Daily—such as the Commerce issue of Feb. 19, appearance of which resulted in publication of The Daily being suspended—be placed with the regular Managing Board of The Daily was made in a resolution passed here Thursday at an open meeting of the Students' Society, and released to the press over the week-end.

It was also suggested that "passiveness on the part of the students" was in part to blame for the nature of the contents of the Feb. 19 Daily.

Text of the resolutions passed Thursday but released for publication since follows:

"Whereas, the Students' Society believes that passiveness on the part of the students has been partly responsible for the appearance of objectionable material in the 'Daily';

"Whereas, by tradition, special Faculty issues of the 'Daily' have been allowed too free a scope, and hence have tended inevitably to an overstepping of the bounds of decency;

"Therefore, be it resolved that the Students' Society believes the appearance of objectionable material in the Commerce Issue of Friday, Feb. 19, 1943 to have been not wholly the responsibility of the individuals whose names appeared on the masthead of the Commerce Issue."

The meeting also decided that, since the constitution of The Daily made no mention of special faculty issues, and since such faculty issues "have hitherto been, by custom, virtually out of the hands of the managing board of The McGill Daily," the Students' Executive Council should see "to the passing of an amendment to The Daily constitution so as to regulate the contents of, and the responsibility for, any special faculty issue."

It was also agreed that "in meting out penalties to the supposedly responsible ones, consideration be taken of the fact that these people have suffered from serious national adverse publicity."

Ball Cancelled

The Cosmopolitan Club annual masquerade and ball, which was to have taken place Friday, was called off, "because of existing campus conditions," according to one announcement.

The McGill Daily was banned by Senate order Feb. 19 following appear-

VARSITY STAFF MEETING

There will be an important meeting of the staff of The Varsity Friday at 4 p.m. in the Women's Union, 79 St. George Street. Refreshments will be served. All members of the staff are urged to attend the meeting, at which plans for the Annual Banquet will be discussed and the election for the 1943-44 Editorship conducted.

Rowat is Premier In Second Coup

The second coup d'etat in two weeks brought a change in the government of the U.C. Parliament last Friday ,when the Hon. Betsy Mosbaugh, former Minister for the Investigation of Morals, introduced a motion of want of confidence in the government under the National Democratic Socialist Party, which was passed by a close majority in a packed House.

After the defeat of the Government, Rt. Hon. Don Rowat, leader of the Progressive Conservative party, became Prime Minister, and Hon. Mary Mothersill was elected as the new leader of the opposition.

The motion: "Resolved that the present economic controls should not be continued after the war," was defeated. The argument of Mr. Rowat's government which proposed the motion was to the effect that present controls were specifically a war phenomenon designed to prevent inflation, and that there were no grounds for assuming that the future of Canada would be socialistic.

The opposition held that laissez faire was no longer a workable thesis and that socialism, put through from the top down rather than as the platform of any one group would be a unifying force, the next logical step in the peace-time evolution of social reform.

Athletic Directorate Hold Elections Mon.

The Electoral Meeting of the University of Toronto Athletic Association to elect student representatives to the Directorate for 1943-1944, will be held on Monday, March 15, at 4:15 sharp, in the Debates Room, Hart House (south side, upstairs).

Under the Constitution of the Athletic Association (Article I, Sec 4) all Standing Committees on sports, are entitled to send representatives to this meeting. These representatives must be male undergraduates of the University of Toronto, or one of the affiliated colleges who are proceeding to a degree, are in actual attendance upon lectures, and who have paid the annual fee required (By-law I). The Standing Committees have been notified to meet at an early date, appoint representatives and give them their credentials for the electoral meeting. On presentation of these credentials at the Athletic Office on the morning of March 15 representatives will be given voting tickets.

A student to be elected to the Directorate must, at the time of his nomination, be in the second or a higher year of his course at the University, but not in his final year. The nominations must be made in writing on the form provided for the purpose, signed by two male undergraduate members of the Athletic Association in good standing, and filed with the Secretary of the Association not later than 5 p.m. Wednesday, March 10. Nomination forms to be obtained at the Athletic Office.

Get The Daily Back

News continues to pour in from Montreal regarding the current controversy on the McGill campus relative to the Senate ban upon The McGill Daily, following the appearance of its lamentable special Commerce Issue a week ago Friday. Today we carry in our news columns the most complete account to date of the various resolutions and counter-resolutions passed by students and the Senate regarding the matter, and to readers who still retain their interest in the case we recommend the story. It gives a fairly complete picture of the opposing attitudes on the issue.

As we suggested Friday, our main interest in the whole somewhat soiled affair is that The Daily be placed once more on a sound basis and enabled to publish issues up to its own former high standards. We said then that we had little sympathy for a Students' Executive Council that persisted in squabbling over the summary treatment meted out by the Committee on Morals and Discipline of the Senate before it set its own house in order.

We are a little happier to note now that a bit more common sense seems to be being used on both sides of the controversy.

The Students' Society, in resolutions passed Thursday but not immediately released, has gone on record as recommending that future special faculty issues of The Daily be placed directly under the control of the regular Managing Board; such elimination of dual responsibility, would, we believe, go far towards avoiding any future similar occurrences. The Senate, on its part, has stated that it is "whole-heartedly in favour of the principle of student self-government under normal conditions" but that in this case, where "the prestige and good name of McGill University" is concerned, it must insist upon a report naming the culprits in the Commerce case.

This stand, as taken by the Senate, throws the issue squarely back to the Students' Executive Council where it belonged in the first place. If the Council had had an Editor who saw fit to supervise the special faculty issue without it recoiling the way that it did—and we understand that for some warped reason such issues are consistent "dynamite" for Editors who permit their publication—the whole storm would not have arisen. If the Students' Executive Council had acted on its own initiative in bringing disciplinary action to bear upon the students to blame for the journalistic outrage upon good taste before Principal James and the Senate, acting upon justifiable grounds but perhaps with a certain over-enthusiasm, had banned The Daily, again the storm could have been averted. That the Council has been negligent in these respects cannot be denied.

The Council, on the other hand, has talked itself into a position of defiance towards McGill's vested authorities over the issue from which it is now difficult to step down. And the student body of McGill University, to our mind, has thrashed itself into a state of revolutionary heroics totally unjustified by the pettiness of the cause of the controversy.

But it is still not too late to have the much-maligned Daily resume publication this year with its masthead somewhat chastened but its own standards as high as ever. The Senate of McGill University meets again Friday "for the purpose of arriving at a final dicision regarding this matter," and some time before then it expects the Students' Executive Council to present a satisfactory report regarding responsibility for the Commerce Issue.

If our influence extends as far as McGill—with which supposition we do not flatter ourselves—then we urge the Council to present a report which will drop the swashbuckling but shortsighted policy of covering up the Commerce culprits and will name those responsible for an issue of The Daily that never should have rolled from the presses.

The Daily—as we have said before—is an institution with fine traditions; it fulfills an extremely important function upon the McGill campus. And it should not be forced to remain under a dishonourable ban for the sake of a handful of students who forgot their sense of decency.

Technical Culture

An interesting by-product of the spectacularly-celebrated S.P.S. elections last week is the 85 per cent "yes" vote recorded in the plebiscite on the desirability of a political science course for the students of that faculty.

This illustrates a growing realization on the part of students in the more highly-technical professional courses of the fact that the intensity of the knowledge required in their professions nowadays forces them to spend four or more years in a university without getting out of that university more than a fraction of the benefits that it offers. Engineers, foresters, Meds and others have for some time been given short courses in such subjects as English and Economics, as far as we know, at the instigation of the faculty. This year student opinion seems to have come to a head on the subject: first the Medical Society started the Arts and Letters Club, and now the Engineering Society has proposed an expansion of the extra-engineering courses given to its members.

In some other universities the custom is to give these professional course students a year of so-called Pre-Engineering Arts or Pre-Medical Arts before they bave to plunge into the deeper mysteries of their professions. This is of course often mainly a background in the pure physical sciences necessary for an understanding of their application in Engineering and Medical practice. It also tends to concentrate the student's broader education into the first year or two of his career at university, but this last criticism can be applied equally well to the honour courses at this university.

The system here tends to give the professional student a sprinkling of such broadening courses while he is at the same time getting down to work on the art he wishes to practice. The Engineers will have no easy task to crowd more of this broader education into their already crowded time-table, but if the plebiscite indicates a sincere desire for more knowledge and information the implementation of this vote is certainly to be encouraged.

Eric Rollinson, Organist

Guest artist at the Convocation Hall organ recital yesterday was Eric Rollinson, instead of Dr. Willan, who has given the other recitals in the fortnightly series. Included in the program was the Sonata in C Minor by the artist himself, a mature and powerful composition, and extremely interesting by reason of its sudden changes and unusual harmonies.

Mr. Rollinson has a youthful and vigorous technique. He has a flair for radical changes in his expression and uses them to very good advantage frequently, although he never employs them so often as to make them sound threadbare.

The first half of the program was Bash and two of his contemporaries. The Fantasia and Fugue in G Minor proved a fitting beginning, and perhaps the outstanding work of the afternoon, with its majestic volume and dignified harmony. Following it came three other Bach pieces, transcriptions for the organ of what were originally

Flaming Wings over TSchfughflchberg or Marlborough-Beach Goes Active

(EDITOR'S NOTE—Veteran readers will remember that our two heroes, Flt. Lt. Marlborough-Beach and P.O. Fotheringham, were last year summoned to "W" Company where they trod the first steps of the path of glory by learning the rudiments of foot-drill. It was only natural after this never-to-be-forgotten experience that they should have fulfilled their family tradition by joining the R.C.A.F. as soon as possible. Passing over their plaintive reports of 14 months on Security Guard, we pick up their saga as they embark on their first operational flight overseas as the two-man crew of a light bomber.)

Marlborough-Beach cut the port engine and we drifted over the Esthonian coast, riding a stiffish tail-wind.

"All right," said Marlborough-Beach, "let's feed it to Jerry good and proper."

"Ack-ack's a bit lively tonight," I remarked, catching half of our port wing as it crumpled and skilfully wiring it back into place. "Fritz must be expecting quite a show."

"We'll give the blighters a sbow," said Marlborough-Beach as he dropped to 500 feet to avoid the worst of the flak. "Aim the first stick at the Coca Cola sign."

As I dropped the first stick, I turned on the radio and heard our squadron-leader's voice droning "Every nice girl loves a sailor."

"There's good old Ffipps Ffoulkes," said Marlborough-Beach happily. "He always does that while he's shooting down Me 109's."

"It can't be Focke-Wulf's or he'd be singing 'Lily of Laguna'," I mused, dropping a ton of lethal leaflets on Heinie's A-A gunners.

Finally we swept over the Target for Tonight and I kissed the Hun goodbye with seven sticks of incendiaries and a block-buster.

"Careful, old man," I warned, "there's a flock of Messerschmitts on your tail!"

"What tail?" Marlborough-Beach chortled as a swarm of tracer bullets carried away our rudder.

"Look alive, you chaps, or you'll be catching a spot of Blighty," sang out Ffipps-Ffoukles over the two-way communication set.

"Two for your one, Egghead," I sang out as we brought down the Hun squadron-leader and his Number Two with a single burst of the synchronized canno. "This means you buy us a round of malteds when we get back to the base."

"Quiet show, quiet show," I told our mechanic as he helped us down with dog-like devotion when we reached our base with our port engine missing badly.

They had the DFM's waiting for us at the mess hall. We hadn't really earned them, but we accepted them as it would bolster morale on the home front.

Track Featured At Athletic Night

As an added feature at last Saturday's Athletic Night, Meds staged three track and field events that thrilled the big crowd by the record breaking displays. Art Jackes cleared six feet in the high jump, a three-man Meds relay team nosed out a School squad and Roy Foulis edged Phil Shackleton in the mile event.

Between basketball games Bill Kerr and Art Jackes of School and Bill Orr of Meds put on a high-jump demonstration. Beginning at five feet two the three utilized the western roll to gain their height. Bill Orr was the first to drop out at five feet seven. The two Engineers battled it out. They both cleared five feet eleven but when the six feet—which is very good for indoor work—was attempted, Bill Kerr couldn't quite make it. Finally Art Jackes won the plaudits of the crowd as he made the jump on his second try.

At intermission the track was cleared and a three-lap relay event was run off. School's Verne Booth gained about two feet on Meds' Jack Virtue on the first lap. However, on the next round Georgie Lewis got Meds back to scratch by gaining on Pat McDonough. Then in the final lap Johnny Wilford beat Chuck MacDonald by about two feet to win for Meds in 53.2 seconds.

The mile run—11 times around the track—produced the most excitement as the six top runners kept continually changing places in a torridly paced race that was the fastest in the history of that indoor track. From the gun Frank Fordyce led Phil Shackleton, closely pursued by the pack. Then on the next lap veteran and last year's distance champion, Tom Barnett, took the lead. Roy Foulis soon moved up and next time around Shackleton was in front with Fordyce and Foulis a pace behind. Then Gord Lorrimer started to move and he led for a lap, followed by Foulis and Fordyce. Then, in turn, Shackleton took over for about two laps. With four laps left, Roy Foulis started to sprint and he gradually worked out in the lead by a good 12 yards. Shackleton and Fordyce were struggling for place and show positions. This kept up until the last lap. Then on one of the prettiest picture finishes seen in many a moon, Phil Shackleton gained rapidly on Foulis and inside of 50 yards he had almost caught the leader. But Foulis broke the tape scarcely a foot ahead of the U.C. freshman. Foulis, who ran the fastest race of his undergraduate career, made it in the surprising time of 4.35.6. Fordyce, Barnett, Lorrimer and Delaney followed in that order.

Jr. S.P.S. Flog Seniors In Valiant Skirmish

A superior Jr. S.P.S. hockey team crushed their smaller S.P.S. III brothers yesterday by a 13-0 score.

From the opening whistle the Juniors took over and monopolized the puck for the game. The score, perhaps, would have been reduced if the Thirds had had their regular goalie. From the scoring point of view outstanding performances were turned in by Boa, Ball, Stricker, McDonnough and Ratcliffe who figured in every goal.

At half time the Juniors had placed nine scores on the officials records but in the last canto the Thirds tightened up and only allowed four goals. One beautiful chance for a Third's score was foiled by the referee's whistle calling an offside.

Speaking Of Sport

By Doc Savage

AN OBLIGATION, THIS...

The question might well be asked, "And what is a member of the News Dept. doing over here on the Sports Page???" Well, the custom of guest columns is a long standing tradition here in the office, and besides, we rather owe it to the Rajah that he be given a slight rest from his nightly travails. For on more than one occasion the Sports Dept. has saved the News Dept.'s scaly hide by turning to and performing yoeman service at rewrite or something equally as ghastly at some very, very ghastly hour in the early a.m. when even the gremlins had had enough and gone home.

We cannot, however, speak with the authority of a sports writer, for our most intimate connections with the muscle-building trade this year has been the very barest legal minimum of P.T. periods and the occasional athletic night. It is much easier to stay healthy via artificial ultra violet and the odd vitamin pill.

AH, YOUTH...

There was a time, however, in our younger days, when our contacts with the odors of sweat and liniment were of a more personal nature. It was after we had risked a P.T. period and were busy regretting it. This was in those dim, dead days of the Golden Era when P.T. credits could be earned by doing most anything but P.T.

We had decided that basketball was a nice, safe, upbuilding sport, and graciously offered our services to the "A" team. Somewhat hurt, we sulkily agreed to try out for the "F" team.

A doughty band of warriors was the "F" team. Athletes all, we were certain of success in our league—one of our players had actually played before. After much persuasion we finally found someone brave enough to accept the position of coach, and we were all set.

Do not for one minute get the idea that this was a mere band of anaemic, class 4-F wrecks upon whom the rays of the sun rarely shone and who never could go more than five minutes walk from the nearest oxygen tent or blood donor. These were athletes—they all had played rugby, and were very good rugby players at that. The only trouble was that in moments of tense excitement they were wont to forget that they were playing basketball, and not rugby. This made for interesting, if messy, conflicts.

There was, on the "F" team, a very mild mannered chap who has since donned the khaki of Uncle Sam's air force. Never shall we forget the night when he became rather entangled with a member of the opposing squad. It seemed that they both wanted the ball, only he wanted it more. There then followed a brief but gory bit of play with the elbows, hips and knees, culminating in the thud of a falling body as this other chap tripped over our heroe's feet. It was all accidental, only the ref didn't seem to think so.

Blowing his whistle violently, he stopped the shambles and then proceeded to tell off no less than three personals. He paused dramatically to stare at the "F" man as he stood over his bewildered victim, and then finally barked—

"Well, why don't you finish it. . . . Go on, kick him!!!"

Sports are fun, but vitamin pills are much easier on the system.

School Still Tops In Track Contest

With the winter-long indoor track fast running into its final stretch, it seems very unlikely that S.P.S. can be dislodged from its perch at the top of the heap. U.C. has been trailing close for the better part of the season but has been edged in the last event, the mile relay, and has little hope of taking next week's events.

The mile relay, run last night, was won by Meds who knocked off a 4.06.9 performance to beat out U.C. I, who registered 4.11.2. The U.C. II team placed third with 4.35.3 and Trinity G, fourth with 4.35.8.

Meds turned in an A1 showing with the time of 4.06.9. Considering that the distance was actually over a mile, this time is pretty hot.

Rutherford started for Meds with Rog Conant of U.C. This first leg was fairly even up to the stretch where Conant pulled a yard ahead and passed to Bill Sims. Wilford took over for Meds, passed Sims in his first lap, and proceeded to take a 15-yard lead. Wilford gave the baton to George Lewis who increased the lead over Chuck Baxter. Bill Fielding, running anchor position for Meds was not threatened in his leg of the race and finished 20 yards ahead of Shackleton, U.C.'s fourth spotter.

Some consolation for U.C. lies in the fact that their team was made up of milers while Meds sported four quarter-milers.

The third place team for U.C. was made up of Ken and John Wood, Ken Johnstone and Don Rowat.

In fourth spot came Trinity with Ongles, D. Jackson, Mullan and Baillie.

Trinity is trying to pick up a few points to overtake U.C. Last night the Red and Black featured no less than eight teams. This must be some sort of a record.

Today's running will probably see S.P.S. turn in a fairly good time. Wycliffe promises to field a foursome and Trinity, still hoping, claim to have several more teams in store.

Initial Tangle Slays Knox In 9-0 Annihilation

In the first play-off game of the baseball finals, U.C. I, inspired by Saltzman's pitching and Goodman's batting, downed the Knox team 9-0.

The U.C. team justifies its position in the play-offs by having won five games in five starts. Saltzman is responsible for much of their success, for in the five games he pitched two no-hitters and allowed only three runs in the other three games. The Knox team, with the pitching of Moorchead, has come through with a majority of wins, though they are not as outstanding as the U.C. nine.

Scoring was begun in the second when Saltzman and Nichols were driven home by a hard hit ball of Goodman who stole home on a wild throw. In the third Goodman repeated the feat by knocking in Grant and Nichols and again stealing home. Tartaglia, Grant and Nichols brought in runs in the last inning to make the score 9-0.

U.C. I—Stitt, Tartaglia (1), Horwitz, Saltzman (1), Grant (2), Nichols (3), Goodman (1), Kerr, Bitove.

Knox—Danard, Moorehead, Brisbin, Kidd, Clare, Fraser, Seal, Forstrom, Kyro.

U.C. Pucksters Down School

By Jim Paton

Supported by the scintillating goal-tending by one Richard "Weed" Quittenton, Sr. School fought hard to a 10-3 loss against U.C. I in the Arena yesterday afternoon. By way of information it must be noted that by the loss the elder Engineers insured themselves against a first round play-off meehting with their kid brothers from School who walked away with their group.

U.C. gained two points by the win and tied St. Mike's in the final group standing. As a result a game is made necessary today between St. Mike's and U.C. to decide first and second place.

But to get back to the game, such as it was. It certainly didn't reflect the hockey that each team is capable of playing but it did show that the Red and White know what to do with the puck when they get it in front of the net. And this ability to slam the rubber home might take them a long way in the play-offs.

Jimmy Graham, the red thatched speed merchant of the Royal College, must have set an interfaculty hockey record of some kind as he produced seven tallies in the one game (more goals than same teams have scored all season). He and running mates Dalt Nesbitt and Jack Amell gave Weed Quittenton a rough time in his initial appearance between the pipes. Nesbitt and Amell picked up three assist each. Kuryluk, Phoenx and Whitley were the other U.C. goalgetters.

For the winners . . . oops beg pardon . . . the losers, the goal scorers were Maughan, Moeser and Douglas.

Meds Dunk S.P.S. In Playoff 7-0

Water polo play-offs commenced yesterday afternoon in Hart House pond with group leaders St. Meds and S.P.S. III battling it out in a sudden-death session in which the Medicos swamped the Engineers, 7-0. The Doctors will go into the finals against the winner of Wednesday's encounter between Vic I and U.C.

The School tank-men offered stiff resistence to the more experienced black-and-red outfit but were unable to stem the overwhelming tide.

Scoring opened after a minute of play, Baldwin driving the ball into the Engineer's cage on a pass from Robinson. At the three-minute mark, the ball coming from Weinbam, Murphy sank the second counter. Seconds later Bess accounted for the Medicos' third counter. Again Baldwin receiving a long pass, bewildered the School tender by backhanding a shot over his shoulder into the cage making it 4-0 at the end of the first half.

The Engineers changed tenders for the second half, Mason for Ferrier, and opened up the throttle for a final comeback. But all to no avail. The Medicos still managed to filter through the opposing relatively weak defence and pelt the cage with shots. At the two-minute mark, Baldwin, parked unguarded in front of the opposing tender, received a pass from Weinbam and blasted a shot which bounced off Mason's finger tips into the net. A little later the Medicos' lead was increased by another Weinbam-to-Baldwin rally. Baldwin sank the final goal of the game to make it 7-0 for the Docs.

Sr. Meds—Boyd (Goal), Best, McCarthy, Robinson, Baldwin (5), Weinbam, Murphy (2), Wilford.

S.P.S. III—G. Ferrier, P. Mason, Boa, Martin, Dentay, Leitch, Hicks, Gooch.

» The Sportswoman «

By Betsy Mosbaugh

There have been quite a few feathers flying in the realm of badminton. As a matter of fact quite a few birds have been plucked with the result that the time has come for the finals to be played off.

There is one more game to be fought out before a P. & H. E.er by the name of Clark meets either her Victory or Waterloo. Joan Snider and Betty Allan will clash for the honour of meeting this amazing freshie on the courts.

This game should prove to be well worth watching as the winner of Allan and Snider bas to be quite good. Snyder comes from a family of badminton champs while Allan won the interfaculty last year. Clark, on the other band, defeated Shirley Geldhart, who was semi-finalist last year and gave Allan a hard game to win.

The Granite Club is the place selected for the final fight this year. Everybody is urged to go up and applaud the game any time after 2:30 this afternoon.

It seems that there was a slight mistake made in the result of Saturday night's swimming meet at Hart House. Vic and U.C. tied with 22 points. The rules of swimming state that an extra half point is given in case of a tie, to the team who placed in 100 yard free style relay. U.C. came second in this event and thus carried off the laurels of the evening by a half a point. Physical Health Ed. Juniors placed third with 14 points while the senior members of the team came fourth with 12 points.

There seems to be a scarcity of trails around Toronto. At least we can conclude this if we are to judge by the number of co-eds decked out in slacks and parkas who travel north each week-end. Consequently we thought our ski-week-end in Huntsville of sufficient interest to warrant a Sportswoman.

Reports from resorts around the district say that each week-end some six or seven Varsity damsels whip up and over the trails. Probably the fact that the ski tows are in good working order has something to do with the co-eds' selection of a spot for a few days of skiing.

The trip up (though not on a par with the good old ski trains) was quite satisfactory. Wearing our ski slacks into the diner was not as embarrassing as we had anticipated—numerous other females were similarly attired and had that gaunt, worn look which seems to us to smack of Varsity.

But we never did find out what course they were in as the patrol sergeant inveigled us into a practical discussion of the probability of chance in relation to two cubes—and all that.

On our arrival we were informed that Muskoka District has bad over 12 feet of snow this year.

The thermometer did a one-night run from 15 below on Saturday to 30 on Sunday. The gale likewise increased its lash accordingly, with the result that Saturday was very excellently spent over bill and dale while Sunday was also very excellently spent in front of a roaring fire.

The trails are all that any gaunt and worn co-ed could ask for—short and snappy and long and slow. Needless to say, we passed most of the time practicing those elusive turns called the Fannydunker and Sitzmark.

The proprietors of the said ski bostels informed us that the majority of girls from the University who come up usually never belie their snazzy equipment and handle the hickories quite well.

Some of those systematic science students, in fact, have this skiing business down to a formula. They stand rigidly at the top of a hill, shove off and shout to the skies, "Remember, foree equals mass acceleration and keep your bead on straight!"

Stricter Supervision Recommended By McGill Council for "Daily"

ance of its special Commerce Issue, contents of which were admitted by regular Editor-in-Chief Raymond Ayoub to have been "blatantly smutty." The Senate Committee on Morals and Discipline ordered the Students' Executive Council to make a report to the Senate which would name those responsible for the issue.

Ayoub and the 22 Commerce students whose names appeared on the masthead of the special issue were placed on "conduct probation" following Senate action Feb. 19. (One of the names does not appear in the official Students' Directory of McGill University.)

Council Resolution

Sunday the Council passed the following resolution following a four-hour meeting in protest against the Senate's suspension of The Daily:

"Whereas the Students' Executive Council has been delegated authority by the governing body of the University to exercise control of undergraduate activities and the relation of the undergraduates to the University;

"And whereas the Students' Executive Council is accountable to the students for the above control of student affairs; and whereas no member of the Students' Executive Council was consulted or informed before the Senate Committee on Morals and Discipline took action regarding The McGill Daily issue of Feb. 19, suspending publication of The Daily and issuing statements to the press;

"Therefore be it resolved that we, the Students' Executive Council, express strong dissatisfaction with the manner in which the action was taken, request that the university authorities make known that fact that no member of the Students' Executive Council was consulted or informed before such action was taken."

The Montreal Gazette reported Tuesday that the Council meeting had exonerated the students whose names appeared on the Commerce masthead "after it had been proved that they were not responsible in any way for the material which appeared in the Commerce Issue which was highly suggestive."

Undergraduate Resolutions

On Wednesday, the Arts and Science Undegraduate Society passed the following resolution:

"Whereas the university authorities in giving the matter in the Commerce Daily national publicity have acted in such a manner as to reflect discredit on the student body as a whole, and indiscriminately upon particular persons, without due regard for responsibility; and whereas their action is prejudicial to the student self-government and usurped authority delegated by University to the Students' Executive Council . . . ; and whereas suspension of publication of The Daily can serve no useful purpose, and hampers the work of many constcuctive and useful campus organizations; there be it resolved that we, the Arts and Science Undergraduate Society, support the recent resolution of the Students' Executive Council, and condemn the summary methods used by the University authorities;

"And be it resolved, that the Arts and Science Undergraduate Society strongly recommends the amendment of the constitution of the University and of the Students' Society to ensure that the Senate have no right to interfere with operations of campus activities without preliminary consultation with the Students' Council."

Similar resolutions were also passed by Engineering and Commerce undergraduate bodies.

Thursday the Students' Society held an open meeting, attended by 750 students, in the Union Ballroom. Here the Monday resolution was approved, and a motion was passed that The Daily be permitted to resume uncensored publication March 1.

Senate Resolutions

The same day the Students' Executive Council submitted to the Senate a list of those students who had had nothing to do with the offensive contents of the Commerce Issue, suggesting that the remaining 16 be left on conduct probation. This report was rejected by the Senate, which issued the following statement:

"Whereas, the Senate is wholeheartedly in favour of the principle of student self-government under normal conditions, and will, after the present matter has been satisfactorily disposed of, be glad to receive from the Students' Executive Council suggestions as to ways in which existing machinery or procedures may be improved, it considers that there is at present a far more important issue at stake, namely, the prestige and good name of McGill University;

"Whereas, the Senate unanimously expresses its whole-hearted condemnation of the issue of The McGill Daily of Feb. 19;

"Therefore, be it resolved, that the Senate confirm the action taken by its Committee on Morals and Discipline in suspending further publication of The McGill Daily from Feb. 19 until such time as an acceptable report is received from the Students' Executive Council providing safeguards against the appearance of objectionable material in future issues;

"And be it further resolved, that all those individuals officially responsible for the publication of this issue of The McGill Daily remain on conduct probation until a report has been received from the Students' Executive Council in which there is set forth clearly the names of those who wrote the objectionable material, the names of those who saw it and permitted publication, and the names of those responsible for supervision who were derelict in their duty;

"Provided further that the Senate will convene on Friday, March 5, for the purpose of arriving at a final decision regarding this matter."

U.C. Lit Banquet To Mark Finale

"The final meeting of the U.C. Literary and Athletic Society will be in the form of a free nomination banquet next Thursday," disclosed President Don Rowat over the week-end.

This will be the last get-together for the members of the Lit for the year. The only other event before examinations set in will be a joint meeting with the W.U.A. on March 17.

The first 200 men who present their U.C. registration cards at the Lit office tomorrow noon will be given free tickets. Thursday's banquet will begin at 6:15 and after the toasts from the few guest speakers the nominations for the 11 Lit officers will be held. The election for the Maurice Cody Scholarship will also be run off then but voting for Lit positions will be held six days hence, on Wednesday, March 10.

orchestral works. They certainly lost nothing in the transition.

Stanley's light and gay A Tune for the Flutes, an unbelievably close imitation of that instrument, was a striking contrast with Greene's powerfully grave Voluntary in S Minor. Final number was the first movement of Widor's Symphonie VI, which contained a wealth of interesting material, which devolved into one great forceful climax at the end.

Medicine's Future Course Discussed By Dr. Routley At Arts And Letters Club

Points to Trend Toward State Control; Discusses Place of Health Insurance in New Social Legislation

INDEDENDENT PROFESSION

"In contemplating the future of medicine, one must contemplate the future world which will surround it," stated Dr. T. C. Routley, head of the Canadian Medical Association, in his talk to the Arts and Letters Club Monday night.

"It is hard to forecast exactly what that future world will be like—what kind of a democracy, or what kind of an 'ism'," he said. "But certainly the trend seems in the direction of more state control, and medicine is one of the first professions to be affected by social legislation."

And then Dr. Routley pointed out with emphasis that so long as human nature remains what it is, so long will the sacred relationship between doctor and patient remain a thing of value. "It is something that money can't buy, something that legislators can't put into an act. And that is an important thing for all doctors to remember."

"Medicine has been perhaps the most independent of all profesions," continued the speaker. "But today we find that we are all beginning to think in terms of collective bargaining—even to people thinking that they would like to control their medical services. In the new social security program being introduced, health insurance is to play a major part. Seventy-five per cent of the people in Canada want it, acecording to the Gallup poll; and 90 per cent of the members in the dominion government are in favour of health insurance."

The definition Dr. Routley gave for this term, insurance, was "the co-operative association of a large number of persons, who agree to share amongst themselves the burdens resulting from the occurrence of a particular contingency—such as the occurrence of death, sickness, unemployment, etc.—by the payment of the necessary contributions into a common fund, from which benefits, related strictly to those contributions, are distributed in alleviation of the burdens against which the insurance is effected." He also noted that it is a device for sharing burdens, not for shifting them.

The speaker then defined state medicine as "a system of medical administration by which the state provides medical services for the entire population, or a large part thereof, and under which all practitioners are employed, directed and paid by the State on a salary basis or otherwise." He showed that thus the state would then be in a position to dictate procedures and modes of payment, and to prescribe and enforce penalties.

This concept Dr. Routley affirmed to be wholly different from the health insurance, whose aim is primarily to give not only adequate care for all the people, but also adequate remuneration for doctors. "Then too, the confident relationship between family and doctor is all-important, and must be preserved," he declared.

"Will we achieve health insurance?" said Dr. Routley. "Well, the House of Commons is considering draft proposals, and some of us who are going to throw on the torch to those of your generation are trying our best to point out the merits of the bill."

"The Ontario Medical Association has given a form of health insurance during the last 10 years, which has been paid the tribute, by an official who knows, that from the people administered to complaint was practically negligible," he said. "This is not only a tribute; it is a good reason for its

Deadline March 7 For Undergrad

The deadline for literary contributions to the Undergraduate magazine has been announced as March 7. This year prizes are being offered in the fields of fiction, non-fiction, light and serious verse, and art. Prizes are $5.00 in each of these types of literature and the prize money has been taken from grants made by the Lit and W.U.A. The editors are also interested in receiving short one-act plays.

Mary Mothersill, literary editor, stated that the prizes would be awarded by judges chosen from the staff and the editors. "We don't expect that this year there will be a great amount of material because everybody is so busy," she said. "But we hope to get really good contributions from the interested nucleus."

The literary editor also revealed that this year the magazine was concentrating for the most part on poetry because the editors believe that there are untapped resources of poetical material lying around in U.C.

"If you are self-conscious about getting your name in print, you can make the stipulation that only your initials be used," she said.

Two Moss Scholarship Names Chosen While Other Colleges Still Debate

VARSITY STAFF MEETING

There will be an important meeting of the staff of The Varsity Friday at 4 p.m. in the Women's Union, 79 St. George Street. Refreshments will be served. All members of the staff are urged to attend the meeting, at which plans for the Annual Banquet will be discussed and the election for the 1943-44 Editorship conducted.

The field of candidates for the John H. Moss Scholarship was narrowed down Monday as St. Michael's College elected Jim McCardle, IV Modern History as their choice of "best all-round student in the final year."

Trinity's election for a Scholarship candidate will be held today from 10:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. This is the second Trinity election, the first one having ended in a tie.

Candidate chosen at University College's election recently was Margaret Stock, IV General. At Victoria College nominations will be placed this Friday and the election will be held March 12.

Awarding an annual sum of $300 to worthy students, the Scholarship is the gift of friends of the late John H. Moss, K.C., B.A. Since his death in February, 1920, the memorial fund has been administered by the University Alumni Federation.

The award is made to one of four candidates selected by the graduating classes of the four Arts colleges. He is finally chosen April 1 by a committee consisting of President Cody, the President of the Alumni Federation, and three of its members.

In determining the award, the committee is advised to give preference to candidates likely to engage in graduate or professional work or travel abroad (at peacetime) in the year following graduation.

Winner of the Scholarship for 1942 was Agnes Ireland, Modern History student at Trinity, who is now studying at Bryn Mawr College in the United States.

New Trends Seen In War Poetry

Kingston, March 2—(CUP)—"War poetry is not official propaganda," asserted Dr. George Herbert Clarke recently in a lecture on the poetry of the present war.

The poetry written during this war is both like and unlike that of the First Great War, he said. It is a clear explanation of what the people are thinking and feeling and it reveals that the poets are beginning to think of the coming peace.

"The disillusionments of the past 20 years," Dr. Clarke said, "are responsible for the new notes sounded in present day war poetry. The senses of simplicity and sincerity recede and seem to disappear and the spirit of art is against the spirit of the age."

Among the examples of present war poetry which Dr. Clarke commented on were, Alice Duer Miller's "The White Cliffs," Clemence Dane's "Trafalgar Day," Robert Nathan's "Ride Up the Hill" and "Lament" by G.I.M. Pocms by Laurence Binyon, John Masefield, John Barryman, Harry Brown and E. J. Pratt were mentioned. He contrasted contemporary poetry with that written during the last war by Masefield, John McRae and Fruman.

War-Time Housing Films Coming to Hart House

City planning, regional planning, and war-time housing will be the subjects of three films which will be shown by the School of Architecture in Hart House Theatre on Monday, March 8.

The films illustrate some of the causes and the curse of the present overcrowded conditions and low standards of living in slum areas, and point to tomorrow's planning.

The meeting is scheduled to take place at 8 o'clock and the staff, students and their friends are invited to attend. Admission is free.

S.P.S. Grad Ball Set For Tonight

The Crystal Ballroom of the King Edward Hotel will be the scene of tonight's S.P.S. Grad Ball. One hundred and ninety-nine graduating engineers will be the hosts. Mart Kenney and his Western Gentlemen will supply varied rhythms for dancing from 9 p.m. until two in the morning.

During the evening presentations will be made to outstanding engineers. Among these will be the presentation of the Bronze "S" to D. E. Grosskurth. Following this presentation suitable awards will be made to the runners up for the coveted award. An annual feature of the Ball, these presentations, according to the Ball Committee, may be classed somewhere between business and entertainment and differ from year to year according to the personalities of the recipients.

MacCallum To Inaugurate U.C. Public Lecture Series With Talk On Kierkegaard

Will "Revaluate" 19th Century Danish Philosopher, Point Out His Significance for Modern Thinkers

FIRST OF FIVE LECTURES

The 1943 series of public lectures sponsored by University College will start this afternoon at 5 o'clock in Room 8, U.C., and will continue every Wednesday of this month including March 31. Today's lecture will be given by Professor H. R. MacCallum, Associate Professor of Philosophy at U.C.

Professor MacCallum's subject will be the 19th century Danish philosopher, Socren Kierkegaard. The latter is reputed to have been the inspiration of Ibsen's "Brand," Professor R. D. C. Finch, chairman of the committee in charge of the series, said yesterday.

The aim of these lectures is to evaluate the five authors, and to bring out the significance they hold for modern thinkers. The lecturers feel that the influence of the writers is stronger now than it was in their own day, and they intend to bring out this difference of feeling. Though the series leans somewhat to philosophy as two of the writers were interested in that field, the aesthetic side will also be stressed.

Later spcakers will be Professor J. F. Macdonald, Professor F. C. A. Jeanneret, Professor G. Norwood, and Professor H. Boeschenstein. Members of the staff, students and the public are to attend these lectures.

Dr. Chien Speaks To Labour Club

"China will continue to fight the Japanese aggressor until complete victory is attained," was one of the conclusions drawn by Dr. Chien in his address to the Student Labour Club on Monday night.

This struggle, he said, is doing more than anything else to unite the different sections of the Chinese people and to give them a clearer understanding of the problems which confront them in building a better post-war China.

Dr. Chien pointed out the important role which the guerilla fighters in the Chinese Red Army are playing in the re-organization of Chinese institutions.

When the victorious end of the war is achieved, China will be faced with the critical decision of either returning to a modification of her pre-war way of life, or of adopting a system which will more adequately serve the needs of her people. Mass education is doing much to inform the people of these two alternatives, he said. Whatever the Chinese people decide, it will be of profound importance to the other nations of the world, Dr. Chien emphasized.

Dr Chien is presently studying in the Department of Applied Mathematics. He is here on a Boxer Scholarship, and he intends to continue his researches next year in California.

Vocations Topic At Biology Club

The vocational possibilities open to students graduating in the Honour courses of Biology and Physiology and Biochemistry will be the chief topic for discussion at the meeting of the Biology Club to be held in Wymilwood tonight at 7:30 p.m.

Several of the senior students in these courses have been busy interviewing various professors and they are prepared to give a brief resume of the information which they have accumulated.

It is boped that all students interested in these courses, particularly those in First Year Honour Science, will be present and will be prepared to join in a general discussion on this problem.

let's go places

Advertised as one of the 10 best pictures of the year, "Journey for Margaret," currently at the Uptown, doesn't quite hit the mark. The sentiment is good but it doesn't get across often enough to convince.

"JOURNEY FOR MARGARET"

The story, adapted from a book by William L. White, concerns a foreign correspondent who seems to be going to pieces and his wife who does temporarily go to pieces. Both are brought out of this deplorable state by a couple of blitzed-out tots who are the most convincing people in the show.

Margaret, played by Margaret O'Brien, and Peter do a most professional and moving job of their parts. But the set speeches and the intrusion of dramatic music detract from the desired effect.

An interesting war-time model of "Crime Doen't Pay" and a travelogue and a cartoon add to the bill—R.R.

"The Palm Beach Story" is a comedy which is actually funny; quite a relief in these days of pictures with messages. It is an odd mixture of ultra sophistication and defined slapstick.

"PALM BEACH STORY"

The plot is fairly coherent and quite consistant. It involves the wife who believes that her husband would do much better without her and sets out to get a divorce, closely followed by the pursuing husband.

Somehow or other, the Ale and Quail Club and a pinch-penny millionaire complete with yacht and wolf-like sister get involved with the couple and all is confusion until a happy ending which is even screwier than the beginning which you just can't understand nohow.

Claudette Colbert, Joel McCrae, Mary Astor and Rudy Vallee combine to make this mad melee at Shea's.

On the same program is Mickey the Mouse with Pluto at his usual best, a propaganda short and Quentin McLean on the organ.—F.J.S.

Successful Symposium

Several general conclusions were reached at the Housing Conference held last week-end by the Ontario Association of Architests which should serve as a basis for future development.

The need for Public Housing, and the careful planning of these schemes to provide decent living conditions at a low cost was realized by all those present at the meeting. In order to bring these schemes into effect, the prevailing scepticism on the part of the citizens at the present time must be removed. To this end the public must be educated to understand what is meant by Public Housing, and to realize that decent living conditions would be within reach of everyone if such schemes were put into effect, and thus create a public demand on the part of the citizens. To meet this a convincing program must be worked out. The three governments must collaborate in order to decide clearly where the responsibility lies for initiating and financing the schemes. Then the necessary legislation must be passed in order to set the machinery in motion.

When this has been done the small investor, the speculative builder and others affected by such schemes would be convinced that they would profit by adapting themselves to the new setup. In order to maintain the system when it is put into effect, it was realized that some change in the system of municipal taxation must be effected whereby the basis would be shifted from property to income.

These ideas along with suggestions for putting them into effect were supplemented by Miss Bauer's explanation of what has already been done in the United States. The O.A.A. were extremely fortunate in having Miss Bauer, the American housing expert, and author of "Modern Housing" present at their discussions. Not only has Miss Bauer studied housing extensively in Europe, but she is thoroughly familiar with the Canadian problems for they are in most respects almost identical with those in the United States. We have relatively the same type of climate and country, the same type of materials with which to work, and psychologically the same type of people. "There is no social problem on this continent such as there is in Europe," Miss Bauer stated, "for here there is no segregated class in the slum areas, but merely decent people who have recently met with misfortune." Thus we should be in a position to approach the problem in a similar manner, and profit by the experiments which have already been conducted successfully in the United States.

The O.A.A. are to be congratulated on this highly successful symposium which it conducted. It is only in such a group where sane discussion is carried on in which every field bearing on the subject is represented by experts that a real understanding of the problem can be conceived. However, it is only a preliminary and the test will come now to see how well they carry on from this precedent in the development of the Public Housing Movement in Canada.

As Miss Bauer said, "If only the Ontario Association of Architects would turn into a conscientious, enthusiastic group of agitators, it would be wonderful." However, we must also have experts trained in the techniques of planning to initiate these schemes and develop them. In Canada today, we have few qualified town-planners capable of crystallizing the demands for Public Housing Schemes. These technicians must be trained while the public is being educated in the possibilities of modern housing methods.

Words are not enough.

Editor,
The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

On Wednesday of this week, campaigning will again fill Hart House as we elect new members to sit on the various committees of the House. Almost all the candidates for these offices look forward to hard work and to sound administration policies for the coming term. But they are in for a great disillusionment.

Hart House committees, sir, are a farce. I am on one this year and know a great deal about the workings of the others, yet I know of no committee men who feels satisfied with what his group has been allowed to do during this past year. Take the House Committee for example. This you would imagine would be the busiest group of all—yet I know members on it who can claim to have made only one real decision all year (that one regarding disposal of the proceeds of the All-University Dance). Men who wanted to work for that dance found there was nothing they could do amidst the mock officiousness of Hart House. And it was the same with the other functions which you list in the Varsity for February 23. The committee did little or nothing regarding them, except to hear statements. The Music Committee will openly profess that their usefulness was concentrated mainly on moving furniture and giving out programs for Sunday Evening Concerts. The Art Committee would appear to have done much more perhaps—yet little of the work for the two special exhibits was theirs. The only undergraduate who does much work for the Library is not even a member of that committee.

Hart House officials might attempt to answer these accusations in a number of way. (1) They might say it was not the intention of the powers-that-be to confer great powers upon the student representatives. That may be the idea today—apparently it is—but from talking with members of the committees as recently as six years ago, things were not always that way. (2) These officials who have an answer for everything may say the students are to busy and that they don't want extra work. That is false—every committee members I have talked to wished he had more to do with Hart House administration. Every member feels that his electors would be disappointed in him if they knew how little he was able to achieve. (3) And, again, we may hear the reply that students are incapable of making such decisions as are necessary in the House. We agree that certainly students cannot embark upon financial statements to revise them—but they can decide which affairs the Great Hall should cater to under present food and labour shortages and which they must regretfully refuse, who shall be the artists at Sunday Evening concerts, whether or not catalogues will be printed in connection with any art exhibition, and so on.

Because students have so little to say in the running of Hart House, "their union" has reached the position where all policies for it are negative. The officials say, "Let's cancel this for the duration" (no adequate reasons given). And in the same breath, "Let's give another talk on the wonderful spirit and heritage that is Hart House—that way we can give the students nothing but make them think they have everything." Certainly, these are hard time and certainly things must be given up—but there are

X. Xavier Jones, 2nd Year Sociology, was last seen Wednesday of the past week descending into the bowels of the library stacks. Miss Ilka Frick, librarian, reports that she gave him the customary charted map with full itinerary and a box compass at exactly 9:00 of that day.

"Mr. Jones," she says, "had the furtive, hunted look of one who had just read the Orders-in-Council for University Students. Otherwise, his temperature was normal, his pulse also. We gave him the customary medical examination prior to the long, gruelling undertaking. The chief librarian warned him of the perils that beset his path, but Mr. Jones kept on mumbling to himself something about an essay that just had to be in."

His absence was first noticed on Friday by Professor Ketchup of the Psychology Department to whom the essay was due on that day. The other students (who had not finished their essays) were patiently lined up waiting to be horse-whipped by Professor Ketchup. This is the customary penalty for late essays in the Psychology Department serving not only as a convenient reminder to tardy students but also affording them an chance to test their sensory reactions, tendency to masochism, etc.

Only Mr. Jones was absent. Inquiry revealed that no one had seen him since the fatal Wednesday. Pendennis Wright, tears streaming from his eyes (this was carefully noted by his companions in their laboratory note-books, together with the time and the rate of flow per minute) offered to make the supreme sacrifice and search the stacks for Jones.

After much persuasion the librarian provided him with pocket flashlight, first-aid kit, boy scout hatchet and a flagon of hot coffee with sandwiches. The entire psychology department stood on tip-toe to wave him goodbye as his figure disappeared down the winding mazes of the stacks until finally it disappeared behind a shelf of Hist. and Econ. (Eng.).

Nothing has been heard of either Jones or Wright since. Telegrams, cables, and phone-messages have poured into The Varsity office meanwhile. Reporters from all the leading newspapers of the country (and the Mop and Pail as well) are sitting, fingers poised on typewriter, at the yawning portals of the stacks awaiting the return of either, or both. One or two brave librarians and friends have ventured into the dark, gloomy depths but have come back, teeth chattering with fright, unable to reveal what they underwent.

Present rumours gave it that David Stowbeard, 3rd Sociology, has volunteered to go in search of the two with a portable wireless sending-and-receiving set and a seeing-eye dog but it is doubtful whether university officials will permit this.

Dr. Hokey has issued the following pronouncement:

Unless word is heard of Jones or Wright within two weeks we must consider them as lost. Their names will be enrolled among the honoured dead of the university; and a special memorial service will be held in Convocation Hall. This horrible event has led the board of governors to board up the entrance to the stacks. We cannot afford to lose the cream of our youth in its treacherous confines in the hour of our national emergency. etaoin shrdlu.

U.C. Captures Sudden Death Hockey Thriller, 5-4

St. Mike's and Royal College Play Four Overtime Periods in Game to Determine Group Leader

74 - MINUTE GAME

At the Arena yesterday afternoon a better-than-average crowd was treated to the best hockey game of the season as U.C. 1 took the measure of St. Mike's 5-4. Jimmy Graham banged home the deciding counter at the four-minute mark of the fourth overtime stanza to climax 74 minutes of torrid hockey.

Claude Morrison opened the scoring after seven minutes of play when he picked up a rebound off Des Roches' and beat Skinner with a hard high drive. Despite a badly cut ice surface and a heavy layer of snow the two teams set a killing pace that kept the crowd at fever pitch all through the game, especially during the overtime.

Toward the end of the first period defenceman Hank Kuryluk led a five-man U.C. rush down the ice and Whitely took the pass-out and rifled one home through a conjested goal area. Nicholls put U.C. in the lead 2-1 when he slipped through the double blue defence and let one go from an impossible angle. Jack Gregson partially blocked the shot but it got away from him and bounced over the goal line. St. Mike's came back strong as Spadoni and Des Roches worked the puck into U.C. territory on a nice relay play with Tom Jacob on hand to finish it off. A parade to the local "digger" finished regulation time but no goals were scored and the game went into overtime.

After four minutes of overtime session number one, Bill Wade rushed the puck into the St. Mike's area and passed back to Warren who golfed one from the left boards to completely fool Gregson. With but 47 seconds remaining Audy Des Roches stick-handled his way through the entre U.C. defence and finished off a lovely rush with a hard shot to the far corner of the U.C. net, thus forcing another period of overtime.

Play continued fast and furious but neither team was able to break the deadlock. Jack Amell came very close on one occasion but missed the open net by inches.

A cheap penalty to Audy Des Roches for what appeared a purely accidental trip was the signal for action in the third extra session. While Audy was catching a breather in the cooler Bill Wade lifted a high short from well outside the St. Mike's blue line and it went for a goal. U.C. were again in the lead, 4-3. Just then St. Mike's broke through on a dangerous rush and Wade stopped it by cross-checking the puck-carrier. He no sooner reached the penalty box when Graham joined him for tripping. With U.C. playing two men short the Irish had a royal chance to put the game on ice but the best they could do was to tie it up. From the face-off in the U.C. corner Des Roches won the draw and a quick pass from Morrison to Boland evened the score for the fourth time.

Two leg-weary teams skated out for the fourth session and it was agreed that the first score would end the game. After four minutes of play Jimmy Graham stole the puck from a clearing St. Mike's defenceman and romped right in on Gregson who had no chance whatever on a low drive to the corner of the net.

St. Mike's—Gregson, Doyle, Morrison, Hayden, Morrison, Des Roches, Boland, Jacob, Spadoni, McKenzie.

U.C. I — Skinner, Wade, Kuryluk, Nicholls, Graham, Nesbitt, Amell, Whitely, Phoenix, Warren.

Speaking Of Sport

By Jim Paton

MORE . . . MORE . . .

If yesterday's game up at the Arena is any indication, we are going to have some rare old hockey before the playoffs are over. One more game like that and a trip to a heart specialist will be in order.

STRAW VOTE . . .

Neither team was facing elimination in the game, but you would never know it the way they went at it. The only outcome of the match is that St. Mike's now have to meet the vaunted Jr. School outfit in the first round of the playoffs instead of the final round (it says here). But after yesterday afternoon's performance we are of the opinion that School will have to go all out to get past the Fighting Irish, and if they do they will still have plenty of trouble with U.C.

HERE'S WHY . . .

1. The Double Blue have lost two of their best players in defenceman Adrian Egan and forward Don Hector, yet they can still ice a team that refuses to give up. During the crucial stages of yesterday's tilt the Irish were always behind, but given a chance to come back, they came back.

2. The Irish have the best two way centre in the league, in Audy DesRoches.He's the Apps of the Double Blue.

3. They have a well balanced team. The second line led by Jim McKenzie, knows how to cover their checks and also get a fair harvest of goals.

THE ROYAL COLLEGE . . .

1. The most under-rated team in the interfaculty loop. They have plenty of the moxie that wins championships, even against better clubs.

2. The Red and White have probably the fastest group of skaters in the league. The slowest man on the team is big Bill Wade and when he does get started he's a hard man to stop.

3. Opposing forwards will have a full time job watching Dalt Nesbitt and Jimmy Graham, who literally come out of nowhere to convert loose puck into goals.

4. Skinner in the U.C. net is, we think, the steadiest goaltender in these parts, and at the right times, the luckiest.

THE PLAYOFF SCHEDULE . . .

Now that we've finished singing the praises of U.C. and St. Mike's, let's have a look at the draw for the playoff round. And just for amusement, maybe prognosticate a little. (The limb will always hold another.

SERIES ONE . . . Mar 3. Sr Meds vs Sr SPS . . . really doesn't matter . . .besides we haven't caught any Sr Meds games.

SERIES TWO . . . Mar 3. U.C. vs Jr Meds . . . U.C. shouldn't have too much trouble with this one . . . call them to win by three goals.

SERIES THREE . . . Mar 4. Trinity vs winner of series one . . . still doesn't matter.

SERIES FOUR . . . Mar 4. Wycliffe vs SPS V . . . your guess is as good as ours and probably entails less risk.

SERIES FIVE . . . Mar 4. St. Mike's vs Jr School . . . why did we ever start this? Well, one, two, three—St. MIKE'S!

(The following dates are subject to change.)

SERIES SIX . . . Mar 5 and 8. Winner of one vs winner of two . . . that's UC in case you've forgotten already.

SERIES SEVEN . . . Mar 5 and 8. Winner of four vs winner of five . . . they love us at St. Mike's.

THE FINALS . . . DATE ?? Mac knows when and he wont tell. ST. MIKE'S vs U.C. . . . well we call the Irish but only after a long struggle. UC have played two games in the last two days and they go at it again today. Pretty soon we figure them to fall off the pace, but we hope they don't because we would like to see a well contested final series.

WHICH REMINDS US . . .

This is our last SOS and after reading over the above it might be just as well. It was fun while it lasted and we will always remember it but we absolutely refuse to retain any nostalgic memories!

Pitching Duel Ends in 2-2 Tie

Meds II B and IV S.P.S. battled to a two-all tie yesterday in the first playdowns of the baseball finals.

Developing into a pitcher's duel between School's O'Laughlin and Meds' Fox who made seven and eight strike-outs respectively, the game was very tight, especially in the closing innings. Meds racked up both their runs off Fyfe and Fox's bats in the first inning. School's Bromley got a run in the first inning and Spence tied the game up in the second. The game will have to be re-played.

substitutes and new ideas for anyone with positive rather than negative notions. The time to stop this unwelcome trend is now before Hart House becomes a place to get a hair-cut, a P.T. credit, and nothing more. The Founders' Prayer in the House must be a cause of chagrin to those who read it now and want Hart House to be what it was and should be.

This, therefore, is a plea to students to elect the strongest men possible at the elections. Forget your faculty—vote only for men stronger than we were last year, men who will fight for the rights of the committees to do something for the good of the students, men who will work from the beginning of the year and from the drop of the Warden's hat until Hart House again becomes more than a beautiful building.

A member.

March 2, 1943.

Editor,
The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

The year 1942-1943 is the fourth year of the war and Hart House has felt the impact as has the University a a whole, and indeed all similar organizations. During the last few years there have meen many changes in the staff of the House, and the burden for those remaining has increased—in two ways: (1) the breaking in of new staff and (2) added work resulting from war conditions e.g. in providing meals and other services for the R.C.A.F. Detachment at the University and to provide Orderly Rooms for the 2nd Battalion C.O.T.C., the U.A.T.C. and the U.N.T.D.

It is inevitable that during the war period the activities of the House should be changed and curtailed to some extent. It is regrettable that debates, Friday Afternoon Recitals, Sunday Evening Songsters and Library Evenings, features of House activities for many years, have had to be temporarily suspended. However when it is realized that the undergraduates have been required to devote approximately 130 hours during the academic year to military training, it is not surprising that they have found less time for other pursuits. Intercollegiate sports have also been a war casualty. It has always been the desire of the Founders and of the officials of the House that members of committees should accept the maximum responsibility for its operation. As the war has progressed it has been increasingly difficult for the committees to function as they did during previous years. It has been almost impossible to arrange a time for meetings when the majority of the members could be present. To offset this an attempt was made to hold meetings at the noon hour. This meant however that the business to be dealt with could not be discussed as fully as in previous years when meetings were for the most part called for 5 o'clock. The executive staff of the House have sought to meet the problems that have arisen in the spirit demanded by war emergency.

J. R. Gilley,
Acting Warden,
Hart House.
March 2, 1943.

The letter from A Member reproduced above was not received anonymously, but the writer, at present a members of one of the Committees of Hart House, requested that this name be withheld.

We reprint his letter, not because we agree with most of his arguments, but because we have heard imilar opinions voiced before, and believe him to be representative of a certain vocal minority in Hart House affairs. Serving in our same open-forum capacity, we also print a reply from the Acting Warden of the House.

We confess that our sympathies in the present slight debate lie with overworked Hart House officialdom, which we believe has functioned magnificently throughout the recent years to maintain House affairs at their present level of excellence. That Hart House is still one of the major show-pieces of all the Universities in the world, wherein ideals of fellowship still exist, and wherein relaxation and sanctuary from the almost overwhelming bustle of the war-scarred campus is still sumptuously provided for all its members and visitors, is due to the efforts of Mr. Gilley and his staff, and we consider that the writer of the first letter above displays a form of regrettable ingratitude in some of his sentiments.

As a private member of Hart House, we are perfectly content with its administration; but in our journalistic capacity we welcome such letters as the above. Criticism of various aspects of University life is, in itself, a sign of healthy cerebration; although in this case we believe it to be ill-judged.

WOMEN CERTAINLY DO APPAL US, but then there are times when men must certainly appal women. Consider the case, for instance, of the young swain who called to collect his date for a formal. After the customary period of waiting, she came floating down stairs, a vision of loveliness in a sort of fluffy, backless, blue affair.

The man in the case stood staring, the eyes bulging, the jaw suspended . . . the young lady just stood there waiting and it gradually dawned on him that he was expected to say something complimentary and clever.

He gulped, thought hard and then gave with his best—"Darling, I never thought you could look so lovely!"

AND HE COULDN'T UNDERSTAND WHY SHE WAS MAD AT HIM. . . .

There is also the legend of the lad who upsbowed, collecting a woman for a Varsity party. This time there was not the usually lengthy wait, which may have been what threw the boy off, for when the babe came bouncing down the stairs, be placated her with a casual, "I'm sorry I came so early, but I won't mind waiting until you get dressed."

"But," stated the woman in the case, "I am dressed."

HE COULD UNDERSTAND WHY SHE WAS MAD AT HIM. . .

There are always ways and means. . . Even to getting library books out for a longer period than you are supposed to. One guy even went so far as to sign some livres out with a nom de plume, U. R. Gypped, North House. . . Well, he hoarded the volumes for quite a while and then one day while he was in there getting more to hoard, he overheard the gals behind the counter talking.

"Say," this Mr. Gypp hasn't brought his books back yet," said one brightly.

"That so?" replied the other. "Well . . . guess we had better put him on the fines due list. . ."

SOCIALLY SIGNIFICANT DEPT.

Back down in the States they make much of a carbonated fluid known as Canada Dry. So imagine the consternation of visiting Yankees to discover huge posters up here in the Land of the Maple Leaf expounding the virtues of a carbonated fluid known as America Dry. . . .

It reminds this department of that venerable old prohibition gag once popular in the states, concerning the slogan of that company, which was, "DRINK CANADA DRY."

TIMES SURE HAVE CHANGED.

APROPOS OF THIS, shortages of various sorts have certainly brought about a changing world. We remember vividly a lad strolling into a common room early in the afternoon with a very, very wry face indeed. He seated himself down rather wearily and friends approached to find out if anything was the matter.

"I am disgusted," he said. "Gad how I hate to have to drink my beer in the morning!"

WORDS OF WARNING TO THE WISE DEPT.

This comes a bit belated, but perhaps not too late to save several from a Fate Worse Than Exams. . . . Never, never entrust yourself to strange barber when you are in uniform. . . . The results are apt to be quite horrible and look like they were done with a knife and fork.

There are short haircuts and then there are G.I. cuts.

AND WHILE WE ARE ON the subject of uniforms, team, prepare to be astonished. If you have been wandering around in battle-dress, proudly expanding chest and bicepps and feeling exceptionally virile and supermannish, I mean, there you are in battle-dress a man's suit, yet; it may come as a bit of a shock to discover that battle-dress is also issued to the C.W.A.C.!!!

A woman's place is in the home????

THIS ONE GETS a bit involved, so follow it carefully folks, follow it carefully. It seems that at a recent dance, there was a sort of a gathering in a hotel room, as there usually is at those affairs. Well, this couple came in and found seats at a premium—in fact there just weren't any. But he spotted a pal of his and date sitting on a sort of love-seat job. Trusting his friend implicitly, he parked his woman on his friend's knee while he wandered off in search of liquid refresbment for the group. On his return, he was smitten with an excellent idea and leaned forward to buss his femme. His amigo, not to be outdid, leaned to do likewise with his girl.

Well, the point of the story is that, much to the disappointment of amused spectators, they did connect with the right woman. . . .

The Sportswoman

By Aileen McNally

The Granite Club was the scene of the finals of the Women's Interfaculty Badminton tournament. And the results —it is indeed a happy task to be able to report that Betty Allen, for the second straight year, has been crowned champion. Betty has made a name for herself in campus athletics . . . a renowned star in Basketball, and of late proving her mettle in the P.H.E. Hockey net. Thus to an all-round athlete we offer our sincere congratulations on her latest triumph.

Badminton's Queen retained her crown by defeating Doris Clarke, a freshie in P.H.E. This gal is unquestionably one of the best to hit the campus in a number of years, and she gave Betty quite a battle. Both girls have a nice shot and play a very similar game. Doris got off to an early lead and was ahead 10-2 at one point. Then Betty staged a spectacular come-back and tied it up 10-10. Three extra points were played and Doris managed to eke out a victory 13-12. Betty came back strongly in the second game, taking it 11-1. The last an deciding game was terrific. The play was very even and they battled back and forth until as in the first game the score was 10-10. Betty then won the next three points making the final score 13-10, and giving Betty the game and the match. All in all it was a great game to win and a hard one to lose. However, Doris will be around another year, so watch her. She is going places in Badminton.

And speaking of up-and-coming players, we must not overlook Joan Snyder, a freshie at U.C., whom Betty defeated earlier in the afternoon 11-4, 11-1. This semi-final match was very good—a fitting prelude to the thrilling finals. Joan is another lass on whom we suggest you keep a watchful eye.

The doubles tournament will take place on Thursday afternoon down at Margaret Eaton. Things are scheduled to get underway at 2:30, and as the whole tournament will be played Thursday, everyone will please be punctual.

And now we make our last reminder of the year, for this is the last Sportswoman we shall pound out. Between our tears you may see that two Volleyball games will take place up at the L.M. this afternoon. Trinity meets U.C. at 4:00 and at 5:00 P.H.E. takes on Vic. And so goodbye.

HELP THE RED CROSS

ART MUSIC Drama

Rubinstein

Toronto Symphony Orchestra

There are few if any conductors who play all types of music with equal assurance, and Sir Ernest MacMillan is no exception to the rule. Although he plays both Tschaikovsky and Shostakovich excellently, older music tends to become stody and lifeless under his baton. The Italian Symphony of Mendelssohn illustrated his shortcomings. If this superb work is to be given full effect the orchestra must play with more spirit and with a great variety of inflection that it did last night. The third movement was given in a particularly dull and matter-of-fact way. Somewhat better was the second movement whose graceful phrases Sir Ernest was able to mould with some effect. Also unsatisfactory was the Magic Flute Overture of Mozart, which was not given sufficient drive.

Wagner's Prelude to Lohengrin was more effectively played. There was one particularly fine moment after the big climax, where the first violins played a descending scale-like passage with striking purity of style. This, however, was but one impressive moment in an excellent performance by the violins. The conductor was able to lead up to the climax and away from it again in convincing style, although at the actual turning point in the descent was too sudden. Copland's El Salon Mexico showed Sir Ernest's general effectiveness with modern scores, although the work itself is something of a disappointment. In his earlier Music for the Theatre Copland uses popular tunes more successfully.

Rubinstein is on of those rare artists who is almost as good as his reputation. He did not achieve his rhythmical incisiveness by a persistent use of pistol shot fortissimos but by the sheer verve of his sharply inflected rhythms. The Tschaikovsky Piano Concerto No. 1 was a suitable vehicle for displaying his style in all its variety without bothering about the stylistic requirements of the work itself which can be made to fit practically any mould. Phrasing which I would have condemned as precious if he had been playing Beethoven or Mozart was here higbly enjoyable, and in the slow movement he formed his phrases with nobility and distinction. I was strongly impressed by his ability to achieve powerful effects with no trace of strain.

Routley Speaks To Medical Club

nation-wide acceptanee and adoption."

He then went on to say how necessary it was to keep medical schools open, and the production of doctors better and greater. Medical research must also be given every chance, Dr. Routley asserted. As for the country and places where medical help has been so limited, facilities must and can be realized so that even where a population is very spread out, it can be given. It might be necessary to subsidize a number of doctors for this purpose, suggested Dr. Routley.

At the conclusion of his speech many questions were asked the speaker by both medical students and others present. The speaker reassured all of them that there were many plans and considerations underway for the future of Canadian medieine, not the least of which is the health insurance scheme.

Fund Set Up by V.C.U. To Build Common Room

A motion to set up a fund towards the building of a common room was passed by the Victoria College Union at a mass meeting yesterday afternoon.

The fund will be established with the $300 surplus left from the main V.C.U. fund available to be spent this year.

Two motions on amendments to the constitution concerning nominations to the Bob Committee and the executive of the Men's Athletic Union were voted on and passed for the second time, and were thus officially adopted.

COTC Group Hears Dean On Aspects Of Signalling; Vacancies To Be Filled

Signal Officer Must Have Wide Variety of Training; Be Able to Handle Men Efficiently; Pass Exam in Mathematics

NOT 'HARD-UP' FOR OFFICERS

Last night about 40 members of the C.O.T.C. went to the Second Divisional Signals Headquarters where the duties of Signal Officers were explained to them by Major O. N. Dean.

Major Dean explained that all regimental signal officers are now R.C.C.S. personnel rather than regimental personnel as previously.

Anyone interested in this arm of the service is asked to contact Major Dean at the 2nd Reserve Divisional Signals Headquarters at 185 Spadina Ave. A mathematics exam is being conducted on the afternoon of March 13, and any who wish to write may do so at that time. Writing this exam in no way constitutes a contract with the Signals, it was stated.

In outlining the requirements and duties of a signals officer, Major Dean said: "A signal officer must be dependable as he is out on his own most of the time and must do his own work. He must be able to 'stand on his own feet' and if the need arises, even talk back to colonels and explain to them why his method for a certain situation is better from an intercommunication viewpoint. He must know how to handle men, since he will have about 50 signallers under his command."

Newman Debate Down on Liquor

The resolution "that the present government restrictions on the sale of intoxicants contribute substantially to the Canadian war effort" was defeated Sunday night at the Newman Club parliamentary court by a vote of the house and a two to one decision of the judges.

Three judges, Hon. Chief Justice Robert Collins, III Osgoode, and Assistant-Justices Lillian Callaghan, III St. Mike's, and Donald Rohr, IV St. Mike's, presided over the court, and parliamentary court procedure was followed.

The senior counsel, Al O'Mara, I Osgoode, speaking for the government, outlined the various economic benefits of liquor control and the conservation of man-power for war work which result from these restrictions.

The junior counsel, Aileen McNally, III St. Mike's, discussed how the moral effects of liquor consumption detract from the war effort, and also pointed out that government rationing of alcoholic products should be accepted with the same willingness that the rationing of other commodities is accepted.

Jacques Bonneau, first speaker for the opposition, stated that there was little shortage of products that went into the making of liquor; that comparatively speaking, there were few workers engaged in breweries who would be useful elsewhere; and that the present restrictions are very ineffective. His supporter, Geraldine Wilson, III St. Mike's, discussed the loss in revenue to the government that liquor restriction entails, and enlarged upon the points already stated by her partner.

A heated discussion from the Forum followed during which time one of the speakers was ejected by order of the Chief Justice and several other members of the court withdrew "for fear of contamination in a disorderly house where injustice held sway."

New Faces Appear In the Library

With the Senate bogey and the spectre of final examinations looming on the horizon, students appear to be starting the annual rush on the University Library's books, a Library official told The Varsity yesterday.

"As soon as the first day of March appears on the calendar," she said, "students here realize that examinations are just around the corner, and inevitably the Library becomes filled with repentent scholars."

She said that undoubtedly fear of the Senate was one of the factors that caused such an over-flowing Library attendance prior to the Christmas examinations. The Library was then so packed that there were not enough seats available.

Although statistics reveal that since the war there has not been an over-all increase in attendance at the Library—probably caused by decreased total of students at the University—she said students seem to be more serious about buckling down to routine studies.

"During the school year librarians get to know the consistent book-readers so well," she said, "that the names written on book-borrowing slips are rhymed off with ease. It's when examination time rolls around that new faces appear before us."

Hart House Votes New Committees

By Ken McRae

In former years at approximately this date there came a day when the corridors of Hart House were decked with gaily coloured posters. Great throngs of students filled the halls to overflowing, while, amid the noise and confusion of the throng, cheerful individuals busied themselves giving out blotters to practically anyone whatsoever.

The event is the occasion of the annual election of the members of the undergraduate committee of the House, a gala day when voters by the score turned out to support their favourite candidates or to be convinced to support someone else's favourite candidate.

Yesterday election day came around again, but conditions were changed. There were only a handful of posters, and the few supporters of candidates who were distributing blotters were almost apologetic as they gave them out. The throngs of students roaming the halls were conspicuous only by their absence, while in the polling room itself a strictly businesslike atmosphere prevailed as voters passed down a line to be certified and to receive ballots.

U.C. French Club Guests of Victoria

With Victoria as host, the combined French Clubs of University College, Trinity and Victoria met in Cartwright Hall last night. The three colleges were each to put on a play, but due to lack of time, only two were presented.

U.C. put on several scenes from their "Altitude 3200," recently played on the campus, while Victoria enacted "Les 37 Sous de M. Montandoin," a comedy.

Jim Weld, president of the Victoria French Club, stated that he would like to see more of these joint meetings, even though it entails some effort on the part of the participants.

The evening was rounded out by refreshments and dancing.

Lass Clears Service Mail

Last spring when the exams were over and people began to join the Navy and Army and such like organizations, a group of Varsity boys decided that even if they were going to be scattered from Gordon Head to Plymouth Hoe, they did not want to lose contact with each other and so they cooked up a little scheme and elected Betty Allen, III P.H.E., as a Central Correspondence Clearing Depot.

Under this title she receives the letters sent from each of these boys to the others, wherever they may be. These are sent in her care, and she readdresses them and forwards them to their proper destination. She keeps a file of all the names and addresses, which are subject to such frequent change, and in this way no letters are lost or left wandering through the mails in search of a changed address. The names are accompanied by sock sizes and sooner or later each boy on the list receives his pair.

An added service that Betty provides informs the boys in town if any of their pals are also on leave. When they hit Toronto (they are all Toronto boys), they phone Betty and leave their names, receiving in return the names of all the others who happen to be around on that certain week-end.

The scheme began with three boys and now the files include the names of 50 ex-Varsity-ites from U.C., Trinity, Victoria, St. Michael's and S.P.S. The idea spread via the grape-vine as one boy after another arranged to write his pal in care of Betty Allen. Now they are stationed in England, Camp Borden, Gorden Head and points east and west. One boy from St. Mike's is in the Midshipmen's School at the University of Columbia in New York.

Most of the boys were personally known to Betty and occasionally she gets letters addressed to herself.

V.C.F. Study Group Hears Dr. Geo. Pidgeon

Dr. George Pidgeon, pastor of Bloor St. United Church, spoke on the subject "What Is Religion?" at the Victoria College V.C.F. meeting yesterday. He defined religion as the direct contact and communication with God and the discovery of the reality behind all appearances.

Using the text, "Ye must be born again," Dr. Pidgeon said the vitality of a person's religion depends upon his becoming conscious of the approach of God and responding to it.

Army Course Reads the Cat

With homes in all parts of Canada from British Columbia to Prince Edward Island, 141 members of the No. 1 Canadian Army Corps are at present stationed at Burwash Hall.

The boys, ranging in age from 17 to 19, began a course in Mathematics, Physics and Engineering at the University last October and will complete it at the end of May, at which time they will leave for further military training elsewhere.

Major C. M. Howarth, who is in charge of the course, said, "We are very proud of the boys; they are well-disciplined, are working hard and seem to be enjoying their life here."

A cheery 19-year-old member of the corps told The Varsity, "We are all very happy, but are working hard and find little time for recreation. We don't meet many of the University students but we do read The Varsity and enjoy especially the Champus Cat."

Biology Students Discuss Research

Students speaking on "Biology as a Vocation" at the Biology Club meeting last night stated that 50 per cent of the graduates of Honour Biology and allied courses continue their studies; the remainder become teachers or go into commercial or industrial fields.

Of those who have gone far afield there is one biologist engaged in research in the Oxford Museum, England, and another reported to be working in the cold temperature lab at Cambridge. Mr. H. M. Good, IV Biology, added a note of humour with the report that one of their graduates is doing research work on the tomato for the Campbell Soup Co.

Women's part in the field of Biology seems to be firmly established, according to Miss Gwen Carson, III P. & B. Although there have been only two women, St. Hildagarde and Mme Curie, who are considered renowned in the field of science, women have an honour that no man has achieved—the Nobel prize twice won by Mme Curie. Women have found positions as teachers and laboratory technicians, and are in government posts as well as in Biological Supply houses, museums, fisheries and seed houses.

As a course in honour science, either Biology or Physiology and Biochemistry gives much wider scope than the nar-

Skelton Haunted by Skeleton; Obadiah Proves Problem Child

For Rent—Complete and articulated skeleton, "male." For details write H. Skelton, 236 Church Street, Weston.

No, it's not a gag. For four successive weeks Harry Skelton—that's his real name—formerly I M. & P., inserted this ad in The Varsity, but no one yet has snapped up his offer. He blames it all on his name.

Let it be known first of all that Skelton is not in the old bones trade. But he says he bought the skeleton from a physician's supply firm while in a temporary "fit of madness," and now he wants to put method into his madness by renting the skeleton.

He brought the male 5 ft. 6 in. Paleolithic replica to his home, scared the wits out of his parents, and soon had the neighbourhood kids flocking to his bedroom to see the curio.

"They oh'd and ah'd at the wonderful sight," comments Skelton, "and behind their palms they whispered to one another, 'Don't take it too seriously. It's one of Skelton's usually crazy ideas'."

Admitting that he may be perhaps a bit eccentric, Skelton still maintains that when he purchased the skeleton, he felt life would not be complete without one. Slyly he added: "Now when I feel like arguing with someone, I can go to my bedroom and pick a bone without offending friends."

The skeleton—its Christian name is "Obadiah", is very friendly skelton according to Skelton, and to prove his point he rigged Obadiah up beside his brother's bed after the first day it was purchased. He says his brother merely arose from bed in the morning, yawned, and regarded the frame of bones with a welcoming smile.

"My brother," explains Skelton, "thought it was a week-end visitor."

Since he enlisted with the R.C.A.F. Jan. 20, Skelton is worried about Obadiah's comfort. Training camps do not allow trainees to be accompanied by friends, no matter how slim they may be.

"It's surprising but one can become very attached to a skeleton," say Skelton, "and I would hate to part with him. He does not eat, doesn't argue and is a silent partner. I've become very fond of him."

Three-Day Refresher Course For Industrial Medicoes To Begin Next Week

Doctors in Large Industrial Plants Will Have Opportunity to Learn Latest Medical Controls for Illness

LED BY FARQUHARSON

A three-day refresher course for industrial doctors will be given by the University on March 10, 11 and 12. The course is sponsored by the government department of industrial hygiene and is locally under the direction of Dr. R. F. Farquharson.

The purpose of the course, said Dr. E. S. Ryerson, is to present to the doctors of large industrial plants newest medical controls for illnesses which are responsible for the loss of many working days each year.

Lectures will be held at the various hospitals throughout the city and in the Medical Building.

U.C. Lit Dinner Finishes Season

The final meeting this year of the University College Literary and Athletic Society will take the form of a banquet in Hart House at 5:50 p.m. tonight. Business of the evening will include the Robinette Debate finals, election of the Maurice Cody Scholarship winner, and nominations for the 1943-44 Lit executive.

Champion debating teams from first first and fourth years are competing for the Robinette trophy this year and the U.C. debating championship will be decided tonight.

The Maurice Cody Scholarship is awarded by Lit election to the U.C. male student from any year who is judged to have shown the greatest interest in college activities and in public speaking. It is an annual award given by Dr. Cody in memory of his son who died in 1920.

Candidates for the 19 offices on the Lit executive will be nominated at the dinner and each nominee will be allowed one minute in which to speak. Elections for the offices will be held March 10.

Dean Beatty and Professor R. D. C. Finch, guest speakers, will respond to toasts to be given by Geof. Johnson and John Wood.

Queen's University To Have Army Course

Kingston, March 3—(CUP)—Plans are being formulated whereby 150 soldiers may be accommodated to train at Queen's University next fall, Principal R. C. Wallace stated today.

The course will be of one year's duration. The men will receive army pay and be under army supervision.

No definite decision regarding the course has been reached as yet but if the government decides to send the soldiers, more living space will be needed, it was said. Tentative plans for creating more space include flooring the swimming pool.

M'Callum Talks On Kierkegaard

"Behind Soeren Kierkegaard's elaborate blue-prints may lie one simple doctrine," stated Professor H. R. MacCallum yesterday in the first of a series of public lectures sponsored by University College. "Either men must concede the individual is superior to the race or they must lean towards the race to the destruction of the individual."

"Kierkegaard's relation to the Church was like that of Socrates to the Sophists," said Prof. MacCallum. "Despite the presence of reason, religion to him was a series of alarming paradoxes. Although he trained for the Lutheran ministry he never held any position in the Church. And like Socrates he found his attempt to shock people out of their self-neglect was resented; he was often mocked, and appeared as a comic figure in contemporary plays."

Prof. MacCallum explained the basic points of Kierkegaard's philosophy. For him existence was the inner subject consciousness, an anonymous public consisting solely of third parties. The key to all his reasoning is the statement "Subjectivity is truth." Only by posing and by covering his real emotions with a mask can man achieve objectivity. To guide one' life by objective doctrines is like trying to find one' was through Denmark by means of a map of the whole world.

"We all know this is a false doctrine," stated Prof MacCallum. "It challenges our most deeply rooted thought. It is a truth depending not on understanding, but on having achieved a certain state of existence. It is like a key that will fit a lock but not turn it. Unable to make anything easier, Kierkegaard felt the only thing to do was to make things as difficult as possible, and this he succeeded in doing."

Hutchins On Freedom

A new book, Education for Freedom, by President R. M. Hutchins of the University of Chicago, sees an all-pervasive materialism as the root beneath a decline in civilization well under way before the present war.

In it he says:

"We look upon our neighbour either as a customer or a competitor or an instrument of production. The emminent dignity of human beings forbids (this).... Man is a moral, rational and spiritual being."

That education is partly to blame for this attitude cannot be denied. "The tendency," says Hutchins, "is more and more to drive out of the course of study everything which is not immediately concerned with making a living." This trend is perhaps more noticeable in some American universities than at this one. In fact recent expressions of opinion among medical and engineering students here seem to show a "movement from below" demanding a reversal of this trend; and such a movement seems probable to meet with approval from the staff at least of the Arts faculty.

On the other hand the importance of "practical" subjects to the immediate prosecution of the war tends to exaggerate such materialism. To counter this one cannot do better than quote President Hutchins; he says:

"We are losing our moral principles. But the vestiges of them remain to bother us and to interfere with a thoroughgoing commitment to amoral principles. Hence we are like confused, divided, ineffective Hitlers. In a contest between Hitler and people who are wondering why they shouldn't be Hitlers, the finished product is bound to win.

"To formulate, to clarify, to vitalize the ideals which should animate mankind—this is the incredibly heavy burden which rests, even in total war, upon the universities. If they cannot carry it, nobody else will; for nobody else can. If it cannot be carried, civilization cannot be saved. The task is stupendous."

Correspondence

Editor,
The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

I do not know who "A Member" is, and I hope that I shall be spared the agony of meeting him when his identity is made known. However, I feel that his letter, published in yesterday's columns, should not go unanswered by some undergraduate who is also a member of a Hart House Committee.

There is no one so naive, I hope, as to think that the activities of the House could remain absolutely unchanged during wartime. "A Member" seems to feel, however, that his efforts have been futile. Perhaps they have been, but if such is the case I think he has erred in assuming that the grievance which he has with his particular committee is a general one in all committees, for I am also a member of a committee and I do most emphatically deny that my efforts or any of the effort put forth by my colleagues on the Library Committee, have been in vain or useless. I might also point out that I believe that I am the one referred to as "the undergraduate who does most work for the Library;" and question the knowledge of "A Member" regarding the workings of other committee, for I am most definitely a member of the Library Committee, occasionally to the chagrin of other members of that group.

I have never spoken to a committee member who feels that his work has not been appreciated, or that his suggestions are not only solicited but encouraged. Perhaps "A Member" is one of those would-be radicals who believes that merely because something has been done in a certain way for a number of years it must be changed whether it is worthwhile or not. Such revolutionary ideas are in my estimation, Mr. Editor, the most lamentable farce, and not the committees which strive to maintain in Hart House a standard which cannot be equalled anywhere in North America.

During the past two years, I have been present at all Library Committee meetings, and I can assure any one who doubts, that there have been many occasions when the members of committees have made no effort to co-operate with the secretary in arranging committee days, and the result has been that at times there has scarcely been a quorum present. What would "A Member" have us do? Throw the administration of the House into the keeping of a few undergraduate amateurs who are only transients in Hart House at best? Does he not realize that members of the Music Committee are encouraged to suggest artists for the Sunday Evening Concerts? Does he not realize that the artists for these concerts must be procured almost six months ahead of time, and that in that period the Committee will probably have changed? Does he not realize that the Art Committee is responsible for the shows in the Art Gallery, for their presentation and withdrawal? Does he not realize that the Library Committee is responsible for the purchase of new books and periodicals? Or is "A Member" one of those persons, of which there are too many, who feels that the House must come to him for his service, instead of realizing that the real answer to the Founders' Prayer is in that person who takes the initiative himself?

I have heard some members question the value of their membership, but in every case it has been only too evident that the members wanted the House, with all it holds for them, served to them in state. Hart House depends upon the members of the House, not upon the "officialdom" of the central office, which whenever exercised has only the benefit of the member in mind. If Hart House is a "farce," and that is the inference if the committees are such, it is a farce only because such people as "A Member" lack the intestinal fortitude to get in there and fight to maintain all that we have and respect; or even, and this is much worse, lacks the common decency to support his convictions with his name.

Yours truly,

Herbert G. Christie,
Curator.

Editor,
The Varsity.

Sir:

Since The Varsity will cease publication next week, I am afraid this letter can have little effect. Nevertheless, I feel it justified, if for no other reason than that it may be sympathetically read by some future editor-in-chief of The Varsity. It concerns the whole editorial policy followed by this year's editor-in-chief.

But first let me assure you that I am aware there is a war on, and that the task of the editor is no easy one. He must steer a very careful course of moderation and caution; and if he errs too much on the side of caution it is perhaps better on the whole than if he goes to the other extreme. We have seen two college papers suspended this year, as it is.

However, I do not think anything can excuse the arrant apple-polishing of the Editor of this year's Varsity. He seems to lean so far over backwards in attempting to appease the powers that be, that he falls flat on his back. It is particularly apparent, of course, in the italicized comments to letters to the Editor. In two cases at least—Dean Young's letter on the social value of engineers, and yesterday's letter from the Acting Warden of Hart House—the Editor has given us a slightly nauseating display of abject fawning.

The Varsity, I believe, is "the undergraduate" newspaper. But any undergraduate who tries to make use of it to air his complaints finds that the strongest supporter of reaction is none other than the Editor of his newspaper. In fact the only complaint against the voice of authority that The Varsity has supported was that against the alien student decision. And in this dispute The Varsity had the overwhelming support of at least 90 per cent of the University authorities. I think it would be a good thing for the University and for The Varsity itself if now and then it backed the wrong side.

One further example of The Varsity as the organ of authority: How many times has student news been crowded off the front page to give space to official pronouncements and the sayings and doings of officialdom? I have a sincere and genuine respect for President Cody, but I sometimes wonder if all the speeches he makes are of such outstanding importance to the student body as to warrant their being reported practically verbatim.

I feel a gentle nostalgia when I hear graduates of long standing tell of the days when The Varsity was the voice of the reforming minority, and not a year went by without the editor being severely reprimanded or even expelled.

Is The Varsity becoming old and stiff in the joints? Or is it merely a horrible example of what happens when a newspaper has a complete monopoly of its field?

Sincerely,

G. H. Johnson,
IV U.C.

Defenceless Voters Mobbed by Candidates In Hart House Fracas

Badly Outnumbered Voters Retire to Shelter of Pool Room After Savage Attack by Would-Be-Committeemen

BLOTTERS BLOOD-STAINED

Lunch-hour traffic in Hart House was completely disrupted and extra Hall Porters were called to emergency duty when a serious riot marred the traditional dignity of Hart House elections today.

The riot developed when a member of the small group of members exercising their franchise in the Map Room addressed a disparaging remark to one of the candidates who was howling something into his ear in an orderly manner.

Shocked by the remark, which he refused to make public, the candidate called for support from other men who were campaigning in the room. These immediately led a charge on the voters, overturning a ballot box and causing a few casualties.

Order was restored by three Hall Porters and a waitress from the Great Hall.

The incident is a clear demonstration of the apathy of Hart House members in wartime," commented an anonymous Tuck Shop attendant. "In the old days it was as much as a voter's life was worth to go near the House on Election Day."

Hart House officials announced that the new mechanical vote-tabulating system functioned with record-breaking efficiency, requiring only 17 minutes to count and classify the five votes cast. Results are published elsewhere in this issue.

Band Concert

There was a distinct military flavour throughout the program yesterday of the combined C.O.T.C. and U.T.S. bands. The conductors emphasized precision and vigour in no uncertain terms.

It is not surprising, then, that a generous portion of the program was devoted to military marches. Since many of these have become so hackneyed as a result of having been played constantly by every band, large or small, throughout the country, they tend to become extremely monotonous at times.

U.C. And Senior School Ride Puck 'Playoff Special'

For the third time in as many days, the U.C. Firsts rang up the victory sign yesterday as Junior Meds suffered a 3-1 embarrassment at the blood-stained hands of the Red and White. U.C., although not displaying the choice brand of refined shinny they are capable of administering, actually should be congratulated for weathering three successive days of struggle.

Despite the ragged appearance of the team as a whole, the Royal men were not without individual heroes. Red thatched Jimmy Graham was chief functioning spark plug. He socked in the first goal only a few minutes after the face-off and was a hard skating, hard-shooting asset who more than once pulled U.C.'s bacon from the threatening Medicine flames.

Some of the Medical Juniors looked as though they had neglected the old warning, "spark plugs need cleaning too."

The remainder of the first period was a scoreless see-saw. Little enthusiasm was bubbling from either squad and the only players of note were the respective goalies, Ross Skinner in the U.C. cage, and K. Callaghan in the opposite hot spot. Both tenders, Callaghan in particular, had the opposing situation fairly well in hand.

U. C. showed more promising signs of life in the second frame as they kept Meds bottled up in their zone for minutes on end. And that wasn't all that was on its end.

Hank Kuryluk deposited the puck in the Meds' cage during an early U.C. rush and Graham Warren, a few minutes later, shot a rebound past Callaghan who was helplessly prostrate at the time. Assists for U.C.'s scores went, two to George Whitley and one to Hank Kuryluk.

Late in the last period, as Ross Skinner was looking forward to a well-earned shut-out, Lawlor spoiled the U.C. dream by plunking a shot behind the custodian. Cuddy Faber was credited with the assist.

At this rate, U.C. will now meet Sr. School or Trinity on Friday. The books are closed as far as Jr. Meds are concerned.

U.C. I—R. Skinner, W. Wade, H. Kuryluk, W. Nichol, J. Amell, J. Graham, D. Nesbitt, G. Warren, L. Pheonix, G. Whitley, L. Furry.

Jr. Meds — K. Callaghan, W. Callaghan, McIntyre, Lawlor, Fyfe, Faber, Hughes, Gier, Fielding, Davies.

Sr. S.P.S. started along the play-off trail in no uncertain fashion yesterday afternoon as they walloped Sr. Meds by a score of 10-0. It took the Engineers five minutes to find the net but once they did the goals poured in at an astonishing rate.

Jim Dickie found the net first on a pass by Murray Douglas. The next Science goal saw Douglas on the scoring end with Dickie and Moeser collecting assists. Workman ended the first period scoring with two more, both from Kelly.

In the last period Workman got a third tally to complete a hat-trick as he received a set-up pass from Don Grosskurth. Don also collected two goals and another assist for a four point afternoon. Moeser did the same for the same result. Maughan picked up two assists and Dickie, Kelly and Workman each got one.

The loss eliminated Sr. Meds from further competition and Sr. School now meet Trinity in the second round.

Sr. Meds — Lewis, Murray, Cole, Spence, Willinsky, Gunther, McNeill, MacMillan, Laidlaw, Smyth.

Sr. S.P.S. — Workman G., Dickie, Douglas, Maughan, Workman, Kelly, Moeser, Hamilton, Wilcox, Seymour.

Superior Sports Staff Bounces Anaemic News

Displaying superior condition, superior team-play, superior shooting and superiority of speed, weight and height, the sports staff of The Varsity whipped the news staff, 45-18 in a cage encounter in the upper gym last night which wound up the season's activities of The Varsity A.C.

Paced by long Bud Smith and genial James Paton, the sports staffers rolled up a commanding lead in the first half and relaxed to a two-for-one over the ever-willing newsmen in the final stanza.

Highlights of the losers' display were the alert play of Editor O'Mara, who spent the evening beneath the sports' basket, and the sterling line-play of George Elliott, who jarred the winners repeatedly with bone-crushing body-checks.

Following the game a relay race was staged in which the sportsmen edged out the firechasers by a short city block (the block was thrown by newsman Elliott at sportsman Conant at the start of the race but it backfired).

Track coach Hec Phillips declared after watching the basketball game that there were at least six natural track men on the floor. He was not available for comment after the relay race.

Officials — Wilson, MacDonald and Elliott (part-time).

Varsity Slugger In Amateur Show

One of the most impressive fighters to emerge from our interfaculty boxing this year, stocky Jim Lowe, the P.H.E. strong boy, will next week step out of college circles to find a spot in the local amateur squabble. Deacon Jack Allen, the promoter who hails from Sacramento, is billing both Jimmy and his brother, Scrappy, in next Monday's show at Massey Hall.

Slated to meet Russ Thompson in the featherweight bout, Jim stands a better than even chance to polish off his first open opposition in Ontario. Mel Glionna, vigorous horn-blower for Varsity boxers, arranged the bout with "the Deke" last week, and he, for one, certainly does not expect to see Thompson stop his man.

If all goes well in this encounter, Jim will, in all probability, go on to meet Stan Stinson. Further bouts are doubtful for examination reasons. Incidentally, Thompson and Stinson rate just about tops in the featherweight class is this locale.

Jim hopes to get a whack at Tadao Kato, the Japanese boxer who also calls the west coast his home. Despite comment to the contrary in another local daily, there is no ill feeling between these two fellows. Jimmy, who knows Kato from Vancouver days, says that he may be the better boxer. He claims that he himself is not a over wonderful boxer, but "when it comes to punching," he expects to cash in.

For the benefit of the records, let it be known that Jimmy was formerly the British Columbia champion in his weight division, and several years back went as far as the Dominion finals.

Aforementioned brother Scrappy is a bantamweight now attending Central Tech.

Ye olde sporte of volleyballe hase bene shaking ye olde Lilliane Massey Mansione ye past weke. And out of the numerous encounters that have taken place one shining light appears—Vic. For the wearers of the Searlet and Gold are way up on top of the heap with the sum and goodly total of three wins and only one set-back. The Victers triumphed once at the expense of U.C. and twice over Trinity.

Though winning last Wednesday's game, Vic ran into some difficulty on Monday. The P. & H. E. gals sallied forth and put up a terrific battle. And after a very evenly matched coupla periods the "Health" team found themselves four points up. Yes, the Victers wen down 35-31. But after a day's lay-off they came back and sank any hopes from St. Hilda's. The first half was quite close but team-play was slightly lacking. Then the Searlet and Gold began to capitalize on their serves in the last canto and sparked by some flashy work of Folrence Joy, built up a 42-26 total. The second game of the double-header saw U.C. and P. & H.E. give battle but more will be coming from authoritative sources in the near future—well, anyway, future.

Coming attractions of the sporting scene feature the last meeting of Vic and U.C. This is probably the last meeting, for as prognostications go—and we're no expert in this field—it appears that Vic and P. & H.E. will be the finalists.

The other is the mammoth doubles badminton tournament that begins at 2:30 today in the Margaret Eaton Emporium. All and sundry are warned to be on time—and spectators or friends are entirely welcome. We won't be seeing you there.

PLAY BALL!

Now that the Jennings Cup has been alloted by yesterday's S.O.S. under genial Jim's signature, we might as well try to arrange for the final '43 resting place of the Spadling Cup. Yes, that's the one that the mushball addicts have been beating their brains out for—all 600 of them. Well, anyway, the 63 teams have narrowed down to a paltry 11—merely a handful.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE...

So far, seven playdown games have been run off, sending five teams into the second round. Med II B were finally eleminated by S.P.S. IV after two games. The first ended 212 but yesterday Bromley, MacDonald and Gibson connected to put the School team in the second round. Meds V A eliminated II Civil by a 10-2 score. I Electric put out I Mechanical 9-1, then were defeated by Pharmacy yesterday by a close 7-5 score. U.C. I got in the second round by knocking over Knox 9-0 and II Chem. 18-1. School V whitewashed Ceramics by a 13-0 count. Thus for the previous games.

AND NOW FOR THE LIMB-SAWING...

First we will wholeheartedly and bloodthirstily narrow the field to the semi-finalists. In the top bracket the defenders of the ancient mug—Dents A—will eliminate IV Civil, then go on to put out S.P.S. IV tomorrow at noon. Although both these teams came through their groups with only a loss apiece, Dents came through a much tougher season.

In the second bracket Meds V A meet Pharmacy next Monday at five for the semi-final spot. We spun a coin on this one and it took the best of seven to bring up Pharmacy. Although Meds went through group seven with nary a defeat, the Druggists against such teams as Trinity A and School Thirds only lost one game.

Third bracket brings Med II A and III Metal together today at 4:00. We'll take Meds here, mainly because we tossed another Meds team out at first in the second bracket. But in any event, U.C. will eliminate the winner Monday at 4:00.

And now for the last bracket. Well, noon today will find Junior School pushing aside I Mech. B. Then, just like that, Junior School will put School Fifths out of the running next Tuesday at 5:00

AND NOW FOR THE FINAL CHOICE...

So we have left, after our axing, exactly four teams—Dents, Pharmacy, U.C. and Jr. School—a nice combination of all-campus representatives. Pharmacy is first to fall—next Wednesday at four to be exact. The seven-inning game will come into effect for the rest of the play downs and Dents, behind Saltzman's pitching, will carry the day. Then one week from today will see U.C. take Jr. School's measure. The Engineers suffered no defeats in its group, consisting of St. Mike's A and Jr. Vic, but we wager that Saltzman's hurling will stop the Schoolmen.

So, all wrapped and tied with a pink ribbon, we have Dents and U.C. in the clubbers' classic. And the angle of it all is that the two Saltzman brothers will be waging a pitchers' duel. The two squads came through group one tied for first place, each with five wins and a loss. But U.C.'s loss was a defeat at the start of the season. The defending champion's loss was at the hands of U.C. In this thrilling battle last Feb. 10, the Saltzman brothers each got 10 strike-outs. Finally, U.C.'s Horowitz caught a ball and gave the game to the Red and White. The finals, it says in the crystal ball we sought, will be a repeat performance. So Alec Saltzman will bring the Spalding Cup to U.C. on a close decision. Oh well, The Varsity will be through publication before the play-offs anyway, so our limb-climbing won't be universally appreciated.

Today we present a hither by Roger Canant, Sparts Editar af The Varsity, known ta his familiars as Rager the Lodger. This hither is one eagerly awaited, he says. So it is with great pleasure that we publish it, he informed us yesterday.—EDITOR.

One of the campus men's homes was the scene of a slice of subtle drama t'other eventide. It seems that an inmate answered the phone to be greeted with, "Is this the place that is advertising for a young woman to look after some babies." The answer was in the form of a puzzled negative. Shortly afterwards the phone rang again and the previous inmate's room-mate—who had been told of the conversation—did the deed. Upon the very same query the room-mate replied quick like a bunny, "Oh yes, we have thirty-two of the prettiest babies you ever saw." The stunned reply was in the form of a "Oh, sorry, guess I've got the wrong number."

A certain Varsity male reported once blamed his tardiness for a date upon the previous night's job of assisting to night edit. After a long and glowing description of the great event, the damsel enquired, "Oh how fun—and do they give P.T. credits for it?"

* * *

Previous to a recent general inspection of our campus cadets, the N.C.O.'s of one company were given a long, careful lecture on the proceedings to be carried out. The C.S.M. especially emphasized the point that the N.C.O.'s must drill their men to be perfect in "bayonet recap." After a long and emphatic discourse one N.C.O. spoke up and asked somewhat sheepishly, "What is 'bayonet recap'?" There was a silght pause for identifieation then the C.S.M. replied, "I dunno."

During the recent cold snap a downtown paper's photographer was roaming the campus looking for a cold student. He espied a male with large vivid-red earmuffs and roared over requesting a picture. "That's O.K., but if you want something red you could take a shot of this," returned he, raising a pantleg and displaying a beautiful set of bright red woollen underwear.

* * *

Having eyed with envy the dumb waiter in the Hart House kitchen for a long time, one of the lighter waitresses recently gathered up courage and climbed aboard. With the aid of her cohorts who pressed the buttons, she, in fits and screams of laughter that could be heard throughout the Great Hall, rode up and down on the small elevator. She was having a simply roaring good time until supervision walked in and stopped the machine—and the waitress had to walk all the way back up from the basement.

* * *

Upon greeting a tardy date the impatient male with anguish written throughout his voice enquired: "Where have you been all afternoon?" Like a flash came the reply, "In the chem lab—can't you smell me?"

Farm and Y.W.C.A. Jobs Clarified for Students

A meeting to acquaint students with the opportunities presented by the Ontario Farm Service Corps was held in Wymilwood yesterday. The National Council of the Y.W.C.A. is responsible for staffing 30 farm service camps, and will require about 250 people to work this summer.

The positions in which students are most likely to be interested, according to Y.W.C.A. officials, are those of recreation assistant and general assistant. A recreation assistant provides amusement for the girls when they return from work. The general assistant acts as a handyman, and may be asked to do almost anything.

Another position open to students is that of labour secretary. There is one secretary for each section, all under the direction of a district supervisor. The duty of the labour secretary is to keep a record of the girls' working hours, and the money they have earned.

Those who are interested may write to the National Council of the Y.W.C.A. for application forms for recreation or general assistant, or to Room 902, East Block, Parliament Buildings, for information about the position of labour secretary.

Major Discusses Signals Course

officer in the Canadian Army today, he pointed out that after spending three months at Brockville, the eandidate is commissioned as a second lieutenant. He then proceeds to Vimy Barracks, near Kingston, where he spends 18 months taking advanced signal training. Upon completion of this training he is promoted to lieutenant. The next month or so is spent in the Trained Soldiers Coy., also in Kingston, where he gains experience in handling men. The next move is overseas and allotment to a post by the brigadier.

Commenting on the Brockville course in Signals, Major Dean said that it is the "toughest of them all." In some eases he said it was necessary to work each night until 1 a.m.

He suggested that those intending to go to Brockville take some preliminary training in code and procedure here before they go. Before going to Brockville, a candidate must pass an examination in Upper School Algebra, Geometry and Physics as well as the Army "M" test. The candidate is then interviewed by R.C.C.S. officers and if deemed satisfactory, proceeds to Brockville in about a month. In most cases a candidate may choose which month he wishes to go.

In conclusion, Major Dean remarked, "We are not 'hard-up' for officers. We need officers, but we are not begging for them. There will be vacancies for appointments, some in Canada for lower category men, and overseas jobs for those in 'A' Category. The Corps intends to take as many University men as possible."

Two familiar marches by Sousa, The Stars and Stripes Forever and Semper Fidelis, produced a pleasing effect in spite of the frequency with which they are heard nowadays, but another march by Alford had very little merit. One of the less commonly heard marches, The R.A.F. March Past, was played as an encore.

The rest of the program included selections from Sullivan's H.M.S. Pinafore and from Balfe's The Bohemian Girl, a quartet and a solo for trumpets, and an interesting overture, Lustspiel, by Keler-Bela. These numbers were a striking contrast to the more usual methods of playing such material, and accordingly gave the concert an effect of originality in addition to the aforementioned martial spirit.

KEN MCRAE.

That's What We Mean

What is the basis of criticism? Is there any universal standard by which, say, all music or all drama or all art may be judged? These are fundamental questions which concern closely the critic and his readers.

There is so much that is personal in criticism that it may well be doubted if there is anything to which a universal appeal may be made. No two people bear the same music in exactly the same way; no two people react to its emotional content in the same mood. One person is fitted by taste and education to a real understanding of Bach; another finds his true composer in Debussy.

What is the critic to do? After he has been performing his functions for several years, the realization comes to him that what will please one of his readers is bound to displease another. He worries a good deal at first about whether he is right or not, passes through the stage of discovering that there is no right or wrong; and possibly ends up in the position of caring very little what his readers think—as long as they continue reading his column.

The basis to which he turns eventually for his judgment of the music or drama in questions turns out to be largely shaped by the conventions of past criticism. He has acquainted himself with what other critics are writing, and he should bring to his criticism a background of real knowledge of the art in question.

It all boils down to the fact that the critic must consider himself to be competent mentally to judge for his fellows. The criticism is one man's opinion and it is hoped that a few other people will find themselves drawn to his position. But he can make no universal judgments; he can state no universal truths. What he says is a combination of his own personality with his own experience, strung together in what he hopes is an interesting manner to stimulate his fellows. When he has gone so far, that is all; he can go no further. — N.M.

rower fields of Physics and Chemistry, etc., Mr. R. Taylor, IV Biology, pointed out. This versatility enables one to change his mind from Botany or Zoology to some other science as some members of the present staff have done.

The lucrative angle is somewhat more painful to approach, and if its money you're after, don't go into research, warned W. A. Walden, IV Biology. O.C.E. or commercial and industrial work is far more lucrative, although inclined to be more boring than further explorations into the wonders of science.

John Gleason, II Biology, also maintains that teaching is the position which pays best and furthermore he adds you have two months in the summer to do research work; two months that you wouldn't get working elsewhere.

College Frosh May Enter Prior to Matriculation

Washington, D. C., March 3 — Dr. Francis J. Brown, consultant to the American Council on Education, reported last week that next year's freshman classes in some colleges would probably include a large number of 17-year-old boys and girls who have not finished high school.

A few colleges have accepted high school juniors for some time, Dr. Brown said, giving the University of North Carolina as an example. Last year over 300 high school juniors were tested at North Carolina, and 140 of them were admitted to the freshman class.

V.A.D. Course Urged For Coeds

Winnipeg, March 3—(CUP)—Preliminary enrolment is now being urged at the University of Manitoba, in a V.A.D. course for women students, to be introduced next fall. The session will consist of a course of lectures supplemented by six weeks of hospital training.

Other war work courses at the University of Manitoba range from clerical work, nursing, and child-care, to canteen management and general physical fitness, with a view to familiarizing the student with essential auxiliary services.

Under 21 Per Cent Vote In Light House Election

New Low of 754 at Polls Lowers Mark Set Last Year When 27 Per Cent of Members Voted

TRINITY SHOWS INCREASE

A total of 754 members cast their ballots in the Hart House elections held Wednesday, it was learned yesterday. This figure is just under 21 per cent of the total number eligible to vote.

This year's figures are the lowest yet recorded, falling below the previous low, established last year, of 979 or about 27 per cent. The individual high vote polled on Wednesday was 372, while the lowest was 116.

When the vote is broken down into colleges and faculties, it is seen that some of these provided far fewer electors than last year, while most sent about the same number, with Trinity as an exception, making a large increase. The following are the votes as cast by colleges and faculties with last year's figures following in parentheses:

S.P.S. 275 (269); U.C. 123 (128); Vic 89 (130); Trinity 80 (48); Meds 61 (115); Pharmacy 39 (93); St. Mike's 33 (90); Dents 22 (74) Wycliffe 7 (17); Forestry 2 (19); O.C.E. 1 (4).

Jew, Post-War World Is Taylor Avukah Topic

Last night professor W. R. Taylor, head of the University College Orientals department, spoke to a meeting of the Avukah on the Jew and the Post-war World. He pointed out that due to natural progress, and the influence of mechanical inventions, national barriers would gradually dissolve after the war, and therefore could not see how the Jewish people could demand to be left as an isolated race within a community of assimilated races.

However, he offered the solution of Jewish enclaves either in Palestine or in Africa. He also stated that there was no reason that the Jewish people could not continue to carry on their own culture in non-Jewish countries, just as Quakers or French-Canadians have carried on a minority culture.

Hans Neumark concluded the program with an interesting selection of piano pieces, featuring Debussy, Haydn, and Brahms.

Student Funds To Buy Canteen

Edmonton, Mareh 4— (CUP) — The University of Alberta's drive for a $2,000 mobile canteen has been organized by the War Serviees Committee according to a definite schedule. Sinee there are about 1,100 students on the campus they are asked to contribute $2 each. The students are being asked to give $1 as a direct personal contribution and another dollar through some campus organization.

The C.O.T.C., the U.A.T.C., the War Services Pool, and other organizations have already arranged to make their separate contributions.

Booths are set up in the Arts and Med buildings where students may exchange their dollar bills for little green and gold badges.

Then canteen, adorned with a plaque inscribed with the name of the University and the year, will be presented to Military District No. 13 at a special ceremony early in the spring.

Seniors Protest Heavy Grad Fee At Saskatchewan

Demand Governors Reduce Fee or Present Statement of Graduation Expense; Otherwise Refuse to Pay

STRIKE MOTION DEFEATED

Saskatoon, March 4—(CUP)—Two hundred students of the graduating class of the University of Saskatoon today protested their $15 graduation fee, which they claim is the highest in Canada. At a mass meeting the students signed a petition demanding that University officials release an itemized statement of graduation ceremony expenses or reduce the fee.

Should the Board of Governors not comply the graduating class has declared its intention to refuse to pay.

The Board of Governors has refused requests for interviews and has passed a motion maintaining present fees. A motion to hold a token strike was voted down by the graduating class in view of the demands of a wartime session.

Representatives of the protesting class declared that the integrity of the Governors was not being questioned.

Fort Ste Marie Excavation Is R.C.I. Topic

K. E. Kidd to Describe Restoration of Fort Founded by Brebeuf aud Brethren at Saturday's Lecture

JESUITS CO-OPERATE

"The Excavation of Fort Ste. Marie," will be the topic of the Royal Canadian Institute leeture to be given by K. E. Kidd, Assistant Keeper of the Ethnological Collections in the Royal Ontario Museum of Archaeology, tomorrow evening, March 6 at 8:15 p.m. in Convocation Hall.

Sainte Marie, founded in 1639 by Jean de Brebeuf as a place of retreat for the Jesuit Fathers during their work as missionaries to the Huron Indians, was abandoned and burned by the Jesuits when the Hurons were destroyed by the Iroquois in 1649.

The fort lay in ruin and oblivion till the opening of the country to white settlement in the 19th eentury. In 1939, it was bought by the Jesuits, who determined to uncover it and make a restoration. With the co-operation of the Royal Ontario Museum this work is now almost complete. It is hoped that the site will be restored exactly as it was in Jesuit times.

Mr. Kidd, who graduated from the University of Toronto and has been in charge of uneovering the fort, will outline the history of the settlement from its earliest days. The lecture will be illustrated with lantern slides and a short coloured film.

Graduates' Art Exhibit Commences March 13

The Annual Senior Members' Sbow, an exhibition of drawings and paintings executed by graduate members of Hart House, will be held in the Hart House Gallery from Saturday, March 13, to March 29.

As in last year's sbowing, however, members of the University staff interested in painting are also urged to contribute their works.

Officials at the Warden's office say no contributions as yet have been received, but Wednesday, March 10, will be the deadline for all entries.

Carver's Art Finds Haven In Pool Room

Art has moved from its ivory tower to the billiard room deep in the heart of Hart House, where hangs one of the finest wood-carving plaques to be found about the University.

Executed by W. M. McCormack, who helped carve Hart House decorations when the building was first constructed, the 5 by 7 ft. plaque is of a burnt-cork wood intricately designed into three blood-hounds waiting for the fox to come from his lair.

Their noses pointed to the wind, their backs tensed, the three hounds appear so realist that it is said that billiard-players often stop in the midst of a game to contemplate the beauties of the scene.

The flat carving was presented to Hart House by McCormack's widow, March, 1920, on the recommendation of H. Sproate, Hart House architect, who said at the time that McCormack was one of the finest carvers with whom he had come in contact.

Considered a master craftsman in his art, McCormack also carved the floral design for the chapel, library and debates room in Hart House.

In the library, his designs are composed of fleur-de-lis patterns etched above the library door and near the big fireplace.

Letters from Field Marshal Sir John Dill and Under Seeretary of State Sumner Welles, expressing appreciation of the honours done them at last Friday's Special Convocation here, have been received this week by Dr. H. J. Cody, President of the University of Toronto.

Sir John Dill's letter said in part: "I want to thank you and through you the University of Toronto for the great honour you have done me, or rather I should say the great honour you have done my eomrades in arms through me. I shall never forget the very impressive eeremony which we attended on Friday."

Mr. Welles wrote: "May I express to you once more my very deep appreciation for the honour which the University of Toronto was so good as to eonfer upon me last Friday, as well as my gratitude to you for your innumerable kindnesses and courtesies during my all too brief stay in Toronto. I will always remember my visit to the University with the greatest gratification and with very real pleasure."

Trinity Pilot Killed in Action

Sergeant-Pilot Douglas Joseph Farrell, Trinity 4T3, a former member of The Varsity staff, was killed in action Feb. 3, 1943, it was recently announced.

A member of The Varsity's news staff in 1939-40, Farrell was slated for a masthead position the following year, but enlisted in the R.C.A.F. during the summer.

"Senior masthead members agreed with those of us who were his colleagues that Doug was one of the best reporters they had ever seen," said Michael O'Mara, Editor-in-Chief of The Varsity, last night. "His loss was keenly felt when he enlisted and we don't forget him now."

VARSITY STAFF MEETING

Today's meeting of the staff of The Varsity is the most important of the year. Agenda includes voting on candidates for next year's Editorship and discussion of plans for the Final Banquet. All staff members are urged to attend the meeting at 4 p.m. in the Women's Union, 79 St. George Street. Refreshments will be served.

U.C. Lit Nominations Banquet Addressed By Dean Beatty

Arts students should concern themselves not only with their academic courses but with permanent, intangible and unanswerable problems as well, Dean S. Beatty of the Faculty of Arts told undergraduate men of University College at the nominations banquet of the U.C. Literary and Athletic Society last night.

Typical problems the arts student should consider are how to avoid war, what is worth while and the definition of greatness and genius, Dean Beatty continued.

Finals of the Robinette Trophy debates were won by the Fourth Year team of Edgar Simon and Bryant Kassirer, who upheld the negative of the debate: "Resolved that the peoples of the Axis nations should have a voice in the government of Europe." against the affirmative of Ben Holdsworth and Syd Robins of the Third Year.

The Maurice Cody Memorial Prize for public speaking and interest in the college was awarded to Don Rowat, who was elected by the society over three other nominees.

Nominations for the 1943-4 executive of the society were held and the following nominations were made:

President: Frank Watson, Bob Alexander; Literary Director: Roger Conant, Dave Bairstow, Joe White; Athletic Director: Jim Graham, Stew Scott; Social Director: Ben Orenstein, Mel Breen, Ken Peck; Treasurer: Charles Baxter, Charles Sovie; Secretary—East Curry, Bob Ferguson, Abe Buie.

Fourth Year President: Al Grant, Harry Waisglass, Ben Holdsworth, Forrest Rogers; Secretary-Treasurer: Walter Swayze (accl.); Athletie Representative: Eric Brand, Harry Bailey.

Third Year President: Bob Bell, Jim MacDonald; Seeretary - Treasurer: Dennis Wrong, George Houghton, Paul Reecke; Athletic Representative: Vern Pureell, Jack Galway, Ian Morrison.

Second Year President: Ken Johnstone, Gord McCaffrey, Phil Shackleton, Art Wynn; Secretary-Treasurer: Ken Wood, Jack Bennett; Athletie Representative: Alec Dixon, Dennis Morphy, Alec Saltzman.

GASLESS VACATIONS OFFERED BY HOSTELS

Students who work in town and face the drab prospect of a sticky, dusty summer in the city were presented last Saturday night with a solution to the problem of how to get away from it all despite a gasoline shortage. Posters, Photographs and maps and an exhibit of hand-books and literature by the Canadian Youth Hostels Association informed visitors to Athletic Night of an inexpensive way to out-door recreation.

The association now has 20 hostels in Ontario, extending from Winona in the south to North Bay in the north and from Blair, west of Kitchener to Brock Road and Dagmar. These hostels afford inexpensive overnight accommodation, usually in farm buildings, for cyclists, hikers, skiers and equestrians who are members of the Association.

John Herbst, III S.P.S., University representative of the Association, explains that the movement came here from England where hostels are located so closely together that it is possible to use them for hiking. A bicycle is really necessary for long trips on the local chains, however, except on the Toronto loop which covers a triangle roughly marked out by Dagmar, Glenville and Toronto. Even on this loop, there is one gap of 28 miles which requires a good pair of legs.

Dating only from 1937, the Ontario Region of the Association is developing rapily. Two new hostels, at Haysville and Longford, have recently been added and a new chain of hostels connecting Kingston through Peterborough is projected. This will ultimatel link up with Ottawa and the Quebec region.

Trips are planned for week-ends. For skiing in the winter and cycling, hiking and by other means of transportation in the summer. Hostellers are now looking forward to the new cycling season which is tentatively set to open with a bicycle trip on the week-end of March 20.

XAVIER, QUEEN'S CAMPAIGNS HELP INCREASE I.S.S. FUNDS

Kingston, March 4— (CUP) — The main feature of the Queen's I.S.S. Campaign in aid of student prisoners of war was a carnival held in Grant Hall Saturday night. Combined dancing and side shows transformed Grant Hall into a replica of a three-ring circus.

Attractions included dart throwing, penny tossing, a raffle, fortune telling and tagless dancing on the stage for a small fee.

The carnival includes a Tag Day and Variety Night as well, two-thirds of the proceeds of which will be sent to the European Student Relief Fund to be administered by the International Red Cross at Geneva. The remainder will be sent to aid the National Student Relief Fund in China.

Antigonish, March 4—(CUP)—A recently organized war relief fund has announced its intention of giving 50 per cent of all funds collected to the International Student Service Organization as an aid to tbose students in foreign countries who are suffering from the war.

The drive will be opened with a theatre party. Magazines and periodicals are to be collected semi-monthly by committee members and a vessel for cash donations placed in one of the local stores.

Educators' Part In Peace

As Presented by U.S. Authorities

Discussion of war-time education measures has caused much controversy the world over during the past three and one-half years, perhaps nowhere more than in the United States, where the draft of 18-year-olds has just this month stripped most of the colleges and universities of most of their undergraduate manpower. While such an exodus from the centres of higher learning fortunately does not affect us personally, the question of what the United States plan to do with the many buildings, laboratories, and libraries which the war has emptied, is one which interests every person connected in any way with education. The question of the role the trained hundreds of American professors and educators are to play on the nation's war-time stage is another one which is still mainly in the debate stage. And until the joint Army and Navy statement of last Dec. 12 there was much confusion about the status of education and the part it could and would play in the war.

MacLeish Presents Dilemma

After publication of the Army-Navy statement, Archibald MacLeish, Librarian of Congress, addressed the New England Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools, setting forth the dilemma facing both staff and students of all institutions of higher learning in the United States. Mr. MacLeish presented the problem facing the staff, of whom a representative number made up his audience:

"Your colleges are being turned into military academies and technical institutions. Your schools are being stripped of masters and sixth form boys. Your endowments are draining off into bonds and taxes. The whole fabric of liberal education comes tumbling down and you wonder whether, when the war ends, its structure will be restored. . . .

"You agree that the military winning of the war comes first. But you ask yourselves what it means truly to win the war. Does it mean something that young men trained to handle guns and tanks and planes and ships and signal apparatus and the machinery of factories can do? Or does it mean something else, something requiring a different kind of training? Does the winning of this war mean the defeat of our enemies only, or does it mean the gaining of something beyond the defeat of our enemies—the gaining of a positive and created thing which shall justify all this anguish, all this death? What is the image of our victory and what soldiers are required to gain it for us; how trained and how taught?

"You believe that we must not fail again, we must not fall back again into the slothful self-indulgence, the intellectual cowardice, and the moral degeneration of the years which followed the other war. There must be no public Hardings, no private post-war generations, no resignation to the so-called course of history, no 'return' to 'normalcy,' to the world as it was, to the evils which begat this evil, to the old surrender, the old indifference, the old cynicism, the irresponsibility of men as citizens and men, which prepared, as surely as the past prepares the future, the slaughter of our sons.

"You see clearly that those who are to attempt to construct, in the brief moment of opportunity at war's end, the world for which the war is fought, will require for this labour a range of knowledge, a degree of understanding of their past and of themselves, a clarity of perception, which only the greatest the most devoted, and the most passionate teaching can supply. . . .

"How the speakers and hearers can be brought together—whether in camps or technical schools or ships; whether by word of mouth, or print, or radio, or record—no layman, certainly not I, can tell you. But this we do know: that unless the means are found, the ultimate victory may elude our hands."

It is safe to say that this war could not be fought if those bearing arms and those backing them up at home did not believe that a better world would rise, phoenix-like, from the ashes of the old one. But the danger of this belief is that those subscribing to it might not realize the long work and effort which must precede, for a heart-breakingly long time, the better world toward which we are striving.

President Dodds Replies

Several of the leading thinkers of the age, besides Vice-President Wallace, have voiced their plans for this better post-war world, and President Harold W. Dodds of Princeton University has given an answer to Mr. MacLeish's thought-provoking challenge to the realm of education. After evaluating the war-time schedule on which United States universities are now being run, he makes the following worthwhile proposal:

"The government is duty-bound to do all it can to make sure that conversion to a war basis does not mean a death sentence to that part of our educational system not required in the war effort. One important step could be announced immediately which would spell hope for the days just after the war. The difficulties of demobilization after the war will be tremendous. The colleges can be very important agencies in the return to civil life of young men many of whom will be quite unprepared to assume its unfamiliar responsibilities. A promise by the government that they will be so employed after the armistice would be appropriate and encouraging. The task of the colleges during the period of demobilization will be as much sociological as educational in the usual sense. They can be made the gateway through which hundreds of thousands of young men can return to take up civilian life.

"The process should be largely at government expense and there is no college that cannot be included in it. Moreover, a wise government will prepare plans now for a comprehensive educational program for the period of waiting which thousands of soldiers and sailors will have to undergo between the armistice and their return home. Army and Navy "universities" should be planned for those men who then will be marking time at military posts throughout the world. They will cost money but they will be justified from every social standpoint. Here can be found useful work right away for a considerable staff of experienced teachers in scores of subjects. And it would not be 'made work' either."

Education Can Help Rehabilitation

The adoption in the United States forces of such a plan as President Dodds has outlined would make a great contribution towards the millions of men who will be fighting in the American war machine when it is completely geared to battle. And such a scheme could do much if applied to our own warriors on their home-coming. An abreviated plan to aid our men returning from the fighting forces to continue their university courses has already been adopted here, and an expansion of it to include all returned men would raise morale greatly, since it would provide a cushion to ease the shock of returning to a peace-time existence.

ART and MUSIC Drama

Thoroughly Good

Gladys Swarthout

At Eaton Auditorium last night, Gladys Swarthout gave one of the pleasantest recitals which I have heard since I came to Toronto. It was an enjoyable evening, rather than thrilling; it was even, rather than climatic, but its evenness was on a remarkably high level. Miss Swarthout's voice is particularly thrilling in its emotional quality. The singer is very, very rare who can give her voice that caressing effect.

I should not perhaps have said that the program had no climax: there was a definite height in the modern Brazillian song, Cantiga de Ninar, by Migonne. This music is written in the form of a lullaby, but actually it is a remarkably sensuous love lyric. Miss Swarthout's voice, quiet and restrained but full of emotional undercurrents, was extremely well suited to the music she had chosen.

A good deal of the program, considerably more than half, was what might be damned by "familiar classics." But Miss Swarthout gave freshness and justification to such music as Connais-tu la pays— and anyone who can do that must be acknowledged as great. Another selection, Into the Night by Clara Edwards, is very often sung, but I have never heard it performed with an equal perception of its possibilities.

It is impossible to stop without mentioning the finals encore, a southern folk song, I wonder when I wander. In it, Miss Swarthout again combined all her excellences: purity of tone and pitch, perfect enunciation, and delicate emotional perception. I cannot imagine as I close this review, a more pleasant entertainment than Miss Swarthout's recital of last night.

Maple Leafs to Train At Varsity This Spring

Toronto Ball Club to Go into Spring Camp in Hart House Gym; Will Train on Tuck Shop Food

AMERICAN CLUBS JUBILANT

After a prolonged discussion last night with the University of Toronto Athletic Association, the Board of Directors of the Toronto Baseball Club have arranged to establish their 1943 training camp in the Hart House Gym instead of journeying south this year.

It is believed that the Leafs will receive P.T. credits under similar arrangements as those now inflicted upon undergraduates. Like the students, they will, of course, have to take a minimum (probably in the neighbourhood of 40) of P.T. ssesions under the watchful eye of Lungs Larkin.

The contract, drawn up between the Board and the Athletic Association, embodies several notable clauses: firstly, the rifle range is to be reserved solely for the use of an unnamed armless pitcher who specializes in a spitball; secondly, every player who does not turn in a batting average of more than .375 will be recommended to the local National Selective Service Board.

After the owner had signed the contract, the board was given an exhibition of baseball as it should be played in Hart House when the U.C. Heliotropes shut out the XVI Mechanicals in a four-inning fantasy which was called on account of malnutrition.

Double Blue Downed 3-1 By Jr. School Cup Seekers

Fast Goals by Ball and McDonough in Last Period Break Up Evenly Waged Struggle

DES ROCHES IRISH STAR

Jr. School, heavy favourites to cop the Jenning's Cup, continued their wining ways as they discarded the Fightin' Irish from St. Mike's yesterday afternoon by a score of 3-1. The junior Engineers looked like a winning club from the drop of the puck but the Double Blue fought them all the way.

S.P.S. had the best of the first period play and managed to keep the Irish pretty well bottled up. At the five-minute mark Jim McKenzie of St. Mike's drew a penalty for tripping and in his absence the Engineers took a one-goal lead. Gord Carroll came through with his first tally of the year on passes by Herb Stricker and Pat McDonough. Seconds later McDonough almost put the science crew two in front as he received a setup pass from Art Ridler only to hit the post. With a minute left in the period Jack Gregson suffered a head injury when one of his own players crashed him into the net. He went for repairs and the remaining time was added to the second period.

St. Mike's came out after the rest period full of pep and within a minute had tied it up. Audy Des Roches was the marksman as he picked up a pass from Boland just outside the S.P.S. goal crease. Play ranged up and down the ice for 15 minutes or so and it began to look like the first goal scored would settle the issue. Then out of the blue Gord Ball lifted a high looping shot from centre ice that Gregson let get away from him and School were out in front 2-1. A minute later School sent up a four-man rush and Stricker slipped through a straight pass to McDonough who banged it into the twine to more or less put the game away. But the Irish weren't licked yet; both Bill Doyle and Audy Des Roches had wide open breakaways with only the goalkeeper to beat, but each time they were overtaken by Johnny Ratcliffe and skated off. Incidentally Long Johnny turned in a great game on the S.P.S. defence and was easily the outstanding player of the game.

St. Mike's—Gregson, Egan, Hayden, Doyle, Boland, Des Roches, Morrison, Jacob, McKenzie, Spadoni, P. Morrison.

Jr. School—Spence, Ridler, Ratcliffe, Stricker, Houston, Ball, Boynton, Carroll, Foulds, McDonough, Boa.

Trinity Blanked By Sr. School 5-0

Sr. School went into the semi-finals for the Jenning's Cup yesterday by trouncing Trinity 5-0 up at the Varsity ice-sheet. Paced by Don Grosskurth and Jim Dickie, the Engineers had little difficulty in turning back a rather disorganized Trinity sextet.

Sr. S.P.S. next meets U.C. for the play-off berth.

Inside of three minutes Jim Dickie bounced a goal after a play from Bill Moeser. Then two minutes later Don Grosskurth caught a lovely pass from Ross Workman and twinkled the red light. No sooner had the ref faced the rubber off than Grosskurth repeated the very same play to make the tally card read 3-0.

The Red and Black steadied down a bit from there in and allowed only one more goal when Dickie soared in all alone. And it was as tough in the second canto. Although playing rather ragged shinny, the teams were slightly more even and it was only at the nine-minute mark that Don Grosskurth slapped Mike Kelly's pass past McGanity.

Trinity — McGanity, Ingles, Laidlaw, Leake, Hall, Pringle, Jones, Spence, Hatch.

Sr. S.P.S. — Workman, Seymour, Wilcox, Hamilton, Dickie, Maughan, Moeser, Workman, Kelly, Quittenton, Grosskurth.

Sportswoman

By Betsy Gowan

We hope you have enjoyed hearing from our guest writers—we always did like bloodless revolutions and Chaucer (Nicholls and Conant). Meanwhile, and especially yesterday afternoon, badminton has been holding the limelight.

P. & H. E. walked away with the doubles' championship in grand style. Hence, as is customary, we extend laurels to Ruth Carleton and Mary Keir for several games that were filled with action and tricky plays.

Several rounds of good play preceded the final event of the afternoon and for a while we couldn't tell just what the outcome would be—especially when we were hitting and dodging the elusive birds. Trinity's players, Pat Paterson and Mary Strickland, won the first round by their all around good playing and splendid teamwork. Naturally, there were times when the bird was elusive and when one of them thought the other would sneak up on it first—but then, that's all in the game.

To win the first round, Pat and Mary defeated St. Mike's (Marion Binx and us) to the tune of 11-15; 15-12; 15-9, and right after that they bested Victoria's team of Ruth Bentley and Betty Weall 18-13, winning the second game as well.

Our victors from P. & H. E. and Pat Shazen and Rene George of Physiotherapy played off for the second round. After two quick games, it was all over and the score of 16-1; 16-1 appeared. Since the School of Nursing failed to appear, U.C. won their game by default and entered the Semis with P. & H. E. Claire Carew and Ruth Margeson gave P. & H. E. the closest games they had had so far and were only defeated 15-13; 15-10.

The finals were made up of a revolutionary two games between Trinity and P. & H.E. The score tells most of the story—and we see Trinity staging a strong comeback. The first game was 15-1; the last 15-13. Hence the badminton tournament came to its illustrious conclusion and now we have only volleyball left—so don't forget today's game at 4:30 between U.C. and Trinity.

Wycliffe Wins; Paced by Harris

In the twilight hockey contest at Varsity yesterday, the Wycliffe sextet led by Tommy Harris vanquished S.P.S. V by 3-2 to enter the semi-finals against the powerful Jr. School squad. Wycliffe counted all three of their tallies in the opening period with two counters by Tom Harris and one by Lyall. School divided their scoring between the two periods with Spratt and Morrish being the marksmen.

S.P.S. had an edge on the play but were turned aside repeatedly by Al Capper between the Wycliffe pipes. The game was very cleanly contested with only one penalty to each side.

Speaking Of Sport

By Bud Smith

IT STILL AIN'T CHARMING!

Despite all happy predictions to the contrary, we find ourselves once more punching out three or four paragraphs of burbling insanity. The present issue concerns that nebulous quantity the ALL STAR TEAM. The Varsity engages in the happy habit of picking these aforementioned nebulous quantities twice a year, once in the rugby season and once in the hockey season. So as the ice sport wends to its close, we give you 1943's all star interfaculty hockey squad (chosen by the boys behind the scorer).

		Alternates
Goal	Dunn (Vic)
Defence	Ratcliffe (Jr. School)	Aird (Trinity)
Defence	Ridler (Jr. School)
Centre	DesRoches (St. Mike's)	Castaldi (Dents)
R. Wing	Ball (Jr. School)	Graham (U.C.)
L. Wing	Leake (Trinity)	Hector (St. Mike's)

The goal position was easy to fill. Dunn was by no means sensational, but there was such a dearth of good goalies this year that his choice was automatic. Among the remaining teams U.C.'s Skinner possibly rates honourable mention, There was more competition among the defencemen. St. Mike's had two good men in Adrian Egan and Bill Doyle. Egan didn't really play enough throughout the season to warrant consideration however. Kuryluk and Wade of U.C. played good hockey at times. Kuryluk especially is a very effective player without attracting much attention. Also Cole of Sr. Meds, But undoubtedly the strongest defence in the league, both offensive and defensive belongs to Jr. School, and it was decided to put both Ridler and Ratcliffe on the first string with Aird, who made the All-Stars last year as alternate. With a better team behind him, Aird might have kept his position, it being difficult to play good hockey in the league in which Trinity was in.

The centre spot was strictly a two way contest between Audy DesRoches of St. Mike's and Gord Ball of Jr. School. DesRoches rated a slight nod but Ball was outstanding enough to be kept on the first line at a wing position (we know he's not a rightwinger, but if Patrick can do it so can we). Bud Leake of Trinity, one of the smoothest players you will find anywhere, drew the other wing position, delivering an outstanding performance all season with practically no assistance.

On the second line Cosmo Castaldi drew down the centre spot with little difficulty, while Jim Graham of U.C. and Don Hector of St. Mike's had a slight edge for the wing positions. Honourable mention goes to Jim Dickie and Don Grosskurth of Senior School, who seem to have come to life rather suddenly in the last few games, and Dalt Nesbitt of U.C. So there it is, this year's edition of the hockey All-Stars —and we duck quickly away looking for Paton to bet on more games!

Junior School, Med Nines Win

Meds II A and Jr. School took 8-1 and 21-3 steps to get into the quarter finals of the baseball championship yesterday. III Metal and I Mech. B were the unlucky recipients of elimination.

In the first encounter pitcher Spooner held the Metal team down to a few hits and only one run in the first inning. Graham slapped that in. The Meds team were held scoreless in the first but splurged with four runs in the second. The fifth run was tabbed in the third by Bryans. Then Vickers, Kaffman and Spooner put the game in the bag in the final inning to end it 8-1.

Junior School piled the massive total of 17 runs in the first inning in the other play-off game yesterday. Every man got at least two runs to make the adding machine click. Herb Stricker kept I Mech. B under complete control with nine strike-out, only allowing Olison, Bobbie and Ander to get the returning runs in the last frame.

atmosphere to the traditionally academic trappings of the Hart House Art Gallery. One word sums up the impression—gorgeous.

The tapestries come from China and represent part of the collection of the late Dr. F. C. Stephenson of Victoria College. For a great number of years, Dr. Stephenson was Secretary of the Missions Board of the United Church. In his youth he made a trip to China where he began his interest in collecting tapestries and curios. Friends returning from that country would bring him articles for his collection; some are recent creations while others go back centuries. Dr. Stephenson died about one year ago and left all his belongings to Victoria College, including Stephenson House which is now used as a University Residence.

Chinese figures are always intriguing to the materialist of the Occident. When these figures portray the household gods, the myths, and peculiar animals of the East they have a potent attraction. Two huge, sugar-daddyish bald figures with immense heads beam benevolently from positions on either side of the fireplace. The colours are amazingly accurate, and the secret of the Oriental dyes would be worth billions in Europe or America. the intense scarlet, and in the same tapestry, gold, delicate shades of pink that would do any good-sized rainbow to shame.

The figments of an overworked mind would not do justice to the Chinese devils and monsters. Fierce masks leer from the finely worked silk; masks which Canadian workman can only suggest in totem poles. Chinatown will have no charms for undergraduates who see this show.

U.S. Navy V-12 Program To Train Men In Colleges In 32-192 Week Periods

Colleges with Navy Contracts Must Accept Selected Students; Curricula Will Be Prescribed

TO BEGIN JULY 1

Washington, March 7—Details of the Navy College Training Program, designed to produce officers for the Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard, were announced by the Navy Department last week. Named V-12, the plan will get under way about July 1, and will give training ranging from 32 to 192 weeks for various classes of naval personnel.

In general, students selected under V-12 will spend one and one-third years in college, although some will receive longer training.

As well as absorbing most of the college students now enlisted in the Navy and Marine Corps Reserves, V-12 is open to Army Enlisted Reservists who expressed preference for the Navy, Marine Corps, or Coast Guard when they signed up, and students holding probationary Navy Reserve commissions.

Civilian candidates for this program must be United States citizens, be able to pass Navy physicals—with a minimum eyesight of 18-20—be single and agree not to marry until commissioned, and have officer qualifications.

All V-12s will be assigned to colleges which have Navy contracts. They will be in uniform under military discipline and will receive apprentice seamen's pay. Qualifying tests to select candidates will be given throughout the nation on or about April 2.

Each college will be assured a definite number of men when it signs its Navy contract. The college has to accept those men assigned to it, and the curricula will be prescribed. However, classes will be taught by regular faculty members in their own way, and the college can credit or not as it pleases the work of its Navy students.

Selection committee will consist of an educator, a representative civilian, and a Naval officer. Selected applicants can state preferences of college, branch of the service, and course of study and will then be inducted through regular Selective Service channels, enlisted in V-12, and placed on inactive duty until ordered to college.

CORRECTION

Due to an editorial error in Friday's Varsity, it was stated that students at The University of Saskatchewan were protesting over graduation fees. Students are protesting at the University of British Columbia in Vancouver.

Brown Addresses Vic Convocation

The effect of the war in accelerating Arts courses by leading students to a deeper reflection on and understanding of human life was stressed by Dr. Walter T. Brown, Chancellor of Victoria University, in his address to the graduating classes at yesterday morning's Baccalaureate Service in Victoria College Chapel. The Baccalaureate Sermon was preached by Principal Richard Davidson, M.A., Ph.D., of Emmanuel College, to a congregation made up of members of the graduating classes of Victoria and Emmanuel Colleges, their parents and friends, and the Senate of Victoria University.

The annual Baccalaureate Service usually occurs in April but was moved up a month this year because of the acceleration of the theological courses.

Dr. Brown remarked, "You are not your own; you have been bought with a price. Whether yau are able to serve with the armed forces or not, you must give yourselves to the cause of your nation."

Dr. Brown made reference to the opera, "Transit Through Fire," by John Coulter and Dr. Healey Willan, contrasting the attitude on graduation of the class of 4T3 and the cynical one of "William Thompson" in the opera.

TWO MORE ISSUES

The Varsity will be published only on Wednesday and Friday of this week after this issue. S.P.S. SUMMER WORK

WARTIME BUREAU OF TECHNICAL PERSONNEL
Department of Labour, Ottawa.

Summer Employment for Undergraduates in Science and Engineering.

It is in the national interest that undergraduates in science and engineering should engage in summer employment essential to the prosecution of the war. It is also desirable that summer work should advance the technical training of such students.

With this in mind, the W.B.T.P. has compiled a list of available employment. This list has been restricted to essential industries and services. It is made up from applications for the services of students for summer employment received by the Bureau up to February 3rd. One or more supplementary lists will be issued later.

Arrangements have been made with National Selective Service to provide for the issuance of the permits which undergraduates must have before seeking or taking employment. To obtain these permits, students must apply in person to the local National Selective Service office.

Many more applications have been received for students of certain courses, such as mechanical engineering, than there are students in such courses. Students in other courses might therefore apply for certain of these jobs since otherwise some employers may receive less applications than there are jobs offered.

While many students will obtain work of a professional nature, it must be understood that it would be impossible to provide such work for all, especially for those of the first or second year. Students are asked not to take too narrow a view of this matter and, if necessary, to take summer employment in a war industry. By doing so they aid in the war effort and, at the same time, broaden their own experience. A student who has in mind applying for what he thinks essential work which is not included in the list (and it is obvious that there will be such) should give details of the proposed work to the National Selective Service officer when applying for the permit.

Students are asked to canvass openings in areas nearest to them, and subsequently in other areas. Employers will negotiate directly with students and will make their own selection. No negotiations may be carried on until the student has a National Selective Service permit to seek employment.

The W.B.T.P. cannot undertake to find employment for or to allocate students, but is prepared to guide and supplement the efforts students, universities and employers may make to utilize the long vacation to the best advantage.

Science students in the Faculty of Arts may examine the list at the University Registrar's Office, Simcoe Hall.

THE LIST IS NOT INTENDED FOR THE USE OF STUDENTS WHO EXPECT TO GRADUATE IN 1943. SUCH STUDENTS WILL NO BE GIVEN PERMITS BY NATIONAL SELECTIVE SERVICE.

McGill Daily Reinstated As Editor Raymond Ayoub And 3 Assistants Resign

Bill Munroe, Ed Joseph, Bob MacIntosh Join Chief in Resignation as 1943-44 Editorial Board Takes Control

THREE MORE ISSUES

Montreal, March 7 — (CUP) — The McGill Daily, banned Feb. 19 following appearance of its "blatantly smutty" Commerce fssue—will resume publication Monday, by permission of the Senate of McGill University, it was announced tonight.

The Daily will publish three more issues this year operating under the direction of its 1943-44 Editorial Board, appointed Thursday.

The new Board came into office approximately a week sooner than scheduled when Stewart Willis, president of the Students' Society, accepted the resignation of Editor-in-Chief Raymond Ayoub—tendered Monday—and resignations from News Editor Bill Munroe, Managing Editor Ed Joseph and Canadian University Press Editor Bob MacIntosh followed.

Lifting of the Senate ban upon publication of The Daily follows action by the Students' Executive in presenting to the Committee on Morals and Discipline of the Senate a report placing the blame for the objectionable contents of the Commerce Issue upon the students immediately concerned, and suggesting disciplinary action ranging from conduct probation to suspension in each case.

Text of a statement released following a Senate meeting Friday follows:

"The Senate of McGill University at its meeting this afternoon, found the following students to be entirely free from any responsibility for the objectionable character of The McGill Daily which was published on Feb. 19: Lorne Adams, Elizabeth Gentles, Anthony Grimaldi, Herbert Friedman, Eleanor Jones, Morris Miller, Irene Polis, Kevin Power, Mary Sidorchuk, Robert Sinclair.

"These students have been removed from conduct probation, as of Feb. 19, and their records completely cleared.

"All of the major recommendations of the Students' Executive Council in regard to the allocation of responsibility among the individual students concerned

Vic Elections Bring In Thompson as President

The results of the Victoria College Union elections held Friday at Victoria College brought in Ted Thompson as president of the V.C.U. Alice Evans was named associate president. Paul Fox and Virginia Macleod were elected social director and directress, and Bert Mariorty as treasurer. Dorothy Orr was elected president of the Women's Literary Society and Frances Aitken of the S.C.M. The remainder of the elections will be held next Friday at Alumni Hall.

Lieut. Marcil to Address Toike Oikers At Annual Dinner of Graduating Class

Lieut. André Marcil, R.C.N.V.R., recently returned from the Murmansk and Mediterranean convoy routes, will be the guest speaker at the annual Toike Oike Dinner to be held tomorrow in Simpson's Arcadian Court. He will give an illustrated talk on his experiences.

The dinner gives the graduating year of the Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering an opportunity of meeting graduates of former years. One of the guests will be Dr. Morris '81, the oldest living School graduate. The class of 4T3 will be formally inducted into the Engineering Alumni Association and presented with their gavel. This gavel, said to be made of a railing from the old School building, is passed on each year from last year's graduating class to this year's class. M. J. Aykroyd, newly-elected president of the permanent executive 4T3 will take possession.

In the afternoon the graduating class will undergo the Iron Ring ceremony in Simcoe Hall. This is the most imporant event in the training of an engineer when he receives the iron ring, token of his membership in the enigeering procession. This custom, started 20 years ago at this university by Prof. H. E. T. Haultain, has now spread throughout the British Empire.

Manitoba Debating Team Defeats Union Proposal

Winnipeg, March 7—(CUP)—Manitoba University Debating Team recently travelled to Gustavus Adolphus College at St. Peter's, Minnesota, for the annual debate between the two schools, and defeated the resolution "that in a post-war reconstruction period, Canada and the United States should be economically and politically fused."

Before the war Manitoba teams often debated with English Universities such as Oxford or Cambridge.

U.B.C. Army Course To Train 200 Students

Vancouver, March 7—(CUP)—Plans have been announced to send about 200 student soldiers to the University of British Columbia next fall, to take special courses for Army needs. These men will be quartered on the campus, taking over the Anglican College, the new addition to the armouries, and possibly part of Brock Hall.

Vic Professors to Wrangle Thursday At Parliament's Debating Highlight

The annual highlight of each Victoria College Debating Parliament — the faculty debate, when professors wrangle and pundits tumble — takes place on Thursday, March 11, this year.

Assembling in the Alumni Hall at 8 p.m., the final session of the current Vic Debating Parliament will feature four Vic professors debating the topic, "Resolved, that this House deplores the attempt to build a better world."

Supporting the affirmative of the crucial problem, Professors Robbins and Gould will tangle with their confreres, Professors Frye and Leslie, who are upholding the negative. Having taken part in the faculty debate last year, both Professor Frye's and Robbin's reappearance is a "special, command performance."

Leader of the Oppostion, John Dales, whose government was defeated at the last session, commented on the debate as follows: "This is our big debate of the year. I think the students get more kick out of hearing—and seeing—their professors debate than they do out of all the rest of the debates put together. Judging from the crowd the faculty debate attracted last year, it would certainly seem so."

Questioned as to whether or not she expected her government to survive the issue, Prime Minister Marg Dillon said, "It's a very serious problem but I doubt if the professors will realize it. If this debate is anything like the other faculty debates we've had, the House will discuss everything but the attempt to build a better world."

The House will dissolve after its final session Thursday night.

Long Live The Daily!

The Students' Executive Council of McGill University has accepted the resignation of four members of the 1942-43 masthead, and forwarded to the Senate recommendations for disciplinary action to be taken towards students who were responsible for the contents of the ill-judged Commerce Issue of Feb. 19.

As a consequence, the Senate has lifted its ban upon publication of The Daily, and that journal will hit the highways and byways of Old McGill once more this morning. The incident, marked by lack of student common sense in the first instance and further marred by official action which, though fully justified, was certainly on the autocratic side, would now seem to be closed.

We are not competent to judge the rights and wrongs of the squabble between McGill students and their Senate regarding action taken in the case; our chief concern throughout has been the re-establishment of The Daily as one of Canada's great collegiate papers—under sound management and with worthwhile ideals once more firmly in mind.

We believe the furore which certain student factions have been creating, in directing an almost Chauvinist campaign against McGill officialdom might have been based upon a sounder cause than the support of a few Commerce students who ran amok when entrusted with the publication of a single issue of The Daily; we also believe that the Senate has acted, for the most part, in the best interests of the University in taking the stand that it has. But this is not the real issue in which we are interested.

The affair is over now and we hope that when the probably recurrent controversy over student rights breaks out again between McGill men and women and Principal James and his cohorts, The Daily is not the bone of bad-tempered contention.

Learning Afloat

We were impressed the other day by the story told in a recent Canadian Press feature which gave a few details concerning the operation of a "seamen's university" with offices in London which has undertaken to tutor sailors of the Navy and merchant marine by correspondence. There are 1,186 seamen enrolled in this unorthodox university, and each man is assigned his own tutor. And among those tutors are such notable scholars as G. M. Trevelyan, Master of Trinity and Regius Professor of modern history at Cambridge University; and Sir Hugh Allen, director of the Royal College of Music.

Favourite subjects of the sailors, the story reports, are psychology and mathematics; others studied are English, philosophy, foreign languages, economics and history.

There is a moral to be drawn from this account of study afloat. We merely mention that fact that it exists, and pay our readers the mild compliment of letting them supply it for themselves.

Student With A Hoe

If you haven't thought about it yet, now is the time to start making some plans for this summer—before everything has to take a back-seat to certain inexorable events in April and May. If you do something about it now, you won't have that care rattling in your rumble when you are trying to concentrate on higher things like organic chem. or Bismarck's foreign policy, Of course you want a job. Metal that jingles and paper that crackles is very satisfying to have in your pocket or your purse in the fall. Besides, you know that you wouldn't want to loaf all summer even if you could, in a time like this.

All of which is merely preamble to a suggestion. This year Canada is facing her biggest-yet farm labour problem. Production quotas for beef, bacon, eggs, cheese, canned goods, and indeed every other commodity sent to Great Britain, have been increased. The country would be fully capable of supplying these demands were it not for our small population. A large proportion of the farm labour have naturally joined the active forces or gone into munition factories and their place must be filled.

In Ontario, the Farm Service Force has been supplying that gap, organizing school children, students, teachers, house-wives, and anyone else with spare time, to fill the need. "Ontario's fruit and vegetable growers would never have completed their 1942 operations without the student labour organized by the Provincial Department of Agriculture, and this source of labour even saved the day for many processors and others engaged in activities related to production and distribution," the secretary of the Ontario Food Distribution Council said in his annual survey. As a result of last year's success, the Dominion government is now adopting a similar scheme for the whole country.

With this year's increased need, the Ontario Farm Service Force is again looking for students, and in greater numbers. For university students they are emphasizing the farm labour camps, both men's and women's. These camps, situated in districts where there is a large labour demand, may be government or privately operated, but in either case are supervised and staffed by the Y.M.C.A. or Y.W.C.A. Numbers in a single camp range from 10 to 40 in a private camp (set up by an individual farmer with the co-operation of the Farm Service) to 100 in the government camps. Living conditions are healthful, the food is prepared by Y.W.C.A. cooks, recreation rooms are provided, and there should be ample opportunity for companionship. The work changes with the season—you may be picking fruit one week and harvesting carrots the next. Pay varies with the district and the kind of work, but is considered to be good and includes board. Transportation to the camps is payed for those who work three weeks or more.

This year, with so many engineering and science students doing technical work, women will be even more needed to help. Besides the actual farm work, the Farm Service and theY.W.C.A. are asking for college women to act as labour secretaries and recreational leaders in the women's camps. The labour secretary's job is an important one; she is the link and buffer for the farmer, the worker, and the government, supplying the right number of workers at the right place and time, arranging wages, keeping track of work done. It requires some patience and infinite tact, but should be a valuable experience to anyone interested in human beings. The position of recreational leader offers a similar opportunity. And it is a college woman who is peculiarly fitted to undertake such a job.

Here is a two-fold chance—to help your country in a much-needed way and to gain a broadening experience. Talk to your friends who have done it as members of the Farm Service Force and as western harvesters. In general they are enthusiastic and these are the aspect that struck them. You can obtain information at the S.A.C. office or the Ontario Farm Service in the Parliament Buildings. Don't let yourself miss a good chance!

Ernest Seitz

I suppose some people enjoyed the Wymilwood Recital last night, but if they did, they did not sit near me. The audience was almost unanimous in its feelings as far as I could see.

Ernest Seitz is almost a limited organization, a subsidiary of Underwood, Elliott, Fisher, one might say. As he told us, he has been giving piano recitals over the air for 10 consecutive years, an accomplishment of which anyone might be proud.

He gave a piano recital yesterday, too, and he warned his audience before he started that he was feeling tired, that if he had his way he would be in the audience instead of performing. Therefore, allowance must be made, (a) for his long continued radio broadcasts, and (b) for his fatigue last night.

However, with all allowances made, there are still certain things which mhight be criticized in Mr. Seitz's recital. The first was his choice of program. I am sick, deathly sick, of morceaux of immature sentimentality, composed by Chopin. Chopin did write a good deal of good music, but Mr. Seitz has evidently never heard of it.

As far as the notes were concerned, Mr. Seitz was adequate. He cannot, however, give any impression of dynamic contrast. All his playing is in different degrees of "loud."

Finally, he has a strong tendency to sentimentalize (often found in "light" concert artists). He wrecked Gluck's Dance of the Blessed Spirits, by rubati which had no place in the music.

In short, I did not enjoy the recital!

The Conservatory Quartet opened its concert on Saturday night with Mozart's Quartet in D Major (K. 499) . The breadth and dignity of Zara Nelsova's style on the cello and the firmness of Cecil Figelski's playing on the viola were particularly responsible for the strong and well moulded performance which the work was given. Twice Beaten in Season's Play, Senior School Knocks Off U.C. in Shinny Contest on Friday

Getting hot towards the end of the season, S.P.S. Seniors eliminated U.C., 4-2, in a hard-fought shinny contest at the Arena on Friday afternoon. The Red and White had counted heavily on a victory because they had twice defeated the Schoolmen during the regular playing season.

Both teams gave few scoring chances although the performance of the goalers, Skinner and Workman, kept the scoring to a minimum. Don Grossgurth of S.P.S. skated off with the scoring honours with two goals and an assist.

In the first of the three 15 minute periods checking was hard and the play was mainly in the centre zone. The second period swa the Blue and Gold rip in two goals, the result of team play close in one the nets. Warren for U.C. broke the ise by settling the puck back of Workman. At the end of the second period the score stood 3-1 for School.

U.C. pressed had and came within one goal of the leaders on a solo effort by Dalt Nesbitt. With about two minutes to go the Schoolmen tallied again, the final score 4-2. School's scorers were Douglas with one goal, Grosskurth had two goals and an assist, Kelly an assist, Workman tallied one, Moeser counted an assist, as did Seymour. Warren and Nesbitt kicked the score sheet for U.C.

Sr. Meds Edge Vic In Series Opener

Sr. Meds started the two-out-of-three game defence of their Eckhardt Cup Friday in full flight as they edged Vic in the second period of overtime to end the game 5-2. The game, however, will be striken from the books as it was declared illegal after the referee had made a mistake in the matter of a free throw.

A tight first half ended scorelessly. The second half was even—each netting twice. Morewood got Vic's and Robinson and Murphy those of Meds. To end the tie an overtime period was attempted but no score was forthcoming. Then in the second overtime period Robinson and Baldwin collected for Sr. Meds to win the game. However, the referee neglected to eject a penalized Meds' player from the pool and the series will begin all over agan today.

The meeting of the Athletic Directorate on Friday afternoon resulted in many happy tidings of interest to our sporting world. As a result of much discussion on the question, it was decided that Senior Athelic Colours (T's) should be awarded to athletes of exceptional ability in a particular sport—such as would have won them recognition in the Intercollegiate field in prewar days. As a result of this entirely new policy, Helen Carefoot of Vic, Aileen McNally of St. Mike's, and Zoie Christie of U.C. were honoured in this way for their respective ability in hockey and in basketball.

In the field of badminton, Betty Allen was cited for honours, since she already has her "T," and Doris Clark was recommended for her junior colours upon her registration in second ycar. Joan Snyder and Mary Keir were recommended for their third "T's" also upon registration into second pear.

Hockey, too has its stars who will receive Junior "T's": Patrick, Allen, Pearce, Dillon, Bain, Stewart, Gemmill and Eunson (upon registration into second year); and those who will obtain third colours—Brandon and Gordon. These players were the mainstays of the victorious Vic team and well deserved their glory.

And tennis had its honoured champions who were re-cited, having already received their "T's" — V. R. McLeod and Virginia Kitto. Jean Horwell of Meds and Muriel Finlayson of P.H.E. will receive their junior colours upon registration into third year and second year respectively.

Starting the season off was, as you remember, basketball—and in this sport Betty Allen and Ruth Carleton were re-cited for able playing, while Sinclair, Gray and Kysoglad were recommended for junior colours and Pelliing and third "T's." Anyone who has played against them or with them will no doubt recall their merit.

Swimming had many stars—but, outstanding amongst them was Barbara Hinchcliffe who will receive the Ishbel Robertson Cup for individual swimming champ. Lyons and Graham will receive their junior and Martin and O'Connor their third "T's" following the recommendation of Friday afternoon. May McKinney was re-cited for honours. What with this galaxy of stars and what with the special junior additions of Florence Cooper and we, us and company added to the special thirds of Martin and O'Connor, we really have a fitting climax to our year of sport and we suspect a few happy athletes round about our fair campus.

Speaking Of Sport

By Roger Conant

This being the last regular issue of The Varsity to be rolled off the presses it may be timely to bring to light the latest figures on the standings of the T.A. Reed Trophy. As a matter of fact the Athletic Office has computed the last month's points up to Saturday. So we will present a slight resume.

School of Science garnered 677 points to go far out into the lead with a grand total of 5,246. The hockey finalists—Juniors and Seniors—got 78, the many and group leading basketball teams gathered 90, and the baseball group champions collected half the points with 380. Also accountable was water polo with 35., indoor track with 51 and gym with 17 points.

Next in line, with the big jump of 418 points, comes Meds who are still 1,400 behind School with a score of 3,805. The big point-getters here were baseball netting 195 and water polo with 70. Hockey, basketball and indoor track make up the rest of the total.

Still in third place, but faltering slightly, is Trinity. One hundred and ninety-eight points brings up the total to 3,418. Here the hockey squad and the indoor track turnout accounted for practically every point.

Similarly in fourth and falling behind is St. Mike's with 189 points to bring their total up to 3,105. Basketball was their chief pay-off with 75, but hockey netted 40, baseball 30, water polo 22 and track 12.

Dents fell considerably in the past few weeks—and mainly because of a 100 point fine imposed for a double default. The Dents' all-university volleyball champs netted 150 points and their threatening mushball nine garnered 135 to bring their grand total to 2,692.

U.C. made perhaps the most surprising jump of all, and although not overtaking Dents for fifth place, threatened to do so. However a 100 point fine for a couple of baseball defaults set them back on their heels. The semi-final puck squad gathered 70 points, the P. & H.E. cage men helped rope in 50, the threatening baseball team garnered 95, the water polo squad collected 50, the indoor track work of Shackleton and mates racked up 67 and the great gymnastic display of U. & H.E. netted 128 to make U.C.'s total 460, but the fine made the grand total 2,640.

Vic was one of the worst to tumble in the latest release. Only 65 points were obtained—mostly through basketball—to bring the total to 2,112.

Wycliffe moved up the scale a trifle as its hockey team netted them 115 points and the cage team 45. The Theologs now haw 1,804.

Still holding down ninth place is Emmanuel. Baseball and basketball bring its total to 1,367.

The only real change was for tenth spot when Knox jumped up from last place. Its group winning cage squad garnered it 117 points to give them a total of 1,300.

The foregoing comparisons are by no means a final standing list. For points to be awarded are for: basketball games played after March 2, group winners, champ and finalist; baseball—champ and finalist; hockey—champ and finalist; water polo—champ and finalist; track—entries, winners of today's hurdles and broad jump, records broken, full team bonus, champ and finalist.

IT'S SCHOOL'S GON FALCON...

The above figures and comparisons may seem to be a little too informative for an honest to goodness S.O.S. but we have been asked a number of times to list the reason for the different point additions. At any rate, as far as we can see there won't be much change in the final computations. School is sure to take the mug—what with its hockey champs, its baseball and basketball finalists, its track champs.

Pitcher's Battle Ends in Dent Win

Bchind the six strike-out pitching of Saltzman Saturday, Dent A mushball artists edged their way to the semi-finals by defeating S.P.S. 1V, 3-0.

Saltzman only allowed a couple of hits as he paced his team to victory. Dents got all the runs in the first inning as Cossie Castaldi, Marshall and Shapira put on a batting spree to send them into the lead. However, the School nine held them to a few scattered hits throughout the other two innings to make the game quite close.

S.P.S. IV—Bromley, Spence, Duncan, Bridges, MacDonald, Boa, O'Laughlin, Gibson.

Dent A—Castaldi, Breen, Marshall, Hambly, Shapira, Saltzman, Malkin, Channell.

the first violin, has in the past showed a tendency toward "prettiness" in his style, but on Saturday night he was able to achieve breadth and continuity with few lapses, although his tone is still thin and suffers from comparison with the somewhat larger tone of Harold Sumberg, the second violinist. The slow movement was given a deeply moving performance which almost made me forget the lack of precision and the cloudiness of texture which I was aware of in the trio of the minuet.

Daniel Gregory Mason's Quartet on Negro Themes is a piece of effective, fine-sounding writing which exploits the resources of the string quartet admirably. But a quartet whose three movements are no more than lush and comfortable is not likely to keep the listener's interest throughout, and one soon becomes aware of a studied artificiality which is particularly revealed when the composer tries to harmonize Deep River in as many complicated and thick-sounding ways as possible. The Conservatory Quartet attacked vigorously and did their best to put the work across.

Schubert's Trout Quintet required the assistance of Lubka Kolessa at the piano and Sydney Wells on the doublebass. Madame Kolessa's playing had an attractive sparkle and brilliance. At times she displayed a feeling for the outline of phrase and paragraph which was impressive, although occasionally she played too primly or relaxed her control and produced phrasing which was loose and uncertain. However, she was no doubt anxious not to usurp too much importance and to keep her place in the ensemble.

Today we take the liberty of reprinting an editorial from The Trinity University Review which expresses with clarity of thought and diction one side of an extremely interesting argument on present world politico-philosophy.

Current Trends

North American emotional instability is currently manifesting itself in a political fad: Communism is now not only respectable, it is popular.

For well over a year, the Russians have been performing miracles of resistance against a hitherto unbeatable Germany and are now in a fair way to breaking up the incincible Reichswehr. This is something to thank God for, for without Russia's contribution to the defeat of Naziism, the task would have been immeasurably more difficult, if indeed it had been possible at all. No fair person wishes to minimize Russia's contribution to the final defeat of Germany, even if he could.

However, this heroism is being capitalized on and thoroughly exploited here and in the United States by that happy band of opportunists known as the Communists. They proclaim that this proves once and for all that there is a panacea and that they have it in Communism. Although none of us knows a great deal about Russia as it actually is ,it is a least arguable that Stalinism cannot be equated with Communism without a great straining of meanings. The comrades on this side of the water claim that the Soviets' war effort is the result of their theory in practice. We might remind them of a similar feat perpetrated against Napoleon in 1812, and especially at Borodino where the Russian soldier fought and died with patriotism just as fierce and effective as that of his prototype in 1943. And he carried on an equally effective scorched-earth policy, even if he did not call it by that name. Perhaps the comrades on this side fail to give due eredit to the bravery and tenacity of a stubborn and sturdy people fighting for their liomes and their country. In any case, it is dangerous to argue that the system best adapted to fighting wars is thereby proved to be the best system for peace as well.

Anyone who has waded througb any of this writer's previous articles must certainly admit that they are not fascist or capitalist in the sense of arguing for unrestricted free enterprise. However, taking the Communists' argument at its best: that Communism does exist in Russia and is responsible for their brave fight, it is still a grave mistake to proclaim that what is best for Russia is neeessarily best for Canada and the United States, too This dictum ignores the vast differenee in our respective cultural and political traditions and in the stages of our economic and industrial development. These are considerations which cannot be left out of such calculations for they will determine the feasibility of any plan proposed; we are at any given time the result of all that has gone before, and this simple truth has very significant implications in eonneetion with this problem.

One of the worst features of this adulation of Communism is the escapist element which looms large in the hazy thinking bebind these plebeian panegyrics. Unfortunately, it is much easier to dream of the New Jerusalem nestling in the steppes of Russia, while vegetatively listening to radio reports of new Russian advances, than to get up off one's haunches and attend the local ward nominations for city councillors or members of the Board of Education. This involves reeognition by the indiividual of his duties to his community, the performance of which is the only thing which can justify the freedom he enjoys. Very little can be expected from the person who does not try to make his own system work before he begins casting an eye on greener fields in the distance.

Our democracy, if it is to work, demands the assumption by the individual of very definite responsibilities as neeessary ineidents of the dividend which it declares in his favour: the maximum freedom for the individual conformable with each being allowed an equal chance to express his thoughts and ideas in action.

The idea of a benevolent ruler scattering blessings on all bis subjects equally, with favour for none and justice for all, is about as indolent and spiritless a denial of the worth of the individual as can be imagined. What we need in Canada is the rebirth of an independent spirit of self-reliance, not dedicated to the accumulation of material wealth for self-gratification, but bent on providing a decent living for all who are willing to use the talents they were given.

Let us try to do things for ourselves by ourselves; let us try to find and develop a Canadian way to deal with Canadian problems. This does not mean isolation, it means independence. We can learn from others always and perhaps a good deal from Russia. But let us realize that although it requires courage and intelligenee to adapt, copying is an admission that we lack the originality and ability to govern ourselves—W.L.N.S.

Fort Ste. Marie Is Topic at R.C.I.

"Fort Ste. Marie, its Excavation and Significance," was the subject of the addrcss given to the members of the Royal Institute on Saturday night by K. E. Kidd, Assistant Keeper of the Ethnological Collections in the Royal Ontario Museum of Archaeology.

Mr. Kidd began with a brief outline of the history of the heroie Jesuit missionary work among the Huron Indians in the early 17th century which began to progress rapidly in the 1630's, encouraged by the support of Louis XIV and the great Cardinal Richelieu. In 1639, under the direction of the Jesuit father, Jean de Brebeuf, was begun the erection of Ft. Ste. Marie, situated as nearly central as possible among the several missionary posts to serve as a meeting place and a retreat for the missionary fathers.

A ruthless attack of the Iroquois Indians in the latter half of the following decade completely wiped out all the Huron villages, forcing the inhabitants to flee to Christian Island. The Jesuits followed them shortly, burning Ft. Ste. Marie in May 1715, and the site remained intaet until some excavations were begun in the middle of the 19th century.

The Jesuits were able to buy the property four years ago, and after an agreement had been made between the Jesuit order and the Royal Ontario Museum, excavations were begun under the direction of the speaker, Mr. Kidd. It was hoped that a ground plan for the reconstruction of the fort would be revealed, and the Museum was anxious to find material for the beginning of the study of Huron Archaeology. With the aid of lantern slides Mr. Kidd described the problems, the methods of attack, and the interesting revelations of the excavations, and submitted to the audience the present knowledege in hand regarding the fort.

President Cody, whose summer home is in Simcoe County, not far from Ft. Ste. Marie, and who is a personal friend of Father Lally, the present director of the Martyr's Shrine, expressed the appreeiation of the audienee to "the leader of the most seientific experiment carried on in Canada in the historical field."

International Club Plans Polish Evening

For the last meeting of the year, the International Student Club has planned a Polish evening for Thursday, March 11 at 8 o'clock, in Wymilwood. Their guest speaker will be Flight-Lieutenant T. S. Jaronski of the Polish Airforce.

"Poland Will Never Die," a moving picture, will be shown at the meeting, and Polish musie will be played.

Flight-Lieutenant Jaronski was a lawyer in Poland before the war broke out, and took part in the work of the Polish Airforee against Germany. After a series of narrow escapes, he entered the Polish Airforee in England, was given the D.F.C. and the highest Polish award for bravery, the Polish Cross.

Strikes Upheld In U.C. Debate

UC PARL.— 4N . .. f]9wedlw e ht h

The motion, "Resolved that Strikes Should Be Abolished for the Duration of the War," was defeated by a large majority at last Friday's session of the University Parliament.

In introducing the motion, the Progressive-Conservative party took the stand that strikes should be abolished in war-time because the striker is no longer striking against the private employer but against the government. Strikes become unnecessary when conciliation boards have been set up by the government.

The opposition argued that as the strike is the weapon of the union, to abolish the one is to abolish the other. It has taken 150 years for the union and strike to develop to their present position as a functioning part of our economic system. Our present economic set-up operates on a system of weights and balances; the worker must have his coercive weapon, the strike, just as the employer has the ability to withdraw wages.

The motion to be introduced in this week's session of the Parliament is, "Resolved that the Axis Powers Should Have a Voice in the Post-war Settlement of Europe."

S.C.M. to Have Get-Together

As a final salute to the social season, the S.C.M. at Vic., U.C., Trinity and S.P.S. are planning a get-together on Friday, March 12 at 8:30 p.m. in Wymilwood.

"The idea of a dance is something new for the S.C.M. on this campus," Bill Nicholls of the special Dance Committee, reported Saturday, "The original idea was to have a dance, but the committee feels that having a get-together should have a wider appeal to all faeulties."

Special efforts are being made to provide a short program to add zip to the evening. Tickets may be obtained from the S.C.M. offiee in Hart House, Elizabeth Adams or Elileen Chappell at Vic, Maleolm Wilkinson of S.P.S., Harry Clineh of U.C. and Bill Bothwell of Trinity.

Length and nature of the suspensions meted out were not made known immediately, but they were said to have been "quite severe."

Resigning members of The Daily's staff are protesting Senate aetion in the matter and also the "failure of the Exeeutive Council to represent student opinion." LIKE "winning a letter," keeping out in front of the others takes an extra something. Coca-Cola has it—in taste . . . in quality . . . in refreshment.

The finished art that comes from 57 years of practice goes into the making of Coca-Cola. A special blend of flavour-essences merges all the ingredients of Coca-Cola into a unique, original taste of its own.

There are many ways to quench thirst, but ice-cold Coca-Cola brings true refreshment.

It's natural for popular names to acquire friendly abbreviations. That's why you hear Coca-Cola called Coke. Both mean the same thing . . . "coming from a single source and well known to the community."

Governmental Regulations Permit Able-Bodied Men To Finish Varsity Courses

Rumours of Arts Course Restrictions Created by L. Austin Wright Address Contradicted by Present National Selective Service Directors at January Conference; Meds, Dents, Sciencemen Undergo War Changes in Status

UNSATISFACTORY STUDENTS REPORTED TO BOARD

Government regulations with regard to military service for male university students within compulsory-service age brackets—although becoming increasingly stringent as the nation's manpower shortage becomes more acute—have, throughout four academic years of war, consistently pointed in one direction: that bona fide students whose studies were likely to be of value to the nation either immediately upon graduation or in the years succeeding cessation of hostilities should be allowed to complete their university courses.

Though this governmental stand has been for the most part clear-cut throughout the varying phases of the war to date, the issue has constantly been beclouded for the individual student by two factors—his own unrest and impatience in troubled war-years, and his desire to be of immediate and practical service to his country; and the outside pressure of public opinion, not fully informed, which has tended at times to regard Universities as havens of refuge for draft-dodger sons of wealthy men.

Clouds of Rumour

A further factor tending to becloud the issue of whether or not each man who has elected to complete his college course was justified in so doing has been the swarms of rumours which have been circulated from time to time regarding possible changes in government attitude to the universities which would be designed to eliminate courses in the liberal arts for the duration, and accelerate to an even greater degree courses in certain of the sciences.

Greatest number of such rumours arose out of an address prepared for delivery by L. Austin Wright—then Assistant Director of National Selective Service—last autumn before an alumni group at Queen's University. Though the speech as prepared was never delivered, advance press releases reached most of the collegiate journals of Canada, causing a storm of protest from university and college heads and deans of faculties, as well as from students and undergraduate editors.

Main point of the address with which violent issue was taken was the prediction that university training would be restricted for able-bodied males in the draft brackets to courses which would fit them to become "technical officers in the armed forces or key specialists in war industries."

Thought it soon become apparent that such was not the immediate government intention, the uncertainty which Mr. Wright's undelivered address engendered was not fully cleared until early this year when Canadian University presidents gathered in Ottawa for a conference with government officials.

Full Consultation Assured

Here Arthur MacNamara, Director of National Selective Service, told the conference that "no basic change in policy will be undertaken except in a common sense way, after full consultation with university authorities." He also urged the universities to "ruthlessly weed out" incompetent and mediocre students.

Further substantiation of this attitude on the part of the government was contained in a memorandum from the Prime Minister to the Canadian Social Science Research Council, which expressed "recognition of the importance to our future, as a nation, and to the cause for which we are fighting, the maintenance of the liberal tradition of education in the humanities."

In the early months of the war, before military training for men in certain

Debates Continue In Faculty Clubs; Not in Hart House

House Cancellation Results in Relative Accentuation of Interest in College Groups; Intervarsity Debaters Travel

TOPICS PICKED CAUTIOUSLY

University debating started off at the beginning of the war with the handicap of the cancellation of all Hart House Debates for the duration of the war. Hart House Authorities and the Debates Committee of Hart House felt that such debates might lead to unfavourable publicity for the whole University in the down-town press.

The cancellation of the Hart House Debates made most other campus debating organizations careful of the topics on which they debated. Thus Vic's first debate of 1939-40 was on the subject, "Resolved that the co-existence of the pass and honour courses creates undesirable class distinction." The U.C. parliament, early in November, upheld the government on the motion, "Resolved that the house opposes any change in Canada's divorce laws."

Gradually, as students found out that what they would say on most controversial subjects did not contravene the Defence of Canada Regulations, the scope of subjects chosen broadened, although the Women's Interfaculty Debating Union was still debating on "Re-

President Cody, Honorary Colonel of the C.O.T.C., chats at the saluting base with Brig. Eric Haldenby, a graduate of the corps, who led his brigade out of France after the German break-through.

President Cody's Message To War-Time Undergraduates

The One . . . Over Against The Other

In that strange Hebrew book of Wisdom, called Ecclesiastes, the writer says "In the day of prosperity be joyful", i.e. enjoy whatever good actually comes; "but in the day of evil, consider", i.e. consider why it comes and what may be gained from it. Then he adds the assertion of what we should call the doctrine of averages in the distribution of outward good and evil: "God also hath set the one over against the other", balancing that and this. There is the broad fact of compensation in life. We must balance losses and gains.

This year some classes in the University are graduating after spending their whole college life amid the strains and stresses of the war. Some feel they have lost much thereby, and not unnaturally would rather have attended the University in normal times. But have they gained anything in compensation? An old graduate of this University expressed his feelings in these words:

"Three-score and ten, a wise man
Said, were our years to be.
Three-score and six I give him back.
Four are enough for me—
Four in these corridors,
Four in these walls of ours.
These give me, Heavenly Powers,
'Tis life for me!"

He had drained to the depths the joys, the opportunities, the friendships of undergraduate days in the times of peace. In normal years the two great legacies one carries from his college days are friendships and a taste for good literature. There is ample time for academic work, for wider reading as well as for one's special task; friendships may be formed and cultivated in full measure; there is opportunity for discussion in private and debate in public; there is education by the attrition of mind on mind. Games, intramural and intercollegiate, are possible with all the stern joy that comes from "playing the game" against worthy rivals and from playing for one's side with all one's might; and with the discipline, the unselfishness, the sense of team-play that athletic contests impose. One's hobbies in art, in drama, in music can be indulged. If civilization means that form of organization in which men and women, thrown into close relations, are enabled by their various gifts to enrich and enlarge one another's lives, there is a chance, nay a certainty, of becoming more civilized. It is true that the war has curtailed or even cut off some of these activities and opportunities; it is true that we all live under the shadow of restraint and compulsion, and that we must face the call to do and, if need be, to die.

On the other hand, the main permanent and essential values of a university course remain. We can still say with Mathew Arnold:

"Rigorous teachers seized my youth,
And purged its faith and trimmed its fire;
Showed me the high white star of truth,
There bade me gaze and there aspire."

We have learned the lessons of hard work, of concentration, of self-discipline. We must accept the obligation of democracy as well as its freedoms; we must put duties before rights and impose discipline upon ourselves. The whole atmosphere of War has made us realize that we cannot have anything without paying for it, nor the highest things—such as freedom, justice, mercy, truth—without paying the highest price in effort and sacrifice. We know now that responsibility goes with privileges; and that the ideals for which we are not ready to die will soon perish. If we become mere philosophic onlookers, the culture

SOME CAMPUS ACTIVITIES DISCONTINUED

While the University of Toronto has been adjusting itself to the demands of war, its campus has become steadily a source of bigger and more important news-stories. The past four years of publication have perhaps been the busiest consecutive four years in The Varsity's 62 volumes, as overworked Editors and their henchmen pounded their typewriters frantically in an attempt to keep up with the really significant events of the era.

In retrospect, here are some of the things that stand out upon perusal of The Varsity's files for the war years.

In the first year of the war, naturally, the biggest story of all was the actual outbreak of hostilities. This came a few weeks before The Varsity started to roll from its presses, but the first issue that year was published coincidentally with the fall of Warsaw, and as the year progressed and the weight of the war pressed down harder and harder upon the campus the big stories took on a progressively more war-like flavour.

Early Training

Student war effort was first concentrated in the work of the Canadian Officers' Training Corps, and within a few days of the start of the autumn term more than a thousand men were drilling on the campus. Total enrolment reached 1,600 as this University's Contingent became the largest in Canada. A War Advisory Board was set up to advise students "as to the best way in which they can aid their country at this time," and the click of co-eds' knitting needles became omnipresent in lecture-rooms and residences as the first fever of war-services struck the University.

A Motor Mechanics course for women was instituted, with an enrolment of 175. And the war made itself felt in a number of other ways too, with the banning of Daffydill Nite and Epistaxis—two of the Medical undergraduate body's largest extra-curricular interests—and the abandonment of the Hart House Debates.

One of the big stories of 1939-40 which kept CUP wires humming was the controversy between the National Federation of Canadian University Students and the Canadian Students' Assembly. Three universities withdrew their representation from both bodies, following a move for amalgamation at double Christmas meetings. Other repercussions were the resignation of the news editor of The McGill Daily, the suspension of the C.S.A. at another university and the withdrawal of the local Engineering Society from C.S.A.

At Toronto, provision for representation on the Students' Administrative Council of C.S.A. "interest-groups" was made; but controversy broke out afresh when the latter body circulated a questionnaire on the advisability of conscription on this campus shortly after McGill students had broken up a C.S.A.-sponsored meeting in Montreal.

What Was It?

Students generally were puzzled by what the argument was all about. The C.S.A. passed virtually out of existence shortly afterwards, and the N.F.C.U.S. has since become dormant for the duration. And nobody seems to care very much now. But it was a headline-making squabble in 1939-40.

The Department of Physiological Hygiene set about collecting student blood donations for shipment overseas, and students gave their blood in large

Lively Discussion Created by Ban On Aliens' Entry

Student Groups Back Cody-Sponsored Motion to Admit 18 "Friendly Aliens"; Governors Deadlock on First Vote

VARSITY LEADS PROTEST

Liveliest wartime controversy on the campus was aroused the autumn of 1942 with the announcement of the barring of 18 "friendly aliens" from registration at the University by vote of the Board of Governors. The aliens, a group of German-born students who had left Germany shortly after the rise of Nazism, had been interned in England after the outbreak of war and released from Canadian internment camps in order to attend the University of Toronto.

After considering the question at several meetings, the Board rejected a motion by President Cody recommending admission of the alien students by a tie vote Nov. 12. Immediately the University rallied behind The Varsity's first protesting editorial in an almost campus-wide effort to persuade the Governors to reconsider.

The Student Christian Movement took advantage of a meeting commemorating the martyrdom of students of the University of Prague to pass a resolution adopted unanimously by the students present, asking the Board to reverse its decision. Within the next few days resolutions poured in from student bodies of all faculties, echoing the same sentiments.

With the single dissenting vote of the Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering, all student organizations rallied behind a resolution of the Students' Administrative Council, to which all other resolutions were appended, requesting reconsideration of the ban, which was forwarded to the Board.

Senate Protests

Meanwhile the University Senate joined the students in their protest of the decision, claiming that the Board had infringed on the Senate's jurisdiction in voting on a question of student admissions, and rumours of court action by the federated colleges, some of which had enrolled alien students, began to circulate about the campus.

Meanwhile The Varsity continued its campaign, feuding mightily with the down-town press, a section of which had supported the Governors' ban. Other papers of the Canadian University Press added their voices to the general clamour for reconsideration of the Governors' decision.

After a month's lively controversy,

The Student Is At War

Canada and her Universities have now advanced deep into the fourth year of the greatest war which the nations of the world have ever fought. And with the passing of these four years have come changes in the day-to-day life of the Canadian university student which it is the purpose of this special issue of The Varsity to mirror. In these pages we have tried to give our readers some perspective-conscious picture of the effect of the impact of war conditions upon a campus originally geared for peace-time pursuit of knowledge. We have interested ourselves in the various aspects of active student and staff participation in the Dominion's war effort; in the way in which men and women at the University of Toronto are being trained to serve their country upon graduation; in the change perceptible in curricular and extra-curricular fields of activity as the war has moved closer and closer to us all. Naturally, in an issue of such limited scope, we have been forced into a consideration, not of single specific events, but of the broader trends of change which have become visible.

Psychological Metamorphosis

Perhaps the greatest change visible in college life—on this campus at least— which becomes apparent upon perusal of our files for the past four volumes, is the psychological metamorphosis which the typical denizen of the campus seems to have undergone. In the 1939-40 season, when the "phoney war" was being fought from opposite sides of two reputedly impregnable lines of fixed fortifications, the atmosphere of the campus was basically unchanged from that of the rah-rah pre-war years. But with the invasion of the Low Countries as students wrote their Final Examinations that year, and with the Battle of Britain which went through its most terror-filled days and nights before they returned to the University for another term, the individual attitude towards the war changed radically. Now, for the first time, the names of some of the students who had been at college in the previous session were being posted in casualty lists; and the ever-present fear of a Nazi invasion of Britain was always too close at hand for the gravity of the situation to be longer relegated to the background. Another series of events which flared student realization of the closeness of the war that winter was the unbelievably gallant stand of the embattled Greeks against the invading legions of Mussolini which closed tragically with the influx of Nazi reinforcements and the eventual fall of Crete. These were dark days for students here, as indeed they were for all the free peoples.

New Hope

Then came the ill-judged German invasion of Russia, followed, in the third academic session of the war, by the Japanese attacks upon Pearl Harbour and a score of other vital American and British bases in the Pacific. Despite the early serious set-backs in these newly-opened war theatres, a new and more confident optimism now seemed to replace the old, desparate There'll-always-be-an-England confidence that we had all felt in ultimate, if far-distant and incredibly costly, victory. All the major nations were now engaged in the spreading global war: and with the mighty dormant power of the United States and Russia now aligned by the side of the British who had withstood the Axis for a long, lonely year, the prospect took on new hope.

More recent successes of the United Nations—their growing aerial offensive against the Reich and by the mounting stores of death for the enemies of the free men of the world now being turned out daily in their factories—have justified such optimism. Though the war is far from won, it seems altogether unlikely that we can now suffer defeat. But throughout the long four years of changing military fortunes, the hyper-receptive minds of the college men and women of Canada have reflected the evanescent phases of their nation's fight. And now, as Canada awaiits the final assault upon the crumbling might of Germany, her student population, in company with other Canadians, sees the issues involved with clarity and confidence.

Active Participation

To judge from the foregoing account of the vagaries of wartime student thought, one might gather that students have passed four years in an ivory-tower through the windows of which the war was faintly visible; but even a casual glance at stories of student-participation in the war effort carried elsewhere in these pages will correct this impression. But active participation has been individual, while the trends of campus thought have been common ones, shared by men and women who, in many cases, have gone forth already from these halls to serve Canada in her most trying hour.

Following the present program, the University may look forward in the future to a continuation of the present policy of working for victory. The regime of mass student training will be continued; a women's organization on similar lines to those of the C.O.T.C. may be formed; more and larger Army Courses will follow the successful No. 1 Course begun this year; the efforts of the University's scientists, as indeed of all University facilities, will continue toward victory. And university curricula—although both government and university heads have expressed recent recognition of the value of so-called "useless" education—may conveivably become still more war-conscious, as the battle comes still closer.

When The Victory Is Won

When victory is won, when the men now fighting in the armed forces — university graduates, former undergraduates, and non-university men, who may want to continue their interrupted education —what role will this, and other universities, play in the solution of the problems then arising?

Already plans for the rehabilitation of the student are being put into operation. The organization helping the present trickle of returning fighters will have to be expanded a hundredfold when the armies of Canada came marching home. Already proposals are being put forward by prominent United States educators by which the universities could become a nation-wide clearing house for returning students and prospective students. This the universities are well equipped to be, and we feel sure that they will be more than willing to use their organization for this worthy purpose.

The post-war future of the actual teaching in the universities is bright. The world consciousness which has come as the small silver lining in an otherwise overwhelmingly black cloud will not soon be lost; already university educators are planning courses which will fill the gaps in the present curriculum and make it truly world-wide in scope. The suggestion that a course in Russian be included is a case in point.

University students may also look forward to improved relations with the world once victory is won and their position has been re-established. Not only will the scope of their studies have been immensely broadened by the direct and the indirect effects of a world-wide conflict, but they may also find that increasing ease of transportation allied with world consciousness will make possible an intellectual league of nations, with actual attendance at foreign centres of learning taking the place of the past ties of the printed word.

The integration of the world after victory will mean, we hope, an ever increasing integration of the universities and the non-academic world. In the past this has been the case. The future holds a promise that can be fulfilled to the great benefit of both.

Campus Publications Not Affected By War's Extra Demands on Students

The four years of war have affected the publications of the University very little, a survey by The Varsity revealed. No publication has become an entire casualty to the demands of military training on students' time, although some have had to curtail a part of their activity.

The most remembered event in campus publication, at least to those who took part in it, was the publication in the spring of 1941 of the 48-page issue of The Varsity which marked the 60th anniversary of the paper. The "Big Issue," as those who were associated with it called it, entailed months of research in the stacks of the Library and eventually amounted to almost a complete history of the University.

In the fall of 1940 an amalgamation of two publications, the Trinity University Review and the St. Hilda's Chronicle, under the name of the former publication. According to Sonja Morawetz, present editor of the Review, the amalgamation has proved most successful.

Acta Victoriana has gone on publishing its six issues a year. "This year we have taken some recognition of the war and its problems by printing a series of articles by prominent European thinkers now resident on this continent," said Neil MacDonald, this year's editor of Acta.

The U.C. Undegraduate became first a semi-annual, then a ycarly publication instead of a monthly, in the first two ycars of the war, but it was only in-

Campus Training Prepares Students For Active Service

Officers' Training Corps Has Revised Purpose As War Enters Fourth Year

Basic Training Substituted for Military Theory as Corps Goes to Work Producing Soldies for Active Army

NOT UNPREPARED

Major wartime change in the University of Toronto Contingent, Canadian Officers' Training Corps, apart from the tremendous expansion in numbers, has been in the purpose of the corps itself.

Previously the corps trained men for examinations qualifying them for commissions in the Reserve Army. Under new regulations governing the Reserve Army these commissions are no longer available, and the corps now concentrates on making efficient soldiers in the arm in which they train, preparing them to enter officers' training courses on a reasonably equal footing with experienced N.C.O.'s returned from overseas action to take a similar course.

In addition, the corps has been called upon to handle the basic military training of students as required by government regulations, and the Auxiliary Battalion, later the Training Centre Battalion and the 2nd Battalion, was formed in the fall of 1940 to fulfill this need.

A total of 1,380 C.O.T.C. graduates have been struck off strength to proceer to officers' training courses thus far and an additional 300 will follow in June, 1943. Two hundred have left since the beginning of the current academic year.

Recent developments in C.O.T.C. training have laid increased emphasis on platoon weapons training in all arms, as well as up-to-date instruction in each individual arm.

Regimental schools have been established, giving a course for Non-Comissioned Officers, a course in chemical warfare and another in platoon weapons. More than 300 men took these courses this year and served as instructors in these particular branches for their own companies.

A special eight-day course for officers and non-commissioned officers was offered during the Christmas holidays this year, which was attended by 150 members of the corps.

Courses qualifying officers for promotion are also conducted by the corps, under the direction of Major M. B. Watson, Chief Instructor of the 1st Battalion.

Outbreak of the war found the C.O.T.C. not unprepared for its expanded activities. The corps had just moved into a larger headquarters on St. George Street and a new drill hall was completed in time for the first term following the declaration of hostilities. Subsequent additions included a new lecture hall and a new and enlarged quartermaster stores. These were completed in the spring of 1942.

Speedy Organization

Organization of the corps, particularly of the large and unwieldy 2nd Battalion, was speedily accomplished. The transformation of a mob of students into a formed-up parade took only 18 minutes last fall, with 2,400 students enrolled in both battalions.

Uniforms were issued sparingly in 1939-40; one battalion was uniformed in 1940-41, and in the third war year the entire contingent was equipped.

Early meagre stores of equipment, stripped to the bare shelves by overseas requirements following Dunkirk, were gradually replenished as obsolete United States rifles were secured for training purposes and more modern weapons and equipment gradually became available for demonstration and drill.

Camp Niagara's C.O.T.C. population rose from 300 in the first year of the war to a high of 1,500 the following year, before exemptions were granted for students engaged in war industry. Lt.-Col. H. H. Madill, Officer Commanding, U. of T. Contingent, predicts that this year's camp training will lay mare emphasis on tactical manoeuvres than in previous years, because much of the other work carried on in previous years has been completed during the college term.

At the beginning of the 1941 session an air force branch of the service appeared on campus. The new group became known as the Air Force Wing and was under C.O.T.C. supervision with regard to orders and organization. Instruction in air crew work was given by R.C.A.F. instructors at No. 1 I.T.S. and at the University.

Lieut. Hutchinson of the C.O.T.C. was placed in command of the group in its first year and was later commissioned as a Squadron Leader when the unit was absorbed into the non-active special reserve of the R.C.A.F. as number three squadron of the University Air Training Corps.

A few weeks ago a University Naval Training Detachment was established on similar lines as part of the complement of H.M.C.S. York.

University Women Work On Varied War Projects

Knitting, Sewing, Typing, Blood Donations, Ushering Are Few of Forms Co-Eds' War Effort Takes

REFUGEES ASSISTED

Possibly many have been under the impression that the familiar grey and blue uniforms and women's war work have for the last three years at least been synonymous. However, that is far from the case, for the women in the University not in uniform have done much to meet the emergencies of war. They have not only knitted and sewed for the past four years, but they have typed, given blood at the Blood Donors' Clinic, taken various courses, become ushers in the stadium, prepared lunches for 400 harvesters, and served at the last School Dinner, to list only a few of their activities.

It all began when Mrs. H. J. Cody called a meeting Oct. 4, 1939, of the representatives of the various women's groups connected with the University to discuss the organization of women in relation to wartime service. At this meeting, a central committee was formed.

By Nov. 24, the Red Cross Workroom had been established in the Household Science building through the co-operation of Dr. J. B. Brodie. On the committee in charge, the undergraduates had four representatives.

On Dec. 5, 6 and 7 registration of all University women undergraduates, graduates, faculty and faculty wives for voluntary war service was conducted. One hundred and seventy-five signed for a course in simplified Motor Mechanics (of whom only 60 could be accommodated), 70 for the St. John's Ambulance First Aid Course, many for sewing, and 45 for the Home Nursing Course. Others joined Study Groups in various social and economic problems arising out of wartime conditions, for example providing for refugees and the conservation of resources.

Owing to the large enrolment in the C.O.T.C., there was a serious shortage of textbooks, so the S.A.C. undertook to supplement them with mimeographed copies. For this work, 25 women graduates and undergraduates, volunteered their services as typists.

The School of Nursing at an early date organized their services to knit every Tuesday night.

In the autumn of 1940, many new

7,637 On Active Service; 200 Staff Members Leave As University Goes To War

Staff, Students Rally to Colours Since War's Outbreak; No List of Decorations and Awards Compiled

139 KILLED OR MISSING

Records of the war service of students and staff members of the University are incomplete and admittedly sketchy because of the vast numbers of Varsity men and women now engaged in war service of one kind or another, but the figures available show that the University's men and women are serving on a grand scale.

By March 2, this year, there were 5,875 students on active service, according to figures in the Records Office in Simcoe Hall. This figure does not include S.P.S., Meds and women. The record on women has not been brought up to date since Oct. 8, 1942, at which time there were 113 on acive service.

The Medical roll, corrected up to Jan. 7, 1943, shows 809 graduates and 61 undergraduates and former students of Medicine now on active service. By Jan. 8, 1943, there were 574 S.P.S. graduates and 318 undergraduates on active service.

The latest count on students reported killed or missing while on active service in 139.

Separate stories on appointments, decorations and promotions accorded Varsity students on active service have appeared in The Varsity throughout the four years of war but no official figures has been compiled.

Of the University staff, approximately 200 are on leave of absence for war work. This number represents men and women of the staff who are either on active service, or engaged in government positions or research.

The staff of the university have been active in war work since the very outbreak of hostilities. By October, 1939, two members of the faculty of Dentistry had obtained leave of absence and were engaged in reorganizing the Canadian Dental Corps. At the same time two professors in the department of Political Economy had left to take up high government positions, one in Canada and one in the United States.

Acceleration In Technical Courses Designed To Fill Gaps In Services

With increased wartime need for technical personnel, primarily in the armed forces, but also in the civilian population, it was to be expected that sooner or later some form of acceleration would be applied to the three technical faculties in the University.

In the first week of the war rumours were circulated to the effect that the Sixth Year of Medicine would be graduate by Christmas or sonner, and that the other years would be speeded up accordingly, but no speed-up took place until 1941.

Classes were then resumed after eight weeks' summer vacation, instead of the usual 16, and time-tables were arranged so that the academic year would be over by the third week in March. A two-week break was allowed and one-third of the next academic year was completed by the end of June. By this arrangement it was possible to condense the six academic years into the space formerly taken by five. Throughout all these changes the First Year was left exactly as it had been,

Essentially similar changes were made in the Faculty of Dentistry, permitting the five academic years to be completed in four calendar years. Here, however, the saving was even greater, because no internship is required of graduates in Dentistry. In order to conform with the accelerated production of medical graduates internships throughout Canada were reduced to eight months, from the former minimum of one year.

Changes in the Faculty of Applied Science were not so easy to make. The Faculty felt that no plan similar to that applied to Medicine and Dentistry would be adequate. However, by eliminating the final examinations in the Third and Fourth years, graduates were available to industry or to the armed forces by March 15, and Third Year students were available to industries for summer work by April 1.

The problems of financial arrangements arose in the Faculties of Medicine and Dentistry, since students were allowed only a very short time in which to earn money in the summers, and were required to pay more fees per calendar year. Because of this, a system of bursaries was arranged for junior students, and the armed forces accepted students in the final two years in the R.C.A.M.P and the C.D.C. respectively, as privates, and paid them regular privates' pay plus allowances for living out of barracks. This arrangement was applied to all Canadian medical schools, which followed the same plan of speeding up their courses.

War Curtails Some Activities On Hart House Program

Gilley Sees House Debates To Be Resumed With Peace; Dropped September, 1939

Friday Recitals, Library Evenings, Camera Club Shows Fall by Wayside of War's Four-Year Onrush

MOST ACTIVITIES CONTINUE

Resumption of Hart House Debates immediately following the war was indicated by Acting Warden J. R. Gilley in an interview with The Varsity. "The Board of Stewards have every expectation that steps will be taken as soon as the war is over to see that this very important activity will again be one of the interesting features of the life of the house," he said.

Banned originally in the early days of the first jittery wartime term at the request of the Board of Governors, these debates formerly ranked as the foremost undergraduate institution for the promotion of the forensic art. Up to the outbreak of war, students assembled perdiodically to discuss public questions under Parliamentary conditions and distinguished guest speakers were frequent visitors.

In the fall of 1941 student pressure for resumption of the debates was applied to the Debates Committee which had been retained in office in anticipation of a return of conditions under which it might seem more advisable for students to discuss current questions. The Committee considered the question of resumption presented to it in a unanimous resolution from the Students' Administrative Council. On Nov. 4, 1941 the Committee reaffirmed the decision made at the outbreak of war.

The last Committee meeting was held on Feb. 6, 1942 when a motion by Leland Albright, IV Victoria, that debates be resumed, was defeated. It was decided at that time that no debates would be held for the duration of the war, and no further Debates Committee has been elected.

Friday Recitals

Second wartime casualty among Hart House activities was the discontinuation of Friday Afternoon recitals which used to be held at 5 p.m. in the Music Room. Their discontinuance two years ago was decided upon by the Music Committee because C.O.T.C. training interfered with attendance.

Library Evenings

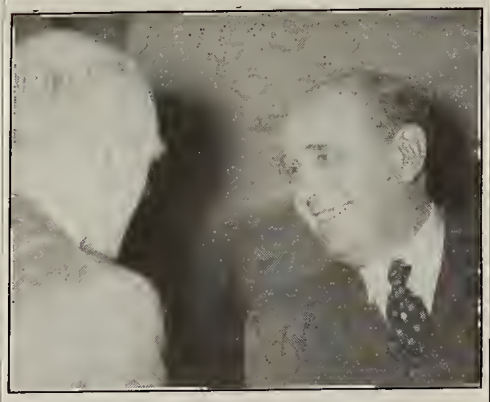
Most recent loss to undergraduate members is the cancellation of the Library Evenings several of which were held during each academic year. Suspension of this activity was decided on at the Library Committee's first meeting this year as a demand on student time which could be dispensed with. The policy regarding these evenings for next year will be decided next fall.

Library Evenings used to take the form of informal gatherings about the library fireplace at which members would smoke and listen to some well-known guest discuss some phase of reading which interested him.

Following discussion in the library refreshments were generally served in one of the upstairs common rooms.

Remaining Activities

The great majority of Hart House activities remain largely unaffected by the war. The Camera Club, although continuing, has been forced this year to withdraw its annual show for lack of entries.



War Dulls Brilliant Shine On Students' Best Boots

War's pinch has even squeezed the shoe-shine trade and for the past year Joe College's boots have been polished elsewhere than at the Hart House barber shop.

Peter Elias, 28-year-old former shoe-shiner here in 1939-40, says that staff shortages hit University employment so badly that the shoe-shine concession (10 cents a shine) had to be discontinued. He is now an attendant in the Tuck Shop.

For more than 10 years the shoe-shine stand has been an added service for students and it did a roaring trade, particularly on rainy days.

Distinguished Exile

Dr. Jan Masaryk, Foreign Minister of the Czechoslovak Government in London, is pictured as he was about to address a meeting of students in Hart House Theatre. Dr. Masaryk twice visited the campus in 1941-2.

Able-Bodied University Students Permitted To Complete Courses

age groups became compulsory under the National Resources Mobilization Act of 1940, enlistment in the Canadian Officers' Training Corps—then a unit of the Non-Permanent Active Militia, but now part of Canada's Reserve Army—was purely voluntary. With the news of the invasion of Poland and the declaration of war upon Germany by Great Britain and Canada, students flocked to enlist in the Corps on campuses across the country.

Draft Calls Deferred

Later, when the six-months' call-up plan went into effect, university students were allowed to take the equivalent of such training at their home universities, without interrupting their studies. When mobilization methods were again altered, and men once called up were retained in the ranks of the Reserve Army—with the option of going active—for the duration, university men were granted the privilege of having draft calls deferred until their university courses were completed.

This year, a further government ruling has had a vital influence upon campus existance; it is the Order-in-Council which refines standards of excellence which a university man must maintain in order to retain this privilege of deferment.

This order provided that students who failed to complete satisfactory military training, or failed to satisfy the academic requirements of their university or college either during the session or at the final examinations would be "called out forthwith"; and that university authorities should report the names of such students to District Officer Commanding and the appropriate Divisional Registrar of National War Services.

This ruling has been variously interpreted at the different Canadian universities. At Toronto it has been deemed advisable to comply merely with the letter of the Order, by forwarding to the authoritics named lists of students whose instructors considered the standard of their work in mid-term tests to be unsatisfactory. But at some of the other universities steps were taken to expel unsatisfactory students, instead of waiting for them to receive their call-up at government discretion and then withdraw from the university. Some universities also included women and medically-unfit men in their proscription lists.

More than 1,000

Across Canada names of more than 1,000 university students have already been forwarded to government authorities in this connection, of which approximately half were asked to leave their courses immediately. Toronto's total to date is approximately 156.

Another important government ruling has been the Order-in-Council specifically concerned with the status of science students. Announced at the end of last year, the new regulations required all students enrolled in technical courses to accept employment in essential war-work as directed by the federal Department of Labour, unless they volunteer and are accepted for active service as technical personnel.

Another special group of students which have undergone change of status since the outbreak of war are those enrolled in Medicine and Dentistry. In both Faculties nearly all the men of the senor years—and some women in Medicine—have enlisted in the Active Army prior to graduation, received regular army pay, and been ear-marked for posts with the Royal Canadian Army Medical Corps or the Canadian Dental Corps upon graduation. Permission so to enlist was granted last year, partially as the result of shortages of doctors and dentists in the armed forces and also of the financial hardship created for students through the government-requested acceleration of their courses.

Individual Decision

Thus, with the fourth academic session of the war drawing to a close, we see something of the complete picture. There are outside and personal pressures upon each man who is here; he is prone at times to question the validity of his choice in an era when battle for his ideals is being carried on around the world. But the goverment—and in most cases each university—has left the onus of the decision to him.

Making two major stipulations—that he complete satisfactory military training in one of the three training arms established on Canadian campuses, and that he demonstrate his academic right to the privilege of deferment—the government has so far allowed university men who are currently undergoing education in arts, sciences and the social studies to remain at university to continue their courses.

Unlike the years of 1914-18, the present era is one in which able-bodied men in large numbers still attend Canadian universities. Although many have interrupted or discontinued their education to serve in the fighting forces, many have elected to remain here; and the very fact of this individual decision in each case is indicative that the Canadian male student is more purposeful today than ever be was in the days of peace.

War Brings Illustrious Visitors To University of Toronto Campus

One of the few beneficial by-products which the war has brought to the University is the long and distinguished list of visitors whom it has brought to the campus.

Many of them have stayed to become valuable additions to the University as staff members or students. Others have come on a less permanent basis, to address the student body, to receive honorary degrees and to meet the staff and students of a university as yet remote from the conflict many of them had left only a short time before.

A University which had not forgotten the visit of the King and Queen the summer before the outbreak of the war has again received royal visitors. Crown Prince Olav of Norway came in the spring of 1941, while in the city to inspect the Little Norway air taining centre.

Archduke Felix von Hapsburg, member of the long-deposed Austrian royal house, came to the campus in the fall of 1939 and returned later in the year with his brother, Archduke Otto, pretender to the throne of Austria and at present the leader of a Free Austrian legion of the United States Army. Archduke Otto addressed a crowded meeting of students in Hart House.

The war came close to the campus when Hon. Norman Rogers, Minister of National Defence, who had addressed a meeting of the Liberal Club in the Great Hall two months before, was killed in an aeroplane crash near Toronto while travelling on war business.

Unquestionably the most inspiring European speaker of the was thus far has been Dr. Jan Masaryk, foreign minister of the Czechoslovak government in London, who made two visits to the eampus during 1941-2 and laid down a practical political wartime philosophy.

"When the bugle sounds for war you do not discuss peace aims," he declared, condemning those who sought to praise or condemn the political beliefs of one or another of the United Nations while the war was still to be won.

Dr. Hu Shih, Chinese ambassador to the United States, received the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws in the winter of 1941-2, shortly after the establishment of a Chair of Chinese Studies at the University.

Prominent American political figures visited the campus. Senator Claude Pepper of Florida, prominent interventionist before Pearl Harbor, delivered a significant series of Marfleet Lectures in 1942 and Under Secretary of State Sumner Welles gave a preliminary survey of post-war problems in his address at a special concovation in March, 1943.

At the same convocation Field Marshal Sir John D. Dill, former Chief of the British General Staff and currently the head of the British Military Mission in the United States, was also honoured.

Great Hall, Tuck Shop Busy As Students And Airmen Crowd Tables And Counters

Staff, Food Shortages, Greater Numbers of Customers, Drive Hall to Limit to Feed Hungry Men

Two Separate Businesses Keep Tuck Shop Attendants Busy When Supplies of Comestibles Available

507,000 MEALS A YEAR

Four war years have seen the number of meals served in Hart House rise from 181,000 to nearly 507,000 annually, most of them in the Great Hall.

And the difficulties of coping with such a vast increase — seven days a week, three meals a day all year round —have been aggravated by the growing current shortages of staff and supplies of food.

First casualties were the men working in the serving room who nearly all dropped out and were replaced by women in the 1940-41 season. Now there are very few men left on the staff at all, only some busboys and the chefs downstairs. Increased turnover and a rise in the average age of those in the House's employ are also apparent, great amounts of the administration's time being taken up with interviewing replacements, and considering methods of easing of the hours of work in order to keep the staff in shape.

Food supplies are scarce. When acute shortages have been in prospect, appeals to the Director of Supply at Ottawa have enabled the meals for the Air Force to be made up from food reserved for armed force camps, but this is not their regular practice. The upshot of all this is a gradual simplification of menus for all concerned.

The big jump came when the Air Force arrived on May 23, 1941. They have been here ever since, and they have been supplemented as food consumers by the summer courses for dental mechanics, and the naval ratings' course conducted at the University in 1941-42.

CHEWING GUM, PIES SHORT

The Hart House Tuck Shop has grown busier than ever through four years of war; that is, whenever they haven't exhausted their stocks temporarily.

Two separate businesses are operated over the same counter at different times —the regular tuck shop, and a dry canteen for the Air Force men now stationed at the University.

Shortages have hit the tuck shop most acutely in the present season, 1942-43. Latest additions to the food casualty list are chewing gum and pies, the latter because of the difficulty of obtaining fruit fillings. Only 60 per cent of last year's quota of chocolate bars are available, and 70 per cent of the soft drinks. Items which used to come regularly in standard brands now come in all sorts of varieties, whatever is obtainable.

Despite shortages of food and staff, attendants say that students accept the situation good-humouredly and are more apt to wisecrack than to complain. At lunch time hordes descend upon these attendants, and the seating capacity of the tuck shop has to be supplemented by benches in the basement hall, and more seating accommodation in the hall up outside the Great Hall.

Varsity Trains Active Personnel Of Dominion's Three Fighting Services

During the past four years, the University has made one of its most important contributions to the war effort in the training and housing of active service personnel.

First men in uniform to take courses on this campus were two naval groups — officers and ratings — which were trained in physics during 1940.

Airmen engaged in the study of radio technique moved into the University Men's Residence and Burwash Hall in 1941, and eight squadrons—numbering about 1,700 men—were graduated.

Training to airmen in matriculation subjects prior to their acceptance as air crew was started two years ago by Dr. W. J. Dunlop, head of the Extension Department. This course has now been taken over by Royal Canadian Air Force instructors, althought University teaching facilities and residences are still employed.

One of the major war-courses has been the No. 1 Army Course for 17 and 18-year-olds, conducted under the supervision of Dr. E. F. Burton, head of the Department of Physics.

This course which embodies training in physics and mathematics will likely be reproduced at most other Canadian

Health Services Are Reorganized To Complete New War-Time Program

The health of the university student, like the health of every soldier and civilian in Canada, has assumed a new importance under wartime conditions. The University has become a physical as well as mental arsenal of manpower, and authorities have been doubly concerned with the physical well-being of the student body.

To this end, the University Health Service has been completely reorganized since the outbreak of the war. The cramped corridor in Hart House which housed the men's service is now merely an emergency ward, with new quarters being established in an entire floor of a St. George Street building.

Infirmaries for men and women living away from home, allowing them to convalesce comfortably from minor illnesses, were established last fall.

Medical examinations for students were greatly expanded under the new organization, annual check-ups being provided for all male students. The University Health Service was also able to take over C.O.T.C. examinations in 1941-2, preventing the recurrence of long lineups of students leading to the Hart House Art Gallery where overworked army doctors strove to examine the entire personnel of the corps in a hopelessly short time.

Meanwhile compulsory military training and physical training had their effect on the health of the students, Lt.-Col. R. W. I. Urquhart, Director of the University Health Service, said. Incidence of illness among the students was definitely lower than among the outside population and he suggested that physical and military training was the cause.

Dr. Urquhart also revealed that 70.6 per cent of students examined for military training had been in Category A or B and were thus fit for general service. This year's results show 78 per cent in this class. Percentage of physically unfit students was 10 or 11 per cent in both years.

Voluntary X-rays for tuberculosis have been offered to university students for the past two years and Dr. Urquhart predicted that first and final year students would receive the X-ray as part of their annual examination after the war. He also said that reorganized Health Service, giving free medical examinations to all students, would be continued.

Credit for the reorganization belongs to Major C. D. Gossage, who was loaned to the University by the Canadian Army for six weeks, succeeding Dr. G. D. Porter, who had retired as Health Service director the preceding spring.

Major Gossage stayed for six weeks, long enough to move the men's quarters to their new home and organize the first medical examination for all students — previously freshmen only had been examined. Col. Urquhart took over Major Gossage's post on his return to England.

Director of the women's Health Service, which was amalgamated with the men's this fall, is Dr. J. A. McGeachy, who took over when Dr. Jean F. Davey, former medical adviser for women, was granted leave of absence to go on active service with the R.C.A.F. Women's Division.

Shortages Cut Into Campus Life But Fail To Do Serious Damage Here

Althought never reaching a stage where life became acutely unbearable, the shortages which have cropped up on the campus during the last year have resulted in a good deal of tightening up and general reorganization.

The beginning of the school term saw many out-of-town students combing the districts neighbouring on the University searching for rooms. The University Men's Residence and part of Burwash Hall being occupied by the R.C.A.F. meant that the overflow had to find accommodation through the S.A.C. service, which investigates the rooming houses bordering the campus. Students here, however, had nothing like the problem facing the men of Queen's where no accommodation whatsoever was available. Bunks were set up in the gym, and were used by homeless students for 50 cents a night.

Women's residences are still groaning under the help shortage. Co-operation is the watchword, and desk, door, telephone and waitress duties have been taken over by the residents. Extra furniture has been placed in rooms formerly designed to accommodate one, and have been transformed into doubles.

The labour shortage has not seriously affected the underground operation of building facilities, although last fall when St. Mike's finally got the fireman they hade been anxiously searching for, he was replucked by Selective Service for more essential war work.

Speculations on the horsemeat possibility have afforded opportunities for reshuffling of prejudices and taboos. Professor J. W. G. McEwan of the University of Saskatchewan offered the suggestion that the use of horsemeat would largely alleviate the meat shortage and would release cattle for export. No evidences of recourse to this eventuality have appeared at Geart Hall, were dieticians continue to plan menus in accordance with the meagre doles available.

A text-book rationing rumour was scotched early last fall with a statement from the University Press that sufficient books did come through if you waited long enough.

universities next term.

The Canadian Women's Army Corps has taken over Trinity House, once a men's residence. Girls of the Women's Royal Canadian Naval Service are ensconced in the old Flavelle residence, ear-marked for a women's "Hart House" after the war.

Courses have been given in fire-fighting, principles of glider-flight, and other war-angled subjects. Seventy-six women are being trained by Occupational and Physiotherapy instructors to assist in British hospitals.

Moreover this department is ready to claim that Varsity sport has suffered least of all the Canadian universities by the war and when the time comes for the resumption of intercollegiate activity the Blue and White will command a very favourable position.

Ban On Inter-Varsity Sport Forgotten As Gladiators Vie In Reed Trophy Race

More Teams, Individuals Take Part in Intramural Athletics as C.I.A.U. Ruling Stands for Duration

51.8 PER CENT PARTICIPATE

The news of the C.I.A.U. ban on intercollegiate sport in the fall of 1940 was received with a twinge of regret but there was no general outcry against the decesion by the student body at large and as successive freshman classes arrived at Varsity the demise of intercollegiate sport was mourned only by copy-starved reporters and those sports-minded students who knew the good old days.

But sport was not dead at Varsity . . . not by a long shot. With the gap left in sports by the suspension of intercollegiate competition it was necessary to look to the intramural system of athletics to provide necessary competition and recreation for the student body.

The intramural program proved its worth and confirmed the opinion of many that it was one of the finest on the continent. In 1940-41 35 more teams were entered than in the previous years and 1,823 individual students, forming 51.8 per cent of the eligible student body, participated in interfaculty sport. Competition was much keener and intramural sports was in general on a much higher level because of the considerable number of athletes who had been released from intercollegiate sport and whose energies were now diverted into intramural channels.

In 1941-2 an even greater interest was show in interfaculty competition, Team entries rocketed from 181 in 1940-41 to 226 for an increase of 45 and the participation list grew from 2,338 to 2,770. In tournament sports 42 more entries were recorded.

The figures for the year just ending have not yet been compiled but it is fairly evident that a maximum both of teams and individual participation has been reached. Only one team has been added to this year's schedule and the number of individual participants has fallen off a little.

Student Shortage Forces Closing Of Aerial Course

The two-year diploma course in Aerial Navigation has been discontinued for the duration of the war because of a lack of sufficient enrolment to warrant its continuation. This paradox in a war in which air power is playing a more important part than ever was recently explained to The Varsity by Dr. W. J. Dunlop, director of the University Extension.

From the opening of the war graduates and students in the course have been in demand as instructors at Service Flying Training Schools all across Canada and last summer it was decided that the course would have to close for the duration because of a lack of students, since most air-minded young men had gone directly into the R.C.A.F.

The course was founded in 1938 on the suggestion of Wing-Commander T. R. Louden then Professor of Applied Mechanics here. The purpose of the course was to cupply trained personnel for Canada's rapidly growing commercial airways. Entrance requirements were the same as those for engineering and coursese of instruction were offered to lead to qualifying examinations for commercial and transport pilots, navigators, despatchers, meteorologists, and radio operators.

Students Contribute Generously To War Charities

Dimes' March, Book Harvest Highlight Charity Drives As Students Give To I.S.S.

Sale of Warsages, War Stamps, Ribbons, Blood Donations, Typical Co-Ed Contest Mark Various Campus Campaigns

10,126 DIMES IN ONE DAY

In colorful student rallies, in quiet committee meetings, by selling favours at social events and in many other ways, students have made their contributions to war charities in increasing amounts since the start of the war.

Since the first year of the war interest in student war charities has steadily grown to reach its climax in last year's "March of Dimes" and this year's "War Services Day."

Already in the fall of 1939 the Student Christian Movement and the Jewish Student Socicty were co-operating to support a refugee student at the University of Toronto. At the end of October this combined organization under the name of Student Refugee Relief Committee sponsored a Refugee Campaign. The work which began then continued throughout the year helped by benefits and teas.

In January, 1940, a committee was organized on the campus to arrange the first International Students' Service Campaign, asking for money to help students in Europe and China. Appeals were made to separate clubs, the staff, fraternities and students in general. Just before the opening of the drive pamphlets were issued outlining the work of the I.S.S. in countries devastated by the war. The drive was held on March 5 when contributions were taken at tables throughout the University buildings in all colleges and faculties. The first day grossed $416 and the final total reached was $857.

Blood Appeal

It was in the year of '39-'40 also that the first appeal for blood donors was made, when Arts students were requested to contribute blood for experimental purposes; following this, arrangements were made for 100 students a week to donate blood for serum.

The second year of war charities began with the burning of $250 worth of War Savings Stamps at the All-University Fall Dance in Octobcr. A Students' War Service to furnish soldiers' comforts was initiated the next month and arrangements were made for co-operation with the University Women's War Services Committee to provide essentials for clothing and housing war refugees. Later in the same month the S.C.M. sponsored an Apple Day at Victoria College in aid of refugee students on the campus. Plans for the I.S.S. campaign were announced in December and the first appeal was made for study material for Freneh, British and Polish prisoners in German prison camps.

The I.S.S. Drive was publicized widely by posters, pamphlets and personal solicitations. The Red Cross, whose eo-operation with the I.S.S. was emphasized, lent the collection boxes; and 70 co-eds, some in costume, solicited money from the students with one dollar apieces as the objecetive. The proceeds for the day totalled $400 and approximately $200 came in later from student organizations. The committee continued to collect from dances and other entertainments throughout the ycar.

A drive for students' matriculation books was held on the same day. These the I.S.S. sent to friendly aliens interned in Canada at the time.

Stamp Drive

During February the S.A.C. sponsored a stamp drive which totalled $840 in pledges before the month was over. The drive was encouraged by a Stampometer which appcared daily in The Varsity, recording progress of the drive.

In the winter of 1941 arrangements were made at clinics for male blood donors but women donors were still excluded because of limited space.

The third year of the war began with a more extensive appeal for blood donors but the restrictions against women were still retained and the hundreds of students who signed the blood donors who signed the blood donors' lists received no calls.

In November a resolution was passed by the Students' Administrative Council to aid foreign students striving to continue their studies under war conditions, by meaans of the Varsity War Fund.

Then, on Dec. 3, 1941, came the most colorful student charity drive of all—the March of Dimes. With proceeds voted to the I.S.S. by the Students' Administrative Council, the whirlwind one-day campaign covered a whitewashed line behind the Observatory with 1,126 dimes, passing the proposed $1,000 goal.

Festivities began at 10 a.m. when President Cody was met at the steps of Simcoe Hall by two Scottish pipers and escorted across the campus to the whitewashed line where his contribution of 350 dimes started the fund.

Co-Eds and Barkers

The Faculty of Medicine arrived to present their contribution en masse with banners and posters. At noon the Engineers appeared with dimes, cannon and auctioneers. Impromptu fights between these two faculties added interest throughout the day. The C.O.T.C. Band played, and a street dance was held to the music supplied through an amplifying system in front of Hart House. S.P.S. barkers haranged the erowd while beautiful co-eds supplied plenty of dimes in change. Guards watched the silver line in shifts. Mass contributions were made by campus organizations and Jan Masaryk, Minister of Foreign Affairs for the Czechoslovakian Government in London added his contribution. The Varsity supplied 200 dimes, scaled with Scotch tape and bearing such slogans as "The Champus Cat Goes Without Milk," "Flash—Varsity Staff Leaves Pool Room for Three Weeks," and "We're Doing this for Other Hungry Students."

In the evening the Victory Club, founded in October, sponsored an Undergraduate Rally at which Dr. Leopold Infeld, Polish author-scientist, outlined the work of the I.S.S.

A forerunner of this year's Book Harvest was John Coleman's appeal for text books for the I.S.S., in March, 1942.

This year has seen a great increase of interest in the work of blood donors, and women have now been allowed to volunteer.

The I.S.S. began its work by selling tags at the "All-Varsity" dance on October, and the big War Services Drive was planned in November when the I.S.S. and War Services Committee collaborated under the S.A.C.. A request for books for the Armed Services went out and arrangements were made to collect them at residences, in the various faculties and at fraternities.

Plans culminated in the War Servicees Day on Dec. 9. Once again the campus put on gala dress. Co-eds sold Varsity ribbons for 25 cents and faculty ribbons for any further contribution. Again President Cody marched from Simcoe Hall to Hart House where he received Varsity ribbons and the colours for all the fuculties in return for his $25 donation.

The capacity crowd in Hart House Theatre at noon saw the "most typical eo-ed" chosen, and presented with a bunch of carrots, as well as a command performance of the "Harvest Ballet" taken from the Vic Bob. A street dance was held outside Hart House, Varsity ribbons constituting admission. A huge silo, built by the Engineers, was placed on a truck in front of Hart House and filled with the books harvested from the various faculties. Individual campus organizations also made donations to the fund until the final total for the War Services Day reached $1,235.

Starting Them Rolling

activities were started, chief among them being the W.S.T.D. The University Women's Service Training Detachment was established on the campus to prepare students for future enrolment in the Women's Voluntary Service Corps and for other forms of national service in which they might wish to participate. "Toronto University is the pioneer in a scheme of University Women's training course for war service," stated Alderman Adelaide M. Plumptre who later became the National Commandant of the Canadian Red Cross Corps.

The Detachment was established as an activity of the Women's Athletic Association, and was commanded by Miss A.E.M. Parkes as Senior Lieutenant.

It was decided that 200 girls should be trained in the basic work during the first year in order to form the nucleus for next year's Detachment. The course ran for six or seven weeks in the Fall term, and 10 weeks in the Spring term.

The Corps members provided their own uniforms which were originally intended to consist of belted grey coats worn over wool dresses. However the actual uniforms were those familiar to us all—the grey alpine cloth dress and forage cap with a royal blue tie, and cap flash, and Red Cross insignia. Applicants had to pass a medical examination and be between the ages of 18 and 45.

The first year of preliminary training consisted of instruction in Red Cross organization and objeetives, office duties and administration, military correspondence, military law and K.R. and O., military deportment, military drill and physical training, as well as First Aid and A.R.P..

Nov. 4 the first W.S.T.D. Orders appeared on the back page of The Varsity. On Jan. 20, the first Inspection was held: Red Cross cap badges were presented by Mrs. Arthur Ellis, Commandant of the Administration Section of the Red Cross Corps who took the salute with Dr. Cody. Mrs. Ellis encouraged the girls to wear their badges "proudly, wear tbem with dignity, and wear them with honour." After complimenting the girls on the progress they had made, Dr. Cody stated that "there will be a need for trained women units as the war progresses."

New Branch

A new branch in Women's War Work headed by Harold Takefman and Bill Sedgwick was organized to obtain materials for the Red Cross workroom by canvassing the larger firms throughout the city. They also planned to furnish comforts for soldiers, especially University graduates. However, the Committees was refused sanction by the committee in December.

At the meeting of the War Service Committee in December, it was reported that 9,952 articles of clothing had been produced to date that year, 240 women were enrolled in Sewing, and 250 in Knitting. The average attendance at the workroom was 680 per month.

The Committee also reported that over 150 children from the faculties of Cambridge, Manchester and Birmingham Universities had been placed by the group since evacuation started. The work of the Womens' War Service Committee had been carried on in the summer with those graduates, students, faculty and faculty wives who were present in the city.

As well as the war work done on the campus that year, two Occupational Therapy graduates were sent to England, and three to Scotland. Jean MacKenzie, a graduate of the W.S.T.D., had been aetive in A.R.P. work on the west coast in the United States.

In the autumn of 1941, Miss Parkes had been promoted to Commandant of the University Detachment. New courscs were organized under four Sections corresponding to those in the Red Cross Corps, for those who had already taken the course in basic training the year before.

Those entering the Office Administration Section were trained in switchboard operation, and inspected the Bell Telephone companies.

Others joined either the Motor Mechanics' course in the Transportation Section or the Nursing courses in the Nursing Section.

Miss Parkes Promoted

One hundred and twelve members were enrolled in October, and Commandant Parkes was promoted to beeome the representative of the University Training Detachments in the National Red Cross Committee.

The annual Inspection was held on Dec. 8, at which cap badges were presented to the 75 new members by Mrs. H. P. Plumptre, National Commandant of the Corps.

Culmination of the year's work came in the Demonstration presented in Hart House March 20. An exhibition of precision drill, stretcher drill and company drill was given in the gym. Following this, a mock air raid was staged during which the A.R.P. students were able to participate, and the Nursing Auxiliary set up first aid posts to care for the casualties, and the Food Administration section set up an emergency kitchen; eommunications were established by the Transport and Office Administration Sections.

At the meeting of the War Service Committee in November, it was reported that 147 children had been placed in Canadian homes, that all of these had had summer vacations and all were covered with health insurance.

One thousand women had enrolled in the Red Cross workroom. Seventy-nine per cent of the garments produced had gone to war victims, 287 pairs of socks had been given to the C.O.T.C. as well as mitts and sweaters. Sixty-five undegraduates had been busy quilting in one-hour periods.

Although the question of Compulsory Women's War Work had been discussed at various times since the autumn of 1939, it was not until this year that the decisive step was taken, and 60 hours of training for National War Service was required of all women undergraduates exeept those in the first year and those in professional courses. Instruction for the most part has taken place from 4 to 6 p.m. on Tuesdays and Thursdays. A committee comprising the Registrar of the University and the Deans of Women of the various Colleges was formed to supervise the organization and deal with exemptions.

To make up the 60 hours, students were given eight courses from which they might choose. These consisted of joining the Canadian Red Cross Corps, University of Toronto Detachment (formerly called the W.S.T.D.), training as hospital nursing aids, or taking various combinations of the courses in Civic Day Nurseries, Nutrition, Recreational Leadership, Red Cross Sewing, A.R.P., Home Nursing, First Aid, and Community Needs and Resources.

Less Emphasis on Drill

The C.R.C.C., with an enrolment of 200, continued in much the same manner with less emphasis on drill. Those in the Corps for the third year took more advanced work in hospitals and map reading with the Toronto Red Cross Corps.

During the summer, Miss Parkes received a double promotion, succeeding Mrs. Plumptre as Chairman of the National Corps Committee, and becoming a member of the National Red Cross Executive Conneil. In the autumn, she became National Commandant of the C.R.C.C. University Detachments.

For the past two years, the C.R.C.C. has paraded on Nov. 11 along with the men in the C.O.T.C. They have also taken an active part in the air raids this year, aeting as wardens.

Informality Is War Trend At Campus Social Functions

Loss Of Big-Time Sport Forgotten By Students As Athletic Nights Fill Gap

Hart House Packed Every Saturday Night as Top-Flight University Athletes Go into Action

INFORMAL ENTERTAINMENT

With the loss to undergraduate life of the fun and frolic of out-of-town rugby and hockey games, track and swimming meets, the Saturday evening contests in Hart House with visiting teams, and all the other colourful paraphernalia of intercollegiate sport, a successor, in the form of University Nights, came to fill the gap left vacant in the life of undergraduates. Designed to provide fun in the rah-rah spirit always connected with college sports, and to utilize the full facilities of the Athletic Wing of Hart House, the Athletic Night has now become one of the most popular institutions on the campus.

The plan originated with Warren Stevens, and drew the following comment from Dave MacIntosh in the "Speaking of Sport" column in The Varsity on Jan. 16, 1941:

"Saturday night on this campus is as dreary a place as one would find this side of Aklavik. What to do? Where to go? Warren Stevens has given us the answer—University Nights.

Amusements Are Simple

"These Varsity Nights are in part an effort to replace the athletic nights of the past two years. But they are far more than that. They promise to offer much more from the individual standpoint. The idea is to saunter over to the Athletic Wing of a Saturday eve and there to enjoy yourself thoroughly. This year it will be simply a matter of everybody taking part and joining in the fun and frolic.

"There are to be five and possibly six University Nights. Regular highlight intramural games will be featured as well as one meet on each occasion. . . .

"But this is not the main reason for which we believe you studes will turn out en masse for these events. Any amount of games will be set up in the various rooms: cards, table-tennis, shuffle-board, darts, to name a few. There will be movies, mostly of the instructional type, such as How to Be Made a Man in Seven Days. There will be refreshments. There will be dancing.

"This will serve to fill an extreme need on this campus which lacks almost altogether anything approaching an all-University informal get-together."

The first season of University Nights fulfilled this prophecy. The series had a good opening on Jan. 25, 1941, when the sports staff of The Varsity played host to a crowd of about 800 persons. Everything in sport from checkers to basketball and from dominoes to water polo was promised on the first Night and appeared on the program. This first Athletic Night started off with some feeling of stiffness and formality, but this soon wore off and what has since become the traditional genial spirit of the Athletic Nights was soon in full swing. The informality and easy camaraderie of the guests proved to the Athletic Directorate and to the hosts that their brainchild, the University Night, was a complete success.

Attendance Soars

The succeeding Athletic Nights of the first season were marked by the efforts the faculties acting as hosts made to out-do one another in entertaining their guests in new and novel ways. The attendance figures rose with each succeeding week, until by the end of the season the problem of how to accommodate the crowds of undergraduates became a serious one.

University College was host for the second University Night of 1941, with over one thousand persons attending. Meds, hosts for the third, introduced the feature of choosing the "Healthiest Couple" which they repeated in the two following seasons. The fourth Night was under the banner of St. Mike's, who out-did their predecessors by supplying their own swing band for dancing, instead of records. On this Night the attendance rose to 1,100, and on the succeeding Night, when Victoria was in charge, it rose again. On the last Night of the season School and the girls of Occupational Therapy were co-hosts, and the attendance reached 1,200, proving the success of the evenings.

So popular had this spring-term feature become with the undergraduates that first Athletic Night of the 1941-42 season on Jan. 24, 1942 drew 1,501 participants, with about 150 turned away to avoid overcrowding. Turing back to the files of The Varsity we find that:

"Joe College and Betty Co-ed had fun Saturday night; they were the guests of the merry Meds at the first Athletic Night of the season.

"They forgot all about the war, exams and other troubles as they strolled up and down the muscle midway, rubbing shoulders with all the Joe Colleges and Betty Co-eds from all the other colleges in the University, as they took in as much of the three-ring circus as they cared to or could.

"They oh'ed and ah'ed with amazement as Charlie Zwygard and his graceful crew of gymnasts spun skilfully around the high horizontal bar.

Fun and Games

"There was an innocent-looking group of hobby horses for them to get bucked off. There was ping-pong and Chinese checkers and 'hockey' in the games rooms.

"At 10 o'clock the sound of dance music lured them to the Big Gym, with the hoe-down playing upstairs to accommodate those of rural tastes."

The second season of University Athletic Nights followed a similar course to that set by its predecessor. Attendance records topped those of the first season; and larger numbers of undergraduates and their friends had to be turned away.

The Athletic Nights' third season, in January and February of this year, began with an innovation—graduates of the University and the parents of undergraduates were invited to attend the Saturday night festivities. This soon had to be followed by a second ruling—that no one would be allowed into the Athletic Wing after 9:30. Average attendance for the third series of Nights stayed around 1,300 in spite of this rule, and, even though the corridors and rooms were crowded, everyone enjoyed himself and herself oven more than in the preceeding two seasons.

The University Athletic Nights have become a campus institution.

Debates Continue In Faculty Clubs

solved that women are more dishonest than men," and "Is the Varsity Worthwhile?" as late as the spring term of 1941.

During the past two years, debates have become centered around topics of current interest, on strikes in wartime, the Beveridge report, and Canada's position in a Pan-American Union.

There has been sporadic intercollegiate debating since the start of the war. Victors from McGill, Queen's, Laval and other universities have appeared in college debating clubs and local debaters have crossed verbal swords with the local talent at McGill, McMaster and other points.

Only organized effort was the survival for a year or two of women's intercollegiate debating, but it later died out as students' spare time and transportation facilities decreased.

A custom which was continued until this year was the sending of two U. of T. debaters on a tour of American colleges during the fall term. Sponsored and financed by the S.A.C. upon invitation from an American debating union, the last men to make the trip debated the question of U.S. participation in the war two months before Pearl Harbor.

Intercollegiate Cheers Fade For War's Duration

"There will be no official Toronto cheering section at Montreal tomorrow when Warren Stevens' battle-scarred gridiron trusties open their 1939 intercollegiate schedule against McGill's championship twelve." From the Friday, Oct. 6, 1939, issue of The Varsity came one of the first forewarnings of restrictions on inter-campus activities.

Two weeks later, the war was forgotten and a half-holiday declared for the Intercollegiate Track Meet. A thousand students came to Toronto from London to cheer on the purple and white gravel-pushers. Again on Monday, Oct. 30, it looked as though the war was taking a back seat, for Alan Harvey, writing a "Speaking of Sport," said, "They broke our goal posts, painted our walls and when we wanted to fight, someone said 'Shush, they're visitors and you must be polite'."

For a while it did look as though war god Mars found it impossible to check the old "College Spirit"; but on Nov. 8, 1939, he struck a blow against university frivolity, for we read in "Speaking of Sport" that students were screaming for women cheer-leaders. University authorities shook their heads and as students cheered without the stimulus of leaping, jumping Rah-Rah girls, they realized that War had come to the campus. Soon followed the sad announcement that intercollegiate competition was a thing of the past.

Hockey and basketball kept their heads up a little longer than rugby. Early in January, the Varsity hoopsters were touring the U.S.A. Also in January, plans were being made for a series of exhibition hockey games down in Mexico; but they were dropped as a wartime conservation measure.

Stadium Lies Fallow

In the fall of 1940, Varsity stadium was one of the loneliest plots in town. Gone were the prancing, high-stepping drum majorettes from Western. Gone were the double-jointed tumbling cheerleaders. Gone were the beribboned team mascots—a dog or a goat. Gone was the blue-capped military band from Varsity that marched into a monster V formation before the game and played thumping marches at half time.

Probably hardest hit of all were the spectators themselves. In 1940 they roamed the campus disconsolately and, with tears coursing down their cheeks, said, "Do you remember that week-end in London when Western almost won the championship?" Sadly they recalled the train ride down with hundreds of gay, boisterous students shouting and singing their school songs and other songs too. They remembered the all-night hilarity in the foreign town as restaurants and hotels were taken over by the Varsity students. They remembered the keyed-up excitement before the game and how they seemed to cheer louder and longer when away from home. They remembered the apparent enjoyment of nine students sleeping in a room meant for two at the most.

Toronto, Kingston, London or Montreal, it didn't make any difference to University students. They were away from home and they had to support their school team as loudly and long as possible. Only the hotel-keepers seemed to breathe a sigh of relief when intercollegiate rugby stopped. At the Royal York, a hall porter said, "Now we don't have to take down our full-length mirrors and our paintings when there's a rugby game. And those Queen's boys used to beat each other almost to death with the leather bench cushions beside the elevators." In London, the house detectives don't have to worry anymore about finding the student who exuberantly broke several chairs.

St. Mike's Uphold Tradition

From the Nov. 30, 1940 issue of The Varsity comes the greatest irony after the passing of Intercollegiate Sport. Men from St. Michael's College refused to believe that the old traditions had to die and we read that "The St. Michael's College Students' Council has offered to make good the loss of two perfectly good goal posts that are missing, strayed or stolen from the general vicinity of the stadium after the final Mulock Cup game Tuesday."

Iintercollegiate Sport and the resultant inter-city social activities were stopped and in their places came a "work to win" spirit as students settled down with wartime seriousness to their academic pursuits.

There are very few students an the campus who were here to partake in intercollegiate social activities. T. A. Reed, Secretary of the Athletic Association, has watched with interest the fortunes of intercollegiate sport for many years and in an iterview three months ago forecast a bigger and better intercollegiate sporting program. As after the last war, he said, the stadium will probably be expanded to take care of the crowds who will come to see the superior brand of rugby as played by University men.

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

and the ideals of our nation will wither; we must throw life itself into the scale if we are not to be outweighed by those who make this sacrifice.

We have heard the challenge that comes from living in a great, world-shaking time; and we pray that we may have the greatness of soul which alone can meet it. We are compelled to have a world-outlook, to perceive that the life of peoples is inter-related, that no nation can possibly live to itself. It is much, also, to have understood how precious are those great principles without which worthy life cannot be lived by the individual or by the nation; and this understanding has come from the keen realization that they are by our great enemies attacked and repudiated. Our country's call, the demands of the great Cause helps us to know that on each one of us rests the fate of the future and maintenance of a decent civilization. All these lessons we could have learned more slowly, less thoroughly, in ordinary times. They are learned speedily in the stern, but great, school of struggle for survival and renewal.

As, then, you balance the losses and the gains of a college life during a grim world war, who shall decide that the losses overweigh the gains? No man can choose the precise form of his trial, but he can meet it with courage and confidence when it comes. That will be his victory. It will be thrilling in the days to come to be able to say, in Sir Owen Seaman's lines:

"I saw the powers of darkness put to flight!
I saw the morning break."

The world into which you go will not be an easy world. But for men and women alike there will be work to do, work worth while and work which you can do. Have faith that God is working in His world, that in our human struggle there is an eternal meaning, that the soul of man is of infinite worth, and that beyond the changes and chances of this troubled earth there is ampler life—then you can nobly live, you can helpfully live together, you can live with God.

H. J. Cody

Students Adapt Themselves To War's Exigencies At Simpler Campus Dances

Many Regularly - Scheduled Events Go Informal as Expense Curtailed; C. O. T. C. Ball Abandoned

CORSAGES CASUALTY

Since the outbreak of war, students of this, as of other campi, have shown an increasing readiness to adapt their ways of life to the exigencies of a world at war, especially by a curtailment of their formal social functions. President Cody has been the guiding spirit in this respect, requesting the students on numerous occasions to "keep their social and recreational activities as simple, as seemly, as sensible, and as inexpensive as possible."

As a result, a number of traditionally formal events have become strictly informal; some have been held on campus instead of down-town; and in many cases have even contributed to the war effort by selling "warsages" or other ornaments to replace milady's now outmoded corsage.

First major function to actually fall by the wayside was the time-honoured C.O.T.C. Ball, which this year was cancelled, the officials believing that the expense involved would not be in keeping with the times for a military organization.

While the first year of the war did not see the abandonment of formal dress at any of the major functions, there was an attempt to plan them on a less elobarate scale, the president of the Engineering Society, for instance, announcing that "economy would be the watchword" at the School At-home. The question of the desirability of corsages in wartime was becoming a favourite debate topic.

Blackout Dance

Trinity students were among the first to take advantage of the opportunity for novel forms of entertainment—featuring a "black-out waltz" at the Trinity Conversazione, and predicting that such a dance might "gain great popularity and develop into a regular feature."

Students were showing considerable enthusiasm for the All-University Fall Dance in Hart House. Inaugurated only the previous year, the dance, informal from the first, was designed so that those attending would be under as little expense as possible.

The second war year saw a more definite attempt at curtailment of unbecoming expense; the U.C. Ball of December 1940 boasted of being "the first of the big formal dances on the campus to observe this year's unofficial ban on corsages." Most of the other faculties followed suit in this respect and keen competition arose as various organizations sought novely substitutes. These included rosettes of college or faculty colours, pins, and single flowers which were sold at the door in aid of such war charities as the British War Victims Relief Fund, the International Students' Service, and the Canadian Red Cross. Ever original, the Medical students featured at their At-home, "skull and crossbone pins," the proceeds from which went to the I.S.S. So insistant was S.P.S. that the ban on corsages be observed, that a check-room for corsages was provided at the School At-home.

Victory Bonfire

The All-University dance that fall featured a ceremony at which President Cody set fire to $250 worth of war savings stamps during the course of the evening. A war savings stamp had been affixed to the stub of each ticket, which was torn off at the door.

The Trinity Conversat attempted to make its "black-out dance" more realistic by having it accompanied by the scream of sirens, the explosion of bombs, and the lighting of the hall by searchlights.

The events of 1941-42 in general followed the same lines as those of the previous year, informal or optional dress replacing white ties, tails and elaborate evening gowns. The Varsity was asked to specifically request that informal dress be worn at the Meds' At-home. Corsages were definitely banned in practically all cases.

The Dental Faculty took the step of donating the proceeds from their At-home to a fund for the purchase of a Mobile Dental Unit for the Canadian Dental Corps.

The current season has seen the introduction of even more war-time economies. At the beginning of the year a regulation was passed by which all Hart House functions were henceforth to end at 1:00 a.m. The U.C. Arts Ball and the Pharmacy Ball were among those to become informal. The St. Michael's, St. Joseph's and Loretta At-homes were combined into one dance held on the campus in Brennan Hall.

The chief war charity to benefit by the sale of "warsages" this year was the Canadian Aid to Russia Fund. In view of the tire and gasoline shortage, a "car pool" was inaugurated for the Vic At-home.

Few Publications Affected by War

directly because of the war. Ben Holdsworth, editor of the Undergraduate, pointed out that contributions had been harder and harder to get and it was felt that a year book would better fulfill the requirements of the college.

Torontonensis, like The Varsity, both publications of the Students' Administrative Council, has suffered from staff depletions, but like The Varsity, it has kept up its scheduled publication despite the difficulties.

Ban on Aliens Causes Controversy

punctuated by indecisive meetings of the Board of Governors, the way for the alien students was finally smoothed by the granting of permission by the Minister of National Defence enabling them to take military training. Simultaneously with this announcement, the Governors removed their ban on Dec. 12, just in time for The Varsity to run the biggest banner headline in its history for its Christmas issue.

Although all but nine of the students affected meanwhile had enrolled in other universities, the move was hailed as a triumph for the democratic principles of higher education.

Undergraduate Paper's Back Files Record Story Of Four Years Of University War Participation numbers. A member of The Varsity's news staff won himself fame, glory and a by-line by writing first-hand of his experiences in contributing to the blood-bank, in one of the newspaper's first constructive attempts at active propaganda for war-work.

The University of Toronto won the first—and to date last—Inter-Varsity Drama Festival, held at McMaster University, with a University Drama Committee production of Eugene O'Neill's "The Rope."

Banting's Death

The war's second year brought the single event which probably shocked the University more deeply than any other phase of the war—the death of Sir Frederick Banting, co-discoverer of insulin and head of the Banting Institute, in a plane crash off the coast of Newfoundland. .

Sir Frederick had been commissioned with rank of major and was engaged in aviation medical work since the outbreak of the war. At the time of his death he was en route to Britain "on a mission of high national and scientific importance."

Ten days later, Sir Frederick's funeral was held with full military honours at Convocation Hall and hundreds of the general public stood outside the crowded auditorium to pay tribute to Canada's greatest scietist. For hours prior to the ceremony, thousands of mourning citizens passed by the bier, which lay in state in the hall, guarded by members of the Canadian Officers' Training Corps.

To commemorate Sir Frederick's death, a series of lectures was instituted on the anniversary of his death the following year. At the first of these, Dean C. J. MacKenzie, acting president of the National Research Council, celebrated the life and accomplishments of Sir Frederick.

Earlier in the year the University had lost its first notable recent graduate in Sub-Lieut. G. H. K. (Pat) Strathy, who was killed in action in the Mediterranean aboard the cruiser Ajax. Strathy, a mathematician and former Publications Commissioner of the Students' Administrative Council, had graduated from Trinity College the year before.

At the start of the year, intercollegiate sport was discontinued, and the ban has not yet been lifted. Interfaculty Athletic Nights helped fill the gap.

In the first year of compulsory military training the University gave an impressive military display when 3,000 members of the C.O.T.C. and the Auxiliary Battalion paraded through the streets of downtown Toronto.

War-Consciousness

Social events became war-conscious for the first time when a War Savings Stamp was part of the price of admission to the annual All-University Fall Dance, and President Cody burned the stamps in an impressive ceremony which turned $250 over to the government.

The largest medical examination in the history of the University took place in Hart House when 2,000 men filed through the Art Gallery to be passed for military training by a special medical board.

History was made again in mid-January of 1941 when the Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering voted entirely of its own volition to end its Fourth Year course March 15 and its Third Year course April 1 in order to free technical students for work in Canadian war industries.

The University's women were given their opportunity to train for war with the formation of the Women's Service Training Detachment under the direction of Miss A. E. M. Parkes. Authorized by President Cody on Oct. 9, 1940, the new organization was a unit of the Women's Voluntary Service Corps of the Canadian Red Cross Society of Canada.

First active service unit to receive training and housing on the campus was a naval detachment which received training in physics under the direction of Prof. E. F. Burton, head of the department.

A distiguished addition to the University's staff whose coming was directly due to the war was Prof. G. G. Coulton, formerly of Oxford University and one of the world's greatest medieval historians. Dr. Coulton has since delighted students and others with his public lectures on Europe in the Middle Ages.

March of Dimes

In the third war-year, unquestionably the biggest event, both because of newsvalue and from the stand-point of mass student-partieipation, was the S.A.C.-conduested "Marcli of Dimes" during which—in one day—University of Toronto students laid 10,126 dimes on a whitewashed line to swell the coffers of International Student Service. Although total contributions of this campaign were exceeded this year by the combined I.S.S. Drive and Book-Harvest, it was last year's "March" that set the precedent for all future large-scale charity campaigns on this campus.

Another big feature was the academic acceleration in the Faculty of Medicine, outgrowth of which was government subsidization of Medical students and permission for senior Medical studcnts to enter the Royal Canadian Army Medical Corps while still at University.

One of the distinetively war-angled stores of the year was the appearance of The Varsity's unheralded "Big Black" Invasion Issue, which shouted "CANADA UNDER GERMAN RULE" at its startled readers, and portrayed conditions resulting from a bypothetical capture of the campus by Nazi storm-troopers. Designed to shock students and staff out of a certain attitude of still-present complaceney, it succeeded at least in part.

Under the direction of Dr. C. D. Gossage, the Men's Health Services moved to new quarters and took on added duties. The Air Force Wing of the C.O.T.C. was formed—fore-runner of the present University Air Training Detachment. Captain E. A. Macdonald, General Secretary-Treasurer of the S.A.C., and holder of half-a-dozen other important campus posts, was given leave of absence to go on active service; and his duties were taken over by Miss A. E. M. Parkes.

There were several illustrious visitors to the campus last year, most stimulating of whom, perhaps, was Jan Masaryk, Minister of Foreign Affairs of the Czechoslovakian Government in London. His noon-hour address to students Feb. 18 filled Hart House Theatre to overflowing.

Harvesters Go West

Most colorful student contribution to the war effort and biggest campus news story of the war's fourth year was the student harvest excursion to Saskatchewan in the fall of 1942. A total of 252 U. of T. students and hundreds of their colleagues from other eastern universities entrained for the west en masse, presenting a spectacle unequalled even in the days of intercollegiate sport.

College yells of three universities mingled in Toronto's Union Station as Queen's, Western and Toronto delegates embarked, and they were joined at Capreol by other groups including a substantial French-Canadian group from Laval University. The Laval group visited the Toronto campus on their return and were welcomed by members of the Students' Administrative Council and of The Varsity staff.

Even five months after the return of the harvesters it is impossible to give an accurate estimate of the success of the expedition. Early reports wired by CUP correspondents told of labour difficulties and bad weather conditions. Approximately half of the harvesters returned home early when heavy snow prevented further harvesting in their district and their reports conflicted. But final results showed that the majority of the students were satisfied with the excursion and that many were willing to repeat it if called upon.

Government officials were unanimous in confirming the success of the expedition and in their gratitude to the students taking part.

Status Changes

The status of students under National Selective Service regulations underwent some change. Early in the year an order-in-council was passed requiring that any student whose term work proved unsatisfactory or who failed in any examinations be reported to his local War Service Board. Approximately 1,000 Canadian students were reported and half of their number were required by their universities to leave at once and place themselves at the disposal of their board. Approximately 156 Toronto students were reported to their bord in January and February, but none of these were required to leave until called up.

Another government order "froze" science students, requiring those who do not enter the armed forces to place themselves at the disposal of the War-time Bureau of Technical Personnel on graduation.

Co-eds felt the war come closer when the university required them to take a course of war work.

Arts students were given a temporary shock when The Varsity printed a speech prepared for delivery by L. Austin Wright, assistant director of National Selective Service, predicting restrictions of university courses for able-bodied men to training which would fit them to be technical officers in the armed forces or key specialists in war industry.

It later appeared that Wright had not actually made the speech, but by that time a storm of protest by academic leaders and students, released in the columns of student journals throughout Canada necessitated special assurance by Selective Service Director Arthur MacNamara that no immediate restrictions were projected by the government.

Students and staff of the University gathered at a precedent-making conference in December, 1942 to discuss problems of the university in war-time. Recommendations of the conference were forwarded to President Cody for consideration by a conference of university heads and government officials in Ottawa.

Alien Controversy

Considerable excitement was created on the campus by news of temporary refusal of the Board of Governors to admit a group of 18 "friendly alien" students of German birth who had been released from internment camps. Protests from the University Senate and student organizations and a vigorous editorial campaign by The Varsity and other Canadian university papers as well as a part of the local down-town press called for reconsideration of the Governors' decision. The Board finally admitted the students in early Decemher after lengthy consideration of the ease.

The C.O.T.C. Air Force Wing was placed completely under R.C.A.F. supervision as the University Air Training Corps and a University Naval Training Detachment was established as part of the complement of H.M.C.S. York.

A blow to amateur acting enthusiasts on and off the campus was the closing of Hart House Theatre, probably for the duration, by order of the Board of Syndics. Lack of competent personnel to staff the theatre was the cause of its closing.

Distinguished men received honorary degrees at special convocations. Most notable was the impressive occasion of the conferring of the honorary LL.D. degree upon Field Marshal Sir John Dill, Hon. J. L. Ralston, Sumner Welles and Dr. Harold B. Butler.

While on the campus, Col. Ralston reviewed and commended the newly-established No. 1 Canadian Army Course, a group of young men undergoing special training to fit them for technical positions in the army. The idea, conceived by Dr. E. F. Burton, head of the Department of Physics, has since been established at Queen's University and will also be adopted by other Canadian universities.

hither and yon

with the war babies

The first sign of war on this campus back in 1939 was the 500 per cent increase in enrolment in the C.O.T.C. Everybody seemed to want to join, even Warren Stevens, who, when applying, explained that he couldn't parade on Saturday afternoons since he was coaching the team. "Yeah?" said the unbelieving recruiting officer, "I thought Warren Stevens coached the team." . . . And they were short of help to train all the new rookies, and some officers were very green indeed. Unable to think of the right command to get his men out of St. George street where they were marching in the path of an oncoming sirened vehicle, one of them halted the platoon and barked, "Now SCRAM!!! . . . P.T., in those benighted days, wasn't required of men who took C.O.T.C., but one lad wanted to take them both. He wangled it, and then got so stiff in P.T. classes he had to skip parades. . . . Map Reading, then as now, was one of life's most baffling mysteries. One instructor tried time after time to explain one problem to a confused cadet, to no avail. He asked if he might explain it again. "No," said the rookie, without thanks, to his patient officer, "never mind. I know a guy that can explain it to me."

Saluting was a major worry of the recruits, although it didn't hit print in the hither until the next year when training became compulsory and uniforms more numerous. This form of military greeting appealed to some, including the lad who smartly saluted the then Major Wilson, at the same time tossing a nonchalant "Hi!" in his direction. . . . Then there was the lad who meticulously saluted the old concrete post in front of the Physics building. . . . Feminine intrigue touched the local military this year with a series of hither items about "What adjutant of what battalion . . ." and this year at last found some profs serving as corporals under students of theirs who were sergeants. One of these insisted on calling on his sergeant in class by his military title until the lad rebelled and declared, "If you persist I shall have to call you 'Corporal'."

Through the efforts of the Red Cross students have been enabled to give their blood to their country without leaving college. The first students to do this were the Meds who started doning in the fall of '39 and thought it just toa jestingly brave to remark to the nurse as the blood poured into the bottle—"Shall I say 'When'?" . . . A run-down student reported by Jabez in the Ubyssey screamed on being asked for a donation, "Me give blood! Why I even have to give two weeks' notice before I can blush." . . . But the payoff came when a U.A.T.C. donor told the attendant who was sucking on the tube which was helping fill the bottle with blood, "You are a vampire!"

"STOPPIT," she screamed, "you'll make me sick."

Not only has the University its own C.O.T.C., and now its U.A.T.C. and U.N.T.D., but during the past four years it has played host to groups in the forces on active service. One of the earliest of these and the first to appear in the hither were the R.C.A.F. radio technicians to whom the Hart House pool room was inexplicably placed out of bounds. . . . Another cruelty to which these boys were submitted by their superiors came at exam time when, while the boys in blue were wracking their brains of electrons, diodes, etc., three instructors perched on the back seats and played blackjack. . . . The Navy was represented here for a while by several classes studying how to dectect submarines. One of these lads left his hat in The Varsity office, and the hitherwriter of the time investigated it and found it to contain the following assortment of objects: 1 examination in radio, 1 street car transfer, 1 leave ticket, 3 used Prom tickets, 1 R.C.N.V.R. Educations, July, 1941, 1 "Britain Delivers the Goods" sticker, 1 identification card, 1 Eaton Auditorium pamphlet with note "See Miss Raymon Request re tickets." . . . The C.W.C.A.'s who now inhabit Trinity House starteld the campus this year by erecting the brazen sign, "B-Coy Headquarters."

Many of us have said fond farewells to classmates joining the services ,and back in the early stages of the war one fsatman thought he'd take advantage of the current custom of wining and dining the departing reeruits by announcing that he was about to be drafted. The fraters all rallied to the cause, threw him a terrific binge — and left the staggering check on the table for him.

Changes in University social life have come about as part of the war. Corsages were early casualties, and substitutes have been varied. Back in '40 one lad presented his date with a toy water pistol. . . . Affairs have gencrally become more informal. Witness the jovial brigadier who met a student at a party, qucried him as to his allegianee in the forces. The student replied that he belonged to the C.O.T.C. "What faculty?" asked the brass hat. "Meds." "Oh," returned the brigadier, "I'm an engineer myself—DIRTY MEDS!"

Student donations to worthy wartime causes have been copious and frequent. In 1941 a drive was made to buy a utilieon for the armed forces (a utilieon is an adaptation of the civilian stationwagon). This strange name evoked the query from the University of Texas, "How many horns has a utilicon?" To which the hither replied, "One—HONK, HONK!" . . . That same year came the Marcli of Dimes which evoked more student spirit than had been seen since inter-collegiate sport went into hibernation. Meds and Schoolmen set upon one another lightheartedly, and in the general melee many of both sides were debagged. When the field was cleared a group of embarrassed looking individuals in battle dress blouses and little else were seen forlornly trying on the various pairs of khaki pants which strewed the field.

On Dec. 7, 1941, American colleges found the war on their campuses too. The Boston University News suggested changing the name of Defense Bonds to Offense Bombs. . . . The University of Michigan inaugurated a course in Japanese. . . . The President of the University of California threw away one of his treasured medals, The Order of the Rising Sun, bestowed upon him in 1936 for his efforts on behalf of harmonious relations between the U.S. and Japan. . . . The American colleges have resently felt the war in a more drastic way than we have, but the payoff in individual cases comes in the plaint of an Air Force trainee on sentry duty at Yale. "Four years in Harvard," he wails. "I volunteer to serve my country, and what am I doing? Guarding the Yale campus!"

The Harvest Expedition this year was perhaps the biggest hither ite measured from end to end. Starting with the lads filling Union Station with their enthusiastic yawp and either screaming. "I want my Momma," or threatening to walk to Saskatchewan if the train didn't hurry up and start, and ending with them limping back to classes, and, as in one case, arriving home in the face of exams. This lad came into his class direct from the train, finding everyone bending over desks scratching furiously at paper, asked the instructor, "Examination?" "Yes," replied the instructor. At that the harvester turned on his heel and made his exit, muttering, "I'd better go back out west." . . . Back home The Varsity had its trials. Late one night at the Press a harried editor, looking at all the harvest copy pouring in, raised his head and screamed, "All that wheat and no patatoes!" . . . Aftermath of the harvest was the visit of the harvesters from Laval University. Speaking little good English many endeared themselves to Varsity students by such mon mots as "I have to liave my glasses fixed, could you direct me to a Doctor of—how you say?—Obstetrics?"

53 Dentists Graduate; 44 In Uniform

By Doc Savage

The first of this year's two dental convocations will take place tonight at 8:15. The class of 53 graduates, 44 of whom are in uniform, is the second war-time class to graduate immediately into the services. Most of the men have already received their commissions and all have known for several days their new postings.

The ceremony will be conducted simply, with Dean A. D. A. Mason making the presentations, followed by an address from President Cody.

Walter Grenkow led the group of 11 honour students, and will also receive the Albert E. Webster Memorial Scholarship. Other awards were the Wallace Seccombe General Proficiency won by Donald Moore, the Wallace Seccombe Memorial Scholarship won by Harold Levita, and first and second prizes for the Oral Health Thesis awarded by Percy Arkle and Wilfrid Feasby respectively.

An unusual situation resulting from this year's immediate graduation into the army is that 75 per cent of the class is married, and several others about to become married. For Lieut. J. G. Holbrook the C.D.C. will be no novelty as he was a sergeant in it in 1940. While a sergeant he passed several supplementary exams and automatically became enrolled as a private in the University and now returns three years later with his commission. Percy Arkle, a native of Scotland, is not liable for military service and will probably continue his association with the Grenfell Mission. Other well-known campus figures include Bobby Copp, who has been posted near his home in Nova Scotia, and Don Clees.

Emmanuel Principal Retires This Year

Bringing to a close a teaching career of 42 years, Dr. Richard Davidson, Principal of Emmanuel College, will retire from that position it was announced recently. "He carries the good will of everyone with him in his retirement," Dr. Walter T. Brown, Chancellor of Victoria College, told The Varsity last night. "He is a fine scholar and a great teacher. A man in whom true religion and sound learning are bound together. He left an impression on successive classes, and there are many hundreds of men in the ministry of the United Church today who look back on him as the guide and inspiration of their work."

A graduate of the University of Toronto in 1899, Dr. Davidson received his M.A. the following year and in 1902 his Ph.D. He followed this with two years of study at the University of Berlin.

He became principal of Emmanuel in 1932, succeeding the late Dr. Alfred Gandier. From the time of Church Union in 1925 he had been professor of Old Testament studies at Emmanuel and previous to that he had taught at Knox College.

F. J. (Doc) Savage Appointed As Next Year's Varsity Editor

By Edgar Simon

Francis J. (Doc) Savage, 20-year-old St. Michael's College junior, has been appointed Editor-in-Chief of The Varsity for 1943-44, the Students' Administrative Council announced yesterday.

Born in Syracuse, N.Y., Savage was Assistant Men's News Editor of The Varsity for 1942-43. He was also a regular contributor to the Hither and Yon column during the past year.

Savage was educated at Mount St. Michael Academy, where he founded the school magazine, and at St. Micheal's (Western Course). As a freshman his byline appeared over a number of feature articles including the traditional star cub reporter's assignment of interviewing Nellie, the horse.

"The college gossip sheet has become a wartime casualty," Savage said in an interview last night.

"I am fully aware of the heavy responsibilities that lie in the future, and with the aid and co-operation of the staff I am confident that The Varsity will fulfill its wartime functions as capably as it has played its role in peace and war for the past 62 years."

Harriet Leigh-Mallory To be First Girl Editor For Torontonensis

Harriet Leigh-Mallory, Fourth Year student in Fine Art at University College, has been appointed Editor of Torontonensis for 1943-44, the Students' Administrative Council announced yesterday. She is returning to the University next year to do graduate work.

Born in Winnipeg, Miss Leigh-Mallory was educated at Oshawa Collegiate, where she was on the editorial board of Acta Ludi, the school magazine. She was a member of The Varsity staff for four years, serving as Canadian University Press Editor in 1942-43.

Planning Illustrated By Architectural Club

By Betsy Mosbaugh

"Only five per cent of Southern Ontario is now covered with trees, whereas in a normal, healthy condition, the land would be 20 per cent wooded," stated Professor Coventry at the meeting of the Architectural Club held in Hart House Theatre last Monday night.

"As a result of this mishandling of the land," he continued, "only one-fifth of the original streams are now running, and there are floods in the spring which lead to serious depreciation of the land."

To correct these conditions, Professor Coventry stressed the need for extensive surveys to be made, and a system of Regional Planning to be worked out in close co-operation with that of the cities which depend inevitably on the countryside.

Following the talk by Prof. Coventry, the film, "They Made the Land," portrayed the fight of the Scots to conquer their rugged and unfertile countryside; how they at first only made the situation worse by over enthusiastic clearing, and gradually found a cure for their ills in reforestation, draining bogs, fertilizing and employing modern machinery.

"Since the depression," stated Bob Fairchild, introducing the film on Wartime Housing, "those in the lower income brackets have been looked down down on as liabilities rather than assets to the community, and nothing has been done to improve their living conditions. The war has driven home the realization that these people are the backbone of the country and provision has been and is being made for their housing."

The film displayed the erection of inexpensive houses made of non-essential materials for war workers. "However, let us not assume that this pioneer development is the best we can hope for," the speaker concluded.

Jim Murray, speaking of Toronto, pointed out that the natural features, especially the ravines, had been ignored in laying out the city.

The film, "The City," stressed the fact that the age of rebuilding is here and the time has come to remould our old cities. All the benefits of the "Green Belt" city which is situated in the country, and whose population is limited were illustrated.

Science Students To Get Permits In Mining Building

A change in arrangements for issuing permits for summer employment to undergraduates in science and engineering was announced yesterday by Dean C. R. Young of the Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering.

Officials of National Selective Service will be at the Mining Building today to interview applicants and issue permits. Interviews will proceed by years, starting with the third year. Applicants are requested not to apply at the National Selective Service office as was advised in previous announcements; all permits will be issued by the officials at the Mining Building.

Other classes will follow the third year on other days. Students will be notified of their turns by announcements in classes.

ARTS AND LETTERS CLUB CONTINUES INITIAL SEASON

By Evelyn Swartz

"Propaganda hasn't the sinister connotation that the work of Dr. Goebbells gives it," said Mr. Lorne Green, of the CBC, to the Medical Arts and Letters club meeting Tuesday night. "Propaganda is merely a method of transmitting ideas."

"Dr. Goebells' propaganda accompanies Germany's conquest of European countries," Mr. Green stated. "There is first, the good-neighbourly period where the German radio attempts to acquire an audience with good music and picasant entertainment. The second period consists in a nixture of truths and half truths. It is the half-factual approach. The German radio attempts to arouse a certain amount of distrust in the audience towards the institutions, leadership and the ideals that the listeners believe in. This is the period of the whopping lie, an incident not believed itself about a subject less plausible.

"The third period injects terror into the people. The German radio tries to scare the audience by hammering them with the statements, 'Dying is frightful, and living is sweet.' They suggest that its audicnce come over to the New Order, get rid of its own leaders, appeal for peace. Meanwhile, the German army climaxes this period with its military offensive.

"In the fourth period, after the military battle has been won, the broadcaster keeps on the same line of accusing the former leaders of the country, insisting that they were inefficient, sluggardly, and weak and that their democracy was the cause of their ruin. This propaganda paralyzes unified action

The Arts and Letters Club, which has this year grown from a group of Medical Students who wished to broaden their knowledge of subjects outside their chosen profession into a Campus-wide aggregation of knowledge-hungry students, will continue its regular 6:30-8:00 p.m. meetings until April 20.

The meeting next Tuesday will be "Vic-Meds-U.C.-Night" at which nine students, three from each college or faculty represented, will provide in short speeches the framework of an informal discussion on the topic, "Science Replaces Religion."

Among the speakers scheduled for the rest of the season's meetings are Controller Lewis Duncan, Lt.-Col. George Drew and Dr. Harold Couch.

Dr. Masson graduated in Medicine from Toronto University in 1906. Dr. Donald C. Malfour, founder of the lectureship, received his degree here in the same year.

The date of the lecture will be the 116th anniversary of the birth of Lord Lester, famous for his discoveries in the field of sugery.

Volume LXII of The Varsity Features Harvest Excursion And Alien Controversy

Dominican Consul Donates Medal

By Ruth Conchita Cohen

In a message to the students of Canada read at the Spanish Club meeting last night by President H. J. Cody, Dr. R. L. Trujillo Molina, President of the Dominican Republic said that the youth of the universities had it in their hands to unite freedom-loving countries in their struggle to maintain the spirit of their cultures. "Only a complete interchange of spiritual values which, because they are in their quality eternal, sustain our diverse cultures, will be able to create the full and comprehensive democratic fraternity to which the nations of the world aspire."

A medal, to be presented to the student receiving highest honours in Spanish, was donated by the President on behalf of the Dominican Republic.

Dr. Molina referred to President Roosevelt's Good Neighbour Policy, saying that by adherence to these living ideals, inter-American collaboration can be facilitated in a unity of effort, combating the "monstrous ideologies against which we are fighting."

By Rex Wilson

Before The Varsity stores its typewriters, closes its offices and curls up in the library's booky nooks to catch up on a year's rest and/or study before the final examinations, it is a custom to review the year's Ten Biggest Stories.

Volume LXII of The Varsity contains what is possibly the greatest number of big news breaks ever to hit its pages. Mostly of a wartime nature, many of these stories have been review already in No. 99 of this volume and will be passed over more lightly here than their importance would seem to indicate.

First on the list for its revolutionary nature, long duration, and strong appeal to the student imagination and spirit all across Canada was the harvest story which developed last October.

The second story on the list was the unprecedented problem from which the alien controversy developed. Vitally affecting an extremely small number of students of this University, the problem became the inspiration for a successful campus-wide crusade in which The Varsity served as the voice of the student and faculty opposition to the Governors' resolution banning friendly aliens from enrolling here.

The change in student status with relation to the war effort has, like the first two big news items, been dealt with in the preceding issue with all its varying aspects in different faculties, notably in that of Applied Science and Engineering.

A story more immediately important in its effect on the undergraduate careers of a large section of the student body was the decision of the Board of Governors that all women except those in first year and in professional courses be required to take some form of National Service Training.

Limited Enrolment

Three faculties of the University this year had to limit enrolment. Entering Medical students were tested before being admitted to the Faculty and so no over-crowding was felt. A similar program was instituted in the Faculty of Dentistry where 81 of 139 applicants were accepted provisionally. Following observation and manual dexterity tests 27 of these were dropped from the course early in October. Unprecedented enrolment in Chemical Engineering and Mechanical Engineering in the Faculty of Applied Science forced the transfer of 40 students in the former course to others less crowded and the closing of registration in the latter.

Students returning to college found much the same military training requirements facing them, but under a completely re-organized set-up. One feature of this, it developed, was the removal of Air Force training from C.O.T.C. supervision to direct connection with the R.C.A.F. through the formation of a Squadron of the University Air Training Corps. Naval Training became available to undergraduates comparatively late in the term when a University Naval Training Detachment was established in February as part of the complement of H.M.C.S. York.

Special Convocations

Special Convocations, always colorful spots in The Varsity's news year, were only two in number in 1942-43. The first, on Monday, Feb. 8, honoured the Rt. Hon. Lord Hailey, who delivered this year's Falconer Lecture on British Colonial policy, and the second was held on Friday, Feb. 26 to confer honorary LL.D.'s on Field Marshal Sir John Dill, head of the British Military Mission to the U.S.; Sumner Welles, U.S. Under-Secretary of State; Harold B. Butler, Minister at the British

In Which
We Relinquish The Toga

With the end of The Varsity's publishing season we close one of the most eventful seasons of our 62-year history. More lines of streamer type have been utilized in the past 100 issues than in any volume within recent Undergraduate Newspaper history, and more thought-provokingly significant stories have been carried in these pages since September than—the statement is a large one but we believe accurate—in any previous single year since our inception in 1880.

Throughout the six-month ordeal of frenetic effort to keep pace with a campus alive with the biggest news of its history, The Varsity has sought to bear in mind its consistent editorial purposes of other years—to guide progressive student thought along constructive and logical lines; to offer praise where due to the campus groups and individuals whose efforts have been of value to the University's integration with the national war program; to maintain in the minds of students overpressed with immediate day-by-day duties the larger ideals with which it is the function of our education here to imbue us; and to keep the prestige of this institution high in the estimation of the outside world.

We cannot claim that we have fulfilled these duties with perfection of technique nor with impeccable choice of matter; as this year's Editor and his Masthead withdraw from office, no one is more cognizant than they that their work has been that of a group of enthusiastic amateurs. But we can, as we bow out at the end of The Varsity's 62nd year of service to undergraduates, graduates and staff members of the University, write with utter sincerity that we have attempted with every journalistic fibre of our collective being to keep those purposes foremost in each issue of our tenure of office.

There are other functions of this journal besides the purely editorial—major of which, naturally enough, is the purveyance of campus and extra-campus news of interest to the student population of Toronto. In this we believe we have succeeded with more than usual aplomb, and for this success we thank one of the most numerically-weak but hardest-working news staffs in recent years.

Thanks to the Staff

Mention of our bloody but unbowed news staff calls to mind that the entire staff of The Varsity this year has earned our deepest thanks. They have been under-manned; over-worked, driven heart-breakingly from one major newsbreak to another. They have given every service to a community newspaper that a group of embryo newspapermen can give; and they have given it with goodwill and eagerness.

Nor can we pass from this subject without a special word of thanks and commendation to our Masthead. The function of an Editor's specially-appointed group of sub-Editors is more than the carrying-out of specialized duties in certain departments; it lies also on helping to formulate carefully-thought-out and forcefully-presented editorial programs; and in the comradely support which knowledge that they will uphold their captain even if he should err, brings to the not-altogether-to-be-envied occupant of the editorial chair.

But particularly deserving of public recognition are the men without whom a publishing year of wartime calibre would have been impossible—the much-harassed and uncomplaining technical staff of the paper. To all the employees of the University of Toronto Press who have a hand in The Varsity's daily publication we offer our thanks, but we bid farewell with particular warmth to Jimmy Taylor and Doug Bruce, compositor and linotypist of The Varsity, the two men with whom the editorial staff have come into most intimate contact. In a year in which late-breaking stories and last-minute typographical changes have been alarmingly frequent, they have served us with unfailing efficiency and their friendly personal relations with us will be a pleasant memory even after the news events they have recorded have lost their significance.

A Toast to the Doctor

And, as we speak in heart-felt gratitude to our staff and Masthead, we must offer an additional word of congratulation to them—and to the Students' Administrative Council of the University of Toronto—in their choice of an Editor-in-Chief of The Varsity for its 63rd volume. We have found ourselves closely associated with Mr. Savage over the past two terms of publication, and on the basis of this propinquity we can predict a successful year of editorship for our successor.

While we sit, in our last few minutes in that editorial chair, we must offer also a particular expression of thanks to those of the University's administrative staff who have favoured us with their co-operation and goodwill. Chief on our list is—by reason of ex officio seniority and also because of actual precedence in the matter of co-operation—has been the President of the University. No man in the many-faceted field of University activity has a greater sympathy with the youthful undergraduate viewpoint than has Dr. Cody; nor has anyone in authority on this campus been more kindly disposed toward the efforts of this Undergraduate Newspaper.

We also offer thanks to the Registrar and the Bursar of the University for their unfailing courtesy to us in the past year; and to the scores of members of the teaching staffs of this polygonal University for their consideration of our reporters and ourselves as we have fought to beat the daily deadline.

We Are Not Overcome

If we appear to become too grateful, let us turn briefly to a consideration of the minority to whom this newspaper owes small gratitude. In its number we set forth those staff members who still consider our efforts the most juvenile of trashy puerility and take every venomous occasion to voice such opinion. We believe that their role is becoming shorter. But it still contains the names of several of our academic notables. To these we present the reminder that The Varsity is virtually a voluntary organization of college well-wishers, and solicit for our successors a greater measure of their respect and friendship.

And we might take the occasion to permit ourselves a few mild words of fatherly advice to a minority of students who have made miserable the lives of staff members, newsmen and other students by indulging in excessively vocal and insufficiently thought-out polemics on subject usually a trifle beyond their depth, and have thereby delighted the hearts of the University's enemies. If we have been successful in convincing a few of them of the value of discretion we feel that our sojourn in these columns has not been entirely in vain.

As we look back over the now-completed 100 appearances of The Varsity, we cannot subdue a certain feeling of satisfaction in the value of our effort. We have striven mightily to cover the major news events of the omniactive campus; we have fought the good fight to maintain the editorial ideals of our predecessors and ourself. We are proud of our staff for its "reserve power" in being able to produce—at the end of a haggard and hard-driven year—a special issue of the significance of our "War-Babies" 99th number.

30 Is Not the End

So it comes time—in the hackneyed but ever-poignant phrase of every retiring newsman in the history of journalism—to write "(30)" to our year as Editor-in-Chief of The Varsity. We have given to the task every ounce of unstinted effort at our command; we thank our colleagues; and we are confident—as we said in the very first editorial of this sensation-crowded year: whatever the cost of sweated student labour—whatever the price that Varsity staffers must pay in hard work and unrelenting effort—the Undergraduate Newspaper will continue to serve.

Zoology for Beginners

FELIS CHAMPI

This species is rapidly becoming extinct, along with the related species Neorum Avis or News-Hawk. Concerning the former animal, there has been a great controversy among the Universitys' leading biologists for the past 20 years. Some have claimed that it is an animal indigenous to these parts—the local fauna, so to speak. However, many others are of the opinion that usually it's not so fauna. The former group say that since it is a pure strain, it should be included in the Darwinian classification.

On the other hand, there is a school of thought that says it is definitely a hybrid. Those who hold this theory are divided among themselves. Some of them state most categorically that it is mainly bull—others are equally certain that it is related to wolves, and that usually it is quite obviously horsey. It frequently appears to be incontrovertibly sheepish, generally lion. They agree on only one point—that it is often hungry, and still oftener, from hunger.

Countering these views there are those (and unfortunately they are in the majority) who have long since relegated the species to the vegetable kingdom, in the famly of grains and grasses, known to the lay public as corn.

However, be that as it may, the present incumbent of the Catitor's chair wishes to thank his friends and associates In the Bach Room, On Mount Helicon, Kratkoye, Minos and Omar, his alter ego S. Q. Laeius, Nonnie, Scotty O'Toole, Harm, Milk Shakespeare and all the others who have contributed to the successful operation of this column during a difficult year.

Aw gee—thanks, fellas.
This time it's "30" for good.
as ever—
Omega.

Principal M. W. Wallace of U.C. Postpones Retirement This Year

By Michael O'Mara

Dr. Malcolm W. Wallace—Principal of University College for the past 14 years and perhaps the greatest of the teachers at this University—has been continued in office by the Board of Governors of the University of Toronto upon the recommendation of the President, it was announced last night.

Dr. Wallace in the normal course of events would have been retired at the end of the present academic year, but it is understood that it was deemed inadvisable to make any attempt to replace him during the present war-time years.

"I am very glad that the Board of Governors has continued Dr. Wallace in office," Dr. H. J. Cody, President of the University, said last night. "I feel great personal satisfaction that he will remain as Principal of University College for another year."

"The staff of University College was unanimously desirous that Dr. Wallace should continue in office," W. J. McAndrew, Registrar of U.C., said. "We are delighted at the decision of the Board of Governors."

"Dr Wallace is one of the few men who pay no heed to the petty affairs of college government," he added. "His judgment is never influenced by anything but the pure principles of the issues at stake. We of the staff revere him for his character and for the captaincy he has given us all."

"The staff is very pleased at the decision to continue Dr. Wallace's term of office," C.N. Cochrane, Dean of Residence, said. "We consider it a tribute he very much deserves for all he has done for the College."

Don Rowat, President of the University College Literary and Athletic Society, paid tribute to Principal Wallace on behalf of his students. "In time of war we are fortunate to have Dr. Wallace's leadership," he said. "We are extremely pleased to have him carry on in these extremely strenuous times."

Principal Wallace himself had little comment to make upon the Governors' decision. "I consider that generally speaking the retirement rule is a sound one," he said. "But my plans for the next year have been made for me."

Born May 1, 1873, in Puce, Essex County, Ont., Malcolm Wallace graduated from University College with the Class of 9T6, and joined the staff of U.C. as a Lecturer in 1904. He served as Registrar in 1906 and moved to the post of Associate Professor in 1909. He became a full Professor of English in 1916 and Head of the Department in 1926. And in 1928 he began his term as Principal of University College, succeeding the retiring principal, the late Maurice Hutton.

To Dr. Wallace go forth the gratitude and well-wishes of the student body of University College — we hope of the entire University—for the generosity he has displayed in carrying on his arduous duties at a time when most men would have reitred full of honour. As a student at the feet of the master of Shakespearian pedagogy we pay our homage. And as a private member of the student body of our College we rejoice that it is still under the leadership of such an unparallelled captain as Dr. Wallace.

TEN BIG STORIES OF YEAR FEATURE HARVEST, ALIENS

Embassy in Washington; and Hon. J. L. Ralston, Canadian Minister of National Defence.

Each of these United Nations leaders spoke on a phase of the present war. Col. Ralston expressed appreciation of the "people, government and Department of National Defence" for the "practical and effective measures put into effect by the universities." Br. Butler stressed the co-operation of the United Nations, but pointed out that toil, anguish, and sacrifice would be necessary before victory is achieved.

Sir John Dill stressed the importance of the universities as sources of potential and urgently needed leadeds. He cited names of leaders the University had produced, notably the late Sir Frederick Banting. Machinery for better world-wide economic conditions was Sumner Welles' topic. He also traced current negotiations in this line.

The position in eighth place of this year's War Services drive shows strikingly the difference between this year's news situation and that of last year when the comparable March of Dimes held first place in the final summary of news stories. This year's combined International Students Service Drive netted more than last year's March of Dimes and the concurrent Book Harvest for the forces garnered in two tons of volumes. A second financial drive was instituted in the second term for the benefit of the Aid to Russia Fund. Campus contributions to date total $660.82.

The closing of Hart House Theatre for lack of a suitable manager was a shocking blow to campus drama circles, which, however, resulted in no concrete student suggestions for keeping the theatre open. Reopening of the theatre will be considered by the Syndics next summer. Single definite fatality among campus productions due to this closing was withdrawal of the Victoria College Music Club's production of "H.M.S. Pinafore." The theatre closing has also been advanced as a contributing cause of Trinity's lack of a major production this year.

At the end of January news was published of the acceleration of the Arts Courses at Queen's University bringing the problem at least geographically closer to Toronto than it had ever been. Discussion of the problem on this campus showed staff opinion strongly against such a move, although some students favoured the saving in time spent on education.

These ten stories in The Varsity's sixty-second volume represent a year which has seen the Canadian student and the students of the University of Toronto in particular moving into closer integration with the war effort of the national community than ever, and expressing this intgration not only in terms of hoped for ultimate service, but also in direct action in definite phases of that effort. At the same time these hundred issues have borne the record of the same students' assertion of the positive value of the University and the recognition of that assertion by more than one visiting dignitary.

New Lecture Series Starts Next Friday

By Mary McKeown

Starting next Friday at 5 o'clock and continuing for three weeks the Department of Political Economy will present a series of weekly public lectures the the first of which will be "French-English Relations and the Canadian Social Structure," by Professor Everett C. Hughes of the University of Chicago Department of Sociology.

Prof. Hughes, who will also speak to the Sociology Club next Friday night at 7:30 p.m. in Wymilwood, has for the last year been visiting professor at Laval University, Quebec City. During this time he has been making a sociological study of Drummondville, Que.

The subsequent two lectures will be on "Industrial Development and the Conception of Limited Warfare," by Prof. John U. Nef of the University of Chicago, and on "Democracy and Bureaucracy in the Post-war World," by Prof. Merman Finer of the London School of Economics.

Carnegie Corporation Offers French Award

A scholarship of $90 is offered by the Carnegie Corporation to assist a student in Second Year Honour Moderns to spend July and August at the Summer School at Trois Pistoles, Que. A syllabus of the Summer School will be available at the Registrar's Office, Simcoe Hall. The minimum cost, including fare, is likely to be about $150.

This Scholarship is not offered as a reward for proficiency in spoken French, but rather as an encouragement to the student who has done well in written examinations, but has had small opportunity of speaking the language.

A form of application will be found at the University Registrar's Office, and should be returned to him on or before April 10.

"The time has come . . ."

When we brethren and sisters of this year's fraternity of hitherwriters must say good-bye. But before we come to fond farewells, we'd like to try to get off as many of our favourite remaining hither items as our good friend (and you are our good friend, Vern) the Managing Editor will let us get away with in this crowded old final issue in which everyone seems to have so much to say.

The first concerns the waggishness of a certain group of cads of The Varsity staff who happened upon the little green handbook of one of the female staffers. It seems that in that little date-book section there were never but two names mentioned. For day after day they found that a certain Arad was listed, then occasionally one Hezekiah would be noted, then more Arads and then a Hezekiah, and sometimes two times in a row poor old Hezzie would get a date. Their hearts went out to Hezzie and after a particularly long session of Arads the boys decide that THIS SORT OF THING MUST STOP, and entered (in a feigned hand), "Aw, gee, babe, whynchoo give Hezzie a break, eh?"

* * *

Slide-rules are, as you know, the pride and joy of the engineers. Schoolmen vie with each other in the rapid and accurate use of them and are frequently seen in quiet corners engaged in avid joustings with the grooved yardsticks. Idol of all undergraduate calculators is a certain Professor on the south side of campus whose prowess with such mathematical crib-sticks is phenomenal. One day after a lecture in which his display had been particularly brilliant, a number of worshipful admirers drew near to where he had left his trusty slide-rule. "If only they could touch it!" They drew closer and saw, wonder of wonders! — IT DIDN'T HAVE ANY MARKS ON IT!

And so, the time has come, indeed it has, in which we must say farewell to our patient readers, and thank all the nice people who have filled in for us from time to time, and all the people who supplied us with items either by action or by report. The latter, our faithful spies, we'd like to thank personally, but honest, snoopers, it's much more pleasant to write exams than to get some sorts of aegrotats.

To our Canadian brother humour columnists, international or otherwise, and to those who recklessly punctuate their columns with tender tidbits, we extend our appreciation, especially to The Sheaf, The Ubyssey, the Western Gazette, and our friends in the East.

We'd also like to send best wishes and thanks to all the American exchange papers who helped us with material here, especially the University of Washington Daily and the writers of its column "Le Premier Whisper," the Purdue Exponent where the whacky element of the campus must be large because it so frequently makes the front page, the Louisiana State University Reveille which we hope will soon find it possible to become a Daily again, and last but not least our new acquaintance The Daily Athenaeum from the University of West Virginia where R.O.T.C. is grim because the wooden rifles are loaded with lead.

And so, in no frabjous mood we assure you we

". . . shed a bitter tear."

Speaking of Sport

By Roger Conant

The Finish of the Reed Race . . .

School of Science has dood it! Yes, School is assured of the T. A. Reed Trophy for '42-'43. For the last points to be released this season show that the Engineers are fully 1,500 points ahead of Meds. But from there down the ladder the colleges are bunched more closely. Trinity jumped 550 poinst in the latest releases through their large entry in the indoor track program and they almost caught Meds for second place. Then, trailing last year's winner, Trinity, by 600 points, come St. Mike's. Another big jump was registered by U.C. who bounded 325 counters over Dents to make fifth place. This was accomplished by the group winning cagers and the large track turnout. Dents and Vic stood pat in sixth and seventh positions. Then in order finished Wycliffe, Knox, Emmanuel, Pharmacy and Forestry. Thus ends a year of hectic Reed point gathering which saw School take the lead in the middle fall and gradually pull away from all opposition.

What About Water Polo?

Senior Meds are trying valiantly to hold their Eckhardt Cup. And well they might at that—despite or because of our pre-season prognostications. For Vic and Meds are at it hamuner and tongs. Meds took the first final last week which was thrown out on a technicality. Starting afresh on Monday, they won 3-1 on counters by Best, Baldwin and Weinbaum. But they ran into difficulty Wednesday and, despite Stu Robinson's two tallies, went under 4-2. So today is the day for the big fight when the championship is decided.

How's Hockey?

Well, the long Jenning's Cup trail finds two School teams at the end fighting it out. Much to some peopel's surprise, including confrere Paton, the Seniors came through with the first side of bacon. In the initial period each scored and the second was without a tally. But the last period saw the Seniors notch a couple to end the first game 3-I. Jim Boa did the Junior sniping and Dickie, Grosskurth and Kelly collected the Seniors' tallies. Perhaps the final game (according to the Seniors, anyway) will be on tap today at the Arena—so if you havent any late afternoon classes or the parlour is sold out—you'll see some hockey today.

The Baseball Banter . . .

Touching the nearest hunk of wood, we would like to say right off the bat, that our predictions have almost won through. We missed by calling Pharmacy over Med VA but anyway the Meds team were put out by Dents who previously eliminated S.P.S. IV 3-0. The U.C. and Jr. S.P.S. nines came through, beating Med II A 4-1 and S.P.S. V 9-2 respectively. Then in yesterday's classic the Royal College triumphed to enter the play-offs. Monday, Wednesday and Friday are the days Dents and U.C. fight it out for the Spalding Cup. And yes, we still call U.C. to squeeze through. Alec over Chick.

Now It's Basketball . . .

The least progressed is the basketball playdowns. In fact the first round is hardly over. However, the first of the Sifton Cup finals will be played next Tuesday, the Athletic Office tells us. The semi-finals, probably between P. & H. E. and St. Mike's B, Dents A and Jr. School, will be run off on Monday and Saturday. And to be perfectly bold the finals will be a toss-up between P. & H E. last year's titalists, and Junor School. And as the coin landed heads it appears that the "Health" lads are going to repeat. But we love the stab in the dark way—and there are no more Varsitys to call us a poor seer.

And Now for the Bouquets . . .

For the operators of the Intramural Sports Machine. It has been a large and at times startling task for T. A. Reed, Warren Stevens and confreres McCutcheon, Martin, Philips, Zwygard et al to operate the magnitudinous set-up of the past year. When you are told 2,500 students made use of the many athletic privileges of Hart House you perhaps can slightly visualize the task. Of the number, 1,800 took the first and second year compulsory physical training and the rest in other years who participated in the sports program.

It was a hard task well carried out. It may be true that arguments arose over a few sporting details, but we still believe that action taken by the athletic authorities at different times—and we don't wish to mention the details—was for the good of the student body as a whole. Yes—we repeat—the Athletic Authorities, and that covers a lot of people, with MacMcCutcheon and Warren Stevens in the vanguard should be tossed bundles of tea bags as stated last Wednesday and re-stated by the Tely's Fitzgerald yesterday.

And the Final Teardrop . . .

Our eyes are clogged with tears as we sadly write a "30" to our last S.O.S. The future holds only unexpectedness for us all, but we hope we can come back and scrawl another S.O.S. or so next semester—if only to keep our fingers in hot water. So as we begin our season of mark seeking we offer up our fervent thanks to the numerous co-operators in our past 100 issues of sports. To Steve, to Mac, to Hec, to the A.A. Office Misses, to Frank downstairs and to the boys of '73. we can only offer gratitude for all the aid extended in the past. So, with the last tear dripping slowly from our snozzle, we bid one and all a fond adieu—it's been nice knowing you.

School and U.C. Lead Year's Track

By East. Currey

The 50-yd. hurdles last Monday brought to a close one of the most successful seasons of recent years, reports Hec Phillips.

The novice track meet started the ball rolling as School began its sweep. Meds and Trinity's Burgess followed at a respectable distance. Fielding, Foulis and Delaney shone in the running events while Kerr, Castaldi, Onasick, Burgess and Lewarne came through in the field events.

The three-mile campus jog, known as the "harrier" made up in quality for its limited quantity. Phil Shackleton paced the pack all the way. Varsity came through on points against a seasoned Buffalo squad in the senior harrier out in High Park.

In the relay field the Meds foursome of Delaney, Lewis, Wilford and Fielding triumphed over a hotly pursuing School team of Booth, MacDonald, Fordyce and McDonnough.

The indoor track, over a period of eight Mondays, had a total entry list of 558 and saw some keen competition. Here Trinity and U.C. held their own against School. Apart from the old standbys like Foulis, Barnett, Booth, Burgess, Fordyce and Lorrimer, some promising newcomers were exposed. Baxter, Conant, and Wesson are included here. And of course Shackleton, winning three events, was the freshman sensation.

For its track domination School received the Bretherton Cup, the Rowell Memorial Cup and the Toronto Cricket Club Cup.

Sportswoman

Whatever the weather may be, says he,
Whatever the weather may be;
It's the sports ye see and the scores ye tell
That's a'makin' the sun shine exter well—
And Varsity full of glee.

—The Old Meteor.

—And now comes the time for final roundups, reminiscings, and fond adieux in our dear land of sport. (The poem is not to be pondered over, please.)

If you managed to read about our star athletes' awards t'other day, we know you'll like to know about a trio to be added to the grand total which makes this a really memorable year. Helen Rodd of Vic, and Aileen McDonough of St. Mike's, have been honoured with Varsity Blue third "T's" and Pat Austin of P. & H. E. has received her Junior colours.

Speaking of P. & H. E., they were the gals who emerged victorious in volleyball on Wednesday afternoon—defeating Vic by the slight margin of 36-34 to win the campus championship.

As we look back over our year of sports—golf, tennis, basketball, bockey, badminton, and volleyball flit past our old but twinkling eyes. We gaze further and see the victors in these events as they take their bows—Nurses, Vic, P. & H. E., Vic, P. & H. E. and P. & H. E..

Vic, U.C. Enter Top Teams In Thrilling Mulock Race

By Bud Smith

Last fall's somewhat disjointed rugby season finally came to an end on December 10 when Victoria turned back U.C. 13-1 to take their second successive Mulock Cup Championship. Vic won their way into the finals by overcoming St. Mike's, while U.C. pulled a surprise win over Senior School to reach the final bracket.

The rugby league last fall was divided into two groups, with the idea of giving the Arts colleges a fair chance, seeing that many of their men were harvesting in the far reaches of the wild and woolly west. The first group was composed of Senior School, Senior Meds, Junior School and Victoria, Mulock Cup winners the previous season. In the second group were U.C., St. Mike's, Junior Meds, Dents and Trinity.

The opening game brought together Senior Meds and Junior School with the Medicos winning by a one-point margin, 6-5. Outstanding performances were turned in by Beefy McMillan and Herb Stricker, whose passing was sensational. Dents opened the second group by edging out Junior Meds 1-0. Then came the eagerly awaited contest between Vic and Senior School, co-favourites for the Cup. The games was close all the way, with the Engineers getting a 615 victory on a 55-yard touchdown dash by Don Grosskurth who was hurt in that game and didn't see action for the remainder of the season.

The season muddled along in somewhat confused fashion with no teams being outstanding. Senior School managed to stay on top in the first group despite a late season rush by Vic. The second group was all mixed up. St. Mike's managed to grab off first place but there was a three-way tie for second place, U.C., Junior Meds and Dents all claiming a portion. After a protracted playoff U.C. finally emerged victorious to take on the once-mighty Senior School squad in the semi-finals. By sheer fight the Red and White managed to win out 6-5 over a School team whose lack of judgment was at times appalling. Vic had no trouble in pushing aside St. Mike's 13-1 to set the stage for the big final game.

Heartened by the exuberent cheering sections both sides put up a good effort in the final but U.C. was no match for the experienced Scarlet and Gold machine who had them beaten at every turn to take the Mulock Cup to Victoria for the second straight year.

BW & F Attracts Huge Following

By Phil Shackleton

With the interfaculty boxing and wrestling meets and an interfaculty fencing set-to, plus an exhibition assault with O.A.C., the B. W. & F. addicts went through a big season.

The fencing meet, on January 25, brought forth an upset in the defeat by Doug Leslie of last year's titalist, Bill Horsey. Leslie nabbed four wins in five to take first for U.C. Vic's Dick Jeanes took second while Meds' Bill Horsey and Vic's Thiers followed in line.

In the boxing arena, Mel Glionna, after a long tutorial period, brought forth his junior assault. Here a number of newcomers to the slug sport were exposed. For instance, take Jim Lowe, 125 titalist who went on to take then senior division as well.

Vern Purcell, U.C., proved tops in the junior 135-pound field. Adams won the junior 155 division for School, while Jim Tucker dittoed for St. Mike's in the senior bout at the same weight. A confirmed slugger, dentist Lind said, "This won't hurt," but went ahead and t.k.o.'ed his opponent in the junior 145. Lind, however, took a back seat in the senior affair at 145 as George Lewis came through for Meds.

Somewhat overshadowed by its boxing brother, wrestling has nevertheless attracted a powerful (in more than one way) following. Melvani, of School, took both junior and senior titles at 135, but was the only junior to repeat his triumph. Johns of Dents took the senior 155 title over McDonough, who had previously won the junior. The same applies to the 145 and 165 pound encounters. In the former, Boland of School won the senior and Yandell of Meds the junior. And in the latter, Horowitz of U.C. won the senior and Arthurs the junior.

Stevensmen Battle Visitors Led By Gibson, Wallace

By Gord Mack

A "Lend-lace" agreement with two American universities, by which we lent the accommodation and they reciprocated by lacing us for the benefit of our Athletic Night customers, was the big downfall for the '43 edition of the Varsity Blues.

Starting the season with only five of last year's men back, the Blues took two impressive warm-up engagements against the Axon-led Western Y sextet by 44-11 and 51-24 margins.

For their campus debut, the Blues romped home a winner over Manning Pool by 6-32, led by Don Gibson, who chucked in a sweet 16 points.

The next two Athletic Nights were hosts, however, to Rochester and Wayne and both teams took trains homebound with pleasant visions of fat "batting averages" and beautiful local co-eds. This double set-back was extened the following week when the Trenton Flyers pulled out of a nose-dive in the over-time to earn a narrow 43-41 verdict. After the strong Assumption team had taken a 62-46 decision by virtue of a powerful 43-point drive in the second half, the Varsity were slightly gasping on the ropes and looking gleefully to the return of the Manning Depot team for the last Athletic night. In the final game, Gordie Wallace racked up 23 king-sized points for the top Varsity effort of the year in downing the Flyers 64-33.

Over the eight-game season, Don Gibson led the team scoring with 85 points, for and average of 10.6 points per game, but was closely followed by Gordie Wallace, who missed the first Y game, with 71 tallies for an average of 10 even. Next in line in the scoring parade is Stu Scott with 55 counters in the eight games for approximately an average of 7 points a game.

The team outscored thei rivals 393 to 331, or on the average 49-41, but the distribution was the fly in the raisin pie. However, the team provided some excellent entertainment and a nucleus of new experienced players for next year's squad that is going to beat Wayne.

Ken Tettmar, the Blues captain, played the full season an anchor man on the defence besides notching many a tally of his own.

Varsity Natators End Fruitful Season

By Pete Aykroyd

As Bill Winterburn puts his life-saving charts away and as Johnny Northwood packs up his water-wings, we take a retrospective glance over the ycar's water events.

The autumn saw the annual splash contests run off. The interfaculty swim league saw Dents, Jr. S.P.S., Sr. S.P.S. and School III win their groups. The Juniors with Fred Sanson, Bruce Gilbert and Jim Martin in the vanguard copped the championship.

The Junior Swim meet was completely School which amased a huge sum of Reed points.

The Senior meet was another School victory. They carried off the Fitzgerald trophy for the third year. Jim Crang of Vic was the only outsider to break the monopoly in the 100.

However, of chief natator interest was the Varsity swim team's meets with the Air Force which numbered three. This made it two perfect seasons for the Blues. Featured by Bill Moffat, Frank Balmer, Bruce Gilbert, Bill MacDonald, Jim Crang, Jim Martin and Lorne Sommerville, the Blues met little opposition under Johnny Northwood's expert tutelage.

So, as soon as the water poloists have drowned one another "Father Neptune" will take a back seat to "Grim Reaper." And with the prospect of the Grim Reaper's scythe slashing in a month or so one has the great wish that one had spent more time on one's work. However, if we survive the sythe workout we can welcome Father Neptune back to the pool again in the fall for another gay round of cavorting in the aqueous depths of the marble tank.

Soccer Supremacy Shared By Trinity and S.P.S.

By Jim Paton

For the second time in three years Jack Frost cracked down early to cut short the soccer play-offs and force joint possession of the Arts Faculty Cup. Trinity and S.P.S. I reached the final round and managed to get one game played under the worst sort of conditions but the result was a scoreless draw. A replay of the match was declared inadvisable so Trinity and S.P.S. I were declared joint champions for 1942-43.

Trinity came through to the final round the hard way as they eliminated Meds by a 3-2 score on a snow-carpeted field. Their next clash was a grueling battle with S.P.S. II who had placed first in Group II. A penalty shot, awarded to Trinity in the last few minutes of play, provided the narrow margin for victory.

Undefeated and untied on the regular season's play, S.P.S. I carned a favoured position in the playdowns and were required to play only once before the final round. They defeated Emmanuel by the handy score of 3-0. Emmanuel had previously shoved Dents into the discard.

U.C. Batmen Win Semi-Final Game

By Hal Pohl

In the fiercest mushball battle of the season U.C. finally overcome a hard fighting Junior School squad in the last inning to go into the play-offs 7-6.

Herbie Stricker and Alex Saltzman staged a pitchers' duel in the first two innings, for that matter the whole game. But the Royal College managed to get Garfunkel, Tartaglia and Horowitz across the plate in the third inning. Spear got a run on Saltzman in School's turn at bat. Then in the fourth inning Garfunkel, Tartaglia and Stitt clocked up another three for U.C. Cooper and Mason reciprocated in the other half of the frame to end it 6-3. For the next two canots U.C. were held by Stricker but Brant, Bromley and Mason managed to garner tallies for Schol to tie up the ball game.

The last inning was tense. Saltzman managed a hit and stole on a couple of errors around to third. Then an a wild pitch he stole home for the winning run. School tried desperately to tie it up but two strike-out and a toss to first ended the game.

U.A.T.C. To Split Camp Period; Other Campus Units Indefinite

By George Elliott

Final arrangements have not been completed for the summer camps of C.O.T.C., U.A.T.C. and U.N.T.D., according to the officers commanding.

Colonel H. H. Madill, C.O.T.C. head, said that no further information beyond that given in Orders, could be given concerning those students who would want leave from camp training. Speaking of the year's activities, Col. Madill said, "All troops are to be congratulated on the training they have done this year. It has taken a lot of their time; but they have done their work well." One of the greatest sources of satisfaction this year, he added, was the increased supply of modern military equipment for the men to use.

Squadron-Leader F. L. Hutchison of the U.A.T.C. said that the Varsity airmen would be split into two groups, one group leaving the middle of May and the other about the first of June for two weeks training at an R.C.A.F. Service Flying Training School. Splitting the corps was done so that the training periods would fit it with exam times. Asked about the success of the year's training, Sqdn.-Ldr. Hutchison said, "Considering the fact that this is the first year of the U.A.T.C. on the present basis, things have gone along very well." He felt that the men enjoy their training period at S.F.T.S.

Nothing definite could be said concerning the summer activities of the Campus sailors. Information will be given out at a later date.
